IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff, vs.
THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BYRON A. CAIN, HAROLD E. SULLIVAN, and FRANK J. HUEBNER, Defendants.
No. 52 CR 143

1. The above case was commenced by the filing of an indictment on March 14, 1952, by direction of the Grand Jury.

2. The parties at the time of the filing of the indictment were and still are: The United States of America, Plaintiff, and The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan, and Frank J. Huebner, Defendants.

3. Dates of the filing of pleadings:

(a) Indictment, filed March 14, 1952.
(b) Bill of particulars, filed May 29, 1952.
(c) Defendants' motion to dismiss indictment, filed June 2, 1952.
(d) Demurrer of plaintiff to motion to dismiss the indictment, filed June 11, 1952.
(e) Amendment to motion to dismiss the indictment, filed June 23, 1952.
(f) Motion of defendants to suppress certain evidence, filed October 6, 1952.
(g) Amendment to motion of defendants to suppress certain evidence, filed November 12, 1952.
(h) Additional motion of defendants in the nature of a special plea in bar to dismiss the indictment, filed July 28, 1953.
4 (i) Motion of defendants to amend and supplement Paragraph 4 of their motion to dismiss the indictment, filed September 14, 1953.

3. The appearance of Harold E. Sullivan was filed on March 17, 1952; the appearance of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, and Frank J. Huebner was filed on March 26, 1952.

On June 24, 1952, the individual defendants were arraigned before Judge John P. Barnes, and entered pleas of not guilty and were released on bail of $2,500.00 each.

4. The trial was had commencing September 14 and concluded on October 16, 1953, before Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye, specially designated by the Chief Justice of the United States on August 18, 1952 to try the case.

5. The trial was by jury, which on October 16, 1953, returned a verdict of guilty as to all defendants as charged in both counts of the indictment.

6. Judgments against the defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, and Frank J. Huebner, were entered October 17, 1953. Their motions for acquittal notwithstanding the verdict, a new trial, and in arrest of judgment were, by leave of Court, filed October 26, 1953, and were denied November 28, 1953, and their respective notices of appeal were filed December 3, 1953.

On October 17, 1953, defendant, Harold E. Sullivan's reserved motion for acquittal was taken under advisement, and was denied November 28, 1953. By leave of Court, his motion for a new trial was filed November 30, 1953, and his motions for acquittal notwithstanding the verdict and in arrest of judgment were filed on December 7, 1953, and were denied on December 7, 1953. On December 7, 1953, judgment was rendered against him on the verdict. His notice of appeal was filed December 14, 1953.

5 By order, entered October 17, 1953, bail, in the event of appeal, was increased to $5,000.00, to be approved by the Court, and subsequent orders provided that that be done within the time allowed by law for the filing of the notices of appeal. At the respective times of the filing of the above notices of appeal, bail, in the requisite amount, was furnished pending the appeals and approved by the Court, at which time the respective judgments were stayed pending disposition of the appeals.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA v. THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BYRON A. CAIN, HAROLD E. SULLIVAN and FRANK J. HUEBNER	No. 52 CR 143 (Section 145(b), Internal Revenue Code; 26 U.S.C., Section 145(b)

The March 1952 grand jury charges:

That on or about the 15th day of March, 1946, at Chicago, Illinois, in the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, Byron A. Cain, President and Treasurer in 1945 and 1946, Harold E. Sullivan, Attorney in 1945 and 1946 and Executive Vice President and Attorney in 1946, and Frank J. Huebner, Vice President in 1945 and 1946, of the corporation, did willfully and knowingly attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the taxes due and owing by the corporation to the United States of America for the calendar year 1945, by filing and causing to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the First Internal Revenue Collection District of Illinois, at Chicago, Illinois, false and fraudulent tax returns wherein they alleged that the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year was the sum of $561,064.42 and that the total amount of tax due thereon was the sum of $370,638.95, whereas, as they then and there well knew, the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year was the sum of $738,210.65, upon which net income the corporation owed to the United States of America, a total tax of $534,288.89.

In violation of Section 145(b), Internal Revenue Code; 26 U.S.C., Section 145(b).

8 SECOND COUNT

The March 1952 grand jury further charges:

That on or about the 15th day of March, 1947, at Chicago, Illinois, in the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, Byron A. Cain, President and Treasurer, Harold E. Sullivan, Executive Vice President and Attorney, and Frank J. Huebner, Vice President, of the corporation, did willfully and knowingly attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the taxes due and owing by the corporation to the United States of America for the calendar year 1946, by filing and causing to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the First Internal Revenue Collection District of Illinois, at Chicago, Illinois, a false and fraudulent tax return wherein they alleged that the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year was the sum of $1,202,917.18 and that the total amount of tax due thereon was the sum of $457,012.98, whereas, as they then and there well knew, the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year was the sum of $1,526,490.47, upon which net income the corporation owed to the United States of America a total tax of $579,970.83.

In violation of Section 145(b), Internal Revenue Code; 26 U.S.C., Section 145(b).

BILL OF PARTICULARS

Now comes the United States of America by its attorney, Otto Kerner, Jr., United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, and pursuant to order of the Court heretofore entered in this cause furnishes the following Bill of Particulars:

COUNT I

1. It is alleged that the 1945 Corporation Income and Declared Value Excess Profits and Corporation Excess Profits Tax Returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company understated the following items:

Gross Sales	understated	$177,146.23
Gross Profits From Sales	"	177,146.23
Total Income	"	177,146.23
Net Income	"	177,146,23

and all resultant income and tax items on the returns.

2. The entire amount of the understatement of gross sales of $177,146.23 is alleged to have resulted from the failure of the defendant corporation to record on its books and to report on its income tax returns for the calendar year 1945 the receipt of over-invoice premium payments on sales of merchandise.

3. The unreported over-invoice premium payments for the calendar year 1945 are alleged to have been received from the Eatsum Food Products Company, a sole proprietorship, and its successor company, the Eatsum Food Products Company, a partnership, both then located in New York City, New York, on sales of merchandise by the defendant corporation to said companies.

4. It is not alleged that the cost of goods sold or the cost of operations were overstated.

5. It is not alleged that any items included in the cost of goods sold or the cost of operations in the said returns for the calendar year 1945 could not properly be included in such returns.

COUNT II

1. It is alleged that the 1946 Corporation Income Tax Return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company understated the following items:

Gross Sales	understated	$323,573.29
Gross Profits From Sales	"	323,573.29
Total Income	"	323,573.29
Net Income	"	323,573.29

and all resultant income and tax items on the return.

21 2. The entire amount of the understatement of gross sales of $323,573.29 is alleged to have resulted from the failure of the defendant corporation to record on its books and report on its income tax return for the calendar year 1946 the receipt of $212,315.56 in over-invoice premium payments on sales of merchandise and from the failure of the defendant corporation to record on its books and to report on its income tax return for the calendar year 1946 certain sales of merchandise in the amount of $111,257.73.

3. The unreported over-invoice premium payments alleged to have been received by the defendant corporation in the amount of $212,315.56 during the calendar year 1946 are alleged to have been received as follows:

$163,239.05 from General Confections, Inc., a corporation, New York City, New York.

$49,076.51 from Reserve Trading Company, New York City, New York.

The unreported receipts from unrecorded sales in the amount of $111,257.73 alleged to have been received by the defendant corporation during the calendar year 1946 are alleged to have been received from General Confections, Inc., a corporation, New York City, New York.

4. It is not alleged that the cost of goods sold or the cost of operations were overstated.

5. It is not alleged that any items included in the cost of goods sold or the cost of operations in the said return for the calendar year 1946 could not properly be included in such return.

MOTION OF THE DEFENDANTS TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner, move that the indictment herein, and each count thereof, be dismissed on the following grounds:

1. The proceedings before the Grand Jury which returned said indictment were not conducted by the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, but were conducted by one Arthur B. Cunningham, who purported to act as a Special Assistant to the Attorney General under purported written authority so to do, of the Attorney General of the United States dated at Washington, D. C. March 13, 1952, and filed in the office of the Clerk of this Court the morning of March 14, 1952 (the day said indictment was returned), but who was not, either at the time of his said appointment, or at the time he conducted the said proceedings before said Grand Jury, a resident of the Northern
24 District of Illinois, and who was not in fact nor by the terms of said written authority, an assistant to the United States Attorney, special or otherwise, for the Northern District of Illinois. By reason of the premises, the said Arthur B. Cunningham, as such Special Assistant to the Attorney General, purported so to act as the attorney for the Government, but, contrary to the requirements of Rule 7 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, failed to sign the indictment as returned.

2. The conduct of said proceedings before said Grand Jury by the said Arthur B. Cunningham as aforesaid was in violation of the rights of the defendants under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to be held to answer for the offenses charged in this proceeding only on the presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury in accordance with the traditional Grand Jury procedure at the common law in existence at the time of the adoption of said Amendment. Under the traditional procedure then in effect, only an attorney of or for the vicinage or the locality from which the Grand Jury was chosen could participate in its proceedings. And defendants aver that the Act of June 30, 1906, 30 Stats. 816, 5 USCA, Sec. 310, to the extent that it purports to authorize any attorney or counsellor specially appointed by the Attorney General of the United States, when thereunto specially directed by the Attorney General, to conduct Grand Jury proceedings, where such attorney or counsellor is not a resident of the District in which such proceeding is brought deprives the defendants, and each of them, of the rights guaranteed to them by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and is therefore unconstitutional and void.

25 3. At all the times in question in these proceedings, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury, by virtue of the statutes in such case made and provided, were empowered to compromise any civil or criminal case which might have arisen under the Internal Revenue laws against the defendants. At all times in question in this proceeding, and for many years prior thereto, there was and for many years had been in effect in the Bureau of Internal Revenue a policy from time to time published and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and by other responsible Treasury officials, whereby it was publicly represented there would be no criminal prosecution in any case in which a voluntary disclosure of misstatement or omission in a tax return was made to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department before investigation had been initiated, but that the Treasury Department in such case would merely assess such unpaid tax, interest and civil penalties, if any, as might properly be found due under the facts of the case.

In reliance upon said policy, the defendants before the commencement of any investigation within the meaning of the aforesaid statements of the aforementioned Commissioner and Secretary and others, in January of 1948 made such a disclosure in respect of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years mentioned in the indictment in this cause, and from time to time thereafter until and including March of 1948 reiterated the same, in each instance to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department.

The officers and agents of the Treasury Department to whom the aforementioned disclosure was made ac-
26 knowledged to the defendants the sufficiency and timeliness thereof upon the occasions aforesaid. In further reliance upon said policy and upon said acknowledgments and at the request of said officials and agents, the defendants caused to be made available to them the books and records of the corporate defendant, and communicated to officers and agents of the Treasury Department information in the possession of the individual defendants materially related to said omissions and misstatements and not available to such Treasury officers and agents through the said books and records of the corporate defendant, and which information could not have been obtained from the individual defendants in any manner in view of the constitutional privileges and rights of the individual defendants, and employed the services of accountants to assist said officers and agents in ascertaining facts from such books and records. The corporate defendant in that regard specially incurred and paid, over the period of four years over which the examination by said agents extended, auditing charges in excess of the sum of $20,000.

By reason of the premises, the Government was and is estopped from instituting and maintaining the said indictment and these proceedings.

4. During 1948 and during all the years in question, it was and for many years had been the actual practice of the Department of Justice to refrain from the initiation of criminal prosecution of such cases except upon the recommendation of the Treasury Department, although the Department of Justice reserved discretion as to whether to proceed with the criminal prosecution of any case in which such recommendation was made. Under such practice the Treasury Department has refrained from recommending criminal prosecution of many cases which could have been so prosecuted and the Department of Justice has refrained from criminal prosecution of 27 many cases which have been recommended to it for such prosecution. At none of the times aforesaid has there been any standard of law, either by enactment of Congress or by established criteria or regulation of the Treasury Department or of the Department of Justice, from which the public or the courts might ascertain the basis on which such prosecution is recommended or withheld. Such practice has given rise to a discriminatory application and enforcement of the law, as will more fully appear upon the hearing of this motion, and in the case at bar has thereby deprived the defendants of due process of law contrary to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America.

In partial support hereof defendants submit the affidavits hereto attached as Exhiibts A, B, and C, respectively, and they ask that plaintiff be required to answer this their motion within a short day, and that the issues, if any, upon said motion and answer be set for hearing on oral evidence to be taken in open court.

Byron A. Cain, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of the defendants' foregoing motion to dismiss.

Affiant further says:

1. During all of the year 1948, and continuously since, affiant was President and Treasurer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, one of the defendants in this cause, and that his co-defendants, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner were, respectively, Executive Vice President and Vice President of said corporation, and that Leon J. Busby was a member of the firm of Busby & Oury, certified public accountants employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as its regular auditing firm during all of the year 1948 and for some years prior thereto.

29 2. That during the month of January, 1948, affiant and other officers of the defendant corporation acting in behalf of said corporation and in their own behalf as officers thereof, delegated Leon J. Busby to communicate with a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department of the United States for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was still in effect the published policy of the Treasury Department, of which affiant had theretofore become aware, pertaining to the disclosure of omissions or misstatements in income tax returns, and if so, to ascertain in a preliminary way the requirements of such policy without disclosing the identity of the person by whom such disclosure might be made.

3. That thereafter, but during January of 1948, the said Leon J. Busby reported to affiant and to other officers of the defendant corporation that he had communicated with one Ernest J. Sauber, Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at Chicago, Illinois, who had told the said Busby that said policy was still in force and effect and that he was a proper person within the requirements of said published policy to whom such a disclosure might be made, and had further informed him that the requirements of such policy as to such disclosure would be fulfilled if the person in question would come forward before investigation had been initiated and acknowledge the incorrectness of his return, and that, in such event, there would be immunity under the Bureau's policy from criminal prosecution but that such tax, 30 interest and penalties, if any, as might properly be due under the facts would be assessed.

4. Thereupon, affiant and other officers of said corporation in their behalf and on behalf of said defendant, during January, 1948, pursuant to said policy, directed said Busby to reveal to said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue the identity of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as the person whose returns for the years 1945 and 1946 contained omissions or misstatements—those being the years in question at all times mentioned in this affidavit—and to inform him in a general way of the nature of said misstatements and omissions and to ascertain from him whether the preperation of amended returns for those years by said corporation should be then attempted, or whether their preparation and filing should be deferred pending an inspection of the books and records of the corporate defendant by agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

5. That thereafter and during the month of January, 1948, the said Busby reported to affiant that he had again communicated with said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and had revealed to him, pursuant to defendants' reliance on the policy aforesaid, that there were omissions and errors contained in the returns of said The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946 and of the general nature of said misstatements and omissions, and that he had inquired as to whether such communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and as to whether the preparation of 31 amended returns for those years should be undertaken at that time; that said Busby further reported to affiant that said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue informed him that said communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and assured said Busby that he was the proper person to accept such disclosure and that no attempt should be made to file amended returns for those years because said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue would inform the office of the Agent in charge to the end that the latter office would assign an agent to make such inspection and investigation as might be required, but that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had further recommended that an attempt be made in the meantime by the officers of the corporation to approximate the extent of the omissions and misstatements based on their then recollections of the matters giving rise to said omissions and misstatements.

6. That thereafter according to his best present recollection, affiant himself during January of 1948, either alone or in the company of said Busby, and again to a certainty in the forepart of March, 1948, in the company of said Busby called upon said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and was informed by him that the information communicated to him as such Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue by said Busby constituted a sufficient disclosure and that he had made appropriate inquiry to ascertain whether any prior investigation had been initiated and had learned that there had been none and that there was none pending, and that the said disclosure was therefore timely within the Department's requirements, and further that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had talked to Mr. Ralph 32 Johnson, a squad chief in the office of Mr. E. C. Wright, the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge at Chicago, and that Mr. Johnson had indicated that he would go forward with the matter.

7. Thereafter the defendants and other representatives of the corporation, at their request, in reliance upon said policy, and in reliance upon the representations aforesaid, commenced a course of cooperation, and solely for that purpose specially retained accountants who, commencing in 1948, and for a period of approximately four years, assisted the Internal Revenue agents in their inspection and examination of the books and records of the corporate defendant, and assembled for them such data and compilations as were requested, at an expense to the corporate defendant of approximately $20,000.00 or more; and that the examination by such agents of said books and records has extended over a period of approximately four years and was still being conducted at the time of the return of the indictment in this proceeding, and that much of the data and many of the compilations so prepared and furnished by said accountants were not available, in the form requested and supplied, from the books and records of the corporation.

8. That the defendants immediately following said disclosure and with the partial assistance of said accountants thereunto specially directed—all in reliance upon the policy and representations aforesaid, including the representations as to the sufficiency and timeliness of their said disclosure—commenced the preparation and compilation of the preliminary approximation which the said hereof; that indispensable to the making of said statement was data and information not contained in the books and records of the corporate defendant but in the minds of the individual defendants, which the individual defendants well knew they could not be compelled to reveal and which they knew they had a constitutional right to withhold, but which, in reliance on the matters aforesaid, they supplied, with the result that such tentative approximation or statement was completed and reduced to writing and furnished to the said agents at or about the time of their first appearance for the purpose of inspecting the books and records of the corporate defendant. Affiant further avers that the said statement, among other things, showed that the net balance as a result of the operations therein reflected was $5,898.00, which sum had been deposited in the corporate defendant's bank account during the year 1946, and had been given effect to in its income tax return for that year. Said statement is in the possession of the plaintiff and was exhibited and otherwise used by the Government in the proceedings before the Grand Jury which returned the indictment in this proceeding. From time to time, and on request of agents of the Department of Internal Revenue, the individual defendants furnished said agents with other and more detailed and accurate information regarding the said omissions and misstatements known to them, but which were also not contained in the books and records of the defendant corporation, which information the defendants knew they were privileged not to reveal but did reveal in continued reliance on the policy and representations aforesaid.

34 9. Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corporation owes no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95, which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98, which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of said agents aforesaid were of such embarrassment in the conduct of the business of the corporate defendant and so disruptive to the relations of the corporate defendant with its customers and suppliers, that affiant at all times during the said period of four years importuned the said agents to bring the matter to a conclusion, and at all such times expressed the willingness of the corporation to pay such reasonable amount as the said agents might claim to be due. Nevertheless, and heedless of said importunings, and without completing said examination, and for the purpose of bringing a charge prior to the expiration of the six-year statute of limitations in relation to the first count of said indictment, the matter was presented to the Grand Jury on March 14, 1952, to-wit, the last day of the six years, by a special assistant to the Attorney General who received authority only the day before.

35 EXHIBIT B

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

* * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

State of Illinois }
County of Cook } ss.

Leon J. Busby, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is a member of the firm of Busby & Oury, certified public accountants with offices in the City of Chicago, County of Cook and State of Illinois, and that he makes this affdavit in support of the motion to dismiss in behalf of the defendants in the above-entitled cause.

Affiant further says:

1. That since 1942 either he or his accounting firm were the accountants regularly employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

2. That he has actively practiced his profession as a certified public accountant for more than twenty-two years last past and during the course of that practice has had occasion to prepare and to assist in the preparation of income tax returns for clients and has had experience in many cases involving claims for and against clients arising under the Income Tax laws.

36 3. That during the course of his practice he became and was familiar with many of the declarations of policy of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and of other responsible Treasury officials having to do with the position of the Bureau of Internal Revenue with reference to immunity from criminal prosecution in cases where inaccuracies in tax returns were disclosed in advance of the commencement of an investigation, including the following statements of said policy:

(a) May 28, 1945—former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau stated at a press conference that some taxpayers who have failed to declare their full income and pay the tax due "may escape criminal prosecution through voluntary disclosure of the deficiency only in cases where such voluntary disclosure is made before investigation is started."

(b) August 21, 1945—former Secretary of the Treasury Vinson, as guest contributor to Drew Pearson's column, wrote:

"No honest American need fear this drive against tax evaders. No one is going to jail for an honest mistake in filling out his tax return. Treasury policy even permits the wilful evader to escape prosecution if he repents in time. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue does not recommend criminal prosecution in the case of any taxpayer who makes a voluntary disclosure of omission or other misstatement in his tax return or of failure to make a tax return. Monetary penalties may be imposed for delinquency, for negligence and for fraud, but the man who makes a disclosure before an investigation is under way protects himself and his family from the stigma of a felony conviction. And there is nothing complicated about going to a collector or other revenue officer and simply saying, 'There is something wrong with my return and I want to straighten it out'."

(c) October 15, 1945—the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue released the following statement to the press:

"The Commissioner said that since June 1, some 30,000 delinquent or amended returns had been filed voluntarily, accounting for additional taxes of more 37 than $50,000,000. Mr. Nunan again stressed the Bureau policy of refraining from instituting criminal proceedings against taxpayers who come forward voluntarily and pay up delinquencies plus interest and civil penalties before the Bureau has begun investigating their cases."

(d) August 7, 1946—Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder is reported to have said:

"* * * that in accordance with Treasury custom, there would be no criminal prosecution of the taxpayers who voluntarily remembered and reported their tax delinquencies."

(e) May 14, 1947—J. P. Wenchel, the then Chief Counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, said in the course of an address:

"The law requires the prosecution of the tax-evader and that is what the Department recommends to the Attorney General.

"There is one important exception to that. The Department has broad discretionary power long recognized by Congress to determine the policy and procedure for the effective enforcement of the internal revenue laws. The Department, acting under that power, does not recommend prosecution of the evader who repents in time. There is nothing new in the position. Where the taxpayer makes a voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion before investigation has been initiated, criminal prosecution will not be recommended.

"The Department has always encouraged voluntary disclosures.

"And what is a voluntary disclosure? A voluntary disclosure occurs when a taxpayer of his own free will and accord, and before any investigation is initiated, discloses fraud upon the government. Healthy administration of the internal revenue laws long ago dictated that policy and I believe that its worth is obvious.

The making of a voluntary disclosure is a simple thing. The taxpayer or his legal agent can go before any official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue or any of its field offices—whether it is the collector, a deputy collector, a revenue agent, a special agent, or any other responsible Treasury officer. There is no special form for making the disclosure. The simple statement that 'I have filed false tax returns and I want to make the government whole,' would constitute a complete disclosure. Of course, it is best usually to present an amended return or other written document as evidence of the disclosure. If 38 possible, the disclosure should be accompanied by payment of the tax which is known to be due, but this is not a prerequisite."

4. During the month of January, 1948, Byron A. Cain and Harold E. Sullivan, officers of the defendant, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, requested affiant to communicate with a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department of the United States for the purpose of determining that there still was in effect the said policy of the Treasury Department and if so, to ascertain in a preliminary way the requirements of said policy without disclosing the identity of the defendants.

5. That, thereupon, during January of 1948, affiant communicated with Ernest J. Sauber, Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at Chicago, Illinois, and was told by him that said policy was still in full force and effect and that he was a proper person within the requirement of said published policy to whom such a disclosure might be made, and that the requirements in respect of such disclosure would be fulfilled if the person in question would come forward before the commencement of investigation and acknowledge the incorrectness of his return, and that in such event, under the Bureau policy, the person in question would be granted immunity from criminal prosecution, but that of course such tax, interest and penalties, if any, which might properly be due under the facts would be assessed.

6. Shortly thereafter and during January of 1948, affiant informed the said officers of said corporation of his conversation with the Chief Deputy Collector, Chicago, Illinois; whereupon, they directed him to see the Chief Deputy Collector again and to reveal the identity of 39 The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as the person involved and to disclose to him that its returns for the years 1945 and 1946 contained omissions or misstatements and, in a general way of the nature of said misstatements and omissions, and to do so in pursuance of said policy, and also to obtain from the Chief Deputy Collector advice on whether the preparation of amended returns for those years should be then attempted by said corporation or whether their preparation and filing should be deferred pending an inspection of its books and records by agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue if they desired to make such inspection.

7. That thereafter and during the month of January, 1948, affiant again communicated with the Chief Deputy Collector at Chicago and told him that the defendants in reliance on the policy of the Bureau aforesaid, had directed him to disclose that there were omissions and misstatements contained in the returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946, and also told him the general nature of said misstatements and omissions. Affiant also inquired of the Chief Deputy Collector, Chicago, as to whether those communications were sufficient to constitute such disclosure and as to whether the preparation of amended returns for the years 1945 and 1946 should be undertaken at that time, and was informed that said communication did constitute a sufficient disclosure and that no attempt should be made to file amended returns for those years because he would inform the office of the Agent in Charge, to the end that the latter would assign no agent to make such inspection of the books and records as might be required. The Chief Deputy Collector further recommended that pending the commencement of such inspection an attempt be made by the officers of the corporation to approximate the extent of the omissions and misstatements based on their then recollections of the matters giving rise to said omissions and misstatements.

8. That thereafter during January of 1948, and again in the forepart of March, 1948, affiant, together with Byron A. Cain aforesaid, called upon the Chief Deputy Collector, Chicago, during one of which visits the said Byron A. Cain upon so inquiring of the Chief Deputy Collector was informed that the information theretofore communicated to him by affiant constituted a sufficient disclosure, and that the Chief Deputy Collector had made appropriate inquiry to ascertain whether any investigation had been initiated and had learned that none had been and that none was pending, and, accordingly, that the disclosure theretofore made to the Chief Deputy Collector on behalf of the defendants was timely within the view of the Bureau, and that he had talked to Mr. Ralph Johnson, a squad chief in the office of E. C. Wright, the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge in Chicago, and that Mr. Johnson had indicated he would go forward with the matter.

9. Thereafter Mr. Byron A. Cain and Mr. Harold E. Sullivan reiterated to affiant their desire in reliance on said advice from the Chief Deputy Collector, Chicago, to cooperate with the Bureau and to that end that they desired to specially retain his firm for the purpose of assisting the Internal Revenue agents in their inspection and examination of the books and records of the corporate defendant and to assemble for them such data and compilations as they might request whenever they should commence the inspection of such books and records, and that they also desired affiant and his firm in reliance upon the policy and representations aforesaid, to assist in 41 the preparation and compilation, pending the commencement of the examination of the books and records by the agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, of the preliminary approximation aforesaid which the Chief Deputy Collector had recommended.

10. Affiant further avers that he and his firm in and about said matters and related matters rendered special services at the expense of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in excess of $20,000.

11. That it was impossible to make a compilation of the preliminary approximation aforesaid without data and information in the minds of the individual defendants but not reflected on the books and records of the corporate defendant, which data and information however the individual defendants furnished, stating to affiant that they were doing so in reliance on the advice of the Chief Deputy Collector, Chicago, aforesaid. Affiant further avers that the individual defendants furnished such information and data that he was thereby enabled to prepare a written tentative approximation or statement in time for delivery to the agent of the Bureau at the time he first appeared to commence his inspection of the books and records of said corporation, which said written statement was then and there delivered to said agent. The said statement, among other things, showed that the net balance as a result of the operations therein referred to was $5,898.00, and that said sum had been deposited in the corporate defendant's bank account during the year 1946. Affiant further states that the amount so deposited was given effect to in the income tax return of the corporate defendant for that year and that said statement so furnished was exhibited to affiant during the course of his testimony before the Grand Jury which re-42 turned the indictment in this proceeding, and that he was questioned concerning it in the presence of the Grand Jurors by Arthur B. Cunningham, Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

Dear Mr. Cunningham:

As an attorney and counselor at law, you are hereby specially retained and appointed as a Special Assistant to the Attorney General under the authority of the Department of Justice to assist in the trial of the cases hereinafter mentioned, in the Northern District of Illinois, in which the Government is interested; and, in that connection you are specifically directed to conduct in the Northern District of Illinois and in any other judicial district or districts where jurisdiction thereof lies, any kind of legal proceedings, civil or criminal including grand jury proceedings and proceedings before committing magistrates which district attorneys are authorized to conduct.

The Department is informed that Byron A. Cain, Frank J. Huebner, and Harold E. Sullivan have committed in the Northern District of Illinois violations of the Internal Revenue laws of the United States and conspiracies to commit such offenses.

You are expressly authorized to commence prosecution against the above-named persons and such other person or persons as may be implicated for violations mentioned.

You are to serve without compensation other than compensation you are now receiving under existing appointment.

Please execute the required oath of office and forward a duplicate thereof to the Tax Division, Department of Justice.

DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR ONE HEARING ON THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan, and Frank J. Huebner, by Vincent O'Brien, one of their attorneys, move:

1. For an order that a complete record rather than a piecemeal record be made on any hearing that may be had on their motion to dismiss heretofore filed herein, and to that end, they further move:

(a) That argument on the demurrer filed by the plaintiff to said motion to dismiss and on such other questions of law or fact as may be presented, be reserved and deferred until the evidence to be taken on said motion has been heard.

(b) That the plaintiff, reserving all objections raised by its demurrer, be required to answer said motion so as to determine the issues of fact, if any, to be tried upon such hearing.

51 (c) That such issues of fact be determined by the court alone upon oral testimony and evidence to be adduced in open court.

In support of this motion, defendants submit the attached suggestions.

SUGGESTIONS IN SUPPORT OF THE DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR ONE HEARING ON THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS.

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner, by Vincent O'Brien, one of their attorneys, make the following suggestions in respect of their foregoing motion that there be one rather than several hearings on their pending motion to dismiss:

1. Plaintiff has demurred to defendants' motion to dismiss. The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure though purporting to prescribe all of the pleadings to be employed in criminal proceedings, make no provision for a responsive or other pleading to a motion to dismiss (see Rule 12(a)). Those rules do provide for the hearing on a motion to dismiss in such manner as the court may direct as far as issues of fact are concerned (see Rule 12 (b)(4)).

2. The court has the right and the duty to determine any questions of fact arising under the pending motion,
53 and such questions presented are for the court alone without a jury. United States v. Hashmall, 97 F. Supp. 42; McNabb v. United States, 63 S. Ct. 608; Glasser v. United States, 62 S. Ct. 457; United States v. Franklin, 188 F. 2d 182 (CA 7); Roberson v. United States, 165 F. 2d 752; May v. United States, 236 Fed. 495.

3. Even in civil actions in which the equivalent of a demurrer is expressly permitted by the rules, your Honor in certain cases has declined piecemeal dispositions and has insisted that a complete record be made in one hearing where under circumstances comparable to those at bar your Honor deemed it in the interest of justice so to do.

In the instant matter the specific reasons which call for the application of that procedure are the following:

(a) Points 3 and 4 of the motion to dismiss are the only ones on which any issue of fact is likely to arise. Point 3 asserts an estoppel in bar of the action by reason of a voluntary disclosure and thereby raises a question of first impression, although estoppels have been successfully invoked against the Government in criminal cases on other grounds.

Point 4 of the motion asserts the absence of due process because of the lack of any known standard for the determination of cases to be criminally prosecuted. This, too, raises a question of first impression.

It follows that the primary law questions raised by the motion to dismiss will probably be finally resolved only in the reviewing courts. It is also apparent that in requesting the court to take evidence in advance of arguments we are not asking it to pursue 54 an inquiry which would be rendered futile because of existing decisions contrary to the legal position taken by the defendants.

In the reported cases, the question of the effect of a voluntary disclosure has thus far arisen only in two ways: (1) Whether it constitutes a compromise agreement within the meaning of Section 3761 of the Internal Revenue Code; (2) Whether a voluntary disclosure provides a basis for the suppression of evidence obtained as a result of such disclosure. (See In re Liebster, 91 F. Supp. 814; In re White, 98 F. Supp. 895; and United States v. Levy, 99 F. Supp. 529.)

In this case, we predicate the motion to dismiss on an estoppel in bar based on disclosure. Accordingly, the above cases are at this time irrelevant and will remain so unless and until there is occasion to interpose a motion to suppress evidence.

(b) In the event the demurrer is heard and sustained without determination of the facts, and in the event error thereto is assigned on any appeal, and a reversal for such error results, there would be no ultimate findings of fact on which the Court of Appeals could act, and it would be necessary at that late date to remand the case for the trial court to overrule the demurrer and to take evidence when the Government pleads over to the motion.

(c) If the demurrer is first heard without the taking of evidence and the making of a complete record, the disposition of the demurrer one way or the other would not obviate the need for determina-

55 tion by the court of the ultimate facts averred in the motion to dismiss, because if the demurrer is overruled, the Government, according to its transcript statement, will desire to plead over. If the demurrer is sustained, we shall want the facts determined in connection with a motion to suppress evidence predicated upon the claimed disclosure.

4. If the suggested procedure is ordered, defendants will have collateral motions for discovery to reach evidence in the possession of the plaintiff material to the factual issues on such hearing, which motions will be promptly presented to the end that an early hearing may be had.

AMENDMENT OF THE DEFENDANTS TO THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT

Now come the defendants, the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Harold E. Sullivan, Byron A. Cain and Frank J. Huebner, and leave of Court being first had and obtained, file this their amendment to their motion to dismiss the indictment, as follows, to-wit:

1. In paragraph 3 of said motion, after the second full paragraph thereof, insert the following:

"The voluntary disclosure made as aforesaid of misstatements or omissions, aforesaid, among other things, informed said agent of the Treasury Department that the said returns contained omissions and misstatements in that they failed to include, under the heading of gross sales of all or part of the sums received by the corporate defendant through various sales of goods and in that they failed also to include, under the heading of cost of goods sold, various payments made for goods subsequently sold, which payments were in excess of the ceiling prices, as yet by the laws and regulations of the United States Government at the time such goods were purously since, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue took and has maintained the position that, to the extent that the payments made for goods sold were in excess of the ceiling prices for such goods that those payments may not be considered for tax pur-
60 poses despite the fact that the Tax Court and many other courts in every case in which the question has been involved have held that such payments are properly part of the cost of goods sold for purposes of determining taxable income. By reason of the premises, although the defendants maintain that when all of the costs of goods purchased at over-ceiling prices are deducted pursuant to the aforementioned court decisions there would be no additional tax due, nevertheless, the said Commissioner then contended and has continuously since maintained that there may be no deductions for said costs and that there is additional tax due for each of the years in question based upon the additional gross sales indicated by said disclosure. Defendants further aver that on the basis of the information so contained in the disclosure aforesaid, the Bureau of Internal Revenue contends that the defendants wilfully evaded the payment of taxes for said years, whereas, the defendants, and each of them, contend that there was thereby no intent wilfully to evade the payment of taxes."

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

had in the above-entitled cause before the Honorable John P. Barnes, Chief Judge of said Court, in his court room in the United States Court House at Chicago, Illinois, on June 19, 1952, at 2:00 o'clock p.m.

Present:

Hon. Otto Kerner, Jr.,
United States District Attorney,
(450 U. S. Court-House, Chicago 4, Ill.), represented by
Edward J. Ryan, Esq.,
Assistant United States District Attorney, on behalf of plaintiff;

Vincent O'Brien, Esq.,
(105 S. LaSalle st., Chicago 3, Ill.) and

Edward J. Hess, Esq.,
(7 S. Dearborn st., Chicago 3, Ill.), on behalf of defendants.

2 And thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:

By the Clerk: No 52 CR 143, United States of America v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Hearing on issues raised by defendants' motions to dismiss.

By the Court: Proceed, Gentlemen.

And thereupon Edward J. Ryan, Esq., addressed the Court in argument on behalf of plaintiff.

By Mr. Ryan: If the Court please, since I have questioned the legal sufficiency of this motion to dismiss, I assume that it devolves on me to take the affirmative.

Before proceeding with the argument I want to state for the record that the Government has filed a demurrer in this cause.

There is no such thing apparently known to the law any more as a demurrer, but there is an orderly procedure in opposing these motions, I assume.

It is my conclusion, after examining the motion,
3 that irrespective of the things alleged in it, as a matter of law the defendants would not be entitled to the relief.

Accordingly, I filed a paper, which I entitled a demurrer, for the purpose of raising that issue of law before two or three days were spent in threshing out a fact issue here which might have made no difference.

In filing that demurrer, of course I intended to concede all facts well pleaded for the purposes of the argument on the motion.

However, I do want to state for the record that the Government is not for the purposes of the case admitting the truth of the things set forth in every part of the motion to dismiss, and that in the event that the demurrer was overruled the Government does say that it has a defense to the merits of the motion.

Now, the motion to dismiss is in four parts, based on four points.

The first point that is asserted in support of the motion by the defendants is that while the Grand Jury proceedings in this matter were conducted by a Special Assistant to the Attorney General, yet the indictment was 4 signed by the United States Attorney for this District, and not by that Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

My position is twofold there:

1. That it was not error for the United States Attorney to sign it, or for the Special Assistant to the Attorney General to omit to sign it. And,

2. If by any consideration it should be so considered to be error, that it is a formal error—a formal defect, if any defect at all, and not one that would prejudice the case.

The purpose of the attorney signing the indictment is purely to authenticate the indictment. It is no part of the indictment. It has been so decided by the courts, that the signature of the prosecuting attorney is no part of the indictment.

It has also been decided that the signature of the foreman is no part of the indictment. These signatures only go to authenticate the indictment. Actually, they are hangovers from the common law practice, where the prosecuting attorney submitted the Bill to the Grand Jury, and the foreman of the grand jury endorsed it as a "True Bill", or "Ignoramus"—"No Bill".

The courts, as I say have reepatedly held where contentions have been made with respect to defects in the signing of the indictment, or the caption of the indictment, that they are matters of form only; there is no prejudice to the defendant, and there is no error there to be noticed by the court.

Rule 52 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides:

> "Any error, defect, irregularity or variance which does not affect substantial rights shall be disregarded."

Now, however, I did say that it was not error for the Special Assistant to the Attorney General to affix his signature to this indictment.

The United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois is the attorney for the Government here. He has many Assistant United States Attorneys who present matters to the Grand Jury. They do not sign the indictments; the United States Attorney signs the indictments.

The Department of Justice may designate an attorney to come into a particular district and present a matter to the Grand Jury, but whether he presents it, or an Assistant United States Attorney, or the United States Attorney presents it, or who signs it is an intra-departmental matter.

It is not a matter of which the defendant can complain. He is not prejudiced in any sense by it.

There is no question here but that this is an authentic indictment by a grand jury, and that it was returned in open court.

Rule 7 does say that it shall be signed by the Attorney for the Government, and that the indictment shall be a short, clear statement of the offense, and signed by the attorney for the Government.

Otto Kerner, Jr., is the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois. He did sign the indictment. There is no question here about the authenticity of the indictment.

In support of my contentions I have examined a number of cases, and I find that they are very old.

7 In the case of Caha v. The United States, 152 U. S. 211, decided in 1894—

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the citation, Mr. Ryan?

By Mr. Ryan: 152 U. S. 211.

There was an indictment for perjury. And it was contended by the defendant among other things that the form of the indictment was bad, that the indictment was faulty because it was signed by an Assistant United States Attorney instead of by the United States Attorney.

And in passing upon this contention the Supreme Court of the United States said:

"Clearly, there was nothing in any of these matters which tended to the prejudice of the defendant, or rendered it doubtful by what body he was charged with the crime, in what court he was to be tried, or the exact nature of the offence with which he was charged."

And the court there overruled that contention.

And in United States v. Atlantic Commission Co., Inc., 45 Fed. Supp., page 187, decided by the District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina, in 1942, 8 the indictment was for violation of the antitrust laws.

And there it was contended that the indictment was not valid because it was not signed, authorized or ordered by the District Attorney or any of his Assistants, but rather was signed by the prosecutor—by a Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

And there we have the other contentions made.

The court rejected the contention, saying that the omission of the District Attorney's signature was a formality which does not invalidate the indictment.

And in the case of Frisbee v. the United States, 157 U. S. 160, the indictment involved— No, it was complained that the indictment was invalid because it was not ordered "A True Bill" and signed by the foreman of the Grand Jury. And the court said that it was a matter of form which came over from the old practice; that formerly all Bills were presented to the Grand Jury by the prosecutor, and then had to be endorsed one way or the other. So the court again rejected the contention that it rendered the indictment invalid.

9 In United States v. Sheffield Farms, 43 Fed. Supp., 1, again an indictment under the Sherman Act, it was contended again that the indictment was invalid because it was signed by a Special Assistant Attorney General, and not by the District Attorney. And there in that case the court said:

> "The absence of the signature of the United States Attorney upon the indictment is only a matter of form (it being no part of the indictment) which does not go to the substance of the indictment, and not being prejudicial to the defendants, will not be considered."

In the case of Wheatley v. the United States, 159 Fed. 2d, 599, Fourth District, an indictment for kidnaping. There an Assistant United States Attorney had signed the United States Attorney's name. That was before Rule 7 had been promulgated, which provided that indictments should be signed by the attorney for the Government. And the court said:

> "It has been held that the signature of the prosecuting attorney is no part of the indictment and is necessary only as evidence of the authenticity of the document; and it has also been held that the improper signing of an indictment is not such a defect as would invalidate the instrument."

Citing numerous cases; and also citing Rule 52(a) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, which I read from, indicating that no error or defect not of a substantial nature should be noticed.

I submit therefore that ground No. 1 is without substance and is not a proper basis for an order dismissing the indictment in said case.

Ground No. 2 sets forth that the indictment, or the matter having been presented to the Grand Jury by a Special Assistant to the Attorney General, a person who was not of the vicinage, that the defendants were deprived of their rights to an indictment by a grand jury as constituted at common law, and that it is therefore in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

Now, there is a statute on the books, and has been, I think, since 1906, that authorizes the Attorney General to appoint a Special Assistant Attorney General, or Special Attorney, to go out into any district and to conduct legal proceedings, either before a grand jury, or in court, or any sort of legal proceeding.

Here, the defendants noticed that statute, and say of it that it is unconstitutional because under the common law the attorneys who attended before the grand jury had to be an attorney of the vicinage.

Now, I assume that at common law vicinage had a definite meaning; it meant a certain locality, or the locality for which the grand jury inquired, perhaps.

I know of no definition. There may be one. And I don't know what application it has in Federal Practice. I don't know whether it means the district, or whether it means the county, or whether it means the state. But suffice to say that in the absence of some compelling authority or argument indicating the invalidity of this statute there is nothing here for the court to notice.

The contention is not new. It was raised in the case of United States v. Atlantic Commission Co., which 12 I previously cited—45 Fed. Supp., page 187.

There the exact contention was made with respect to this statute. And the court said:

"With respect to the constitutionality of the statute, defendants rely upon the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which provides that 'no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, * * *.' Defendants contend that an 'indictment of a grand jury' under this amendment means no indictment obtained in accordance with the traditional grand jury procedure, at the common law, at the time this Amendment was adopted; and that, therefore, a later Congressional enactment cannot modify that traditional procedure by permitting the presence of prosecuting attorneys on behalf of the Government during the grand jury proceedings.

"However, defendants have cited no decisions of any court in support of this novel contention. In 13 United States v. Thompson, 251 U. S. 407, 409, 40 S. Ct. 289, 64 L. Ed. 333, the Supreme Court, although not discussing the question of constitutionality, apparently gave its approval to the practice of appointing Special Assistants to the Attorney General under the Act of June 30, 1906, which was cited by the Court in its opinion. This may be considered as a tacit ruling that the statute was not unconstitutional. United States v. Sloan, D.C., 31 F. Supp. 327, 331.

"Furthermore, defendants' contention would prove too much. It would prevent the service as grand jurors of persons who, by reason of sex or race, were not qualified to serve on a grand jury at the time the Fifth Amendment was adopted, and would chain the courts, in the face of greatly changed conditions, to ancient formulae and would be a denial of the flexibility and capacity for growth and adaptation in the law which is regarded as its "peculiar boast 14 and excellence'."

Citing cases, including that of Hurtado v. California, which your Honor may recall held that due process of law was not inflexible, and that the State of California act, doing away with indictments in felony cases, that it was not a rigid concept, that it changed with the times, and that if a fair and proper hearing was given, and fair and proper procedure was followed, that the law was not inflexible but that it changed with the times.

I say there is no merit to this very technical and novel argument that simply because this attorney came from Washington to do the work of presenting evidence to the grand jury, that the indictment is invalid, or that the defendants are in any sense prejudiced.

I say that that contention should be rejected, and the motion to dismiss not allowed on that basis.

Now, as to the third point of the defendants' motion.

In the third point they set up that for some years past the Treasury Department had a policy, and they say that that policy was in substance that if a volun-
15 tary disclosure of tax irregularity or tax evasion was made by a taxpayer prior to the time that any investigation was commenced by the Government—and, as I say, if it was voluntary, that they would be permitted to pay up their taxes and settle their liability and that there would be no criminal prosecution.

They say that they have done that; that they have made a disclosure, and that by reason of this disclosure they have become immune from prosecution, and that accordingly the Government cannot pursue this indictment, and further that it should be dismissed by reason of this voluntary disclosure.

In the affidavit of the accountant, a man by the name of Busby, they set forth the statements of various officials of the Treasury Department which are alleged to form the basis of this policy.

There are not too many of them, and I think they are important here. They are imporiant here for this reason, your Honor:

This is a motion to dismiss. And the third point of this motion to dismiss—in the third point these defendants do not say that they disclosed that they had 16 evaded any taxes.

Examining the face of the motion together with the affidavits filed in support of it, it is apparent that they are admitting that they did not admit that they owed any taxes whatever.

They went in and stated, according to the motion, that they had made omissions and misstatements in their return, but take the position that those omissions and misstatements did not have the effect of evading any taxes whatsoever.

17 In other words, as an example of how that would be true, if you understated your gross income, but you also understated your expenses by a similar amount there would be no tax liability and consequently there could be no tax evasion since the additional income would be offset by the understated expense, and there would be no tax due and owing. Consequently there could be no tax evasion in that case if that was the situation, and there could be no disclosure of tax evasion but simply the disclosure that the return was in error.

But if where that situation would be true, a voluntary disclosure within the meaning of the policy would not have been made, since it is apparent from the utterances that what the officials of the Treasury Department were talking about was where a man came in because of a contrite heart and said, "I have evaded my taxes, and now I want to pay up, confess to the Government and pay up and get this off my mind." And under those circumstances the Treasury Department says, "We won't prosecute you."

Now, these are the statements on which this policy
18 is alleged to have been based—and I think it is apparent what the Treasury officials are talking about—is a confession, an early and voluntary confession of tax evasion.

The affidavit says:

On

"May 28, 1945—former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau stated at a press conference that some taxpayers who have failed to declare their full income and pay the tax due 'may escape criminal prosecution through voluntary disclosure of the deficiency only in cases where such voluntary disclosure is made before investigation is started.'

August 21, 1945—former Secretary of the Treasury Vinson, as guest contributor to Drew Pearson's column, wrote:

'No honest American need fear this drive against tax evaders. No one is going to jail for an honest mistake in filling out his tax return. Treasury policy even permits the wilful evader to escape prosecution if he repents in time. The Commissioner of In-19 ternal Revenue does not recommend criminal prosecution in the case of any taxpayer who makes a voluntary disclosure of omission or other misstatement in his tax return or of failure to make a tax return. Monetary penalties may be imposed for delinquency, for negligence and for fraud, but the man who makes a disclosure before an investigation is under way protects himself and his family from the stigma of a felony conviction. And there is nothing complicated about going to a collector or other revenue officer and simply saying, "There is something wrong with my return and I want to straighten it out." '

Now, in connection with that statement I want to call attention to the earlier part of it, where the Secretary said:

"Treasury policy even permits the wilful evader to escape prosecution if he repents in time", because later on he speaks of omissions and misstatements.

20 The defendants have resorted to that phrase 'omissions and misstatements', and that is what they plead in their motion. They say they have made a disclosure of omissions and misstatements, but that they do not admit any additional tax liability, and did not admit any additional tax liability.

"October 15, 1945—the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue released the following statement to the press:

"'The Commissioner said that since June 1, some 30,000 delinquent or amended returns had been filed voluntarily accounting for additional taxes of more than $50,000,000. Mr. Nunan again stressed the Bureau policy of refraining from instituting criminal proceedings against taxpayers who come forward voluntary and pay up delinquencies plus interest and civil penalties before the Bureau has begun investigating their cases.'

"August 7, 1946—Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder is reported to have said:

21 "'* * * that in accordance with Treasury custom, there would be no criminal prosecuton of the taxpayers who voluntary remembered and reported their tax delinquencies.'

May 14, 1947—J. P. Wenchel, the then Chief Counsel of the Bureal of Internal Revenue, said in the course of an address:

"'The law requires the prosecution of the tax-evader and that is what the Department recommends to the Attorney General.

"'There is one important exception to that. The Department has broad discretionary power long recognized by Congress to determine the policy and procedure for the effective enforcement of the internal revenue laws. The Department, acting under that power, does not recommend prosecution of the evader who repents in time. There is nothing new in the position. Where the taxpayer makes a voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion before investigation has been initiated, criminal prosecution will not be 22 recommended.

"'The Department has always encouraged voluntary disclosure.

"'And what is a voluntary disclosure? A voluntary disclosure occurs when a taxpayer of his own free will and accord, and before any investigation is initiated, discloses fraud upon the Government. Healthy administration of the Internal Revenue laws long ago dictated that policy and I believe that its worth is obvious.

"'The making of a voluntary disclosure is a simple thing. The taxpayer or his legal agent can go before any official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue or any of its field offices—whether it is the collector, a deputy collector, revenue agent, a special agent, or any other responsible treasury officer. There is no special form for making the disclosure. The simple statement that "I have filed false tax returns and I want to make the Government whole," would constitute a complete disclosure. Of course, it is best usually to 23 present an amended return or other written document as evidence of the disclosure. If possible, the disclosure should be accompanied by payment of the tax which is known to be due, but this is not a prerequisite.'"

Now, I say, your Honor, that it is apparent from these utterances brought all together that what the policy actually is. It is where a man comes in and says, "I have evaded my taxes", and indicates—whether he can indicate the exact amount, or cannot indicate the exact count, but where he says "I have evaded my taxes, and I want to get it off my mind now, and pay up", that if that step is taken prior to the time that there is an investigation commenced so that it is a voluntary disclosure, that the Department will not prosecute.

Now, I say it is apparent from the motion here that that is not so in this case. The pertinent language is as follows: in setting up what the policy is they say that these statements have been made by various officials:

"• • • whereby it was publicly represented there would be no criminal prosecution in any case in which a voluntary disclosure of misstatement or 24 omission in a tax return was made to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department before investigation had been initiated, but that the Treasury Department in such case would merely assess such unpaid tax, interest and civil penalties, if any, as might properly be found due under the facts of the case."

Then they set up that in reliance on that policy they went to an official in the Collector's office, and that they made a disclosure of omission and misstatement.

But in the paragraph following that which I was just reading, they say:

"In reliance upon said policy, the defendants before the commencement of any investigation within the meaning of the aforesaid statements of the aforementioned commissioner and secretary and others, in January of 1948 made such a disclosure", relating back to their statement of policy, which was a disclosure of misstatement and omissions upon which the Secretary or the Treasury Department would assess 25 the taxes, if any.

I say that such a statement made to the Treasury Department is not a voluntary disclosure of tax evasion, and does not invoke the policy.

Now, in the affidavit of the defendant Byron A. Cain, he makes the statement, in paragraph 9:

"Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corporation owes no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95, which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98, which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of said agents aforesaid were of such embarrassment in the conduct of the business of the corporate defendant and so disruptive to the relations of the corporate defendant with its customers and suppliers, that affiant at all times during the said period of four years importuned the said agent to bring the matter to a conclusion, and at all such times expressed the willingness of the corporation to pay such rea-
26 sonable amount as the said agents might claim to be due. Nevertheless, and heedless of said importunings, and without completing said examination, and for the purpose of bringing a charge prior to the expiration of the six-year statute of limitations in relation to the first count of said indictment, the matter was presented to the grand jury on March 14, 1952, to-wit, the last day of the six years, by a special assistant to the Attorney General who received his authority only the day before.

I say that demonstrates on the face of this motion that there was no disclosure of any tax liability, since they have steadfastly maintained that they owed none, and that at most they had gone in and indicated some mistake or omission in the return, not affecting the tax liability, which is not a disclosure of an evasion such as would invoke the policy of the Treasury Department.

Now, further than that, too, — and I would not make this argument unless I were prepared to grant the statement that a disclosure was made, because I think it would come with ill grace from the Government to 27 make such an arrangement and then not keep it, and I would not be a party to such a breach of faith.

But there is a question of law here. So I say that this matter of voluntary disclosure, and whether there will or will not be prosecution where a disclosure is made rests upon the conscience of the Executive Department. there is no immunity that can be acquired, and I know of no case that so holds, without some statutory au- y.

There have been immunity statutes passed, simply to enable the prosecutor or the Government to obtain from people evidence that they could otherwise withhold on the basis of their privilege against incrimination, by giving them an immunity coextensive with their privilege.

The reason those statutes were passed was because the courts' holding was that in the absence of such a statute no binding immunity could ever have been given to them, no immunity that they could plead in bar, and no immunity that they could ever enforce. And that is the reason for the existence of those statutes.

Now, in the case of Ford v. the United States,
28 which I think is rather fundamental, the facts are not identical, but I believe the principle is the same, the Supreme Court of the United States had occasion to pass upon it.

The citation is 99 U.S. Reports, 594.

In that case the District Attorney, it appears, or it was alleged, had made an agreement with certain individuals that if they would testify against some of their accomplices in revenue matters he would assure them that they would not be pressed for taxes due from them or if they were not informed against they would not be prosecuted for any penalty criminally.

Thereafter they were prosecuted. And they alleged that they did testify, and they did discharge their part of the bargain.

Now, just exactly why the District Attorney saw fit not to keep faith with that agreement, or what other reasons there may have been, I don't know.

The principle of law was stated in that case. The Supreme Court of the United States held that even if such an agreement was made it gave only an equitable right to immunity from prosecution, a right which could not be enforced by the courts, which rested alone upon the conscience of the executive, or the executive branch of the Government.

And the Supreme Court went back and reviewed the history of such arrangements, and said that at common law there was a procedure, which was known as approvement whereby if somebody confessed and informed on somebody else and then testified, and he himself was convicted, that the case would be continued so that he could make application to the executive for a pardon.

And the Supreme Court went on to say that that practice was apparently still in use in this country; and the court went on to say:

"Should it be objected that the application may not be successful, the answer of the court must be in substance that given by Lord Denman on a similar occasion, that we are not to presume that the equitable title to mercy which the humblest and most criminal accomplice may thus acquire by testifying to the truth in a federal court will be sacredly accorded to him by the President, in whom the pardoning power is vested by the Federal Constitution.

"Having come to the conclusion that the District Attorney had no authority to make the agreement alleged in the plea in bar, it follows that the Circuit Court erred in the two cases instituted there, in overruling the demurrer to it, and that the judgment must be reversed, and the causes remanded for further proceedings in conformity with the opinion of the court."

And they had said further back in the opinion:

"Waiving for the present the question whether the District Attorney may contract with an accomplice of an accused person on trial, that if he will testify in the case his taxes shall be abated, or that he and his property shall be exempt from internal-revenue taxation, the court will consider in the first place whether the District Attorney, as a public prosecutor, may properly enter into an agreement with such an accomplice, that if he will testify fully and fairly in such a prosecution against his associate 31 in guilt he shall not be prosecuted for the same offense; and if so, whether such an agreement, if the witness performs on his part, will avail the witness as a defense to the criminal charge in case of a subsequent prosecution."

That was exactly what the court held was the effect it would not have; in other words, it could not be pleaded in bar.

Now, this is but a policy; there is no statute providing that under these circumstances immunity will be given. The defendants predicate their contention for the statutory authority upon the compromise statute. There is a statute empowering the Secretary of the Treasury to compromise, and which is referred to in the motion—Point 3, first paragraph:

"At all the times in question in these proceedings, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury, by virtue of the statutes in such case made and provided, were empowered to compromise any civil or criminal case which might have arisen under the Internal Revenue laws against 32 the defendants. At all times in question in this proceeding, and for many years"—

And then they go on and speak of the policy. And they have referred to the revenue laws, which enable the Secretary to compromise tax liability.

That statute provides that that must be done with the specific assent of the Secretary of the Treasury, and that there must be an offer to pay, and they must arrive at some figure which must be accepted, and then there is a compromise. And then the case is closed by virtue of that statute so that there could be no prosecution in that case.

That, however, is not the case here. There has been no compromise here.

Referring to the case of the United States v. Lustig, decided by the Court of Appeals, I believe it is the Second Circuit, 163 F. 2d, page 85, that was a tax evasion case. The defendants there were indicted for attempting to abate and evade the payment of income taxes. And there they made a motion to dismiss, and a motion to suppress evidence. The motion to suppress evidence is not material for our consideration here. It was 33 on the theory that in the reliance on this disclosure policy the defendants had given certain evidence to the Government that the Government otherwise would not have gotten, and that in addition to that they acquired immunity by reason of this alleged disclosure then made, and therefore could not be prosecuted. But again they relied upon the statutory authority—upon the compromise section.

But in that case, as here, there was no compromise effected; there was no arrival at figures; there was no offer made of payment; there was no acceptance of payment, so there could not have been any compromise under the statute.

The Government there also took the position that there wasn't any voluntary disclosure, and the court so found. And because the court so found I recognize that this discussion here about immunity does not have the force which it would otherwise have if it were a decision.

With respect to immunity, the court said:

"As for the contention that the defendants received immunity under the compromise statute, it is even more illusory than the one we have already discussed 34 based on an alleged invasion of constitutional rights. The compromise statute affords no shield to one who has violated the tax laws unless there has actually been a compromise. (Citing cases.) It is not even claimed here that there was more than an offer to make a compromise. None of the formalities prescribed by the statute and treated by the Supreme Court as necessary to effect a compromise were observed. (Citing cases.) There was no issue of fact for court or jury as to whether a contract of compromise had been made. Accordingly there is no merit in the defense of immunity."

There have been a number of cases where there have been contentions made that the evidence should be suppressed, where a voluntary disclosure has allegedly been made. And in all of those instances except one the court has denied this motion.

In at least one of the cases the court indicated that even if there was a disclosure that there would not have been any suppression of the evidence since the defendant could not hold the Government to the policy as a matter of contract.

I submit that there is no authority in existence for the proposition that a defendant may acquire immunity by virtue of such a policy as this, by virtue of a promise, or by virtue of anything else other than immunity acquired by reason of a prior trial for the same offense and acquittal or conviction, or by reason of the statute.

And if it were true that such immunity could be authorized there would have been no necessity for Congress to enact the statute providing that such an immunity might be given under certain circumstances where a defendant refused to testify on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

Beyond that posture of the law I say there is no basis in the voluntary disclosure policy on which the defendants can properly ask the court to bar prosecution.

Now, I prefaced my argument by saying that I would not make this kind of an argument if there had been voluntary discovery, and if I were not in a position to assert as I have indicated that it shows that there has been no voluntary discovery.

Upon a hearing on the motion we may go further, but I feel that it is the duty of counsel to call to the attention of the court these matters of law in advance of any two-or-three day hearing on the evidence here, after which hearing the result would still have to be the same even if the defendants proved everything that they allege in their motion.

Now, on Point 4 of the defendants' motion, it sets up—and as a matter of fact it is very brief, and I assume that it would be better if I read it, because it is slightly complicated:

> "4. During 1948 and during all the years in question, it was and for many years had been the actual practice of the Department of Justice to refrain from the initiation of criminal prosecution of such cases except upon the recommendation of the Treasury Department, although the Department of Justice reserve discretion as to whether to proceed with the criminal prosecution of any cases in which such recommendation was made. Under such practice, the Treasury Department has refrained from recommending criminal prosecution of many 37 cases which could have been so prosecuted and the Department of Justice has refrained from criminal prosecution of many cases which have been recommended to it for such prosecution. At none of the times aforesaid has there been any standard of law, either by enactment of Congress or by established criteria or regulation of the Treasury Department or of the Department of Justice, from which the public or the courts might ascertain the basis on which such prosecution is recommended or withheld. Such practice has given rise to a discriminatory application and enforcement of the law, as will more fully appear upon the hearing of this motion, and in the case at bar has thereby deprived the defendants of due process of law contrary to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America."

Now, as I see that, that is a bid to have the court listen to evidence about what happened, perhaps in a half a dozen or a hundred, or every other tax case, to find out after examining into the facts in those 38 cases and determining what the merits were there, whether there was a violation of the law there and such a violation that the ends of justice would require the prosecution of.

There is nothing in this motion other than the statement by itself that has given rise to any discriminatory application in the enforcement of the law. And if there was any merit as a matter of law to this contention it certainly would be incumbent upon the defendants to allege something more than a legal conclusion that there is a discriminatory practice. I mean, that is a conclusion. There are no ultimate facts here alleged that indicate that there is any such discriminatory practice. In fact, they say they don't know what the basis is on which the Department--either the Treasury Department or the Department of Justice determines whether there shall be a prosecution or not.

But more than that, a defendant in a case cannot defend himself by saying that there are certain other people who should have been prosecuted. I think that has been held, that a defendant cannot say that some-39 body else who did the same thing is not prosecuted. Two wrongs don't make a right.

In every single case—and I think there are something like 96 district attorneys in the United States—now, no United States Attorney prosecutes every single case where there seems to be a violation of the law, and there are situations where the ends of justice require that no prosecution be initiated. And that must be recognized. The sound administration of justice demands that he use some discretion. However, there are no two people who think exactly alike. And there is no way of knowing that each man will use his discretion in the same way. And the net result of a violation, on a certain set of facts that would be turned down in another part of the country, it might be that somebody would prosecute the case in another part of the country. Certainly that is not equal treatment, and it seems that there is not much of any cure for it.

And certainly it furnishes no defense to one man to say as a matter of law, you can't prosecute me because you didn't prosecute somebody else, or somebody 40 else didn't prosecute him down south in some other district. And with equal force perhaps it could be argued that one judge in one district or in one part of the country applies a certain sentence in all probability in a certain type of cases, where another judge in another district feels that in that type of a case you should give probation.

Now, I do not know of any way of correcting such a situation. Judges cannot be deprived of their discretion. They act in accordance with a free conscience. True, the cases may be exactly the same, and there may be a difference. It is not exactly equal treatment. But I do say this that the court on every indictment returned cannot make an investigation of what happened in every other similar case. That must be left to the discretion of the executive department. If that discretion is abused that is maladministration, and there is another cure for that, and it is not with the court in holding that in a given case a man cannot be prosecuted because he charges that there is no uniform policy, or that the policy on which they prosecute is unknown.

So we say that the defendants' motion to dismiss so 41 far as it is based on the fourth point should be overruled and denied as a matter of law.

Now, coming back briefly to the third point, to illustrate, and to leave the facts alone before the court:

There is no need for a policy of not prosecuting an income tax evasion case if there is no income tax evasion case. If there is no income tax evasion case there cannot be any successful prosecution. Nor is a man entitled to immunity or to be free from prosecution if he has made disclosure and it is not a full and complete disclosure.

Now, if he has made a full and complete disclosure and it does not indicate that there is any basis of an income tax evasion case against him he does not need any immunity, he cannot be successfully prosecuted.

Only in the case where the man comes in and gives the facts to the Government and in effect says that he has evaded his income tax, does he need immunity. And I say that in this case we have the contention in this case that there is no tax due and owing, and even if that be a mistake, and I doubt that, even if it is false or made 42 under a mistaken belief in the law that doesn't excuse him from properly declaring his taxes. And he certainly couldn't have any intent to evade and certainly could not be convicted of withholding his tax if he didn't think he owed some taxes, and consequently if there were a disclosure in such a case there could be no disclosure such as would bring them within the policy. And that appears from the face of the motion.

I thank you.

43 And thereupon Vincent O'Brien, Esq., addressed the Court in argument on behalf of the defendants.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, if we always had that unanimity of viewpoint which Mr. Ryan twice referred to, of agreement between the taxpayer and the Bureau as to whether taxes were or were not due I am sure that your calendars here would be greatly shortened and you would have time for much more other work.

He says that the taxpayer may have been acting under a misapprehension as to the law.

There are many cases in the books with which we are all familiar, in which the Commissioner takes the position and maintains it, if you please, adverse to the taxpayer notwithstanding court decisions to the contrary.

There is plenty of room for argument as to whether there is or is not a tax due. The mere fact that we do not concede in the ultimate that as a matter of law there is any tax due is not to say that there is no subject matter for a disclosure which when made would lead the Commissioner not only to make a claim—a civil claim, but 44 in a case such as this to present the matter for grand jury action.

I wanted to stress that at the outset because Mr. Ryan repeated it and commented on it with that statement. I will come to it more specifically when I get to Point 3.

At the moment I would like to address myself briefly to Point 1, in which we say that the indictment purports on its face to have been signed by the United States Attorney, and not by the Attorney for the Government, within the meaning of Rule 7—Criminal Rule 7, the Attorney for the Government in this case having been a Special Assistant Attorney General, not appointed as an Assistant to the United States Attorney but appointed as a Special Assistant to the Attorney General, for the purposes of presenting this case to the grand jury. And that is one of the main issues, who did so present it.

Now, with one exception Mr. Ryan has alluded to cases all of which were decided before Rule 7 of the Criminal Rules of Procedure was adopted.

Those rules generally, as the court knows, were not adopted until 1944. Consequently every decision to 45 which he referred, including the Commissioner case back in 1942, was decided prior to that time.

The one exception was the Wheatley case—159 F. 2d 599, decided in the Fourth Circuit.

Now, our position, if the Court please, is that at the common law and under the practice which then obtained there was no indispensable requirement that an indictment be signed by the prosecuting officer, although in some local places it had become the usual practice, as is referred to in some of the cases.

All of the cases—all of the Federal cases prior to the enactment of the present rule say that no such signature was an indispensable requirement, or that such signature was not required at the common law, and that its absence was not a defect which would affect the validity of the indictment.

But every one of the important cases amongst those listed, including the United States Supreme Court case, shows that that is true, namely, that the omission does not affect the validity of the indictment. That is true only where there is no statute which expressly requires the 46 making of that signature.

For example, in 135 U. S. 443, the Supreme Court cites with approval and relies upon the leading case of Commonwealth v. Stone, 105 Mass. 569, in which the court said that

> "Where there is nothing in the statute requiring the signature of the prosecuting officer we do not think that its absence is indispensable to the validity of the indictment."

Now, commencing in 1944 the Rules of Criminal Procedure, having the effect of statutory law, expressly required by Rule 7 that such a signature be appended to the indictment.

While that statute is now in your court there have been similar statutes enacted before in many of the States of the Union.

Since the enactment of such statutes every one of those States without exception has held that the absence of that requirement is a fatal defect in the indictment.

Some of the decisions contain a statement of persuasive reasons why that is so.

I illustrate quickly with but a few, if the Court
47 please, because there are no exceptions.

In Indiana, in the case of Hancock v. State, 42 Ind., 393, the defendant moved to quash the indictment on the ground that the signature of the prosecuting attorney was not affixed to the indictment as required by the statute.

The motion was denied, and the defendant excepted and appealed.

The Supreme Court of Indiana reversed, holding that the statute required the signature of the prosecuting attorney and that without it

> "the indictment had no more force than a blank sheet of paper".

In Tennessee, in Teas v. State, 26 Tenn. 174, the defendant appealed from the judgment of conviction on the same ground, and the Supreme Court of Tennessee reversed, and said,

"We have repeatedly held that a bill of indictment to be good in law must be signed by the proper officer appointed to prosecute on behalf of the State."

And then in a better case as far as the exposition of reasons is concerned, State v. Bruce, 77 Mo., 193, 48 there the defendant was convicted, and appealed on the ground that the prosecuting attorney had failed to sign. And the Supreme Court of Missouri reversed the judgment of conviction on the ground that the absence of the prosecuting attorney's signature was fatal. The court pointed out that a statute requiring such a signature had been enacted.

And that is the case here, if your Honor please; your rule was so enacted:

"has been enacted after court decisions holding it wasn't necessary or indispensable to be so signed."

And I stress this point, and point out further that the court said that the requirement could therefore not be considered, as contended by Mr. Ryan, a mere formality which might be dispensed with.

In that respect the court said:

"We are satisfied that no paper can be regarded as an indictment without the signature of the prosecuting attorney.

Now, as I have said, your Honor, the factual situation in the case here falls squarely within the State Court decisions.

49 In 1944 the Supreme Court changed the rule—and the rules so enacted by it have the force of statute—and that expressly requires that the indictment be signed by the attorney for the Government.

Now, counsel cited one case from the Fourth Circuit, the Wheatley case, in which the court failed to give any significance to the enactment of Rule 7 and the law pertaining to a situation of that kind where in the face of existing cases that a signature is not required, and Congress passes an express rule, or the Supreme Court enacts a rule that such a signature will be required.

The court knows all of the significance of that is recognized as the general law but said nothing about it, and goes on to assert that it has been held in the past that such a signature is not required, and that that is all right.

In addition to that, as Mr. Ryan says, the court mentions Rule 52, which is the one which says that the court is not justified in taking cognizance of errors not of substance.

And again the court mentions Rule 52 and overlooks the law, a matter which is provided for by the stat-
50 ute, in the face of existing cases which had said it was not essential, which is for that very reason essential. And I submit that such a construction which would enable the court to ignore the requirements of Rule 7 by virtue of Rule 52 gives no effect whatsoever to the provisions of Rule 7, indeed fairly emasculates that provision.

The proper rule of construction requires that both sections be given a meaning. And the only way that can be done, under the proper interpretation of the rule, is to take the interpretation which every State of the country that has a statute—has a similar statute has taken, some of which of those decisions I have referred to, but there are many more.

So that I say in conclusion on that phase of the point that the one case decided in the Federal Courts since 1944 is for the reasons which I have mentioned, not the law; it is not binding on this court; it is not the law in this circuit, it is not in accord not only with the overwhelming weight but the unanimous authorities at general law, all of which are to the contrary.

Consequently we make the point—No. 1 of our 51 motion, notwithstanding the presence of the Wheatley case. I think your Honor will appreciate that in a matter of this kind there are many points which must be brought before the court in the presentation. We have sought to confine them to four, and in no instance will your Honor find as the argument progresses that any of them are made on an insubstantial or frivolous basis.

Now, as to one more thing, in Point 1 counsel says that the indictment was signed by the attorney for the Government.

Now, as to one more thing, in Point 1 counsel says that the indictment was signed by the attorney for the Government.

Now, that raises a question: Who within the meaning of Rule 7(c) is the attorney for the Government? Rule 7(c) requires that the indictment be signed by "the attorney for the Government". It does not say "by the United States Attorney"; it does not say "by the United States District Attorney"; it does not say "by the local attorney". And why? Because they have two statutes, with which I have no doubt you are thoroughly familiar—the one, the original one which requires, puts the duty and responsibility on the United States District Attorney for the presentation of indictments to the grand jury in his district.

52 Later, as Mr. Ryan has correctly observed, in 1906 the Congress at the instance of the Attorney General enacted Section 310 which purports to enable the Attorney General of the United States to appoint Special Assistants. And they are now by him specially directed to go into the various districts and to do what they could not theretofore do by existing law, to present cases to Federal grand juries.

Right or wrong that Section 310 is on the books, so that you now have two statutes, one of which provides for the presenting of cases to the grand jury by the United States Attorneys; the other of which enables a Special Assistant Attorney General to come into the district and himself on proper orders to present a case.

Rule 7, taking cognizance of that, provides simply that the attorney for the Government—meaning the attorney, whoever he may be, whether he is a special assistant attorney or whether he is the United States Attorney for his district, shall sign that indictment.

Now, the plain fact of the matter is, as appears from the motion, that Mr. Cunningham, whose authority 53 was then lodged with the clerk, and it was dated the night before, came here from Washington, went into the grand jury and presented the case, and was in a hurry to be gone, and took a plane, and he went, he could not stay to fulfill the requirements of your rule, although he is the one who the papers say presented that case to the grand jury.

The indictment does not in point of fact and within the meaning of that rule bear the signature of the attorney for the Government. It bears the signature of Otto Kerner, the United States Attorney who had nothing to do with the presentation of the case. And as the moving papers show, Mr. Cunningham was not designated as an Assistant, Special, or otherwise, to the United States Attorney.

We of course make no point, or would make no point of the fact here that the indictment was subscribed in the name of Otto Kerner when in fact the presentation was made by one of his Special Assistants. That is not the fact and that is not our contention.

So we say that this indictment by reason of the matters mentioned in Point 1 is fatally defective not 54 merely in matter of form as counsel would have you believe, not in matter of form, as the Missouri Supreme Court expressly held it could not be where the statute so requires, it is fatally defective in substance, and the motion to dismiss in that regard must be sustained.

It is only fair to say to the court, although the court knows it generally, but in this connection undoubtedly I assume that the Government, were that ground upheld, would have the right to apply for a reindictment. But that is not to say, as I see it, that they would necessarily procure a reindictment on such application.

But that is neither here nor there. The motion to dismiss on that basis I respectfully submit should be sustained.

I wonder, your Honor, if we might take a couple of minutes recess?

By the Court: We can recess for a few minutes or recess until tomorrow morning if you prefer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I should have said at the start that I have an appointment, your Honor, to get some x-rays made tomorrow morning. But I will try to finish if 55 you are agreeable, or I was going to ask that it might go until Monday.

By the Court: How much more time will you need?

By Mr. O'Brien: The next point is the important point, Point No. 3. I don't know how long it will take to cover it, but I think I should have an hour.

The Court: All right, you may go until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: You may go now until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, Judge.

(Whereupon the further hearing of the above-entitled matters were continued until Friday, June 20, 1952, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock p.m.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
June 20, 1952,
2:00 o'clock p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Ryan,
Mr. O'Brien,
Mr. Hess.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:

By the Clerk: Number 52 CR 143, United States vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Further hearing.

By the Court: You may proceed, Mr. O'Brien, whenever you are ready.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

And thereupon, Vincent O'Brien, Esq., further addressed the Court in argument on behalf of the defendants.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, yesterday
57 I finished our discussion of point 1, and the demurrer to it.

And I think that now for the moment I will skip point 2, and come to point 3, which is a point of genuine substance on the matters now before you.

Point 3 is the point on which we base the claim of estoppel in bar by reason of the immunity following the admitted disclosure.

I say to the Court that this point is not one of these formal or technical points commonly found in motions to dismiss, but it is included in the motion to dismiss because under your present rules all matters preceding the general issue must be incorporated in such a motion. Under past practice those would have been interposed by way of a plea in bar of the action.

Now, before I get to the details of that point, I would like you to know a little about the theory.

We do not controvert Mr. Ryan's general statement of the law that in order for a government official bind-ingly to promise immunity there must be a statute or law of some kind authorizing that to be done, either in special or in general terms.

But I stress the point, your Honor—and it is the 58 key thing of this whole point—that there is present here a statute conferring such power on the officials in question, namely, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Assistant Secretary, the Under-Secretary, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, over on the Bureau side. There is such a statute.

Now, before going to that statute, I would like to read, because it is fairly brief, the portion of the motion which states the facts which bring that statute and our claim of estoppel into operation.

We say—and verify it—that:

> "At all the times in question in these proceedings, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury, by virtue of the statutes in such case made and provided"—

Meaning Section 3761.

> —"were empowered to compromise any civil or criminal case which might have arisen under the Internal Revenue Laws against the defendant. At all times in question in this proceeding, and for many years prior thereto, there was and for many years had been in effect in the Bureau of Internal Revenue a policy > 59 from time to time published and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and by other responsible Treasury officials, whereby it was publicly represented there would be no criminal prosecution in any case in which a voluntary disclosure of misstatement or omission in a tax return was made to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department before investigation had been initiated, but that the Treasury Department in such case would merely assess such unpaid tax, interest and civil penalties, if any, as might properly be found due under the facts of the case."

And I would like to veer just a moment, your Honor, and add to the statements of the policy read to you yesterday by Mr. Ryan, a brief allusion to the reason and substance behind that policy.

There are many returns filed, containing omissions or misstatements which, in the practical operation of the Bureau, would or might never come to the attention of the Government for either civil or criminal purposes.

It has been thought by those promulgating the policy
60 that the adoption of such policy, the publication of it to the people at large would, and it has, resulted in many coming forward disclosing such statements or omissions and ultimately paying moneys in large amounts in the aggregate which the revenue never otherwise would have gotten.

In exchange for that, and by the terms—the express terms of the policy, the Bureau has said to the people that if that is done, there would be no criminal prosecution, reserving, of course, all right to collect any additional tax, or tax deficiency or any interest or penalties, as the nature of the case might warrant.

Going on with the motion, we say:

"In reliance upon said policy, the defendants, before the commencement of any investigation within the meaning of the aforesaid statements of the aforementioned Commissioner and Secretary and others, in January of 1948 made such a disclosure in respect of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years mentioned in the indictment in this cause, and 61 from time to time thereafter until and including March of 1948 reiterated the same, in each instance, to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department."

We further say:

"The officers and agents of the Treasury Department to whom the aforementioned disclosure was made, acknowledged to the defendants the sufficiency and timeliness thereof upon the occasions aforesaid. In further reliance upon said policy and upon said acknowledgments and at the request of said officials and agents, the defendants caused to be made available to them the books and records of the corporate defendant, and communicated to the officers and agents of the Treasury Department information in the possession of the individual defendants materially related to said omissions and misstatements and not available to such Treasury Officers and agents through the said books and records of the corporate defendant, and which information could not have been obtained from the individual defendants in any manner,

62 in view of the constitutional privileges and rights of the individual defendants, and employed the services of accountants to assist said officers and agents"—

Of the government, we mean:

—"in ascertaining facts from such books and records. The corporate defendant in that regard specially incurred and paid, over the period of four years over which the examination by the said agents extended, auditing charges in excess of the sum of $20,000."

And we aver:

"By reason of the premises, the government was and is estopped from instituting and maintaining"— this action.

Now, I said that in so doing, fundamentally we are relying upon Section 3761. But before going into that section, I would like to clear from my observations a few comments that I have concerning Mr. Ryan's argument of yesterday on this point.

To begin with, Mr. Ryan said that the motion does not aver the existence of a fraudulent evasion, or that any additional tax is due. That is the first thing he 63 says.

The second is that there isn't any statute which confers authority in the officials in question, or any other officials, to grant immunity in such a case, and that the one on which we rely really hasn't much to do with it. He gives it a sort of a quick push-off.

He said, third, that it is really a matter of grace, after all, a matter for the conscience of the Executive Department which made the policy; a matter of conscience to grant or to withhold in its uncontrolled discretion free of interference by any court through the application of the rules ordinarily governing, so far as they apply.

Now, as to the first of these statements, namely, the statement that the motion papers do not admit a wilful tax evasion and an additional tax due in consequence.

Now, what Mr. Ryan meant by that I suppose is made more clearly apparent in the instance or example that he cited at page 17 of yesterday's transcript, as he put it:

"In other words, as an example of how that would 64 be true, if you understated your gross income, but you also understated your expenses by a similar amount, there would be no tax liability and consequently there could be no tax evasion since the additional income would be offset by the understated expense, and there would be no tax due and owing. Consequently, there could be no tax evasion in that case, if that was the situation, and there could be no disclosure of tax evasion but simply the disclosure that the return was in error."

Well, the trouble with that statement, your Honor, is best illustrated in the case at bar. It overlooks the fact, first, that the bill of particulars filed in the action claims certain premium receipts, and there may be and could well be premium disbursements. And the question of what we may properly deduct from demonstrated income is not merely a question of fact, it is a question of law whether you deduct premium payments for costs of goods.

On that question I submit that the Court will take judicial notice of the fact that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue today, and on the dates in question, has contended that you cannot deduct from your income 65 premium, or overceiling payments as costs of goods acquired.

He has taken that position in several of the reported cases, in one of which there was an appeal to the Fifth Circuit, which he withdrew.

He took that position before the Court of Appeals more recently, in which the Court ruled against him.

The fact remains that it is the decision of no court; it is the Commissioner who says he won't allow it, and so he says there is a tax due. We correctly say on the law, as we understand it in our affidavits, that there isn't any additional tax due. But only some court can determine that.

But when we come in and reveal the facts which, under his theory of the case, justifies his action both for the tax and criminally, if you please, I say that then on the declarations which were read to you, we have made disclosure. And in doing so, we do not have to come forward and admit in our pleadings that it was not a fact that we concealed underpayment of taxes or that there is one red cent of additional tax due. There is no such a requirement as that.

On the second point, which is that this is a matter
66 of grace, I think that that will have to await the main argument, because what I certainly intend to do in the main argument, is to point out that this is not a matter of grace, but it is a controlling question of law in this case, which must be resolved in my favor if we can get the hearing which we have been seeking and prove the facts, settling this issue once and for all.

If the Court please, in making that argument that it is a matter of grace and within the conscience of the Executive Department, Mr. Ryan recognized the injustice—the inherent injustice inherent in that argument; and he said to you, I think at least three times, that were it not for the fact that they could traverse some of the material factual averments of the motion, that it is not an argument which he would feel free to make, or would want to make—it is not a just argument, in fact.

The impression is given that if in fact there was a disclosure, there would not even be an action here. And, of course, he meant there should not. But that is what he said.

Now, I remind you that we have not lagged in our 67 efforts to get a determination of that basic fact issue.

I came in here after the motion was filed promptly and sought a rule on the government to answer. The government did answer; that is, the government did not answer, but interposed a demurrer.

I then came in and asked that this argument on that demurrer be deferred so that as a preliminary the evidence could be taken and the facts in relation to this matter of disclosure be judicially determined so that they would be established one way or another as a fact and would not be here on a hypothesis or an assumption merely for the purposes of this argument. And I think there is a great difference in the way any court reviews this case, that it has the facts before it, which, unfortunately, we do not have. It is true, as a matter of right, that he can file a demurrer, and he is entitled to this hearing on it. But I still do not think that the reason for the interposition of the demurrer is merely that we would have a couple of days' delay in having a hearing on these facts. And I think that the facts would have a very important bearing on the question of law. But we haven't got them, and I am prepared to go ahead
68 without it.

Now, coming to another statement of Mr. Ryan's—and this is a sort of a miscellaneous thing, and I will get rid of it here:

In commenting upon comparable cases having to do with disclosure, he said that there were others, and cited a number of such cases in all, but only in one of which the Court refused to suppress the evidence on the claim of disclosure.

Now, let us not get in any confusion in respect of those cases. You remember, your Honor, in my motion recently made, I said that if we did not have a fact hearing for the purposes of our plea in bar—let us call it, at this point—that no matter how the demurrer was disposed of, we would have to have one later; and in any event, we would have to have one if the case goes on in conection with a motion to suppress evidence—to suppress the evidence so obtained in contravention of the constitutional rights of the individual defendants.

But this is not a motion to suppress evidence. This is a plea in bar of the action. The cases to which Mr. Ryan referred are all cases, with the exception of the Lustig case, which I shall discuss specially—there are three 69 other cases, and those cases all involve an alleged disclosure. In two of those three cases the District Judge found as a fact on a hearing that there had been no disclosure.

In one of the three cases—the Liebster case, the District Judge found that there had been a disclosure, and granted the relief.

In one of the three cases in which the District Judge found no disclosure, the Court of Appeals clearly indicates, contrary to what Mr. Ryan implied, as a matter of law, that had such disclosure been established as a fact, the relief asked for would have been granted.

That case is White vs. United States, reported in 194 Fed. (2d), at 215. And I am reading from page 217, where the Court of Appeals says:

> "While we agree with appellants that if their incriminatory statements had been made, as they claim, not voluntarily but induced by promises of immunity, they would be entitled to be relieved against their use, we think it plain that no such case is made out. In order to prevail on their motions, appellants were obligated to show in a clear and definite way that 70 the evidence they seek to suppress was obtained in violation of their constitutional rights. They failed to do this."

In other words, in the four cases, the defendants all claimed disclosure.

In three of them they failed to establish it as a fact.

In the fourth cases, the Liebster case, they did establish it as a fact, and got the relief.

No one of these cases involves a plea in bar of estoppel.

There is no reported case in the books—lower or upper courts—decisive of the question which your Honor has here. There are cases helpful in the argument, to which I shall presently come, but there is no reported case in point or on all fours with the situation you have here.

Now, coming then to the statute, Section 3761, since that is the foundation of the argument, and since it is what it is, I would like to read it:

"Section 3761. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, or of the Under Secretary of the Treasury, or an Assistant Secretary of the 71 Treasury, may compromise any civil or criminal case arising under the Internal Revenue Laws prior to reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense;"

And this is material here:

—"and the Attorney General may compromise any such case after reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense."

Now, that covers both civil and criminal.

The second section or portion of that section says:

"Whenever a compromise is made by the Commissioner in any case, there shall be placed on file in the office of the Commissioner the opinion of the General Counsel for the Department of the Treasury, or of the officer made as such, with his reasons therefor, with a statement of"—

Three things:

"(1) The amount of tax assessed.

"(2) The amount of additional tax or penalty imposed by law in consequence of the neglect or delinquency of the person against whom the tax is assessed, and

72 "(3) The amount actually paid in accordance with the terms of the compromise."

This section, your Honor, that is, the last half quite naturally relates to civil settlements.

Now, Mr. Wenchel—you remember, one of the things you had there is the opinion of counsel for the Department of the Treasury; and one of the counsel at the time in question, Mr. Wenchel, points out in his discussion of May 14, 1947—and he was then chief counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue:

He said that the law requires the prosecution of the tax evader, and that is what the Department recommends to the Attorney General.

But he said this:

There is one important exception to that:

"The Department has authority, discretionary power long recognized by Congress to determine the policy and procedure in the effective enforcement of the Internal Revenue laws."

Now, having to do with the authority of the officer in question to make the civil settlements pursuant to this section, there are a number of cases, with most of which I need not burden your Honor.

73 All of the important holdings of most of these cases arise—or arose in the Botany case, decided by the United States Supreme Court. And I think, generally speaking, it is enough if I refer to that one alone in detail.

In that case, Botany Worsted Mills vs. The United States, 278 U. S., 282—and this is a civil case, your Honor—agents for the Government and the taxpayer had settled in an informal conference the differences which had arisen with respect to the taxpayer's first return.

The taxpayer then filed an amended return, and paid the additional tax assessments in accordance with it.

The taxpayer later sued to recover the additional tax paid pursuant to the amended return.

The Court of Claims denied recovery on the ground that there had been a compromise within the meaning of what is now Section 3761.

The Supreme Court, although ruling for the government on the merits, held that there had been no compromise within the meaning of the statute. And in so holding, the court said:

"Independently of these concessions we are of the 74 opinion that the informal settlement made in this case did not constitute a binding agreement. Sec. 3221 (now 3761) authorizes the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to compromise tax claims before suit, with the advice and consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, and requires that an opinion of the Solicitor of Internal Revenue setting forth the compromise be filed in the Commissioner's Office."

No, says the Court:

"Here the attempted settlement was made by subordinate officials"—

Not the Commissioner, not the Secretary:

—"by subordinate officials in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. And although it may have been ratified by the Commissioner in making the additional settlement based thereon, it does not appear that it was assented to by the Secretary, or that the opinion of the Solicitor was filed in the Commissioner's office. • • •

"It is plain that no compromise is authorized by 75 this statute which is not assented to by the Secretary of the Treasury. (Citing a case). For this reason, if for no other, the informal agreement made in this case did not constitute a settlement which in itself was binding upon the government or the Mills."

The Mills being the taxpayer.

Now, here:

"And, without determining whether such an agreement, though not binding in itself, may when executed become under some circumstances, binding on the parties by estoppel"—

Meaning, the government, too:

—"it suffices to say that here the findings disclose no adequate ground for any claim of estoppel" • • •.

So that in this civil case, this controlling case arising under the compromise section, the court found there was no binding, enforceable compromise agreement, no contract, because it was made by subordinates, and because it was not approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Now, coming back, your Honor, to the statute,
76 the statute covers both criminal and civil cases, the last regulations of the statute requiring the specification of reasons—of three reasons, patently relate to civil cases.

Now, what is our situation? We have a criminal sanction which is involved here. We have a blanket, widely promulgated declaration or declarations of policy addressed to the public at large, made in advance pertaining to criminal sanctions. And made by whom? By the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, by the Secretary of the Treasury, and by counsel—not by any subordinate. The only thing that a subordinate has to do with it is to accept such a disclosure when and if made pursuant to that policy.

The statement of the policy is that if there be a sufficient and timely disclosure there will be immunity from criminal prosecution.

Now, that is a lot different situation than the one which the court was confronted with in that civil case.

Now, as to the requirement in a civil case that the statement of reasons, or, rather, the opinion be filed, 77 the courts afterwards, subsequent to the Supreme Court case, have held that that is merely directory.

I refer, your Honor, in that connection to the case of Backus, et al. vs. United States, 59 Fed. (2d) 242.

In that case, the court enforced a compromise agreement entered into by the Commissioner with the verbal approval of the Secretary, although no opinion had been filed in the Commissioner's Office, as required by the statute.

Said court:

> "This provision in Section 3229 (now 3761), the revised statutes, provides for the filing of such an opinion after the compromise has become complete. It is addressed alone to the officer and is directory and a failure to comply therewith would not affect the compromise itself or its validity."

In the criminal phases of Section 3761, your Honor, you do not have special settlements in relation to the subject-matter of this motion. You have the whole category of people who by inadvertence, intention, or 78 what have you, have filed inaccurate or false returns.

And that tax, or that additional tax which is due is never ascertained. But two officials of the Department, the Secretary of the Treasury or the Commissioner of Internal Revenue say that if a disclosure of the facts be made before investigation is commenced, then there will be immunity.

There is no statement of reasons necessary. The same reason always underlies that policy. The reason is to get people to come forward and get the money into the revenue, into the treasury. That is the reason. It does not differ in the case of any individual or person in that category who undertakes to comply and to make the disclosure.

As a rule, I think—and I am not urging it on the court—but my own notion is that in such situations there is actually a settlement, a compromise agreement or settlement of the criminal phase of the case immediately a sufficient and timely disclosure is made.

There is that point of view. For example, it is expressed by Mr. Frazier, in Is A Voluntary Disclosure A Legal Defense to a Criminal Prosecution, 28 Taxes
79 1071, 1072 (1950), in this fashion; and I read it because it is a rather clear statement:

> "The view that a voluntary disclosure is a bar to a subsequent prosecution may be summarized as follows: The public statements made by various Secretaries of the Treasury, establishing and continuing the voluntary disclosure policy of the Treasury Department, were made under and by virtue of Sec. 3761 of the International Revenue Code. A voluntary disclosure is, therefore, a form of compromise under which the Treasury invites disclosures of past tax frauds and which automatically forces the delinquent taxpayer to pay in full his back taxes, interest and civil fraud penalties in return for a promise of immunity from criminal penalty for such fraud. Sec. 3761(a) of the code, relating to authority to compromise, seems to be couched in sufficiently general language to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to give his advance blanket approval to the compromise of criminal cases."

And it is; it is certainly that broad, a mere reading of 80 it shows that.

But I confine my motion not to the basis of establishing a contract, the enforcement of which involves special considerations, and which usually relate in these matters to the civil side in the payment of money. My plea is one of estoppel. And I would like to digress a moment to the court's decision in that Botany case.

Your Honor has seen such statutes in other matters; you have seen them applied. And what the court did in that case was merely to say: Look, in the first place, we are not going to have any advantage of immunity from subordinates; we are not going to have the Commissioner of Internal Revenue alone making these settlements; they will have to be in collaboration, and with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury or some one of his assistants.

Now, where you have got a civil settlement involving the payment of money there is going to be a settlement that shows what the claimed amount is, what the claimed deficiency is, how large it is, where it is paid, and that is all going to be filed in the office of the Commissioner. That is a formal requirement.

81 There is also going to be in such matters an opinion of counsel that that is the thing to do; and that, too, should be lodged somewhere so that it will be kept in the records.

Now, for the purpose of avoiding confusion and any such things, the matter has to be done in that way. But it may be that there are some cases in which, by reason of the failure of someone in one or more of these things, a binding agreement does not result as to which situation, says the court, the administration of justice may require the working of an estoppel, or the setting up of an estoppel, to preclude injustice.

Now, here you have got the facts on which there has been no hearing, but which, for the purposes of this motion, they admit—an acknowledgment of the fact of the sufficiency and timeliness of a disclosure made under that announced policy.

What does that mean? That means that these men four and a half years ago came forward, informed them of the facts, collaborated and cooperated with them to ascertain what, if anything, was involved, agreed on the size of the claims, by coming forward and subjected themselves, laid themselves open, made themselves spe-

82 cifically liable not only to the assertion of the civil claims, not to indictment by the Commissioner at least, but by the Department of Justice to the presentation of the matter to a grand jury, which here has been taken.

In reliance on that representation, they thereby then and there changed from their position, and in a far more material way than ever happens in anything that just involves some money. And when there is that changed position made on the promise of those authorized to make it, then the other part is to be fulfilled or not fulfilled, that is, the court—that is, the Bureau will declare that the immunity by the compromise is operative and effective on the theory of estoppel. And that has been carefully provided for in the opinion of the Supreme Court.

Now, folowing that opinion and argument, there was not only the Backus case which said that the filing of that civil opinion was directory, but there were two other cases in which the lower courts did hold an estoppel under this section. And I give these to your Honor.

The first of these, your Honor, is Guggenheim vs. United States, 77 Fed. Supp. 158.

83 In this case the court held that the taxpayer's suit for refund was barred by the compromise agreement previously entered into by the taxpayer and agents for the Bureau. The agreement was approved by the Commissioner, but there was no indication that the Secretary had approved the deal, and no opinion with respect to it was filed in the Commissioner's office.

The court distinguished the Botany Mills case on the ground that an estoppel had arisen against the taxpayer. The court first quoted the paragraph, from the Botany Mills case,—which is the one that I have read to your Honor, when it said:

> "And, without determining whether such an agreement, though not binding in itself, may, when executed, become, under some circumstances, binding on the parties by estoppel, it suffices to say that here the findings disclose no adequate ground for any claim of estoppel by the United States."

That was the language of the Supreme Court of the United States. And the court then remarked:

> "At the time the agreement in this case was executed the statute had not run on the collection of 84 further deficiencies, but when the claims for refund were filed the statute had run. It would obviously be inequitable to allow the plaintiff to renounce the agreement when the Commissioner cannot be placed in the same position he was when the agreement was executed. A clear case for the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel exists and should be applied."

The other case is Baldwin vs. Higgins, 19 American Federal Tax Reports, 1341; affirmed in 100 Fed. (2d), 405 (Second Circuit).

The facts were substantially those of the Guggenheim case.

And here the Court of Appeals said:

"Such is not the case here. The waiver and consent agreement is a binding contract and it was accepted and acted upon by the Commissioner.

"Furthermore, it would seem unconscionable and inequitable to permit the plaintiff to sustain a recovery based on his own broken promises. This is an equitable action and a suit based thereunder seeks abstract justice."

85 Now, we have, fortunately, in this Circuit a good many cases having to do with the question of estoppel as against the government in criminal matters. And I would like to refer to a few of those, in the first of which the opinion is by Judge Baker. The case of Voves vs. United States, 249 Fed. 198, at page 192, decided in 1918, and it has been confirmed in later opinions, to which I shall refer.

In this case, D was convicted of selling liquor to an Indian. There was evidence to indicate that government agents had misled D into believing that vendee of the liquor was a Mexican rather than an Indian. D appealed and judgment was reversed. Said the court:

"Grant that the government may use a decoy to discover evidence of a committed crime of whatever nature; that, where one has the intent to commit a malum in se, or the willingness to do a malum prohibitum, a decoy may accompany the wrongdoer and even participate in the offense; that a liquor seller is guilty, despite his honest and reasonable belief respecting the age or race of the purchaser; and even 86 must take his chance that a purchaser, who is not a government decoy, may wilfully deceive him by camouflage, still the question remains: May the government maintain an indictment against a person for doing a malum prohibitum when the government's conduct has misled the person into believing that the prohibited act was a lawful act?

"In a civil transaction between citizens, such conduct as the jury might have found this case would create an estoppel which would preclude a suit based upon the suppressed truth. Is our government of the superman type that releases the ruler from the obligations of honesty and fairness that are imposed upon the citizens? Is one's liberty or reputation as a law-abider to have less protection than his property? We are strongly of the view that sound public policy estops the government from asserting that an act which involves no criminal intent was voluntarily done when it originated in and was caused by the government agent's deception."

To the same effect is United States vs. Healy, 202 Fed. 349; and 87 O'Brien vs. United States, 51 Fed. (2d), 674, also decided in this Circuit in 1931.

There are two other cases to the same effect in criminal matters. The first is:

Newman vs. United States, 299 Fed. 128, in the Fourth Circuit; and Cupuano vs. United States, 9 Fed. (2d), 41, in the First Circuit.

So that on the question of the law, I summarize our theory and the existing law in this word:

There is a statute; counsel for the Bureau claims there is and says it is Section 3761.

The top officials under that statute have broad authority to settle civil and criminal cases both.

There is no case which says that they do not have the power to settle a criminal case.

There is no case involving a disclosure in which it is said that the power exists under that statute.

The top officials, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and the counsel or solicitor, all in these published statements, have put 88 out this blanket settlement offer to those situated in a particular category.

In reliance on that offer, and within its terms, these defendants came forward, and they did what they were told; and they thereby changed their position in a most substantial or radical fashion. And every element essential to the setting up of an equitable estoppel in pais exists by reason of that action.

In addition to the change which occurred then and there, because of what they disclosed and how they revealed themselves, there was a further change of position in reliance on that promise, in the cooperation extended, in the turning over out of the minds of the individual defendants of information, a change essential to helping arrive at the amount claimed or converted.

There is every element of an estoppel. There is no case which says that is not estoppel. The United States Supreme Court leaves it wide open. It does not say: Look, you cannot have an estoppel against the Government under 3761; it says there may be cases in which on the facts there will be an estoppel. And there weren't any 89 facts here because the defendants were not confronted with that.

In two cases—the Guggenheim case and the other case, the courts have adjudged an estoppel, based on 3761, although it was admitted that the agreements were not in accordance with the form—in one case the Secretary had not conformed, but, nevertheless; although they were not valid agreements according to the requirements of that section, nevertheless an estoppel was found in that the agreement in that form had been duly made, and they were estopped to assert what they were trying to assert in violation of that situation.

Now, the point has not been raised by the demurrer, but I know your Honor has an active mind on these things, and I have here a great number of cases establishing that an estoppel;—that there is such a thing recognized throughout the law as a promissory estoppel, that is, a promise predicated on the promise to grant immunity: Dickerson vs. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 580.

And here is a digest reference which is very good, and illustrative of the point. Maybe I can confine it to this because it contains many cases: 19 American Jurisprudence, pages 657-658; estoppel Sec. 53.

90 There they say:

"The broad rule stated in the preceding section to the effect that a promise to do or not to do something in the future does not work on estoppel but must be qualified, since there are numerous cases in which an estoppel has been predicated on promises or assurances as to future conduct. The doctrine of 'promissory estoppel' is by no means new, although the name has been adopted only in comparatively recent years. According to that doctrine, an estoppel may arise from the making of a promise, even though without consideration, if it was intended that the promise should be relied upon and in fact was relied upon, and a refusal to enforce it would be virtually to sanction the perpetration of fraud or would result in other injustice."

I have a whole sheet of cases on that, your Honor. But in the absence of any issue on the point I do not see why it is necessary to take your time with those. But I 91 wanted to have it covered in case the question arose.

Now, I say there is, then, a law point, on the law as it is. And there is nothing contra to what I have said in the form of statute or cases.

The Lustig case to which counsel referred yesterday was a case in which there had been a motion to suppress. The facts were resolved on the issue of disclosure against the defendant, and that really ended the case.

Mr. Ryan himself took cognizance of the fact that the statement of the Court of Appeals was merely dictum when he said, page 33 of the transcript:

"And because the court so found"—

That was after voluntary disclosure:

—"I recognize that this discussion here about immunity does not have the force which it would otherwise have if it were a decision."

Not having the force of any authority, it is dictum. In other words, the court, having found there was no voluntary disclosure at all, had no occasion, there was nothing before it on the question of what had been there found.

And that case did not involve even a claim of estop-
92 pel. All that the court said was that even though it was dictum, that there was not a precise agreement, it did not even attain to the dignity of an offer to compromise, there weren't any signed papers or anything. So how in the world could it have been a compromise? But there is no case in the books or anywhere that says on the situation at bar where there is an estoppel in pais, that it cannot be asserted against the government.

And I again say now, as I said in the beginning of the discussion, that the law which bars the assertion of immunity or the assertion of estoppel against officials of the government who have not been authorized by the statute to grant immunity or do the thing in question, has no bearing whatsoever on the facts of this case.

We have a law. And they are thoroughly informed. We performed and relied on it. We changed our position, and they are estopped, and this court should so hold. If that is held; the case is still here. They will traverse. We will have a hearing on the fact issue, when and where it may be. And if that fact is established, then I say the plea in bar should be sustained. And this case will then be at an end, except, I admit, for an appeal, so that 93 some upper court can decide what the law is on this question of first impression as far as the facts are concerned.

Now, on point 2, Your Honor, and point 4, they are points of a different nature, and I do not want to take much time on those, particularly on 4.

1 we talked about yesterday.

3 I have talked about now.

2 is the point that a special assistant was sent in here to present the matter to the grand jury?

The factual parts of that point are not challenged. That is all admitted. We say as a matter of law that Section 310, namely, the section enacted in 1906, to which Mr. Ryan referred yesterday, is so construed to the extent that it permits that to be done which is not constitutional.

I said yesterday that prior to 1906 the only statute there was on the books made it the duty and responsibility of the District Attorney to present such matters. That at or about 1906, at the instance of the Attorney General, the Congress enacted Section 310 which purports to authorize the commissioning of a special assistant attorney general to go to any district with authority, written 94 or not, to make grand jury presentments and to do other things.

Now, there was such authority in this case. Mr. Cunningham had written authority lodged with the clerk. But the trouble with that situation is this, Judge, that Congress—the Attorney General and Congress in enacting Section 310, in getting it enacted, assumed that the only thing they had to deal with was the presence of a statute which put this duty on the district attorney, or the United States Attorney.

Actually, the reason that the local attorney comes to the grand jury stems from the common law, not from any statute. In other words, it was the traditional practice in part of the grand jury procedure at common law to have the case presented by the local attorney, not by someone from outside the bailiwick.

That is shown by 28 Fed. (2d) here. The case in 28 Fed. (2d), your Honor, says that it is prejudicial to the accused, or the defendant, to have counsel from Washington go before the grand jury; that it was regarded as prejudicial at the common law; it over-stresses the importance of the matter, and had an undue influence on the jury. They were far more at home with the local at-95 torney, says 28 Fed. (2d)—and I will give more recent citations later—and therefore under this procedure within 28 Fed. (2d), 451—by the way, that is the way Judge Killips, the District Judge in Ohio, sums it up:

"From 1787 to the present time, therefore, a federal grand jury has been a body organized and functioning as by the common law at the date of the adoption of the amendment;"

That is the Fifth Amendment;

—"and it seems reasonably clear that no power abides in the Congress to affect or modify the integrity and independence of the body as established. There is no reason, in my judgment, to abate the careless consideration for the rights and liberties of the individual which directed the institution of a grand jury at the beginning, and which later impelled the adoption of the amendment. It is yet entirely consonant with the spirit of our institutions that every reasonable precaution be taken to secure the individual, whose acts are under the scrutiny of a select body of his fellow citizens, from influences to which the grand 96 jury may be selected, even unconsciously or unintentionally, by the government through its chosen prosecuting representative. It is not to underrate the intelligence or independence of a twentieth century grand jury to suggest that some impression not conducive to a thoroughly dispassionate consideration of a charge might result from the presence, as a conductor of the evidence, of one who is seen to be the special representative of the attorney general, however decorous, prudent and fair that personage may attempt to be. This subject was well considered by Judge McCall in United States v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. (CC.), 163 F. 66, 75, whose observations thereon are worthy of note in the instant case. The general proposition that the Fifth Amendment makes necessary a finding following usage and mode of procedure established in 1787 is, for the purposes of this decision, sufficiently considered in United States v. Wells, (D. C.), 163 F. 313, and Renigar v. United States, (C. C. A.), 172 F. 646, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.), 683, 19 Ann. Cas. 1117, with the citations 97 made in these cases. Grand jurors are accustomed to the practice of a local prosecutor to assist in the development of facts, and are not slow to act with a proper independence against him; but when it is seen that the government is moved to bring into the proceedings a special representative of the Executive Branch, the pending charge may receive, in the minds of the jury a particular emphasis which tends to sway judgment unconsciously."

And so on.

Now, I state from the historical account in this case that it was the practice at common law as it existed at the time of the adoption of the Fifth Amendment to our constitution, to have only a local attorney present matters to the grand jury; that the shift of that practice is prejudicial, or could be, in the way that the court points out; that to the extent that Section 310, enacted in 1906 at the instance of the Attorney General, by the Congress, attempts to overcome it, I assert it is unconstitutional and void.

Now, there is no law on that, either. That is why I make the point, to save it. But the case that Mr.
98 Ryan cited, the Atlantic Commission Company case, that is the one in which this District Judge termed that a novel contention, as was pointed out. Well, that is rather amusing. The judge in the Atlantic Commission case—it was down in the Carolinas, as I remember it, North Carolina, said that it is a most novel contention. And then he went on to take up about two-thirds of his opinion discussing the point. And in almost every respect he discussed it wrong. In the first place, he said, why, it proves too much. If that were so, if you could not change that it would prevent the service as grand jurors of persons who by reason of sex or race were not qualified to serve on a grand jury at the time the Fifth Amendment was adopted.

He does not seem to know that the qualifications for a grand juror at common law in 1787, and right at the present day, are merely those of the electorate in general; in other words, anyone who is qualified to vote can be a grand juror, and that the mere addition of parties qualified to vote automatically enhanced the class qualified to serve as grand jurors.

The court then ducks the constitutional question as 99 being no part of its job to declare a statute unconstitutional, and then he goes on to say that, in any event, in the action there involved, the defendant couldn't rely on the Fifth Amendment because the offense charged was not in the nature of an infamous crime because the penal provisions of the Sherman Act did not permit imprisonment exceeding one year, and therefore it is not within the terms of the Fifth Amendment.

So, for the reasons assigned, none of which are any good, that I am sure, except the practical reason that he does not like to disturb an act of Congress, he concludes that it is all right, that it is lawful to do that.

Outside of these two cases, there aren't any on it. I know the history of Section 310. I know the practice. The only thing I don't know about it is why a local district attorney can't take care of matters within the bailiwick. And I mean, we will show that it would be prejudicial to my clients, indeed, to import somebody authorized over night, filing his authority in the morning, and coming in and presenting a case. But that is the point.

Now, the fourth point I don't care to argue. I put 100 it in on the supposition or hope that there might be a fact hearing before I had occasion to argue it.

I say only this: Of course, there again, in other words, I do not contend that where there is no statute there is immunity in settlement of criminal matters, or that it can be done. I say it is only when the statute authorizes it. I do not claim that any defendant can disturb an indictment or defend a case on the proposition that other people are guilty and they are not prosecuted. I don't make any such claim as that.

But what I mean on that point is that to the extent that Congress delegates the power to officials to do what they are doing, and to decide who shall be prosecuted, and who shall not, and which shall be sent to the Department of Justice, and which shall not that it ought to be according to set standards and tests which would enable the courts to inquire and proceed to decide it in particular matters.

What I mean, for illustration, Judge, is that if, even though they had a reasonable discretion, if there were a presentation of such matters only for prosecution, and never dismissed, that thereby there would be a depri-
101 vation of due process within the meaning of the Constitution. And, as far as I am concerned, I don't know what the thing is until and unless we get in a hearing, and until I saw what procedure was adopted, and to what extent it might be discriminatory, consequently I made point 4. It is not a factually supported point, and I cannot conscientiously present it to your Honor as such at this time, although point 1 about the lack of signature is of a quasi serious nature.

Point 3 is the substantial point of the case. It is a point which we bring sincerely and genuinely in the belief that the law justifies our position and that we are entitled to a decision on that, leaving the fact question for determination when and if a traverse is filed.

Thank you.

And thereupon Edward J. Ryan, Esq. further addressed the Court in argument on behalf of plaintiff.

By Mr. Ryan: Your Honor, in answer to Mr. O'Brien's remarks, concerning point 1 of this motion, I might say very briefly that the government's position was that 102 the indictment is signed by the attorney for the government, the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois.

The statute, Section 507 of Title 28, authorizes the United States Attorney to conduct legal proceedings in his District, criminal, civil or otherwise. In other words, he has plenary power.

The more recent statute, enacted, I believe, in 1936, authorizes the Attorney General to appoint someone to act in that district.

There is nothing in the statute that the United States Attorney is divested of any of his authority when such commission is issued.

And there is nothing in the commission in this case, that is, the letter, set up in this case, which was set up in one of the affidavits attached to the motion to dismiss, which indicates in any way that there was any limitation of the authority of the United States Attorney.

The United States Attorney did sign the indictment.

The United States Attorney is here in court before your Honor in the person of his assistant, arguing this case.

103 Now, if Mr. Kerner did not have authority to sign the indictment, perhaps I have no authority to be here arguing.

But counsel has cited nothing to establish that situation.

And, as I say again, it is an internal matter within the Department of Justice, as to who presents the evidence to the grand jury, who signs the indictment, who argues this motion and that motion in court in the case, and who conducts the trial. It is all an internal matter. And in no case can it be considered as prejudicial to the defendant. He is entitled only to a fair trial. It is a matter of no substance who has signed the indictment.

Further than that, even if it were to be assumed that "the attorney for the government" means the particular counsel who presented it to the grand jury, then I might say that if that were so perhaps each assistant attorney should sign his own indictment—each Assistant United States Attorney should sign his own indictment. And even if that were required, is it a part of the indictment? Is it a matter of substance? Would the absence of that signature prevent it from being an indictment? An 104 indictment is the creature or the act of the grand jury.

If the grand jury votes an indictment, does it fail to become an indictment by reason of the fact that the attorney for the government has not signed it, or refuses to sign it? It is still an indictment by the grand jury.

But let us assume a situation where the United States Attorney flatly refuses to sign the indictment, refuses to sign it perhaps because he didn't want that particular person to be indicted, or perhaps because of an improper motive, or perhaps the grand jury drew its own indictment and he had no part in it, he didn't want to sign it, has the grand jury lost its power to indict?

It was certainly the intention of the Supreme Court and Congress in promulgating this rule which says what an indictment shall be, as to the particulars of the charge, and then it says that it shall be signed by the attorney for the Government. But to make that an indispensable part of the indictment, to do so would be to limit the power of the grand jury.

What would the grand jury do if the United States
105 Attorney refused to sign the indictment? Maintain a mandamus to make him do it?

Can there be any question that if the grand jury came up here with an indictment and handed it up to your honor as a true bill that they had found, that anyone could contend that it was not an indictment that they were handing up simply because the United States Attorney did not do his duty and did not sign the indictment?

I think that indicates, your Honor, that it is only a formal part of the indictment, and that the language of Rule 7 is directory and not mandatory.

Your Honor will recall that the only cases that have been decided on this question so far hold that it is not a matter of substance, that it is a matter of form. One of those cases was decided since Rule 7 was promulgated, and it so holds. And I submit that that point is without merit, although counsel argued in support of it.

Now, as to count 3—and counsel dwelt at length on that, and urged 1 and 3 strongly. Counsel admits that there is no immunity, there is no authority in anyone to grant immunity unless it is conferred by statute.
106 And I met that point yesterday.

He relies, he says, upon the compromise statute.

Well, there just wasn't any compromise here. A compromise imports an agreement. This statute clearly contemplates that the government is going to get together with somebody, ascertain the facts, thrash them out, come to an agreement about how much money is owed, accept payment, and there is the compromise. And that is done. Short of that there is no compromise under this statute.

And the statute plainly says:

> "The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, or of the Under Secretary of the Treasury, or an assistant secretary of the Treasury, may compromise any civil or criminal case arising under the Internal Revenue laws prior to reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense."

That is sub-section (a) of the statute.

Sub-section (b) says:

"Whenever a compromise"—

Talking about the compromise mentioned above, which is both civil and criminal:

107 "Whenever a compromise is made by the Commissioner in any case"—

And then it goes on to say as to what shall be placed in the file, and speaks of the amount of the taxes, and the additional tax imposed as a penalty for the delinquency, as imposed by law in consequence of the neglect or failure to pay, and the amount actually paid in accordance with the compromise.

Now, that is a compromise. Anything less than that is not a compromise under this statute.

There is no allegation that there was any such compromise here. The allegation is simply that the Treasury officials, the government has authority to compromise under that statute. That is unquestionably true. But there has been no such a compromise.

Now, the Government's position is two-fold.

One is the statutory authority arising on the law. There is no power in any one to grant immunity. And there is a sound reason for that. The power to make the law is reposed by the Constitution in the Congress. Now, there isn't any authority in any individual in the Executive Department to make any binding agreement to repeal the law which congress has enacted in any particular 108 given case or set of circumstances such as would be binding and enforceable by the courts.

True, there are situations where the prosecutor may not prosecute, even though there is a technical violation. These are matters in his discretion. And if he violates that or abuses it, he is responsible to his superiors, and ultimately to the electorate for mal-administration. But he has no power to make any legislation, and if he intentionally would try to do so, if he tried to make an agreement, and if the courts enforced it, they would be recognizing legislation made by that individual.

Now, that is just sound jurisprudence.

But counsel goes on to say that in spite of the fact that he admits there can be no immunity without a statute, yet he relies, he says, first, on the compromise statute, and then later he said that even in spite of what he said as to the compromise statute, that the government was estopped here.

Now, counsel has cited no case here except a Federal case—he cites a Federal case of entrapment.

Now, there is much language in the cases on the question of entrapment, speaking loosely of estopping the government. But the Supreme Court of the United 109 States has passed on the question of entrapment in the Sorrells case. And in the Sorrells case the court mentioned lower courts that spoke of the government being estopped. In the Sorrells case the Supreme Court decided that it wasn't a question of estoppel. They said that the reason that the Government here could not successfully prosecute a man where there had been actual entrapment was because he really wasn't guilty of anything. And they said that this issue may be raised on the general issue in defense, because he has not committed a violation of the law. And they said that the court is not called upon to interpret these statutes as including a situation where the government goes out and procures a man to do this thing. And that is the rationale of the Supreme Court cases on the question of entrapment.

I don't think there is any other situation where the courts talk about estopping the government in criminal cases.

And I think the doctrine is fairly well settled in the law that the sovereign, acting in a sovereign capacity, is not estopped. It would be against public policy if the 110 sovereign, acting in a sovereign capacity, could be estopped by the act of any individual that goes to make up the government.

The case which counsel referred to in the Texas court, I believe, or in the Supreme Court, arose on a revenue matter. And there is no decision there that there was an estoppel against the government. The estoppel that was being urged there was such that because on the facts there it would have worked the other way. But irrespective of that, there was no such decision. And in spite of all that, the authorities are legion that there is no estoppel against the government acting in its sovereign, as opposed to its proprietary capacity. And certainly, other than in entrapment cases, so-called, there are no cases that I know of where the Government is estopped to prosecute in a criminal case.

But going beyond that and more fundamentally in this case the Government's position is that the motion shows on its face that there has been no disclosure. Because your Honor will recall that I read these pronouncements of the various officials, and in not a single one of them did they indicate anything other than that this policy is addressed to a person who admits tax evasion, and if he 111 is a tax evader, he has to come in and disclose his tax evasion. If he is not a tax evader, then he does not come within the policy. If he is a tax evader and discloses his tax evasion, he comes under this policy and the Government will not prosecute.

But if he comes in and says that there are errors and omissions in the returns that were not put in the books, that is not what these officials were talking about.

And that is borne out by their statements, that if there is no tax evasion, there can be no disclosure, unless you disclose that there were taxes due. It takes a wilful intent if a man is a wilful tax evader. But if he recognizes that he is a tax evader, and if he comes in and says, I don't owe any tax, but there are some errors in the return, he has not made any disclosure. If he is correct, he would be acquitted.

Now, I say that there is no merit to the contention that there has been a compromise. There is no merit to the contention that this motion alleges a disclosure within the policy. There is no merit to the contention that there would be an estoppel under the broad aspects of the matter. There is no merit to the contention that 112 there is any disclosure, because even here counsel wants to argue and to maintain that they don't owe any taxes. They are either concealing their taxes, or there isn't any tax evasion. And if there is no tax evasion, presumably they would be acquitted of tax evasion. It is just a situation of attempting to hold with the hounds and run with the hare.

Now, with respect to the question of who may be permitted to appear before the grand jury, and I haven't had an opportunity to read all these cases, and I didn't find it—and counsel will correct me if I am wrong, but it strikes me that here the court was saying that this law authorizing special assistants to appear before the grand jury must be strictly construed, and that it would not apply to this case. That is my understanding from the minute or so that I had to look through the case. I don't know, and I will be corrected if I am wrong. Is that right?

By the Court: What case is it?

By Mr. Ryan: 28 Fed. (2d), from which counsel read concerning the history of the grand jury, and who might appear before it.

113 By Mr. O'Brien: 451.

By Mr. Ryan: 451.

Counsel, are you contending that this is a decision that the statute is unconstitutional and invalid?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By Mr. Ryan: In other words, this court found that that statute had not been applied in that case, thereby recognizing the legality and existence of the statute.

By the Court: What was the citation?

By Mr. Ryan: 28 Fed. (2d), page 451.

And looking at the notes in front, I see that it says:

"5 USCA Sections 310, 315, designed to enlarge list of persons who may appear before a grand jury representing the government to function only within limits imposed on Attorney General or District Attorney or deputy of either, must be strictly construed."

Now, I saw one thing in here somewhere:

"Under Section 310, therefore, Mr. Rush, to be qualified, 'must have been specially retained under the authority of the Department of Justice' under 114 some provision of law, and must have been specifically directed by the Attorney General to appear before the grand jury returning this bill to perform duties pertaining to this case, and, under Section 315, he must have received a commission therefor from the Attorney General; and as a necessary completion of his qualification it must appear that, as special assistant to the attorney general, he had taken the oath required by law to be taken by district attorneys, prior to his appearance before our grand jury. We have no doubt that, had he qualified upon his special commission if any, under the provisions of Section 315, his failure to exhibit an exemplification of this qualification prior to his appearance before the grand jury would not alone sustain a plea in abatement under the curative section already cited."

As I say, I haven't read it all through, I wasn't able to stand here before the court and read it all through. But I do say that this contention was entertained in a more recent case. And this was not apparently cited as a decision, as authority for the other proposition in 115 that case. The statute apparently is being followed every day throughout the country. I don't know how many cases this would overturn if there is any merit to this contention, but I would say that that would bear out my position after a brief examination that that was not the basis of the decision in this case, and that it makes no difference as long as the man is properly qualified under the statute, that he is not of the vicinage or something such. As to the vicinage, I don't know what it is, as I said before, it is something, perhaps there was some suggestion that it might be the locality from which the grand jury is drawn. And if that is true, none of the assistant United States attorneys in this division can appear before the grand jury in Freeport, which is drawn from the western eight counties. That has never been followed here. And I have always appeared out there. I do not think there is any merit to this. I think this case is authority for that. And I submit that it is a highly technical contention that is without substance.

I think that that represents the Government's position, your Honor, on the motion to dismiss here.

116 Counsel made some reference to my passing observation about cases where an attempt was made to suppress evidence. I certainly did not mean to suggest that that issue was being decided here. I think I said at the time that I didn't think that issue was before the court. And as I say, I think I mentioned in passing cases of voluntary disclosure, but I did not urge them as authority on the court. For I say there is no authority anywhere cited holding that the courts in this matter of disclosure, even if there was disclosure, that disclosure can be pleaded in bar. And the Ford case, which I cited, indicates that if there be a promissory estoppel, it would be just as true there as in this case for these people that would have acted to their own disadvantage if they testified. And I claim that there is no authority at all for any immunity under the statute. The only statute here has not been applied. And there is no substance to this motion, and I submit that the motion to dismiss should be denied.

By the Court: I will think this matter over, over the week end. And if you gentlemen will come in, or send somebody in at two o'clock on Monday, I think I will be ready to tell you what I think about it.

117 (Whereupon the further hearing in the above entitled matter was continued until June 23, 1952, at 2:00 o'clock p. m.)

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
June 23, 1952,
2:00 o'clock p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Ryan,
Mr. O'Brien,
Mr. Hess.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:

By the Clerk: 52 Cr 143, United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Further proceedings.

By the Court: You may be seated, gentlemen. I
119 am not going to talk very long, but I will talk for a few minutes.

OPINION

By the Court (Orally): The defendants in this case have filed a motion to dismiss, and to that motion to dismiss the government has filed a paper which it labels a demurrer.

As I have heretofore stated to counsel, I have assumed that that paper labeled a demurrer admits all facts well pleaded, and says in effect that admitting those facts to be true, yet the moving parties are not entitled to the relief which they ask by their motion.

The court well und rstands that a demurrer to a motion to dismiss is not provided for by the rules of criminal procedure in our court. The Court also understands that the idea of a demurrer is well understood by all lawyers, and that a demurrer is generally held to do those things which I have indicated I would hold this demurrer to do, that is, to admit all facts well pleaded, and to take the position that admitting those facts to be true, the moving parties are not entitled to relief that they ask, namely, the dismissal of the indictment.

120 Four grounds were set up in the motion to dismiss. The first two were as follows:

"1. The proceedings before the grand jury which returned said indictment were not conducted by the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, but were conducted by one Arthur B. Cunningham, who purported to act as a special assistant to the Attorney General under purported written authority so to do, of the Attorney General of the United States, dated at Washington, D. C., March 13, 1952, and filed in the office of the Clerk of this Court the morning of * * * the day said indictment was returned, but who was not * * * a resident of the Northern District of Illinois and who was not * * * an assistant to the United States Attorney * * * for the Northern District of Illinois. * * * said Arthur B. Cunningham, as special assistant * * * purported to act as attorney for the Government, but, contrary to the requirements of Rule 7 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, failed to sign the indictment as returned."

The second reason which the defendants assign 121 for the dismissal of the indictment was:

"2. The conduct of said proceedings before said grand jury by the said Arthur B. Cunningham, as aforesaid, was in violation of the rights of the defendants under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to be held to answer for the offenses charged in this proceeding only on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury in accordance with the traditional grand jury procedure at the common law in existence at the time of the adoption of said amendment. Under the traditional procedure then in effect, only an attorney of or for the vicinage or the locality from which the grand jury was chosen could participate in its proceedings. And defendants aver that the act of June 30, 1906, 30 Stats. 816, 5 USCA, Sec. 310, to the extent that it purports to authorize any attorney or counsellor specially appointed by the Attorney General of the United States, when thereunto specially directed by the Attorney General, to conduct grand jury proceedings, where such attorney or counsellor is not a resi-

122 dent of the district in which such proceeding is brought deprives the defendants, and each of them, of the rights guaranteed to them by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and is therefore unconstitutional and void."

The indictment in this case was signed by Col. Kerner, the United States Attorney for this District, as follows:

"Otto Kerner, Jr., United States Attorney."

The letter of the Attorney General, dated March 13, 1952, and filed in the Clerk's office, reads, in part:

"As an attorney and counsellor at law, you are hereby specially retained and appointed as a Special Assistant to the Attorney General under the authority of the Department of Justice to assist in the trial of the cases hereinafter mentioned, in the Northern District of Illinois, in which the government is interested; and, in that connection, you are specifically directed to conduct in the Northern District of Illi-123 nois, and in any other judicial district or districts wherein jurisdiction thereof lies, any kind of legal proceedings, * * *."

And then there is an omission:

"The Department is informed that Byron A. Cain, Frank J. Huebner and Harold E. Sullivan, have committed in the Northern District of Illinois violations of the Internal Revenue laws of the United States and conspiracies to commit such offenses.

"You are expressly authorized and directed to commence prosecution against the above-named persons and such other person or persons as may be implicated for violations mentioned. * * *"

Rule 7 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure reads, in part, as to the indictment:

"(c) Nature and Contents. The indictment or the information shall be a plain, concise and definite written statement of the essential facts constituting the offense charged. It shall be signed by the attorney for the government * * *."

124 Unquestionably Col. Kerner was at the time of the return of the indictment, and still is, for that matter, the United States Attorney for this District, and as such the court believes he is authorized to sign that indictment.

The letter from the Attorney General appointing special assistants provided that they should "assist in the trial of cases hereinafter mentioned," and that apparently is exactly what they did. They did appear before the grand jury, and did assist in the trial of the case.

That designation of the special assistant attorney general is apparently pursuant to Section 310, Title 5 of the United States Code, which provides:

"The Attorney General or any officer of the Department of Justice or any attorney or counsellor specially appointed by the Attorney General under any provision of law, may, when thereunto specifically directed by the Attorney General, conduct any kind of legal proceedings, civil or criminal, including jury proceedings * * * which district attorneys may 125 be by law authorized to conduct, whether or not he or they be residents of the district in which such proceeding is brought."

You have observed that the special objection which counsel for defendants make under their point 2 is that

"the Act of June 30, 1906, 30 Stats. 814, 5 USCA, Sec. 30, to the extent that it purports to authorize any attorney or counsellor specially appointed by the Attorney General of the United States, when thereunto specially directed by the Attorney General, to conduct grand jury proceedings, where such attorney or counsellor is not a resident of the district in which such proceeding is brought deprives the defendants, and each of them, of the rights guaranteed by them to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

As I recall the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, it provides that no one shall be charged or convicted of an infamous crime except by presentment or indictment by a grand jury. I will assume that the offense charged against the defendants is an infamous crime—whether it is or not I have not examined—but I will assume that 126 it is for the purposes of this motion and demurrer.

It is the idea of the defendants, as expressed by counsel for the defendants, that the concept of a grand jury as referred to in the Fifth Amendment had inseparably associated with it the idea of representation of the sovereignty by an attorney of the vicinage, so that a statute which would permit an attorney from outside the vicinage to appear for the sovereignty before a grand jury—such statute would be unconstitutional and void; that Section 310 is unconstitutional and therefore the appearance of these men from outside the vicinage was error which would destroy this indictment.

I cannot bring myself to believe that the idea that the sovereignty must be represented by an attorney of the vicinage was so inseparably connected with the idea of a grand jury at the time of the adoption of the Fifth Amendment, that if Congress should permit the appearance of someone from outside the vicinage to represent the sovereignty, that action of Congress would be unconstitutional and void. I cannot believe that; I cannot believe that.

127 And one reason I cannot believe it is because the Fifth Amendment provides for the prosecution of infamous crimes by presentment or indictment. If a bill of indictment was prepared by the attorney for the sovereign it became a true bill when it was voted by a grand jury. But a presentment was something that originated with the grand jury, and presumably if it was a presentment the attorney for the sovereignty didn't have anything to do with it. That is one reason why I think the idea of the representation of the sovereignty by an attorney of the vicinage was not inseparably connected with the idea or concept of the grand jury, as those words "grand jury" are used in the Fifth Amendment. There may be other and better reasons.

I think when the Fifth Amendment was adopted the interest of the people was centered upon the jury and not upon the attorney. They provided that infamous crimes must be prosecuted by presentment or by indictment by the grand jury.

It is said, in one or more of the cases, that there is some advantage to an accused in the requirement that the sovereignty be represented by a lawyer or lawyers from the vicinage rather than by lawyers from a 128 distance. It is suggested that the grand jury may be overawed by men from a distance.

That is exactly contrary to my observation and experience. I think in this district, since I have been here, the gentlemen from Washington have had greater difficulty with grand juries than have local district attorneys. And that sounds reasonable to me if even I hadn't had that experience. If one is going to be prejudiced he is going to be prejudiced against the outlander, and not going to be prejudiced against the local man, if he is going to be prejudiced at all. So I do not think that it does inure to the disadvantage of the defendants that the sovereignty may be represented by an Assistant Attorney General rather than by a district attorney. And so, I do not think there is anything wrong with that indictment in that respect. I do not think there is anything wrong. I think the statute referred to, Section 310, is constitutional.

I think the indictment was signed by the proper officer. I think the assistant attorneys general, though they were from a distance, were properly authorized to appear and assist. I do not believe that the motion is good on those scores.

129 The third point was urged with great vigor, sincerity and ability. That ground is as follows:

"Ground 3. That at all times in question in these proceedings, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury, by virtue of the statutes in such case made and provided, were empowered to compromise any civil or criminal case which might have arisen under the Internal Revenue Laws against the defendants. At all times in question in this proceeding, and for many years prior thereto, there was and for many years had been in effect in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, a policy from time to time published and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and by other responsible Treasury officials, whereby it was publicly represented there would be no criminal prosecution in any case in which a voluntary disclosure of misstatement or omission in a tax return was made to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department before investigation had been initiated, but that the Treasury Department in such case would merely assess such unpaid taxes, in-130 terest and civil penalties, if any, as might properly be found due under the facts of the case.

"In reliance upon said policy, the defendants, before the commencement of any investigation within the meaning of the aforesaid statements of the aforementioned Commissioner and Secretary and others, in January of 1948 made such a disclosure in respect of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years mentioned in the indictment in this cause, and from time to time thereafter until and including March of 1948 reiterated the same, in each instance to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department.

"The officers and agents of the Treasury Department to whom the aforementioned disclosure was made, acknowledged to the defendants the sufficiency and the timeliness thereof upon the occasions aforesaid. In further reliance upon said policy and upon said acknowledgments and at the request of said officials and agents, the defendants caused to be made 131 available to them the books and records of the corporate defendant, and communicated to the officers and agents of the Treasury Department information in the possession of the individual defendants materially related to said omissions and misstatements and not available to such Treasury officers and agents through the said books and records of the corporate defendant, and which information could not have been obtained from the individual defendants in any manner, in view of the constitutional privileges and rights of the individual defendants, and employed the services of accountants to assist said officers and agents in ascertaining facts from such books and records. The corporate defendant in that regard specially incurred and paid, over the period of four years over which the examination by the said agents extended, auditing charges in excess of the sum of $20,000.

"By reason of the premises, the government was and is estopped from instituting and maintaining the said indictment and these proceedings."

Concerning this point 3, counsel for the defend-132 ants, in one of the papers filed, states:

"Point 3 asserts an estoppel in bar of the action by reason of a voluntary disclosure and thereby raises a question of first impression, although estoppels have been successfully invoked against the government in criminal cases on other grounds."

In argument, which I say was pressed with vigor, and very great ability as I thought, it was said that the statute providing for compromise gave authority to the officers of the Government to lay a basis for estoppel there having been disclosed to them facts which were not otherwise in the possession of the Government, the statute laid the basis for this estoppel. I have considered that argument over the week end, since it was made, and I have come to this conclusion:

There are statutes which permit compromising of tax liability. No doubt they are wise, but it is of no consequence to the court whether they are or not, they are there, and they are made by Congress. If there is any occasion for my expressing an opinion on them, I think I would say that they are a wise exercise of legislative power. But the question is: May estoppels against 133 the government arise out of negotiations looking toward compromise under these statutes?

I have thought a good deal about that, and I have come to the conclusion that to permit estoppels to arise out of negotiations for compromise would simply destroy those statutes. If persons who for some reason or another, good, bad or indifferent, had failed to file proper returns, knew that what they did looking toward a compromise,—the disclosure which they might make would give rise to an estoppel, they would hesitate to make disclosures.

If governmental officials knew that if they sat down at a table and heard some more or less complete disclosures looking toward compromise they might subject the government to an estoppel, it would have the same effect. An estoppel resulting from an incompleted compromise might have a greater effect than a compromise. And neither side would take action looking toward the compromises which the government has said are beneficial to the United States.

I think the idea which I have attempted to voice is one excellent reason why incomplete—uncompleted negotiations for compromise should not be permitted to give rise to an estoppel in favor of either side. Accord-
134 ingly, I think the third point is not well taken.

The fourth point was not urged with the vigor with which the third point was urged.

The fourth point is as follows:

"4. During 1948 and during all the years in question, it was and for many years had been the actual practice of the Department of Justice to refrain from the initiation of criminal prosecution of such cases except upon the recommendation of the Treasury Department, although the Department of Justice reserved discretion as to whether to proceed with the criminal prosecution of any case in which such recommendation was made. Under such practice, the Treasury Department has refrained from recommending criminal prosecution of many cases which would have been so prosecuted and the Department of Justice has refrained from criminal prosecution of many cases which have been recommended to it for such prosecution. At none of the times aforesaid has there been any standard of law, either by enactment 135 of Congress or by established criteria or regulation of the Treasury Department or of the Department of Justice, from which the public or the courts might ascertain the basis on which such prosecution is recommended or withheld. Such practice has given rise to a discriminatory application and enforcement of the law, as will more fully appear upon the hearing of this motion, and in the case at bar has thereby deprived the defendants of due process of law, contrary to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America."

On this fourth point, counsel for the defendants said, in one of the papers filed:

> "Point 4 of the motion asserts the absence of due process because of the lack of any known standard for the determination of cases to be criminally prosecuted. This, too, raises a question of first impression."

As I say, this point was not urged with the vigor with which the third point was urged I do not think the point is well taken. That the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice have been prosecuting some 136 cases and not prosecuting others, if they have been doing that, I do not think that fact imports into the case which they may choose to prosecute a want of due process.

Accordingly, no one of the four points being well founded, the motion to dismiss will be overruled and denied.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, one of Mr. Ryan's points he had argued went to the sufficiency of the facts as pleaded in support of a disclosure. I do not understand anything the Court has said to turn on that point in any way, and I do not want to delay by even asking for leave to file at some future date an amendment. But I would like to have leave to file instanter a brief amendment going to the extent of the disclosure allegations factually, which does not change the sense of your Honor's ruling. (Handing a document to the Court.)

By the Court: Any objection?

By Mr. Ryan: I don't believe so, your Honor.

By the Court: You may have leave to file the amendment to the motion to dismiss the indictment. And this motion will be—

137 By Mr. O'Brien: And the demurrer to stand.

By the Court: And the demurrer to stand. And the motion will be overruled and denied.

By Mr. Ryan: I understand there are to be other motions; otherwise, I was going to suggest an arraignment today.

By the Court: What sort of other motions?

By Mr. Ryan: By the defendants?

By Mr. O'Brien: I haven't considered any other motions at this time, your Honor. But it may well be, and undoubtedly will be, that at some time prior to the trial we will have a motion to suppress the evidence, but that is not in the chain of pleading nor the matters that are involved here.

By the Court: When can you conveniently bring your clients in to plead? During this week?

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't answer that directly, your Honor. I haven't asked about it. I assume that if they are here—this is Monday—that Thursday or Friday would be a suitable time.

By the Court: Thursday morning, or two o'clock.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well. If I find, your Honor, for any reason as to any one of them, that that is not so I will promptly notify counsel.

138 By the Court: Which do you prefer, to come in at 10 or at 2 o'clock?

By Mr. Ryan: Two o'clock.

By the Court: Two o'clock, Thursday.

(Whereupon the further proceedings in the above entitled cause were continued until Thursday, June 26, 1952, at 2:00 o'clock p. m.; however, the next ensuing proceedings herein, as hereinafter appears, took place on Tuesday, June 24, 1952, at 12:05 o'clock p. m.)

Chicago, Illinois,
June 24, 1952,
12:05 o'clock p. m.

Met pursuant to notice.

Present:

Mr. Ryan,
Mr. O'Brien
Mr. Hess.

And, as more fully hereinafter appears, the defendants, and each of them, were present, the individual defendants being present respectively in their own proper persons, and the corporate defendant by counsel.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:

140 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I had a motion to re-set the arraignment time. I thought, since these men were in the building, that I could bring them in now.

By the Court: To what time?

By Mr. O'Brien: Right now.

By the Court: Have you got them here?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Bring them in.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Hess went to get Mr. Ryan. Maybe we could do that. But I don't want to keep you waiting. I didn't realize you would quit that soon.

By the Court: I have got a meeting over at the Bar Association.

By Mr. O'Brien: We will collect them and get them ready.

By the Court: How soon?

By Mr. O'Brien: Within five minutes, at the most.

By the Court: I will step inside and then I will be out again.

(The court left the bench. And at 12:18 o'clock p. m. on said day, the following further proceedings were had herein:)

By the Clerk: Number 52 Cr 143, United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, 141 Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan, and Frank J. Huebner.

Motion to rest cause for arraignment and plea to this date, and for the arraignment and plea of the defendants instanter.

(The defendant, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, was present by counsel; each of the individual defendants, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner was present in his own proper person.)

By Mr. Ryan: Do you waive the reading of the indictment?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, we waive the reading of the indictment, of course.

By Mr. Ryan: And the pleas?
By Mr. O'Brien: Pleas of not guilty.
By Defendant Byron A. Cain: Not guilty.
By Defendant Harold E. Sullivan: Not guilty.
By Defendant Frank J. Huebner: Not guilty.
By Mr. Ryan: That is as to the individual defendants, Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner.
And the corporation?
By Mr. O'Brien: Right.
By Mr. Ryan: They all plead not guilty?
By Mr. O'Brien: Right.
142 By Mr. Ryan: Now, your Honor, I had intended before Thursday—in fact, this afternoon, to call the Department, inasmuch as they had told me that they intended to send an attorney out to try this case, and sound them out on whether there might be any question of convenience or availability on the date. I haven't done that, so that the only thing I could suggest is that if the Court sets a date in the fall, I will certainly do anything possible, and notify them of any conflict of dates, if they are sending a man who is engaged somewhere else in the country, and I would so notify the Court.
By the Court: When would the defendants prefer it?
By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I think that we should have a date at which the matter would be set. There hasn't been time to go into that phase of the case, the evidentiary side of matters, so if there could be some date set at which we could appear and state positively when we would be ready, that would be better and more reliable.
By the Court: What do you say?
By Mr. Ryan: I think, in view of our situation, and with another man coming in, who is not here now, that perhaps that is a sensible suggestion, that is, to set 143 it for a very early date at which to set the trial date, and set a date which is convenient for all concerned. That is my understanding of your suggestion.
By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.
By the Court: I am going away from here on Friday of this week, and I won't be back for ten weeks. That will be about September.
By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think that would cost any time, Judge, because in that time we can see specifically what there is, and at the end of that time state with some certainty when and why we think the hearing ought to be.

By the Court: I have indicated to the Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals of this Circuit that I do not want to try this case. He asked me to dispose of the preliminary motions, and I feel that I have done that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, then, that within that time, Judge, there would also be the opportunity, or as soon as I am somewhat better informed of the scope of the factual material, and if this would be in order then to ask if we can make inquiry there and see what the assignment is, and what the convenience of the court would be.

144 By the Court: Well, suppose the motion to set for trial be continued to September 9, 1952, at 2:00 o'clock, with the understanding that the case shall be set for trial, say, within two months after that time.

By Mr. O'Brien: I really don't know, Judge, to be honest about it.

By the Court: Well, that would seem to be reasonable. This is now the sixth month, and two months after September will take you to the 9th day of November. That is five months.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true. Of course, there is another factor there. We have the elections in around that time, which disturbs me somewhat.

By the Court: Yes. What do you think?

By Mr. Ryan: I have no objection to that suggestion, your Honor, that it be set for trial on September 9th for some reasonable date within two months or so; I don't care whether it is two months or two weeks.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is elastic. It might be shorter or it might be a little beyond that, Judge. I think at that time we can be much more specific about it, maybe—I don't know.

By the Court: Well, suppose we continue the 145 motion to set for trial to September 9th?

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By the Court: At two o'clock.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. Ryan: Now, I have one other point, your Honor, which I want to urge more fully.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may interrupt once more, I assume, and this is for the record, that that is set before your Honor for the 9th.

By the Court: Yes, it is set before me. But if the Chief Circuit Judge designates somebody else, I shall hope that he will be here at that time.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. There is no objection at this time, is there, if the Court please, to our making any inquiry about that, if there is some occasion to do it, it would be all right to ask Judge Major?

By the Court: No, no objection on my part.

By Mr. O'Brien: So far as you are concerned?

By the Court: No, no objection on my part.

By Mr. Ryan: Just one very brief point: I read more fully the amendment to this motion which counsel filed yesterday. And I note that in it, that the moneys received, that they admit to receiving in addition to 146 their state gross receipts, they were paid out.

Now, I filed a demurrer to this other motion, and at the time I filed it I intended it for what I considered to be an orderly procedure, and I intended not to admit any of these points. And I am not making such an admission. And I don't want that demurrer standing alone to even formally admit that.

And I ask leave to file a paper in which I may deny the matter set up by the amendment, so that for the record there will be a denial that I make such an admission.

I understand that it don't make any difference, the motion was decided on a different basis, but I want to state this for the record, so that there will not be such an admission.

I would also like leave to introduce a denial of some sort to the material in the amendment.

By the Court: I don't see any necessity for that. I have assumed all the facts well pleaded, together with the amendment to be true.

The motion to dismiss will have to be denied.

147 By Mr. Ryan: That is correct, except that there is some old law on that.

By the Court: It was admitted for the purposes of the motion.

By Mr. Ryan: All right. I think I have preserved my position.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

Thank you, Judge. I am awfully sorry to have kept you.

By the Court: That is all right.

OBJECTIONS OF THE DEFENDANTS AND THEIR MOTION TO QUASH SUBPOENA DUCES TECUM ISSUED BY THE CLERK IN THE ABOVE-ENTITLED CAUSE, TO THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, RETURNABLE AUGUST 6, 1952.

The defendants, by Vincent O'Brien, one of their attorneys, pursuant to leave of Court heretofore given, object to the issuance of the subpoena duces tecum directed to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company commanding it to attend before the Honorable William J. Campbell on the 6th day of August, 1952, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon, in Room 757, United States Court House in Chicago, to testify and to give evidence in the above-entitled cause on the part of the plaintiff, and to bring with it for production at the time and place aforesaid, the certain books and records and documents therein specified, on the following grounds, to-wit:

1. The sole authority for the issuance of subpoenas is Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the potentially pertinent subsections of which are (a) and (c). Under said Rule said subpoena was improvidently and unlawfully issued because:

(a) There was and is no proceeding, hearing or 74 trial pending to which said subpoena or the evidence therein referred to can be related.

(b) As to documentary evidence which the Rule contemplates may be produced before the court at a time prior to the trial or prior to the time when it is to be offered in evidence, there was and is no order of the court such as required by the Rule justifying the issuance of the subpoena in the absence of a pending or set hearing or trial to which it might be related.

2. No showing has been made by way of verified petition or motion, or otherwise, such as is generally and customarily required, of the materiality and necessity for the production of the books, papers and documents in question at a time prior to trial or prior to the time when they will be offered in evidence in order to induce the Court to direct such production in the exercise of its discretion, nor, more specifically, is there any such showing as to why such order should be granted in this case at this time in view of the fact that the plaintiff had full right to inspect and copy, and did inspect and copy the books, records and documents in question for a period extending over more than four years immediately preceding the presentation by it of evidence to the Grand Jury which returned the indictment in this case.

3. Notwithstanding any required or ostensible showing which plaintiff might endeavor to make, there should be no order for the issuance of such subpoena because the matters and things therein requested to be produced are within the purview of a motion to suppress evidence to be filed by the defendants for hearing before the trial court when the Senior Judge of the Court of Appeals shall have designated the Judge who is to try the issues in the above-entitled cause. Pending disposition of such motion, it would be prejudicial to the interests of 75 the defendants at this time to require the production of such books, records and documents in advance of trial.

4. In any event, it would be both unreasonable and oppressive to require the production of said books, papers and documents and would harass and impede the defendants in and about the preparation of their defense after the plaintiff has already had full opportunity to inspect and to copy all of such books, records and documents and for more than four years preceding the return of the indictment in this proceeding had all of such books, records and documents available for inspection and copying, and during said time had its representatives engaged in such inspection and copying with accounting aid provided by the defendants at a cost to the corporate defendant in excess of $20,000.00.

Defendants submit in support hereof the affidavit of Vincent O'Brien, one of their attorneys, and by reason of the premises defendants move that the said subpoena duces tecum be quashed; or, in the alternative, that plaintiff's motion for an order directing that said books, papers and documents be produced before the Court at a time prior to the trial be entered and continued pending disposition of defendants' motion to suppress as aforesaid.

The Shotwell Manufacturing Company,
Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan, and Frank J. Huebner, Defendants,

Received a copy of the above and foregoing Objections, together with the affidavit therein referred to, this 15th day of August, 1952.

AFFIDAVIT

Vincent O'Brien, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the attorneys for the defendants in the above-entitled cause and their duly authorized agent in this behalf, and that he makes this affidavit in support of the foregoing objections to and motion to quash the subpoena duces tecum.

1. Affiant avers that in and by the motion of the defendants to dismiss the indictment heretofore filed herein, it was represented to the Court that at all times in question there was in effect a policy published and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and other responsible Treasury officials, that there would be no criminal prosecution in any case in which a voluntary disclosure of misstatement or omission in a tax return was made to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department, in reliance upon which policy, the defendants in January of 1948 made such a disclosure in respect of the returns involved in this proceeding, the sufficiency and timeli-

77 ness of which was acknowledged to the defendants upon the occasion of such disclosure; that in and by said motion it was further shown that in reliance upon said policy and upon said acknowledgment the defendants caused to be made available to said officials and agents of the Treasury Department the books and records of the corporate defendant, and employed the services of accountants to assist said officials and agents in ascertaining pertinent facts from such books and records, and that the corporate defendant over the period of four years of examination thereof by said agents expended or incurred auditing charges in excess of $20,000.00; that in and by said motion it was further shown that during said period of four years the said agents were importuned to bring the matter to a conclusion, and that after such four years of inspection, copying and assistance the matter was presented to the Grand Jury on March 14, 1952, to which said motion and the affidavits in support thereof, now on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court, affiant asks leave to refer and calls to the judicial knowledge of the Court.

2. On, to-wit: the 13th day of June, 1952, the defendants interposed their motion for one hearing in respect of their motion to dismiss, to which motion for one hearing, together with the suggestions in support thereof, now on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court, affiant asks leave to refer, and asks that the Court take judicial notice thereof. In and by said motion and suggestions it was, among other things, stated that if the demurrer which the plaintiff had filed in respect of said motion was first heard without the taking of evidence and the making of a complete record, the disposition of the demurrer would not obviate the need for determination by the Court of the ultimate facts averred in the motion
78 to dismiss, because, if the demurrer was overruled, the Government would desire to plead over, and if the demurrer was sustained, the defendants would, nevertheless, want the facts determined in connection with a motion to suppress evidence predicated upon the claimed disclosure.

3. That after rendition by the Court of its opinion sustaining the plaintiff's demurrer to defendants' motion to dismiss the indictment, according to the transcript of said proceeding prepared by the official reporter of this Court acting for Judge John P. Barnes, the following colloquy occurred:

> "By Mr. Ryan: I understand there are to be other motions; otherwise, I was going to suggest an arraignment today.
> "By the Court: What sort of other motions?
> "By Mr. Ryan: By the defendants.
> "By Mr. O'Brien: I have not considered any other motions at this time, your Honor. But it may well be, and undoubtedly will be, that at some time prior to the trial we will have a motion to suppress the evidence, but that is not in the chain of pleadings nor the matters that are involved here."

4. Thereafter, on June 24, 1952, the defendants being present in open court for arraignment and plea, the following statement from said transcript to have been made by the same Court:

"I have indicated to the Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals of this Circuit that I do not want to try this case. He asked me to dispose of the preliminary motions, and I feel that I have done that."

5. That to this date, neither the defendants nor any of their counsel have received notice of the appointment by the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals of a Judge to try the issues in this case, and that, accordingly, there has been no opportunity to present before the trial judge the motion to suppress the evidence above referred to. Affiant further avers that such motion to suppress evidence will be made and that one of the bases therefor is that the 79 action of the Government in repudiating the terms of its disclosure policy after the defendants in reliance thereon had submitted the books, records and documents as aforesaid of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, has the same effect in law as in the case of an illegal search and seizure or an invalid confession, and that thereafter such books, records and documents may not be obtained by the Government even by what originally would have been due process. Affiant further avers that the said motion to suppress evidence comprehends the books, records and documents specified in the said subpoena, and that if said motion after presentation and hearing is allowed, the plaintiff will be without right for any purpose to obtain or to use the same. Affiant further avers on information and belief that, accordingly, the plaintiff is endeavoring by its said subpoena to render most matters to be presented by said motion to suppress.

6. Affiant further avers that pending the disposition of said preliminary motions before the said Judge John P. Barnes, he and the defendants permitted certain agents of the Treasury Department to inspect certain books, records and documents of the said corporation to the extent from time to time requested by them for the purpose of relieving Judge Barnes of the annoyance of entertaining and disposing of motions for the production of said books, records and documents; and affiant avers that to the extent of such requests the plaintiff confined itself to matters which, as it then seemed to affiant, did not fall within the scope of the matters which defendants will seek to suppress, but that when after disposition of such motions the plaintiff made demands for books, records and documents clearly comprehended by the subject matter of said motion to suppress, their production was refused by affiant, and the subpoena in question followed.

80 7. Affiant further avers that the preliminary motions referred to by Judge John P. Barnes now stand disposed of and that prior to the commencement of the summer recess affiant's attention as counsel for the defendants was focused upon the subject matter of such motions, but that since then affiant has been engaged, and is now engaged in the preparation of the defense upon the merits so as to be prepared for trial in the event that the cause is not disposed of upon determination of the motion to suppress. Affiant avers that the books, records and documents in question are extremely voluminous and that it will take affiant and others and expert accountants months to analyze the same for purposes of such defense, and that right down to the time of trial, if any, it is essential that they be protected in the preparation of their defense from the unreasonable and oppressive demands of the plaintiff, in view of the fact that plaintiff as aforesaid has had and has utilized more than four years in and about the inspection, copying and analyzing and investigation of said books, records and documents.

MOTION OF DEFENDANTS FOR A SUBPOENA FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE PURSUANT TO RULE 17 OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Harold E. Sullivan, Byron A. Cain, and Frank J. Huebner, by their attorneys, move for an order directing the United States of America to produce before the court, or at a place to be therein specified, at a time prior to the trial, and to permit to be inspected by the defendants and their attorneys, those books, papers, documents or objects obtained by the United States of America or by its attorneys (other than those comprehended within the defendants accompanying motion made pursuant to Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and except memoranda prepared by Government counsel which consist of narrative statements of persons or memoranda of interviews—to-wit: the work product of Government counsel):

(a) In the course of the investigation by the Grand Jury which resulted in the return of the indictment herein;

(b) In the course of the Government preparation
90 for the trial of this cause if such books, papers, documents and objects have been presented to said Grand Jury or are to be offered as evidence on the trial of the defendants, or any or either of them, under said indictment, or if they constitute admissible evidence material to the issues in the above-entitled cause, even if the Government may not intend to adduce such evidence.

To the above end, said defendants further ask that the Court order the issuance of appropriate subpoenas duces tecum for the production of such books, papers, documents or other objects at such time and place pursuant to the provisions of Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

MOTION OF DEFENDANTS TO SUPPRESS CERTAIN EVIDENCE: TO SET SAME FOR HEARING: AND FOR ISSUANCE OF SUBPOENA FOR PRODUCTION OF CERTAIN DOCUMENTS, ETC., IN ADVANCE OF THE HEARING SO TO BE SET.

I.

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Harold R. Sullivan, Byron A. Cain, and Frank J. Huebner, and each of them, move that certain evidence in the possession of the plaintiff and hereinafter more particularly described, be suppressed on the trial of the above-entitled cause, and for a further order that, so far as feasible, it be presently returned to the defendants, for the following reasons:

1. At all times in question in these proceedings and in this motion, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury, by virtue of the statutes in such case made and provided, were empowered to compromise any civil or criminal case which might have arisen under the Internal Revenue laws against the defendants. Pursuant to the powers by said statutes conferred, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, through the Secretary of 96 the Treasury, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and through other responsible Treasury officials thereunto duly authorized, publicly offered and held out to all of those whose income tax returns contained omissions or misstatements that there would be immunity from criminal prosecution in any case in which the taxpayer who had filed such a return would come forward before investigation had been initiated and acknowledge the existence in such return of such omissions or misstatements, and that the Treasury Department in such case would thereupon merely assess such unpaid tax, interest and civil penalties, if any, as might thereafter be determined to be due under the facts of the case when ascertained. At all of the times above-mentioned, and for many years prior thereto, said offer was and had been in full force and effect.

2. In reliance thereon, the defendants before the commencement of any such investigation and without knowledge or notice of any kind that any such investigation had been initiated (if any such investigaton had been initiated within the meaning of said offer), in January of 1948, came forward and made such acknowledgment in respect of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years mentioned in the indictment in this cause, and from time to time thereafter until and including March of 1948, reiterated the same, in each instance, to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department Pursuant the acknowledgment of the sufficiency and timeliness to the disclosure made as aforesaid, and in reliance upon thereof, as hereinafter mentioned, the defendants informed said agents of the Treasury Department, among other things, that the said returns contained omissions and misstatements in that they failed to include under the heading "Cost of Goods Sold", payments to the extent that such payments were in excess of the ceiling price as set down by the laws and regulations of the United States at the time such goods were purchased.

97 At all times in question and to the date hereof, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue took and by regulations and otherwise has maintained the legal position that to the extent that prices paid for goods subsequently sold were in excess of the ceiling price, that such payments could be considered, for tax purposes, as part of the cost of goods sold, despite the fact that the Tax Court and certain Courts of Appeals in every case in which the question has been involved have held that such payments are properly part of the cost of goods sold for purposes of determining taxable income. Such payments exceed any alleged unreported income on which plaintiff bases its claim for additional taxes.

3. The officers and agents of the Treasury Department to whom the aforementioned disclosure was made acknowledged to the defendants the sufficiency and timeliness thereof upon the occasions aforesaid. In further reliance upon said disclosure and also upon said acknowledgment of its sufficiency and timeliness, and at the request of said officials and agents made in pursuance thereof, the defendants caused to be made available to said officials and agents the books and records of the corporate defendant, and the individual defendants communicated to officers and agents of the Treasury Department information in their possession materially related to said omissions and misstatements and not available to such Treasury officers and agents or to any one else through the said books and records of the corporate defendant, which information could not have been obtained from the individual defendants in any manner in view of the constitutional privilege and rights of the individual defendants; and the defendants caused to be employed certain accountants to assist said officials and agents in obtaining the facts. The corporate defendant in that regard specifically incurred and paid for such service auditing charges in excess of the 98 sum of $20,000.00.

4. The said Treasury officials and agents in the manner aforesaid, and in purported pursuance of the disclosure aforesaid, and in purported continuing recognition of the timeliness and sufficiency thereof, conducted an examination of said books, records and date and made copies and notations and memoranda thereof continuously over a period of more than four years preceding the return of the indictment in this cause, and at no time prior thereto or in the course of said examinations did the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Department of Justice, or any officer or agent of the Treasury Department, or any one else, advise the defendants, or any or either of them, that said disclosure for any reason was untimely or insufficient or that criminal prosecution was or had been contemplated or considered or that it would or might be recommended.

The defendants and each of them in permitting such examinations did so in continued reliance upon the acknowledged sufficiency and timeliness of said disclosure and without knowledge of any possibility of repudiation by said agents and without knowledge that criminal prosecution would or might be recommended.

5. Notwithstanding the premises, the said officials at or shortly before the time of the presentment of the matter to said Grand Jury, and after examination and analysis of said books and records extending over a period of four years as aforesaid, repudiated the said offer so relied and acted upon by the defendants as aforesaid, and caused to be initiated the proceeding before said Grand Jury which resulted in the indictment returned in this cause.

6. At the time of said disclosure, and at all times thereafter, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, contrary to the premises aforesaid, did not intend to forego criminal
99 prosecution of these defendants or to refrain from recommending such prosecution. At and continuously after the time of said disclosure, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, without notice to or knowledge of the defendants, or any or either of them, intended to impose qualifications, conditions and requirements different from and in addition to those publicly mentioned in said offer, and it also at all of said times intended to claim, assert and exercise discretion in any event, including the event of full compliance with its published offer, to recommend criminal prosecution. Said intentions and reservations were not mentioned in said offer or otherwise and were in fact unknown to the defendants, and to each of them.

7. By reason of the premises, the defendants, and each of them, aver that the actions aforesaid of the Bureau of Internal Revenue constituted an improper inducement of a confession or admission of facts upon which a criminal prosecution might be based and an illegal search and seizure of the books, papers and records of the defendants, and that, in consequence, the admission in evidence of all books, records, papers and statements so obtained, and any copies thereof or data procured therefrom as a result of information obtained therefrom would violate the rights of the defendants, and each of them, under the Fourth and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Accordingly, the defendants ask that the said evidence be suppressed and that its use by the plaintiff at any hearing herein and on the trial of this cause be forbidden, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the following evidence:

(a) Any and all affidavits and statements received from suppliers or customers of the defendant corporation whose names were procured from its books and records.

100 (b) Any written statement made by the defendants, or any or either of them, following the disclosure aforesaid, including any recordings or stenographic notes or transcriptions of any statements made by defendants after the disclosure aforesaid.

(c) Any worksheets prepared by defendants' auditors, at their direction, for delivery to said officials and agents.

(d) Any and all photostats, photographs or copies of any kind which may have accompanied the written disclosure statement aforesaid, or pertain thereto.

(e) Any and all photographs or photostats or copies of any kind of the books, records and papers of the corporate defendant.

(f) Any and all notes or memoranda made by said officials and agents from the books, records and papers of said corporation.

(g) Any statement of the corporation's sugar dealings during the years 1941 to 1947, which may have been furnished to said agents.

(h) Any analyses of purchases and supporting data furnished said agents.

(i) Any analyses of production records furnished said agents.

(j) Any analyses of sales taken by or furnished to said agents.

(k) Any composite or comparative statement of the last three foregoing analyses.

(l) Any and all records of the corporation pertaining to transactions with David G. Lubben or with any of his companies, including General Confections, inc., Reserve Trading Company, and Eatsum Food Products Co., (whether the proprietorship or the partnership), including any accounts receivable, ledger cards for said companies or any or either of them; any copies of invoices of sales to Lubbon or to any or either of said companies; and any file or data pertaining to "Miscellaneous Accounts Receivable—Other."

(m) Any cancelled checks paid to Lubben or any or either of said companies by the defendant corporation, together with any copies or photostats of said checks or notations concerning them.

(n) Any and all invoices, vouchers and cancelled checks or copies thereof having to do with purchases made by the defendant corporation of sugar, chocolate and corn syrup.

101 At the special instance and request of the United States Attorney in this proceeding, the defendants made available, or agreed to make available to the plaintiff, the following data:

Remittance advices for 1945 and 1946.

Bank statements for 1945 and 1946.

Group of folders relating to items that are classified as "Accounts Receivable Others."

Additional remittances advices from April to December, 1946, and from January to April of 1947.

General Journals, July to December, 1946; January to April, 1947.

General Ledgers for 1946 and 1947.

Bank Statements, April to December, 1946; January to June, 1947.

which latter items are, therefore, expressly excluded from this motion to suppress.

Pursuant to order entered by this Court on September 9, 1952, various books, records, papers and other data of the defendant corporation, as listed in the subpoena mentioned in said order, were directed to be made available to the plaintiff at the defendant corporation's premises, which said order was entered over the objections of the defendants, but on the understanding, expressed by both the United States Attorney and the Court, that the status as evidence of any material produced in response thereto would abide the result of this motion to suppress. All of the items included within said subpoena were among those mentioned in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof. Accordingly, defendants also ask that all of such evidence be likewise suppressed, and that its use at the trial be prohibited, together with any and all copies, notes and information procured as a result of the inspection of any of such items. They ask also that the aforementioned order be vacated and set aside.

102 In partial support of their said motion to suppress, defendants submit the affidavit hereto attached as Exhibit A, and in further partial support hereof, the defendants adopt and by reference make a part hereof the affidavit of Leon J. Busby, a photostatic copy of which is attached hereto, as Exhibit B, the original of which, as Exhibit B, was attached to the motion to dismiss the indictment heretofore filed in the above-entitled cause; and they submit also the affidavit of Vincent O'Brien, hereto attached as Exhibit C. Said affidavits are so submitted at this time merely to verify the basis for this motion and to show that it is presented in good faith. They are so submitted, however, without prejudice to defendants' right to a hearing on evidence to be taken in open court.

II.

Defendants further move that this, their motion to suppress, be set down for hearing before the Court, on evidence to be adduced in open court in support thereof, including testimony to be adduced by the said affiants Cain and Busby, at a date to be fixed by the Court.

III.

It is essential in the preparation for such hearing that files of the Department of Justice and of the Treasury Department, insofar as they pertain to the subject matter of the said disclosure, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, all correspondence, memoranda and telegrams, and copies of memoranda or transcriptions of telephone conversations, relating to said subject matter; any and all statements and affidavits of officials or agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue relating thereto; any and all records, memoranda, instructions, reports or documents bearing upon the time of the commencement of investigation, if any, of The 103 Shotwell Manufacturing Company, David G. Lubben and his said companies mentioned in the bill of particulars heretofore filed herein by plaintiff, to-wit: General Confections, Inc., Reserve Trading Company and Eatsum Food Products Co., be made available for examination by the defendants and their attorneys before the Court at a time prior to such trial, and that upon their production, that the defendants and their attorneys be permitted to inspect the same. To that end, defendants further move that a date be fixed by the Court, prior to the time set for such hearing, at which said items shall be so made available; and that subpoenas duces tecum may issue pursuant to the provisions of Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure for the production of said items at the time so set for that purpose.

AFFIDAVIT

Byron A. Cain, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in partial support of the defendants' foregoing motion to suppress, etc.

Affiant further says:

1. During all of the year 1948, and continuously since, affiant was President and Treasurer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, one of the defendants in this cause, and that co-defendants, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner, were, respectively, Executive Vice President and Vice President of said corporation, and that Leon J. Busby was a member of the firm of Busby & Cury, certified public accountants employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as its regular auditing firm during all of the year 1948 and for some years prior thereto.

2. That during the month of January, 1948, affiant and other officers of the defendant corporation acting 105 in behalf of said corporation and in their own behalf as officers thereof, delegated Leon J. Busby to communicate with a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department of the United States for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was still in effect the published policy of the Treasury Department, of which affiant had theretofore become aware, pertaining to the disclosure of omissions or misstatements in income tax returns, and if so, to ascertain in a preliminary way the requirements of such policy without disclosing the identity of the person by whom such disclosure might be made.

3. That thereafter, but during January of 1948, the said Leon J. Busby reported to affiant and to other officers of the defendant corporation that he had communicated with one Ernest J. Sauber, Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at Chicago, Illinois, who had told the said Busby that said policy was still in force and effect and that he was a proper person within the requirements of said published policy to whom such a disclosure might be made, and had further informed him that the requirements of such policy as to such disclosure would be fulfilled if the person in question would come forward before investigation had been initiated and acknowledge the incorrectness of his return, and that, in such event, there would be immunity under the Bureau's policy from criminal prosecution but that such tax, interest and penalties, if any, as might properly be due under the facts would be assessed upon subsequent determination of the amount.

4. Thereupon, affiant and other officers of said corporation in their behalf and on behalf of said defendant, during January, 1948, pursuant to said policy, directed said Busby to reveal to said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue the identity of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as the person whose returns for 106 the years 1945 and 1946 contained omissions or misstatements—those being the years in question at all times mentioned in this affidavit—and to inform him in a general way of the nature of said misstatements and omissions and to ascertain from him whether the preparation of amended returns for those years by said corporation should be then attempted, or whether their preparation and filing should be deferred pending an inspection of the books and records of the corporate defendant by agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

5. That thereafter and during the month of January, 1948, the said Busby reported to affiant that he had again communicated with said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and had revealed to him, pursuant to defendants' reliance on the policy aforesaid, that there were omissions and errors contained in the returns of said The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946 and of the general nature of said misstatements and omissions, and that he had inquired as to whether such communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and as to whether the preparation of amended returns for those years should be undertaken at that time; that said Busby further reported to affiant that said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue informed him that said communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and assured said Busby that he was the proper person to accept such disclosure and that no attempt should be made to file amended returns for those years because said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue would inform the office of the Agent in Charge to the end that the latter office would assign an agent to make such inspection and investigation as might be required, but that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had further recommended that an 107 attempt be made in the meantime by the officers of the corporation to approximate the extent of the omissions and misstatements based on their then recollections of the matters giving rise to said omissions and misstatements

6. That thereafter according to his best present recollection, affiant himself during January of 1948, either alone or in the company of said Busby, and again to a certainty in the forepart of March, 1948, in the company of said Busby called upon said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and was informed by him that the information communicated to him as such Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue by said Busby constituted a sufficient disclosure and that he had made appropriate inquiry to ascertain whether any prior investigation had been initiated and had learned that there had been none and that there was none pending, and that the said disclosure was therefore timely within the Department's requirements, and further that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had talked to Mr. Ralph Johnson, a squad chief in the office of Mr. R. C. Wright, the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge at Chicago, and that Mr. Johnson had indicated that he would go forward with the matter.

7. Thereafter the defendants and other representatives of the corporation, at their request, in reliance upon said policy and in reliance upon the representatives aforesaid, commenced a course of cooperation, and solely for that purpose specially retained accountants who, commencing in 1948, and for a period of approximately four years, assisted the Internal Revenue agents in their inspection and examination of the books and records of the corporate defendant, and assembled for them such data and compilations as were requested, at an expense to the corporate defendant of approximately $20,000.00 or 108 more; and that the examination by such agents of said books and records has extended over a period of approximately four years and was still being conducted at the time of the return of the indictment in this proceeding, and that much of the data and many of the compilations so prepared and furnished by said accountants were not available, in the form requested and supplied, from the books and records of the corporation; that more specifically, there were submitted to and examined by said agents the books and records of the corporate defendant for the year 1941 relating to sugar, corn and chocolate, and also th ledger sheets and journals for that year; all of the books and records of the corporate defendant for the years 1943 to 1946, inclusive, including all supporting data requested by said agents in respect thereof; and that during the course of said cooperation, aforesaid, neither affiant, nor any of said defendants to his knowledge, was informed by any agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, or any one else, nor did affiant, or any of the defendants to his knowledge, know that the Bureau of Internal Revenue did not intend to forego criminal prosecution or not to refrain from recommending such prosecution, or that it intended, if such is the fact, to impose qualifications, conditions and requirements different from or in addition to those publicly mentioned in said offer, or that as of the time of said disclosure or during any time during the period of cooperation aforesaid, the Bureau of Internal Revenue intended to claim, assert or exercise an alleged discretion to recommend criminal prosecution in spite of the compliance aforesaid with the terms of its published offer.

8. That the defendants immediately following said disclosure and with the partial assistance of said accountants thereunto specially directed—all in reliance upon the policy and representations aforesaid, including the representations as to the sufficiency and time-
109 liness of their said disclosure—commenced the preparation and compilation of the preliminary approximation which the said Sauber had recommended as averred in paragraph 5 hereof; that indispensable to the making of said statement was data and information not contained in the books and records of the corporate defendant but in the minds of the individual defendants, which the individual defendants well know they could not be compelled to reveal and which they knew they had a constitutional right to withhold, but which, in reliance on the matters aforesaid, they supplied, with the result that such tentative approximation or statement was completed and reduced to writing and furnished to the said agents at or about the time of their first appearance for the purpose of inspecting the books and records of the corporate defendant. Affiant further avers that the said statement, among other things, showed that the net balance as a result of the operations therein reflected was $5,898.00, which sum had been deposited in the corporate defendant's bank account during the year 1946, and had been given effect to in its income tax return for that year. Said statement is in the possession of the plaintiff and was exhibited and otherwise used by the Government in the proceedings before the Grand Jury which returned the indictment in this proceeding. From time to time, and on request of agents of the Department of Internal Revenue, the individual defendants furnished said agents with other and more detailed and accurate information regarding the said omissions and misstatements known to them, but which were also not contained in the books and records of the defendant corporation, which information the defendants knew they were privileged not to reveal but did reveal in continued reliance on the policy and representations aforesaid. Among other 110 things, defendants also informed said agent of the Treasury Department that said returns continued omissions and misstatements in that they failed to include under the heading of cost of goods sold payments to the extent that such payments were in excess of the ceiling prices as set by the laws and regulations of the United States at the time such goods were purchased during the years 1945 and 1946.

AFFIDAVIT

Vincent O'Brien, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the attorneys for the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of their foregoing motion to suppress evidence, etc.

Affiant further avers that in the preparation of said motion to suppress he intended to procure a new affidavit from Leon J. Busby, but was and is informed by the office associates of said Busby that the said Busby is absent from the city and in the State of California due to the serious illness of his daughter.

ORDER

This matter having come on to be heard upon the motion of the defendants pursuant to Rule 17(c) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for the issuance of appropriate subpoena duces tecum for the production of certain books, papers, documents or other objects before the Court at a time prior to the trial, the Court having heard the arguments of counsel on both sides:

It Is Ordered, that the United States of America produce, at the time and place hereinafter stated, those books, papers, documents or objections obtained by the United States of America, or by its attorneys (other than those comprehended in the order concurrently entered in this proceeding on the motion of the defendants made pursuant to Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and other than memoranda prepared by Government counsel and documents or papers solicited by or volunteered to Government counsel which consist of narrative statements of persons or memoranda of interviews, to-wit: the work product of Government counsel):

122 (a) In the course of the Grand Jury investigation which resulted in the return of the indictment herein;

(b) In the course of the Government's preparation for the trial of this cause if such books, papers, documents or objects have been presented to said Grand Jury or are to be offered as evidence on the trial of the defendant, or of any or either of them, under said indictment.

It Is Further Ordered, that upon the production of said books, papers, documents or objects, the defendants, their agents and attorneys, be permitted to inspect and to photostat the same, or any part or portions thereof, at the time, place and manner hereinafter provided.

It Is Further Ordered that all of said books, papers, documents or objects so to be produced by the terms of this order shall, until the further order of the Court, be made available for inspection and copying at the offices of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 105 West Monroe Street, Chicago, Illinois; and that the plaintiff and the attorney for the Government shall permit the removal of such of said books, papers, documents or objects as the defendants, their agents or attorneys, shall desire to be photostated; and, to that end, shall appoint a custodian to accompany the defendants, their agents or attorney, to see that the items so to be photostated are kept intact and returned to said office.

And it appearing to the Court that the matter mentioned in (a) above is of necessity presently available; and it further appearing to the Court from the representations in open court of counsel for the Government that as to 123 the matter mentioned in (b) above, all of such matter is ultimately ascertainable but as of the present time all such matter has not as yet been ascertained so that the Government does not presently know with certainty the precise extent of the material to be adduced by it in evidence at the trial, but that it and its attorneys are willing presently to turn over to the defendants such books, papers, documents and objects which the Government or its counsel, in the exercise of good faith, now know with reasonable certainty are to be utilized as evidence on the trial, and that they are willing to ascertain and to produce the remainder of said matter by the 5th day of November, 1952.

Now, Therefore, It Is Ordered, that the items in (a) above, and all items mentioned in (b) above, which the United States of America or the attorney for the Government, in the exercise of good faith, now know with reasonable certainty is to be utilized as evidence by the plaintiff on the trial of the above-entitled cause, shall be produced at the place aforesaid, and shall be there so made available for inspection and copying in the manner aforesaid, commencing on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1952, and from day to day thereafter (except Saturdays, Sundays and Federal holidays), during the usual hours of business on each day until said inspection and copying shall have been completed.

It Is Further Ordered, that the plaintiff and the attorneys for the Government shall by the 5th day of November, A. D. 1952, produce for inspection and copying the remainder, if any, of the items mentioned in (b) above, at the same place and on the same terms and conditions as hereinabove provided in respect of other items.

124 It Is Further Ordered, notwithstanding anything herein contained, that neither the plaintiff nor the attorney for the Government, either by this order or by the terms of said subpoena, shall be required to disclose the name or names of informants, if any.

Accordingly, it is further Ordered that there be issued pursuant to Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure appropriate subpoenas duces tecum for the production of such books, papers, documents or other objects at the time and places aforesaid.

It Is Further Ordered, that that part of the defendants' motion which asks for books, papers, documents or objects obtained by the United States of America, or by its attorney, if they constitute admissible evidence material to the issues in the above-entitled cause even if the Government may not intend to adduce such evidence, is denied, and the defendants' contention that they are entitled to said items and their exception to the denial of their motion in that respect is hereby noted.

ORDER

This matter having come on to be heard upon the motion of the defendants for discovery and inspection pursuant to Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the Court having heard the arguments of counsel on both sides and it appearing to the Court that the items in said motion, and hereinafter mentioned, may be material to the preparation of the defense, and that the requests made by said motion are reasonable to the extent hereinafter allowed.

It Is Ordered, that the attorney for the Government permit the defendants, their attorneys and agents, to inspect and to copy, photograph or photostat the books, papers, documents or tangible objects obtained from or belonging to the said defendants, or any or either of them, including, without limitation of the generality of the foregoing, any and all auditors' reports and worksheets, compilations and analyses, mentioned in part I of said motion, turned over to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the officials and agents thereof, by or on behalf of the de-126 fendants, or any or either of them, during the years 1948 to 1952, inclusive.

It Is Further Ordered, that the attorney for the Government also permit the defendants, and any or either of them, their attorneys or agents, to inspect and copy, photograph or photostat such books, papers, documents or tangible objects as have been obtained by the United States of America by seizure or by process from David G. Lubben, Eatsum Food Products Co., a sole proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products Co., a partnership, General Confectioners, Inc., a corporation, or Reserve Trading Company. To the extent that true and correct copies of said books, papers, documents or tangible objects obtained by seizure or by process, as aforesaid, were supplied to or produced by the attorney for the Government rather than said items themselves in the original form in which they were obtained or seized by process, then it shall be a sufficient compliance herewith that the United States attorney make available to the defendants for inspection and copying aforesaid, the true and correct copies so procured by or supplied to the attorney for the Government. To the extent that neither the originals nor true and correct copies of said books, papers, documents or tangible objects obtained by seizure or by process from said David G. Lubben or from the companies last aforesaid have been or are supplied or furnished by the United States of America to the attorney for the Government aforesaid, then, it is further Ordered, that the United States of America, through the attorneys for the Government in this proceeding, within two days from the date hereof, advise counsel of record for the defendants of the precise place or places where said items so obtained by 127 seizure or process are held; and it is Ordered that the plaintiff make said books, papers, documents or tangible objects forthwith available to the defendants, their attorneys and agents, for inspection and copying at the place or places so designated.

It Is Further Ordered, that all of the said books, papers, documents, records and tangible objects, or copies thereof, as aforesaid, which the attorney for the Government, as hereinbefore provided, is to make available for inspection and copying, shall be made so available at the offices of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 105 West Monroe Street, Chicago, Illinois, beginning on the 5th day of November, A. D. 1952, and from day to day thereafter (except Saturdays, Sundays and Federal holidays), during the usual hours of business on each day, until said inspection and copying shall have been completed. The plaintiff and the attorney for the Government shall permit the removal of such of said books, papers, documents, tangible objects, or copies thereof aforesaid, as the defendants, their agents or attorneys, shall desire to be copied in the form of photographs, photostats or microfilm; and to that end, shall appoint a custodian to accompany the defendants, their agents or attorneys, who shall see that the items to be photographed, photostated or microfilmed are kept intact and returned to said office.

In so far as the books, papers, documents or tangible objects, if any, which the United States of America is hereinabove directed to make available to the defend-128 ants, their attorneys and agents, for inspection and copying aforesaid, at places to be designated by the United States of America through the attorney for the Government, as aforesaid, are concerned, it is further Ordered, that the time and manner of making such inspection and of making the copies thereof shall be the same; provided that if more than one place is so designated by the United States of America, the Court, on application of the defendants, may make such other provision as to time as may appear just.

It Is Further Ordered that part III of the defendants' motion for discovery and inspection pursuant to Rule 16 be, and it is hereby denied, without prejudice to their right to renew the same if made more definite and on a showing of materiality.

ORDER

The above cause came on for hearing on defendants' motion to suppress evidence and to set same for hearing, and for the issuance of subpoena duces tecum for the production of certain documents in advance of the hearing so set.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien and Mr. Edward J. Hess appeared in behalf of the defendants in support of said motion;

and

Mr. Otto Kerner, Jr., United States Attorney, appeared by Mr. Edward J. Ryan, Assistant United States Attorney, in behalf of the United States of 131 At teh close of the preesntation of the motion, the America.

Court stated to counsel that a date would be set for hearing on defendants' motion to suppress. The phase of the motion pertaining to the issuance of subpoenas for the production of documents in advance of the hearing, as outlined in the notice of motion, was taken under advisement.

Defendants seek to suppress certain evidence outlined in their motion upon the ground that such evidence was procured by the Government in violation of defendants' rights under the Fourth and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Briefly, it is defendants' position that, pursuant to authority vested in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, through the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and through other responsible Treasury officials, there was publicly held out to taxpayer who had made omissions or misstatements in their tax return that there would be immunity from prosecution in any case where the taxpayers guilty of such omissions or misstatements came forward before any investigation was made or initiated by the tax authorities and acknowledged such omissions and misstatements, and that the Treasury Department in such case would merely assess the unpaid tax interest and civil penalties, if any, as might be determined to be due the Government under the facts when ascertained. It is contended by the defendants that in reliance thereon they came forward in January, 1948, and made such acknowledgment in respect to the tax return of the corporate defendant to a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department before the commencement or initiation of any investigation by the tax authorities. It is further contended that the officers and agents of the Treasury Depart-132 ment to whom the disclosure was made acknowledged the sufficiency and timeliness of the disclosure so made, and that in reliance upon the disclosure and acknowledgment of the sufficiency and timeliness, the defendants caused to be made available to such officials books, papers, documents, etc., relating to the omissions and misstatements in the tax return of the corporate defendant, and that from the books, papers, documents, etc., made available to the Treasury Department and agents, computations, notations, and memoranda have been made by such officials. The position of the defendants on this motion is that the motion of such officials constituted an improper inducement of a confession and admission of facts upon which the criminal prosecution is based herein and that the admission in evidence of any such data thus obtained from the defendants would violate their rights under the Constitution of the United States.

The defendants' position on the hearing of the motion to suppress is that there should be made available to them and their attorneys for examination some time prior to the hearing on said motions "all correspondence, memoranda and telegrams, and copies of memoranda or transcriptions of telephone conversations, relating to such subject matter [said disclosure]; any and all statements and affidavits of officials or agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue relating thereto; any and all records, memoranda, instructions, reports or documents bearing upon the time of the commencement of investigation, if any, of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, David G. Lubben and his said companies mentioned in the bill of particulars heretofore filed herein by plaintiff, to wit: General Confections, Inc., Reserve Trading Company and Eatsum Food Products Co. • • •."

133 Defendants are proceeding under Rule 17(c), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, which was enacted to enable either party to a criminal case to obtain a subpoena duces tecum returnable prior to the date of trial. Presumably, defendants are seeking the right by a subpoena duces tecum to obtain the production before the hearing of relevant documents and data and to inspect and examine any such documents and data in the possession of the Department of Justice and the Treasury Department which may bear upon the question as to whether or not the alleged disclosure by the defendants of the omissions or misstatements in the corporate tax return was the first information which the Government officials had of such omissions or misstatements. In effect, they are seeking to delve into the records of the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice in order to ascertain and determine whether there are documents and data which may disclose that the Government did or did not have knowledge of the alleged tax omissions and misstatements of the corporate defendant before the disclosure was allegedly made by the defendants in January, 1948.

The application for the subpoena duces tecum is opposed because it is contended that it is in effect a dragnet by which the defendants hope to obtain some evidence which may be helpful to them in sustaining their motion to suppress. Obviously, that characteristic of defendants' motion is of substance, but is that objection fatal to defendants' motion? Defendants, from the very nature of the situation, have no information as to the type of data or documents or other information which the Government may have in its files and which may reflect when the investigation was initiated by the Government or when knowledge came to the Government of the corporate defendant's tax omissions. Documents, letters, telegrams, memoranda, etc., in the possession of the Government
134 may reflect relevant and material information as to this issue. The defendants are unable with any particularity or definiteness to identify specific documents or writings because they have never seen such documents. There is good reason to assume, however, that some data or documents or written material in possession of the plaintiff may refer to the alleged disclosure by the defendants of the subject matter of the motion to suppress or as to the time when the Government officials first initiated any investigation of the corporate defendant or were informed of the tax delinquencies of this defendant. True, some of the letters, affidavits, transcriptions of telephone conversations, etc., may be privileged—some may be the work product of counsel for the plaintiff—and there may be other valid objections to the production of such documents.

The tenor of the recent pronouncements in well-considered decisions tends to recognize with greater liberality the right of a defendant to have access to such documents which may be relevant to his defense and which are in possession of the Government. In absence of a showing as to the exact nature and type of documents in possession of the Government which are relevant to the issues on this motion, I am unable to determine whether the documents called for are privileged or whether for any reason they may be considered outside the scope of a subpoena duces tecum under Rule 17(c). Upon this showing, however, I see no good reason why a blanket subpoena should be issued returnable before the hearing and before the Court is afforded an opportunity to inspect and pass upon any objections that the plaintiff may have to the right of the defendants to inspect such documents. My view is that defendants should have the 135 benefit of subpoenas duces tecum returnable, however, at the date of this hearing. Plaintiff will be required to produce in response to such subpoenas at the date of the hearing all documents within the scope of this order. Upon the day of return, if plaintiff has any objection to defendants' right of inspection and examination of such documents, the Court then can consider each specific document or writing and the objection thereto and pass upon such question before the material is made available to the defendants. This plan should not particularly delay the hearing. There is no reason to assume that the documents are so lengthy or complex that the defendants should be afforded a certain period prior to the date of the hearing for the inspection of such documents. The showing does not justify the issuance of a subpoena duces tecum of the scope and extent as required with reference to David G. Lubben, General Confections, Inc., Reserve Trading Company and Eatsum Food Products Co. If the investigation by the Government or information obtained by it regarding David G. Lubben and the companies named has any bearing upon the issues raised by the motion to suppress, any such records, documents, etc., will be within the ambit of the order which follows, Therefore,

It Is Ordered, That subpoena duces tecum may be issued by the Clerk of this Court commanding plaintiff to produce from the files of the Department of Justice and Treasury Department all correspondence, memoranda, telegrams, copies of memoranda, and transcriptions of telephone conversations relating to the subject matter of the alleged disclosure by the defendants of the corporate defendant's tax omissions and misstatements, and further, all statements and affidavits of the officials or agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue relating thereto, and any and all 136 records, memoranda, instructions, reports or documents bearing upon the time of the commencement of the investigation of the tax delinquencies of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

It Is Further Ordered: That defendants' motion to suppress certain evidence be set down for hearing on the 12th day of November, 1952, in the United States Court House at Chicago, Illinois, at ten o'clock A. M., and that the subpoenas duces tecum which may be issued be returnable at that date and at that hour.

AMENDMENT TO MOTION OF DEFENDANTS TO SUPPRESS EVIDENCE, ETC.

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan, and Frank J. Huebner, by Vincent O'Brien, their attorney, leave of Court being first had and obtained, file this their amendment to the motion to suppress certain evidence heretofore filed herein, as follows, to-wit:

1. Strike the words following the word "they" in the fifteenth line of the second paragraph of said motion and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"intentionally failed to include, under the heading of gross sales, all or part of the sums received by the corporation defendant through various sales of goods, and in that they failed also to include, under the heading of cost of goods sold, various payments made for goods subsequently sold, which payments were in excess of the ceiling prices as set by the laws and regulations of the United States Government at the time such goods were purchased."

2. Strike the last paragraph of paragraph 2 of said motion and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"As of the date hereof there are and have for varying periods of time been in effect decisions of the Tax Court, United States District Courts, and United States Courts of Appeals, in every case in which the question has been involved, holdings that such premium payments are properly part of the cost of goods sold for purposes of determining taxable income. Notwithstanding said decisions, and each of them, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to the date hereof has refused to acquiesce in the determination established by said decisions, or any or either of them. The said disclosure was made, however, prior to the determination evidenced by said decisions. But at the time of said disclosure, and on several occasions thereafter, said defendants informed said agents that in the Commissioner's view there were unpaid taxes due and owing for said years from the said corporate defendant. Said defendants at said times also stated that the said corporation through its officers aforesaid was ready, able and willing to pay such unpaid tax, interest and civil penalties, if any, as might be determined to be due after inspection and investigation by the agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Such payments equalled such unreported receipts."

3. Strike the period at the end of paragraph 5 and add after the word "cause" at the end of said paragraph the following:

"without granting to said defendants, or to any of them, contrary to the custom and practice obtaining in such matters, any hearing or conference at any level, and even without communicating to them the amount which upon such inspection and investigation the Bureau of Internal Revenue had determined to be due; and without affording the corporate defendant or said officers on its behalf opportunity to pay such amount."

4. After paragraph 7 in said motion insert the following:

"8. Defendants, and each of them, also aver that even if the said disclosure was insufficient or entirely, or both, plaintiff, by reason of the premises, is estopped from so asserting, and that they are, nevertheless, entitled to the relief by this motion requested."

MOTION

The defendants, by Vincent O'Brien, their attorney, move the entry of an order directing the plaintiff to produce at the hearing on November 21st, 1952, in the matter of the defendants' motion to suppress evidence, the following items, to-wit:

(a) Any and all orders, directives, communications or mimeographs from the Treasury Department or any of its officials to the Special Agent in Charge, the Agent in Charge, or the Collector of Internal Revenue, all at Chicago, Illinois, having to do with the subject matter of voluntary disclosures or with the procedures prescribed in relation thereto from and during the year 1934.

(b) The particular mimeograph order or directive, if any, issued to implement that part of the address given by J. P. Wenchel, Chief Counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, May 14, 1947, reading as follows:

> "An investigation is initiated when a Special Agent, an Internal Revenue Agent, a Deputy Collector, or other Bureau officer, is assigned a return for examination, or where an investigating officer has requested advice of appropriate officers of the Bureau with respect to the filing of a return or the payment of taxes.

144 "The time of disclosure and the time an investigation begins are, therefore, matters which can be ascertained with complete objectivity and certainty, thus protecing both the Government and the taxpayer from decisions based on guesswork or other vague circumstances. To assure adherence to this principle, the Bureau stands ready at all times where a dispute may arise as to the time of a disclosure and the time an investigation was initiated to open its records in that regard."

by the Secretary of the Treasury or any official thereof to the said agencies at Chicago, Illinois, or any or either of them.

(c) Any order, directive, mimeograph or other document from the Secretary of the Treasury or any official thereof to the said agencies at Chicago, Illinois, or any or either of them, requiring in effect that in case any investigation initiated by any of such agencies in Chicago might reveal the identity of a taxpayer within the jurisdiction of another agency, to notify such other agency and to request it to call for the return of such other taxpayer or to initiate its own investigation in respect of such other taxpayer, and requiring such other agency to acknowledge in writing that it had done so.

(d) The manual prescribing the specific operating procedures in force in the office of the Agent in Charge in Chicago during the years 1947 and 1948, whether prescribed by that office of by the Bureau of Internal Revenue or the Treasury Department in Washington, with particular respect to the auditing of the tax returns of all corporations in general and to the transmissions of such returns by the Collector of Internal Revenue to the Agent in Charge at Chicago, for that purpose, to the distribution of such returns to the proper departments of the office of the Agent in Charge, and to the assignment of such returns by such department or a group leader thereof to an Internal Revenue Agent for examination and audit.

Affiant further says that the items, the production of which by the plaintiff is requested, are or may be material to the issues on the hearing of the defendants' motion to suppress certain evidence to the extent that these manifestly have to do with the definition of the so-called voluntary disclosure policy; with the origin of the policy as referred to in the various public utterances in 1945 and 1947 as set forth in the motion to suppress and supporting papers; with the Bureau's view as established by such items as to the time at which an investigation may be said to have been initiated, and with the requirements of 147 the Bureau as to the auditing of the tax returns of all corporations, whether under investigation or not.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I have a motion before we start, for leave to file this amendment.

By Mr. Ryan: I haven't seen it, Judge. Counsel told me something about it in a general way.

By Mr. O'Brien: Here it is. (Counsel handing document to Mr. Ryan.)

By Mr. Ryan: May I inquire of counsel, in the 3 context, this doesn't change the effect of the latest disclosure of being one where additional unclaimed deductions washed out unrecorded gross receipts except the amount of $5,000, is that correct? It simply amounts to an affirmative statement in the motion that you did receive additional gross income, receipts?

By Mr. O'Brien: We assert it is a fact such payments equal recorded receipts. $5,898 was obviously erroneous. The $5,898 went into income, reported income.

By Mr. Ryan: Then, if I understand the motion now as it stands, the unreported gross receipts allegedly disclosed as washed out by the unrecorded gross payments.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is so stated.

By Mr. Ryan: I have no objection.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have the order, then, if that is agreeable, Judge?

By Mr. Ryan: Your Honor, Mr. Wright, District Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is here with the Treasury Department records which were requested by the defendants under the subpoena issued bearing 4 on the subject-matter of disclosure. Mr. Wright, as I understand, has a schedule to make a train to go to New York today. For that reason I would like if it were agreeable to the Court to have him make his tender of these documents for the Court's examination and have him excused, if possible, if that is agreeable to counsel and the Court. I don't know whether counsel expects any testimony from him, but that is my suggestion, if it meets with the approval of the Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask, what time does Mr. Wright have to leave?

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Wright, please. Maybe he has some time.

By Mr. Wright: Your Honor, I am scheduled to leave on the 2:00 o'clock train at the Pennsylvania Railroad. I would have to leave the office at about a quarter to 2:00, at the latest.

By Mr. O'Brien: The other question is as to any testimony whether the other folks who are subpoenaed are here.

By Mr. Kerner: Who do you mean by that, the 5 Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioner?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kerner: On that, if the Court please, I wish to appear in their behalf.

In a previous conversation between counsel of my office and Mr. O'Brien, it was understood that their appearance would not be personally necessary at all, but merely a production of records.

Yesterday, Mr. O'Brien called our office and informed us that he wished these two gentlemen to be present. I am informed that they are both engaged in setting up these various district offices under the reorganization of the Treasury Department and their appearance here would be extremely difficult and would upset the national scale of the set-up of these new districts. However, if the Court wishes them to be here, we will have to make some arrangements for them to be here at the Court's convenience.

By Mr. Ryan: I might supplement that further by saying that I had advised the local treasury people and the regional counsel offices, district counsel office
6 here of Mr. O'Brien's statement yesterday that he would desire them personally for the purpose of giving testimony, but, of course, yesterday was a holiday and I understood at least, the last word I had from the Treasury last night, the people in Chicago, that they had not reached either of those two individuals yesterday, so that it may well be they haven't learned until this morning that counsel did desire their presence in fact.

By the Court: Were they personally served?

By Mr. Ryan: They were personally served, but in my conversation with Mr. O'Brien before I had received information from the Treasury as to what their attitude would be on the production of these records, I queried him on alternatives, and one of them was that if they were willing to tender the records for the Court's examination, would he require the personal appearance, would he insist, take the position of the personal appearance of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner was required. At that time Mr. O'Brien indicated to me that he thought not. He was interested in the documents.

7 By the Court: I am only allotted two days for this hearing. I do not see how we will get the officials from the Treasury Department in that time, if the situation is as Mr. Ryan discloses.

By Mr. Ryan: I might say something further. I don't know to what extent counsel would care to make an offer of proof that he expects from them, but I understand that he expects to interrogate, by what he told me yesterday, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue respecting their views on the interpretation of the statements made publicly on the disclosure document.

At that time I indicated to him, thinking offhand, that I would object to the materiality of any views that they held since it seems to me the only thing that is material was the public pronouncements that came to the defendants that they could have acted upon.

By the Court: What have you to say, counsel, about the belated statement on your part that you wanted these officials here according to Mr. Ryan?

8 By Mr. O'Brien: Not a belated situation, if the Court please. I will say it this way: I subpoenaed the officials properly, personal service to their people delegated for that service. I have no desire, I want the record to show, to inconvenience or discommode them. I felt under the authorities and under the regulations all discretion is withdrawn from subordinates and consequently unless I was to be met and the Court was to be met with the respectful declination to answer which would have to be from a subordinate, I would have to subpoena those who are vested with the discretion, with the authority, since the Secretary is superior to the Commissioner, and since his discretion on any matter which might call for discretion would prevail I found it necessary to subpoena both.

It is true that Mr. Ryan called me the day before yesterday and actually tried to narrow the thing and at that moment and on that call I said that if the papers mentioned in the court's order were tendered according to that order that I, of course, had no interest in who it was who produced them. I thought about it beyond 9 that and I didn't understand that I was committing myself to any agreement that was in any sense irrevocable.

Yesterday morning, which was a holiday, a Federal holiday, too, I got through to Mr. Ryan and told him there were averments of my motion which I might require and would require oral testimony to support it, which could come only from the same gentlemen.

When Mr. Ryan had inquired whether that had to do with the authenticity of the published policy or statements, and we digressed on that subject a moment, and concluded that in so far as those items were concerned, that we would put in the full context of the published policies as contained in this report of the hearings before the Subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, considered in the proceedings of last January.

I then suggested that the same report contains testimony of the various people, particularly Mr. Dunlap, and that I had no desire to have the folks here if the pronouncements on this might be—the whole book—could go in, or those published statements plus that part 10 of the testimony before the Committee which has to do with the disclosure principle problem.

At first, Mr. Ryan thought that that would be agreeable and so told me, and then he said it occurred to him he could not cross-examine a book. I didn't think to say so, but I later realized that that is true of any document which goes in evidence and that in this case those who made the pronouncements are available to him so that his case does not rest or depend upon cross-examination of the book. If he wanted the people to explain, he could bring them.

On independent grounds, however, I have no doubt but that the book is admissible; and however all of that may be I now say that if it is agreed that not only the public statements but the statements of these folks concerning the disclosure phase of the question may be received in evidence here, I do not need those men.

Now, one thing further. Since it was Mr. Dunlap who appears to have testified at length on that subject 11 I thought that he alone—I first thought in talking to Mr. Ryan—that he alone would suffice. Then Mr. Ryan asserted that he was not the Commissioner back in 1948, when these things occurred. I then said if the point was to be made of that, I suppose I would have to have Mr. Snyder, since he was the Secretary. Afterwards, again, not in conversation, I noted from a quick perusal that Mr. Dunlap for many years has been in the field and in the Bureau and that while all the time he has not been Commissioner, nevertheless he has been in a position to have experience and qualification and he so testified, so that I now say again if those parts may go in, I have no desire to have those witnesses.

I do, of course, want the documents which I understand Mr. Wright is to tender under the Court's order to the Court.

Now, one thing more of the conversation with Mr. Ryan. I did say yesterday morning, too, that I could see, I didn't know whether your Honor would allocate two days or two and a half days, we told you it would probably be about a day and a half, that is my recollection, or at least flow over to the next morning. I said that if it was in any way inconvenient to these gentlemen, these momentary suggestions or expressions of mine, that that would inconvenience them, as far as I am concerned, it is perfectly agreeable to have them come tomorrow morning, and Mr. Ryan said that in that event they could go on out of order. That is, we could interrupt whatever was on at that time to go into it.

Now, I don't have any extensive examination.

By Mr. Ryan: My feeling is this, your Honor: at the time counsel made the suggestion to me, and I am still of this opinion, what views the Secretary of the Treasury or the Commissioner may have held which were their own which they later expressed long after this alleged disclosure in 1952 before some Congressional Committee and which, therefore, could not have possibly been communicated to the defendants and upon which they could not have possibly acted would have no materiality here.

The only thing that is important is not even what Mr. Wenchel may consider as being the proper construction of what he said in his statement, but what a court would say, a reasonable person is entitled to take out of it, and upon which they might act and not what reservations, he had or what opinions he or anyone else might later express with respect to the nature of the doctrine or what it meant.

When Mr. O'Brien suggested to me, then, that these views were incorporated in the report of this hearing, I said to him that—after some consideration that I didn't know what they had said. I didn't know whether the construction they had placed upon these things would be the construction that I would urge upon the Court as a fair construction of the language, and accordingly I wasn't prepared to say at that time to say to him that I will accept, assuming the Court rules it material, their opinion, but I will accept the things they said without exploring the situation further. I have not read this. I have read the statements that were published, but I have not read all of the testimony that was given by these individuals.

If, after reading it, and finding out what counsel wants to put in, and if the Court has ruled it material, there may be no reason why I would want to cross-examine anybody about it. I don't know that yet. I will be happy to make an effort at the noon recess.

By the Court: Let's proceed now and Mr. Ryan can look over the document further at the noon recess and we can take up the matter further.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I could add one sentence, Judge, I don't wish to delay the proceeding, but to try to move expeditiously. I want to make my position clear in a couple of sentences on that phase of the disclosure thing.

I whole heartedly agree with Mr. Ryan if this is his concept that the published statements, those which went to the public and on which any member who comes forward relies, should be the test before the court dependent upon the facts produced. With that I agree, but there has been a suggestion not upheld by the Court of Appeals but nevertheless of a principle by Judge Wyzanski in Massachusetts, and in connection with a pre-indictment motion where they didn't want to project the procedure beyond the point to which it already arrived on motions to suppress, that unless on such a motion, pre-indictment motion, there is some proof adduced that would give the connotation of a misrepresentation or non-disclosure amounting to a misrepresentation on the part of the Treasury or its officials at the time that the first contact is made, that then what has there been in the nature of the rules or device in the matter? It is just sort of a broken contract according to Judge Wyzanski.

Now, I know from the books and these reports and many prior items, statements, and from the sharp difference of opinion of construction which exists between those officials leading ultimately to an abandonment in 1951, not a retroactive abandonment, but the abandonment of the policy, I know that the reservations they had, the conditions they imposed, the way they construe, has been so shaken up and confused that for them to have that fact in mind, and not to cure it by way of a public announcement of that situation amounts to 16 the very thing that I am talking about. In short, I don't want any people here, that policy or these things in the record just to clutter the record or to prolong this hearing, but it is with that issue that I am concerned.

By the Court: We will proceed.

By Mr. Ryan: If the Court please, with respect to Mr. Wright, do I understand he will have to remain until you will put in your evidence and you will call him?

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Wright, will you step up, sir? I think Mr. Wright will tender the documents or do whatever he is going to do. I would like to get him free. I don't think that I would interrogate him on that part of the subpoena. We are here now, Judge, to a point where we moved, as I see it, to the subject of the production of the documents to the Court. Mr. Wright has been subpoenaed.

By Mr. Wright: In accordance with the provisions of this subpoena that was served on me, I have produced all of the records that are in my office bearing on 17 this case and they are now in custody of the Court with the United States Attorney.

By the Court: Will you further identify yourself?

By Mr. Wright: My name is Ernest C. Wright, District Commissioner, Chicago District.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is the boss.

By Mr. Wright: The documents are in the Court, sir.

By the Court: Very good.

By Mr. Ryan: I only have this to say with respect to them: some of them have only been turned over this morning. I myself haven't seen some of them and after your Honor makes a determination there may be some he is inclined to turn over that I would like to be heard on the question of whether the Government has any interest—

By the Court: You have no objection if you examined them?

By Mr. Ryan: I have, sure. There are some that are not evidentiary and I would have to object to them.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I interrupt just a second?

18 Mr. Wright's statement to the Court said he had in the courtroom the documents that were in his office and I am not sure, I know he means those that have come to him, but the record doesn't show it. I assume he means all of the documents that are in the Treasury Department, within the scope of your Honor's order.

By Mr. Wright: That is right, Bureau of Internal Revenue officials over which I have jurisdiction.

By Mr. O'Brien: As far as I am concerned, you may leave.

By Mr. Wright: Thank you. Thank you, your Honor.

By Mr. Ryan: If your Honor please, unless there is further preliminary business, I should like to be heard briefly on the question of whether there should be any hearings, whether this motion is legally sufficient to entitle defendants to the relief which they seek. My observations are brief. I indicated to counsel the last time, in a general way, what they were, and I indicated to him yesterday more specifically what my objec-

19 tions were. I think I can state them quite briefly.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Ryan: If the Court please, this motion to suppress certain evidence in this case is made upon the theory that because the officials of the Treasury Department made certain public pronouncements known as the voluntary disclosure doctrine and because the defendants acted upon them, and further because they were given certain alleged assurances by the then Assistant Collector of Internal Revenue in this District, and because this prosecution is now brought that their rights under the Fifth Amendment would be infringed upon if such documents or information as they turned over to the Government pursuant to this alleged disclosure were used against them in the trial of this case, therefore, the basis of their motion is the voluntary disclosure doctrine itself.

Now, my first point with respect to that doctrine is that the doctrine contemplates a disclosure of a tax evasion in return for which the Government promised immunity from prosecution. I refer to the statements of what the policy is which is embodied in the affidavit 20 of Mr. Leon Busby which is attached to the defendants' motion to suppress.

As set forth in that affidavit, it reads as follows:

"May 28, 1945—Former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau stated at a press conference that some taxpayers who have failed to declare their full income and pay the tax due may escape criminal prosecution through voluntary disclosure of the deficiency only in cases where said voluntary disclosure is made before investigation is started.

"August 21, 1945—Former Secretary of the Treasury Vinson, as guest contributor to Drew Pearson's column wrote: 'No honest American needs fear this drive against tax evaders. No one is going to jail for an honest mistake in filling out his tax return. Treasury policy even permits the wilful evader to escape prosecution if he repents in time. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue does not recommend 21 criminal prosecution in the case of any taxpayer who makes a voluntary disclosure of omission or other misstatement in his tax return or of failure to make a tax return. Monetary penalties may be imposed for delinquency, for negligence and for fraud, but the man who makes a disclosure before an investigation is under way protects himself and his family from the stigma of a felony conviction. And there is nothing complicated about going to a collector or other revenue officers and simply saying, 'There is something wrong with my return and I want to straighten it out.'"

Then it further says:

"October 15, 1945—the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue released the following statement to the press: The Commissioner said that since June 1 some 30,000 delinquent amended returns had been filed voluntarily, accounting for additional taxes of more than $50,000,000. Mr. Nunan again stressed the Bureau policy of restraining from instituting 22 criminal proceedings against taxpayers who come forward voluntarily and pay up delinquencies plus interest and civil penalties before the Bureau has begun investigating their cases."

I don't think that is particularly important to my position.

Going to the Wenchel statement of May 14, 1947, which was approximately a little over one year prior to the time—a little less than one year prior to the time they allege they made their disclosure, there was a published statement as follows:

"The law requires the prosecution of the tax evader, and that is what the Department recommends to the Attorney General. There is one important exception to that. The Department has broad, discretionary power long recognized by Congress to determine the policy and procedure for the effective enforcement of the Internal Revenue laws.

"The Department acting under that power does not recommend prosecution of the evader who re-23 pents in time. There is nothing new in the position that the taxpayer who makes a voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion before investigation has been initiated criminal prosecution will not be recommended.

"The Department has always encouraged voluntary disclosures, and what is a voluntary disclosure? A voluntary disclosure occurs when a taxpayer of his own free will and accord, and before any investigation is initiated, discloses fraud upon the Government.

"Healthy administration of the Internal Revenue laws long ago dictated that policy and I believe its worth is obvious.

"The making of a voluntary disclosure is a simple thing. The taxpayer or his legal agent can go before any official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue or any of its field offices, whether it is a collector, a deputy collector, special agent or any other re-
24 sponsible treasury officer. There is no special form for the disclosure. The simple statement 'that I have made a false tax return and I want to make the government whole' would constitute a complete disclosure. Of course, it is better usually to present an amended return or other written document as evidence of the disclosure. If possible, the disclosure should be accompanied by payment of the tax which is known to be due, but this is not a prerequisite."

Your Honor, my position is that the doctrine contemplated that if a person came in and said, "I have evaded my taxes, I have cheated the government, made a fraud on the government," and made that disclosure timely, he would not be prosecuted. He could have been because what he has just said in effect amounts to a confession, but he will not be since timely he has come in. He came in voluntarily and made the disclosure for the purpose of paying the taxes.

Now, therefore, the voluntary disclosure doctrine contemplated by the former policy was a disclosure of 25 an attempt to defeat and evade taxes. The policy involved a forbearance to prosecute. Prosecution wouldn't be feasible for any conduct not amounting to wilful evasion. If a given disclosure doesn't involve an admission of evasion of taxes, and certainly if it involves, rather, a negativing of evasion, then clearly the alleged disclosure is not only a disclosure, but represents a further fraud if subsequent prosecution demonstrates that there was guilt and that there was guilt of tax evasion.

Now, to contend that the Government offers immunity to a person who will come forward and confess his lack of criminality is to argue or to reduce the doctrine of a voluntary disclosure doctrine to the level of the inane. If it means anything at all, and it has that application, it suggests that perhaps if the innocent do not confess, the Government may prosecute them.

Now, if this alleged disclosure here was a truthful disclosure then these defendants have nothing to fear from the evidence which they gave in the course 26 of the disclosure. Only if it was not a truthful disclosure do they have anything to fear because there is nothing in any of the motions or pleadings or affidavits to indicate that at any time the defendants disclosed that they owed any taxes. As amended, the motion simply alleges they had certain additional gross receipts that were unrecorded and certain additional disbursements that were unrecorded that were deductible, as they contend, and they washed each other out, and they owed no taxes as the result of the transaction.

Now, further, Mr. Busby in his affidavit, or Mr. Cain in his affidavit, in support of the motion to dismiss the indictment in this case stated under oath as follows:

"Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corpration owed no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95, which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98, which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of the said
27 agents aforesaid were of such embarrassment in the conduct of the business of the corporate defendant and so disruptive to the relations of the corporate defendant with its customers and suppliers that affiant at all times during the said period of four years importuned the said agents to bring the matter to a conclusion, and at all such times expressed the willingness of the corporation to pay such reasonable amount as the said agents might claim to be due."

There is a statement from Mr. Cain that there isn't any tax liability in this case and this affidavit was made this spring, in June or May, or whenever the motion to dismiss was made, and subsequent to the alleged disclosure, and there he says that he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that they don't owe any taxes.

Now, that can't be said to be a disclosure under the doctrine which they have set forth in their motion. Certainly, the Government doesn't contemplate that someone comes in and tells them they don't owe any 28 taxes but there is some omission of offsetting items the Government doesn't contemplate they are going to prosecute them, of course, and there isn't any need for the application of the voluntary disclosure doctrine to that because there isn't any fraud.

Now, however, if someone comes in and makes that statement and subsequently a grand jury charges that there is an attempt to defeat and evade taxes by a certain amount, then depending upon whether there is a verdict of guilty or a finding of guilty by the Court or acquittal, then only will it be determined whether that disclosure in which they profess they owed no taxes is a truthful disclosure or represented a further attempt to mislead and defraud the government.

Now, can it be said that the Government puts a premium or offers a reward for the privilege of being deceived?

Now, the indictment in this case alleges tax evasion. If the defendants owed no taxes, if they are not guilty of tax evasion and at all times operated under the 29 belief they owed no taxes they could possibly not be guilty of tax evasion. To the extent they ever would be guilty of tax evasion perforce that disclosure was false, it couldn't help but be false.

Now, it is contemplated—I would like to make brief reference to the authorities— by the courts that, of course, a disclosure that is made will be full and free and honest; that the taxpayer would not attempt to deceive the government and that he will disclose everything that he knows about his tax liability.

Now, in the case of Centracchio vs. Garrity, in 198 Fed. (2d) 382, decided by the First Circuit United States Court of Appeals for the First District in July 25, 1952, there the contentions made by the taxpayer were quite parallel to those made here, save that the motion to suppress was brought after the case had apparently been referred to the United States Attorney for prosecution, but before he had presented it to the grand jury. They filed a motion to suppress the evidence and to restrain the United States Attorney from presenting the evidence to the grand jury.

30 The court decided the case on the ground that it would not be good policy to restrain the United States Attorney from making the presentations to the grand jury and necessarily therefore didn't decide anything about whether there was any merit to the motion to suppress, but the Court did consider and expressed itself somewhat freely on that question.

The court at page 389 of the opinion, in concluding, said:

> "If it be assumed for the moment that evidence disclosed to the Treasury officials on the faith of the announced voluntary disclosure policy and in compliance with its conditions should be excluded from evidence"— the court was not conceding that—> —"in a subsequent criminal trial it would seem that the taxpayer would have to satisfy the court that he had made a voluntary good faith disclosure of all data necessary to a corrected computation of his income tax deficiencies and that he made such 31 disclosure before investigation was under way."

Now, the contention here was the same, that the use of this evidence would violate the defendants' rights under the Fifth Amendment inasmuch as he went to the agency he told them he was making a disclosure and turned over his documents or gave them testimony or admissions or something of the sort but there, although the court was disposing of it on a different ground, the court said that assuming that on that ground, he could get the evidence suppressed he would have to show that he made a good faith disclosure.

Now, of course, the duty to make a disclosure doesn't cease with the first statement that is made. Here counsel have picked out one of the statements, the term omissions and misstatements from, I believe it was Secretary Vinson's pronouncement. If the taxpayer comes in and says he made omissions and misstatements.

Well, an omission of $50,000 income from your tax return might very well—an omission of that income—might very well make you a tax evader or a misstatement by claiming that you incurred expenses of $100,00 more than you did and deducted them, might also very well 32 make you a tax evader, and counsel for defendants employed those two terms throughout their pleadings rather than to say there was any statement of evasion.

Reading their full context and considering them there cannot be any other construction of the document than that it contemplates a disclosure of tax evasion. It contemplates a situation wherein a man might be prosecuted, not a situation in which he is innocent when the government says under those circumstances if you disclose we will not prosecute you. Here there is no disclosure. There is no disclosure within the meaning of this voluntary disclosure doctrine. There is no disclosure of tax evasion. In fact, there is a complete denial and negativing of any tax evasion.

Now, if that be true, then these people would be given a trial. If it is not true, and they are convicted, the evidence here would be properly against them since their alleged disclosure will have been a further deception to the government. In other words, the case here inwhich were unrecorded, number 1; and, 2, whether the portion of the disclosure that alleged that they had maintained was in fact true, that they did make such payments.

Now, there is no question here involved of a technical question of whether or not such payments are deductible. That is up in the court to be decided now. If they actually made those payments into the black market and if they are not deductible, the Supreme Court holds they are not deductible, certainly nobody can be held responsible for making a mistake concerning that. It is just simply a technical adjustment and they would have to pay their tax. There would be no question of fraud involved in the situation.

Now, I think it is clear, and I do not want to burden the court, but I think it is established that a motion to suppress doesn't necessarily have to be heard prior to trial. The cases are legion where the court has deferred the hearing or a determination of that until the trial.

34 Accordingly, the purpose of filing the motion in advance is to put the court on notice that such a contention will be made in order that he may hear it now if he sees fit and not interrupt the trial into what may be a collateral matter.

In this case not to say there need not be any hearing, but to the extent there need be and when all the evidence is in and the court permits it to go to a jury, that will amount to a determination by the court that there is no bonafide voluntary disclosure as far as his burden is concerned. If the jury finds the defendants guilty, obviously they either did not state fully what their gross receipts were that were unrecorded, or they did not state truthfully that they had made payments to certain people.

Certainly, it would be proper for the government to prove that alleged disclosure was false in that they did not make such payments. It would be proper for the government to prove that the alleged disclosure was false in that it disclosed only a portion of the gross 35 receipts that were unrecorded.

It would be proper for the government to prove that the disclosure was false to the extent that the defendants protested that they owed no taxes, that they never consciously evaded any taxes. It would be proper on this motion. But to do that would involve a trial of the general issue in this case. The question of whether there was a wilful attempt to defeat and evade is the same as trying a tax case. There would be no difference. There is nothing in the law that requires two trials of this case, but if that kind of evidence were offered by the government on this motion to suppress, certainly I assume the court would receive it if there was the contention that the disclosure instead of being a case where the Government had misrepresented and deceived the defendants, a case where the defendants had misled and deceived the government agents.

Now, I make this argument on the face of the pleadings. I don't intend by it to admit other than arguendo that any such assurances were given by the defendants.

My information is to the contrary as are alleged by 36 the defendants, but I am assuming arguendo that even had they been, certainly at that time he wouldn't have any reason to feel that there ought to be a prosecution when a taxpayer comes in and says, "I had additional receipts and I had additional deductions and they washed each other out." It would be simply a civil matter, a question where the deductions were allowable or not. No question of fraud. Of course not.

On any date a man may walk into a treasury official and he may say, "I have received certain income, but I have had certain deductions I didn't claim."

How anybody could say the disclosure was sufficient, I don't know, since obviously he could only be taking what they said to him. If it subsequently turned out it wasn't true, it couldn't be contended there was a disclosure there. So I say that what is contemplated by the doctrine is a disclosure of tax evasion.

The determination with respect to what that disclosure was must abide by the verdict of the jury in this case. If they are found guilty it means there was no honest disclosure. If they are found not guilty, it 37 means the evidence was certainly entitled to admission.

I think that that represents my position, your Honor, and for those reasons, in the interest of economy, and in the interest of not wasting time to try out an issue that is immaterial at this point, I suggest and request that the court overrule and deny and dismiss the motion to suppress on the grounds that it does not state facts entitling the defendant to the relief prayed, but the issue as to whether or not there was any voluntary disclosure in this case must abide the final determination of the court. There was no statement or admission of tax evasion. It represents an attempt to hold with the hounds and to run with the hare, and for that reason I suggest that the request for the motion be overruled, denied and dismissed.

By the Court: Well, I will hear the evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may suggest, if your Honor please, we would like to take time for the court to look at these documents which are here to make its determination—

By the Court: You can go forward with your 38 proof.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, if the Court please, although we were denied, for reasons assigned by the court, which I think sound, the right to see them in advance of trial, I believe that at this time we should—we are entitled to have the Court make its determination and to be put in possession of those if any that we are to have so that I may determine the order and method of my proof with those available.

39 By the Court: Well, I take that you have other proof and are going to call witnesses in addition to any documentary proof that the records of the government may furnish, and I see no reason why you should not go forward with your proof, and this noon hour I will look over those documents and consider whether or not they should be made available to you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well, Judge.

In that event, may we have a recess of five minutes?

By the Court: Surely.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken after which the following proceedings ensued, to-wit:—)

By the Court: Proceed, Gentlemen.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Busby, please.

40 LEON J. BUSBY, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Busby?
A. Leon J. Busby.
Q. And your profession?
A. Certified Public Accountant.
Q. For how long have you been in that profession?
A. About thirty years.
Q. What is your firm name?
A. Busby and Oury.
Q. And your offices are here in Chicago?
A. 120 South LaSalle, Chicago, Illinois.
Q. When you say Certified Public Accountant, you mean you are such under the laws of the State of Illinois?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did you or your firm do the accounting work, the outside accounting work of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
41 A. Yes, sir.
Q. For how long was that true?
A. Since about 1942.
Q. That was continuously since 1942?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you state briefly the nature of the service, of that accounting service, over the period you mentioned?
A. We did general auditing work for the purpose of certifying financial statements used in credit channels. We prepared income tax returns. We installed efficiency systems, and other special claims and documents in connection with wage stabilization and salary stabilization, and so forth. General Accounting nature.
Q. During your work for the firm, did you ever hear of David G. Lubben?
A. Yes.
Q. Or his companies, Eatsum Food Products Company, General Confections Company and Reserve Trading Company?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have occasion to make a trip to New York to investigate the financial position of General Confections Company in the year 1948?

42 A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when it was that you went?

A. The middle of January. I would say between the 7th and the 11th of January.

Q. Did you check your records at my request to verify that?

A. Yes, to the best I could do.

Q. At whose direction or request did you go?

A. Mr. Byron Cain, President of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did he say the purpose for which he wanted that determination made?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did he say about that?

A. He said Mr. Lubben desired to make a $50,000 loan from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the General Confections Company, and he desired that I accompany one of the Shotwell officers, Mr. Stanley Graflund, to Mr. Lubben's plant, the General Confections Company Plant, and determine whether they were financially secure in a manner that would justify this loan.

Q. And was it from January 7th to January 11th that you went and spent the time to that end?

43 A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a check of the financial position, condition of the company?

A. Yes, we made a cursory survey, financial check.

Q. And did you or did you not conclude that the company's financial position justified such a loan?

A. We determined that it did not justify such a loan.

Q. Did you, sir, report to Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. To anyone else?

A. Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, the officers of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in general.

Q. At the time that you left or departed for that examination, did you know anything about overceiling or premium, so-called premium receipts or payments that Shotwell Manufacturing Company had received or made?

A. No, I did not know of any of them.

Q. Did you actively, were you active in the auditing work done for the corporation during the—

A. I supervised it.

Q. During the period you mentioned.

44 And during the course of that work, and of that supervision, had you or had you not become familiar with the situation that I have mentioned as to such payments prior to this visit?

A. I had not.

Q. Sir?

A. I had not.

Q. Did you then become familiar with the fact?

A. During this trip I was appraised of it.

Q. Who first appraised you of that condition?

A. Mr. Stanley Graflund.

By the Court: I didn't get the name?

By the Witness: Stanley Graflund.

By Mr. O'Brien: G-r-a-f-l-u-n-d?

By the Witness: Correct.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did you do, if anything, on your return to Chicago on January 11th?

A. I called Mr. Cain and made an appointment to report our findings and that is what I did immediately.

Q. Did you make and keep such appointment?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

45 A. Sunday, January 11th.

Q. Where?

A. At his home.

Q. Who else, if anybody, was present?

A. I believe Mr. Harold E. Sullivan was there.

Q. What, if anything, did you say about the advisability of making such a loan?

A. I told them that the corporation's housekeeping was poor, that the $50,000 loan wasn't nearly enough to do any good for them. Further, that the organization of the company was such that it didn't justify loaning them any money and that they should not make it.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to them concerning the premium payment situation of which Graflund had apprised you?

A. Well, that was one of the elements in determining whether or not the company was financially sound. I told them that Mr. Graflund had reported to me that the corporation had a contingent, if not a real liability for additional taxes and I discussed with Mr. Graflund the nature of this contingent or real liability, and he told me that it was the collection of overceiling prices for candy sold, and this particular conversation ran directly toward General Confections, but it followed 46 that the Shotwell Manufacturing Company was a part of the deal, and he told me that he didn't know how much it was.

By the Court: Who told you?

By the Witness: Mr. Graflund. He didn't know how much the overceilings were, and also that he thought the money had been paid out by Shotwell.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. If I may interrupt, Mr. Busby, I don't think you made it clear. Who was Mr. Graflund?

A. Mr. Graflund was the Comptroller, I believe, and Vice President of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company at that time.

Q. I am referring to your conversation on January 11th with Messrs. Sullivan and Cain. What, if anything, did you say to them about the premium payment situation which Mr. Graflund had told you about?

A. Well, this is what I was telling them.

Q. I am sorry.

A. And I told them that I had learned about this overceiling matter and while it may not be that Shotwell was in serious position, they should file amended 47 returns to get the matter on record, and we discussed it for a while.

Q. Well, I just wanted to know what was said about the premium payments. Have you finished or stated your recollection of what was said on that?

A. Yes. Well, the crux of it was that I recommended very earnestly that they file amended returns to get on record.

Q. Did you ask them if there had been overceiling payments?

A. Oh, yes, they readily admitted it.

Q. Now, what, if anything, was then discussed between you and those officers of the corporation concerning the disclosure of that situation to the Bureau?

A. Well, they wanted to know, they—

Q. What is it that you talked about?

A. These people, Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, in particular, wanted to know the procedure and whether or not it would be in order to discuss it with the Department, and I told them that I thought it would, then even if they made the disclosure which was in my opinion the thing to do and customary, there probably would be nothing to it except they would clear The Shotwell 48 of omissions from the tax returns.

Q. Did you at that time or during your subsequent conversations with them call their attention to any of the public statements of that policy?

A. Well, only to direct their attention that it was a common thing to make disclosures to the Department and in so doing I didn't see that there was any serious consequences, that there wouldn't be any critical attitude by the Department towards them.

Q. Have you fully stated what you said about that as near as you can remember?

A. Well, in essence, yes. We discussed it for quite some time with respect to immunity and how we should go and who to talk to.

By Mr. Ryan: I object to that and move it be stricken out unless he can relate conversations. As a matter of fact, there is some question of materiality.

By the Court: Sustained.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Busby, if I may suggest, you must tell what the conversations were. You are not permitted to characterize them.
49 First, let me ask you, over how long a period of time did you discuss the subject of coming forward or making that disclosure?

A. Well, we started on this one day, Sunday, and I would say we discussed it for a couple of weeks off and on.

Q. And in that discussion did you and they consider who might be selected to do that?

A. Well, at the moment the thought was that the Collector's Office was—

By Mr. Ryan: Object.

By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Who was to communicate with the proper office, whatever it was?

A. They gave me the assignment to communicate with the Department.

Q. That I know, but my question is who, not who, but was there any discussion before you got the assignment as to who might go in?

By Mr. Ryan: I will object on the ground it isn't material who would go in. What happened is demonstrable.

By the Court: He may state the conversation in that regard.

50 By the Witness:

A. Well, I was selected to go in, if that is the answer.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Busby, if you will just listen to my questions. You have already said that. Did you discuss the question as to whether a lawyer should go in?

A. Yes, the representation was discussed.

Q. I am trying to get, and the Court is interested in having the conversation.

Now, what, if any, lawyers were discussed as people who might go in?

A. We discussed Mr. Dan Taylor, George Bowden, William Quely—

By Mr. Ryan: I think I will object to what lawyers were discussed. If there is a conversation and it is material if he relates it, I think it may be admissible, but not just characterize a discussion.

By the Court: Yes, I assume if you want to go into that, you will have to have him relate the conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was said about it?

51 A. We were discussing, who to get for a representative of the corporation and whether or not the corporation needed legal counsel. A part of this discussion, of course, included these names.

Q. And it was concluded that you would go in?

A. At the moment it was concluded that I would go in and explore the situation.

Q. What, if anything, was said about the time of going in commencing with your conversations of January 11th?

A. After a week or ten days it was decided I would go in immediately and find out what the procedure would be.

Q. What, if anything, did you do about that?

A. I went over to the Collector's Office and talked to the Chief Deputy Collector, Mr. Earnest Sauber. I had a little acquaintance with him from other tax matters and asked him whether or not it would be proper to file amended returns for a tax client that I had that needed—

By Mr. Ryan: I will object unless he can state the conversation that he had with Mr. Sauber. What he said, what Mr. Sauber said, but no characterization.

52 By the Witness: This is a conversation, sir.

By the Court: Tell what you said and relate what Mr. Sauber said in return, if anything.

By the Witness:

A. I asked him if it would be proper to file amended returns. He said in his judgment he would not do so, and that at that time I don't believe—at that time the name of the taxpayer was not disclosed. We discussed the question of disclosure and whether or not there would be—

By Mr. Ryan: I will object to the characterization —"we discussed the question of disclosure."

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Busby, you have to tell what you said and what he said.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When you went in to see Mr. Sauber, what did you say to him?

A. I said, "I have a client that want to clean up some omissions from his tax return."

Q. Did you tell him the nature of the omissions?

A. Yes, I discussed the nature of the omissions.

Q. Now, don't say you discussed it. Tell what you said.

A. I told him the omissions.

53 Q. You must say what you said and what he said. What did you say?

A. I told him that the client had had some black market transactions with one of its customers and that they had shipped candy to this customer who had in turn sold the candy to his customers at prices over the ceiling; had collected for this candy in cash and had remitted a part of this cash to The Shotwell Company; that Shotwell had paid this money out to sources for raw materials and as such the transactions to a large extent washed each other. However, we wanted to go into the matter and have the agent come out and examine the situation and see what the real condition was and if there was any net amount due to the Government, we wanted to pay it.

Q. Was the mention of Shotwell and of the other companies made in your first visit you made to Sauber?

A. No, it was not.

Q. When you say Shotwell, are you referring to a subsequent visit?

A. Yes.

Q. Is your conversation on the occasion of the 54 first visit as you stated it correct with the exception of your naming of the parties?

A. That is correct.

Q. What, if anything, was said on that occasion between you and Mr. Sauber relative to the disclosure policy and the immunity of your client if it came forward?

A. Mr. Sauber advised me that if the disclosure is timely and the facts that I had related to him were correct, he saw no reason why the immunity policy of the Bureau should not be applied in this particular matter.

Q. Immunity from criminal prosecution?

A. From criminal prosecution.

Q. What, if anything, was said at that time about the mode of determining the amount as to whether you were to file amended returns or the Government would make an inspection, was anything said at that time?

A. Not at the first trip.

Q. Have you covered what you recall of your first visit?

A. Yes.

Q. Following that, did you report to the individual defendants here?

55 A. Yes.

Q. What did you say to them?

By Mr. Ryan: I will object unless it is established who he is talking to and who was present.

By Mr. O'Brien: I thought I covered that—the individual defendants.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't know whether they were all there.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were the individual defendants, Cain, Huebner and Sullivan present?

A. They were all present.

Q. How long following your talk with Mr. Sauber was it before you reported to them?

A. The next day.

Q. What did you tell them?

A. I told them that Mr. Sauber had recommended that one of the officers come forward and disclose the identity of the taxpayer and that if this were done, they should proceed to determine as nearly as possible how much was involved, and he saw no reason why there should be any trouble with respect to criminal prosecution in case of timely disclosure.

56 By Mr. Ryan: I didn't get that—cases, what?

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) In case the officers of the company came in in time and it was a timely disclosure.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. May I ask, Mr. Busby, did he say that the name of the company was to be disclosed, is that it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did he say that that had to be done by an officer of the company?

A. No, or a representative.

Q. You see, I want to keep the record straight now. Were you correct or incorrect when you said that he said that an officer would have to come in and give the name of the company? Did Sauber ever say that?

A. No—an officer or the company's representative.

Q. Did you tell them what Sauber had said about there being no need for amended returns?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they tell you, these officers?

A. They told me—

Q. Did they finally tell you to go back?

57 A. Yes, they told me to go back and disclose the name of the taxpayer.

Q. Let me interrupt. Was that conversation at a later date?

A. I don't recall. It was all within a very few days there.

Q. After you had first been in?

A. Yes, it was a very short time.

Q. Did they authorize you to disclose the name of the company?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And to do whatever was necessary for a full disclosure?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go back?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you see?

By Mr. Ryan: I will object to the statement "whatever was necessary for a full disclosure" unless he relates the conversation and tells who says that.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: If it was said.

58 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Who said it, Mr. Busby?

A. Said what?

Q. Who said that you were to go back and you were authorized?

A. Mr. Byron Cain.

Q. The President of the Company?

A. President of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Ryan: Can we have what was said by him? What did he say?

By the Witness: He said, "Busby, you go in and talk to the Collector's Office and disclose the whole affairs, whole details as I have outlined it to you and get their instructions in a little more specifically as to how we should proceed."

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you go back?

A. Yes.

Q. Within the days that you mentioned?

A. Within two or three days. Maybe the next day. I can't recall exactly.

Q. Did you go to the same place?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that here in this building?

59 A. Yes.

Q. And you talked to Mr. Sauber?

A. That is correct.

Q. Were you accompanied or were you alone?

A. I believe on the first appointment I was alone.

Q. By the first appointment, do you mean the one following?

A. The second appointment.

Q. Sir?

A. The second appointment.

Q. Now, what did you then say to Mr. Sauber and what did he say to you?

A. I asked him if we should file amended returns. He said—he asked me if I knew how much was involved, and I told him no, and further we had no specific records from which we could determine. He suggested that we go back and gather such information as we could from any memorandum or memory and summarize it on a form, and in the meanwhile he would contact the office of the agent in charge and have an auditor come out and work with us for the purpose of substantiating or getting together the true facts as nearly as could be accomplished.

Q. Did he at that time in your presence communi-

60 cate with the agent?

A. No.

Q. He said he would do that?

A. Yes.

Q. And he said that the agent would send, the agent in charge, was that Mr. Wright's office?

A. That is Mr. Wright's office.

Q. The same Mr. Wright who was here this morning?

A. That is correct.

Q. That he would send his agent out to—I have forgotten your words.

A. To verify the summarization that we could get together, that we did get together, or to work with us in compiling the summary.

Q. Did he say anything about the agents inspecting the books and the records to arrive at the amount?

A. Oh, yes. The agent was to cover an examination of the books which would include just about a routine audit, verification of the tax returns; that he would examine the books and any other data that we had to submit to him.

Q. Have you related as much of your conversation on the second visit that you remember?

A. Yes, I think I have. We had several visits. I don't recall.

61 Q. May I ask you then, did you at that time tell Mr. Sauber—

By Mr. Ryan: He may direct his attention to subjects but not lead him by saying did he tell him such and such.

By the Court: Yes, sustained.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What, if anything, was then said about the identity of the taxpayers?

A. Well, I identified the taxpayer.

Q. You didn't tell us that, so I have to ask you. What did you tell him?

A. I told him it was The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Chicago?

A. Chicago, Illinois.

Q. Did you also tell him the names—

By Mr. Ryan: Object.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What, if anything, was said about the names of the officers?

A. Yes, the names of the officers were discussed—Mr. Byron Cain, the President, Mr. Harold Sullivan, Executive Vice-President, Frank Huebner, Vice President. I discussed Mr. Graflund.

62 Q. Now, did you again see Mr. Sauber?

A. Yes.

Q. About the same subject matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On this next occasion were you alone or were you in company?

A. I was accompanied.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Cain, President of Shotwell.

Q. When was that?

A. I can't recall exactly. I would say some time in February, around the first of February; maybe the latter part of January.

Q. Are you speaking now of your third visit, your visit with Mr. Cain?

A. I can't say which one it was. There were several of them.

Q. I am asking you about the one at which Mr. Cain was first present?

A. I would call that the third visit, yes.

Q. Let me ask you this: Did Mr. Cain accompany you more than once?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the first time as near as you can 63 place it?

A. That is what I was guessing.

Q. I don't want a guess.

A. The latter part of January or February.

Q. Your best recollection?

A. I would say the middle of February, somewhere in there. I can't say positively.

Q. Well, do you remember when it was that he accompanied you on the second visit, that is, the second time that he went in?

A. We were in there in March, around March 1st or 2nd.

Q. Is that your best recollection?

A. Sir, we were in there—

Q. I just want your best recollection.

A. I can't pin point it. It is somewhere between January I was in the office frequently. Mr. Cain was with me two or three times.

Q. Well, take the occasion of Mr. Cain's first visit, was there conversation at that time with Mr. Sauber?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anyone present other than you, Cain and Sauber?

64 A. Not at the first visit.

Q. On the occasion of the second visit was anyone present other than the same folks?

A. No, I believe not. No.

Q. On the first visit at which Cain accompanied you what, if anything, did Cain say to Sauber?

A. He related the Shotwell matter just about as I had related—

By Mr. Ryan: I am going to object.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Busby, please. You should tell us the conversation.

A. He told Mr. Sauber that he was the President of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and that Shotwell had some black market transactions with one of its customers, Mr. Lubben, and that he understood that the Shotwell Company could come forward and make a disclosure of these transactions without fear of prosecution and that if there was any tax due, he wanted to pay it.

Q. What, if anything, was said about the question of time? Was anything said as to whether Shotwell was under investigation?

A. I can't recall at that meeting whether anything was said or not.

65 Q. While I am thinking of that, at your next meeting at which Cain was also present, was anything said about that?

A. Yes.

Q. What was said?

A. Mr. Sauber told Mr. Cain that he had inquired of the Internal Revenue Agent in charge about the tax returns filed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and that he had learned they were not under investigation.

Q. Going back to your conversation on the occasion of Mr. Cain's first visit with Mr. Sauber, what, if anything, did Mr. Sauber tell Mr. Cain about the future visit of an auditor from the office of the agent in charge?

A. He told Mr. Cain that he had contacted Mr. Wright's office and that there would be a man out to work with me in the compilation and verification of this disclosure, and he said he would do that as soon as he could find it expedient, that the man would be out as soon as he could get around to it.

Q. Did Sauber say anything at that time about the premium payments for acquisition of raw materials?

66 Was anything said about that that you can remember?

A. Well, he said the payments as he understood them, they would not be deductible as an offset against these premium collections.

Q. Who said that?

A. Mr. Sauber, and cited some rulings at the time.

Q. What, if anything, was said by Cain as to whether Sauber wanted any papers at that time?

A. He asked him if he wanted to see a rough summary of the figures that had been gotten together. Mr. Sauber said he did not, that the agent would go into that matter when he got out there.

Q. Now, would you describe a little more fully to the Court what you mean by this summary or figures—I will withdraw that for a minute because I want to ask you this: Following those conversations, did any officer of the company ask you to assist in the assembling of the data necessary to make such an estimate?

A. Yes, Mr. Cain, President of the Taxpayer, asked us to proceed following the conference with Mr. Sauber and get together the information the best we knew how and that the officers or anyone that was in the organization, that is, The Shotwell Organization, who knew 67 anything about it would be made available to us since the company had no records or at best very scattering records from which these facts could be obtained.

Q. Did the company have, except for the premium payments a complete set of records?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And supporting papers?

A. I referred to the records pertaining to the premium payments.

Q. Incidentally, was that work which you were told to do within your current service there or was this special?

A. No, this was a special assignment. We were assigned specifically to the agent to work with the agents on this specific assignment.

Q. And was it specially billed for?

A. Yes.

Q. Who at the company did you see for the purpose of going forward with that assignment?

A. Well, the principal man was Mr. Stanley Graflund.

Q. Mrs. Morrill, too?

A. Mrs. Morrill, too.

68 Q. Who is Mrs. Morrill?

A. She is the office manager and in charge of the accounts.

Q. Did you and members of your staff commence that work and stay with it until it was finished?

A. I was on vacation for a couple of weeks. We commenced it about the first of April. We had to get through with the busy income tax season.

Q. I just wanted to know if it was commenced?
A. It was commenced, yes.
Q. And finished?
A. Yes.
Q. By you and members of your staff?
A. Yes.
Q. Together with the different people whose service at the company you needed?
A. Yes.
Q. Who are some of the people at the company who helped assemble the data required in this work?
A. Mr. Stanley Graflund, Mr. Howard Roeser, Mrs. Morrill, Gladys Morrill, and Mr. Huebner worked on it, Mr. Cain. Those are the principal ones. A few clerks that I can't remember, also.
Q. For that purpose were all of the books and records, papers of the corporation made available?
69 A. Oh, yes.
Q. Will you tell the Court, how you went about the task of assembling the data needed.
A. Mr. Cain told me—
Q. Briefly, please, Mr. Busby, for my purpose, at least.
A. (Continuing)—told me that the only customer or anyone else with whom they had black market transactions was Mr. Lubben or General Confections Company or Eatsum, all one, from my standpoint.
Q. All Lubben companies?
A. All Lubben controlled. I suggested if he had billed Mr. Lubben for all of these transactions, at the regular ceiling prices, he must have copies of the sales invoices on trial and this would give an overall picture of all possible overceiling items that could be in question, and they had these invoices.

We recapped them on a ten-column sheet of paper, several sheets, and gave a description of the invoice, the amount, the date, the commodity, the weight, and the amount, totaled them, so we could determine just how much was involved on this account.

Q. Was that for the purpose of determining the 70 maximum?
A. That was for the purpose of determining the maximum.

By Mr. Ryan: Maximum what?
By the Witness: Maximum amount.
By Mr. O'Brien: Maximum amount.
By the Witness: Maximum amount of items and amount to be billed.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. That could be involved?
A. That could be involved. After we got this so-called control, it was a matter of memory from Mr. Huebner as to how much the overceiling prices amounted to, that is, per unit, per pound. We had the pounds, poundage, which we could take from the invoice.
Q. May I interpose to ask this: From time to time over the period was there some variation in the going rates of overages?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. You don't recall whether there was or not?
A. No. As far as I know it was usually the same on the same commodity.
Q. At any rate, did you take the highest overage as to each commodity that was called to your attention?
71
A. Yes.
Q. And what did you do?
A. After pricing each item as listed on this paper at the poundage rate, an extension was made to show the maximum amount of overage that could be involved.
Q. And was that applied to all of the items without prior determination as to whether there was or wasn't an overage in that particular case?
A. That is right.
Q. And you got sheets together to show this result and all of the supporting invoices and papers?
A. That is correct.
Q. What else was done in this regard?
A. After determining the overall amount of premium collections, we attempted to verify our computation which was based on these invoices and the best recollection of those that were helping us by outside sources, where such sources were available.
Q. Now, if I can interrupt a minute, I forgot, in that part of the process which involved the communication of rates and data and estimates to be super-imposed on these invoice items, did you get that information from the officers of the company?
72

A. Yes, Mr. Graflund.

Q. How about Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, Mr. Cain worked along with us, but he didn't have custody of the records.

Q. No, no, I am not talking about the records, Mr. Busby. I am talking about what was in their minds.

A. He furnished information.

By Mr. Ryan: I will object. I don't think it is particularly important how he gathered the information, from what source. If he wants to prove they tendered certain information to the Government, certain books and records, documents, summaries, that may be material, but how they went about computing them, I don't know whether that is relevant.

By the Court: I suppose it may be relevant who furnished it.

By the Witness: Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Sullivan?

A. Mr. Sullivan.

73 Q. Mr. Graflund?

A. Mr. Graflund. Those were the principal officers that furnished the information.

Q. As a matter of fact; they are the only officers—how about Roeser, was he an officer?

A. If he was an officer, he furnished some of the information.

Q. Outside of those people?

A. Mrs. Morrill. I don't know if she was an officer at that time.

Q. Did anyone have information other than them at that time?

A. That is all I remember at the time.

Q. You started to say that you then went to any available outside sources to make such further checks as occurred to you?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. As the auditor?

A. That is correct.

Q. In conversations which you had with these folks and the assembling of the papers, did they tell you of the dealings with Lubben and his companies?

A. Yes.

Q. No one kept that fact from you?

74 A. No.

Q. Did they also tell you—

By Mr. Ryan: Objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Withdraw it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was there any mention by them of the shipments of un-invoiced merchandise?

A. Yes.

Q. And were such items as far as you and they could ascertain them incorporated in your figures?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. There is no way he can know to what extent they could ascertain them. I move that be stricken.

By the Court: When you say "they", I don't know to whom you are referring.

By Mr. O'Brien: I mean the people working with him, if your Honor please.

By Mr. Ryan: I think that that should be stricken out, the extent somebody else could ascertain them, since he obviously couldn't know that.

By the Court: He may state as far as he knows who furnished the information.

75 By the Witness:

A. I inquired of these people.

By the Court: What people?

By the Witness: The officers that were assisting me in preparing this disclosure and they told me that they furnished all the information that they knew of.

By Mr. Ryan: I move that all of that information be stricken out.

By the Court: It may be stricken out.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. We don't know who you mean. Which officers?

A. Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser, Mrs. Morrill, Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Ryan: Same objection unless one person said it. If everybody said it at a different time that is something else.

By the Witness:

A. At different times during the collection of the summary of the information.

By Mr. Ryan: I think we should have if Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Cain, Mr. Graflund said something with respect to what they had furnished and to what extent they furnished information, he ought to say what each of 76 them said.

By the Court: Sustained.

By Mr. Ryan: Move what he testified to be stricken out?

By the Court: It may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is too broad and general, if the Court please. There are many things he said. I would like to connect it up rather than to have such a general striking if I might, subject to your Honor's striking it if I fail to do that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you ask each of those officers about uninvoiced shipments?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you say?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, —

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did you say on the occasion of asking each one of them during the course of your special assignment?

By Mr. Ryan: I will have to object unless he can give a conversation with an individual, otherwise, I have no way of testing.

77 By the Court: I don't know of any other way to go at it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Cain about it?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you say to him and what did he say to you?

By Mr. Ryan: And when was the conversation?

By the Witness:

A. During the summary—during the compilation of the figures that went into the summary somewhere between June 1st and—I would say around June 12th, the 12th or 15th, I asked him whether or not there were any other unbilled shipments that he knew about and he said no, there were not, that he has given me and directed Mr. Graflund to give me all of the unbilled shipments that he knew about.

Q. About the same time did you have a conversation with Mr. Graflund?

A. Yes, Graflund was sitting with me.

Q. What did Graflund say?

A. He said, "I have given you all that I have any knowledge of."

Q. Now, going on with the paper itself, what out-
78 side checks, checks I believe you called them, did you make?

A. We found among Shotwell's—The Shotwell Manufacturing Company's records some papers that Lubben had sent in covering these overceiling items and we were able to compare Lubben's figures with the independent computation that we had made.

Q. Did you give consideration to that in arriving at your ultimate decision?

A. Yes. In many instances the figures were identical and it made us feel that our computations were correct.

Q. That is your computations working from the invoices?

A. Invoices.

Q. And applying those maximum rates?

A. Unit rates.

Q. To all of the invoices.

Did the office of the agent in charge send an agent out to the premises?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was he?

A. Mr. Joe Lima.

Q. About when was it that you recall that he 79 arrived?

A. I would say some time in July of 1948.

Q. After his arrival there at that time, did you talk to him?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, was said to him by you as to what you had been doing in the interim?

A. I explained to him, I handed him a copy of this tentative computation and explained to him how it was arrived at and told him what it was.

Q. Did you inquire of him the occasion for his visit?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you say and what did he say?

A. He started on his examination in the regular routine manner and I told him that there was something specific that we ought to go into first and he said, "Yes, I know about it," and he said, "What have you got on it?"

With that, I handed him the paper and he proceeded to make his own investigation.

Q. Will you pick out of these papers, Mr. Busby, the one which you so handed to Mr. Lima so that I can have the reporter identify it?

A. This is the first batch of papers that I handed 80 to him, the one on the top in particular. I believe it was in typewritten form, however.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will the reporter mark this set of papers consisting of six sheets, Defendants' Exhibit 1 for identification?

(Documents so marked.)

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, the instrument marked Defendants' Exhibit 1 as I hold it here is a set of photostats which we made or had made from documents submitted through Mr. Ryan and if this is one of such documents, I would like to offer it without further preliminary.

By Mr. Ryan: Do I understand correctly, to save time, that all of these documents that are now submitted as Defendants' Exhibit 1, that the witness has testified that he gave the originals of all of those documents to Agent Lima?

By Mr. O'Brien: Just this one.

By Mr. Ryan: Just the one on top?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I haven't any objections to the introduction of the first sheet on the testimony of 81 this witness which he testified he gave to the agent. But as to the rest at this time, yes, I would object to it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not asking about that. I just want to know that this is a photostat of papers that you made available to me.

By Mr. Ryan: I will concede that. If you say that is so, I will concede it.

By the Court: Gentlemen, I think it is about adjournment time.

How about these documents?

By Mr. Ryan: We have an awful lot of them. They have come from the directors offices.

By the Court: Have you looked them over at all?

By Mr. Ryan: I haven't had an opportunity.

By the Court: Look them over and it is very possible that some of these documents you will not have any objections to.

By Mr. Ryan: It is doubtless that some I will have no objection to, cards affecting the assignment of return for examination, I propose to put them in myself. I have no objection, but much of the other material is not evidentiary. It is work product. It fixes no time 82 within which anything happened. It is narrative and I have no objection with respect to that, but I don't know. I haven't, as I said, had any opportunity to go through all of these. I assume that there are certain things, but I have to tender them under the instructions received from the Treasury Department, I have to tender them to the Court and the Court must make a determination. I am not impowered to offer them to the defendant.

By the Court: Very well, but I take it from what you say that as to some of them you assume there will be no objection on the part of the Government as to their relevancy?

By Mr. Ryan: That is correct. Those are those cards reflecting the assignment dates of returns of examination.

By the Court: Why don't you look over all the documents and determine which documents you have no objection to and to those documents that you think are not evidentiary or not admissible for any reason and requires the perusal of the Court before it is turned 83 over to the defendant, I will have to assume that burden then.

By Mr. Ryan: Let me say I can do this: I can go over and I can pick out certain things which if your Honor turns them over to the defense I won't say that they are not evidentiary, but I don't have the discretion imposed in me to designate any documents for turnover.

By the Court: All I want you to do is to turn over to me the documents you recognize as being evidentiary or reasonably so, and I will take the burden of turning them over to Mr. O'Brien if I deem they should be.

By Mr. Ryan: All right.

By the Court: And if those you think are not evidentiary or not admissible for any reason, then I assume I will have to examine those and determine whether they should be turned over to Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. Ryan: I will undertake to separate those documents.

By the Court: I thought you might simply file that.

By Mr. Ryan: I will undertake that, and I will do as much as I can. There is quite a lot of them, Judge.

84 I can't guarantee how soon I will finish. I will start.

By the Court: We will adjourn until two o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess herein was taken until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, Wednesday, November 12, 1952.)

* * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

Chicago, Illinois,
November 12, 1952,
2:55 o'clock p.m.

Met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Ryan
Mr. O'Brien
Mr. Hess
And other Counsel.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143. United States of America v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Defendant's motion to suppress certain evidence.

By the Court: Proceed, Gentlemen.

LEON J. BUSBY, resumed the stand, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.).

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, is there any-86 thing at this time on the documents?

By Mr. Ryan: I have separated these, your Honor. If your Honor turns them over I won't make any objection on the grounds that they are not evidentiary.

By the Court: You have no objection on the ground they are not evidentiary?

By Mr. Ryan: That is right.

By the Court: I assume there is a reasonable probability they are evidentiary.

By Mr. Ryan: I think there is.

By the Court: All right, turn them over.

(Mr. Ryan handed documents to Mr. O'Brien.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Exactly what do you think are not?

By Mr. Ryan: I will make the statement—reports of Agents, narrative reports, statements taken from witnesses with respect to possible witnesses I have not considered as evidentiary. Anything of a narrative nature.

Now, these that I have culled out reflect certain 87 things that took place, such as the assignment of returns, request for information or returns which would have some evidentiary significance for this disclosure—the beginning of both the New York investigation, the assignment of returns of the Shotwell case. This includes the date of the assignment of the returns of the Lubben or Lubben companies in New York for investigation. Everything that I consider bearing upon the legally operative acts applying to this disclosure and the narrative statements about comments on the facts but not reflecting any action taken at that time I have not considered evidentiary.

By the Court: I think we will go forward with whatever proof counsel wants now to offer.

I assume we will take most of the afternoon anyway. I will go over the other documents this evening and will endeavor to pass upon them so counsel may have the benefit of those that I do consider evidentiary and 88 relevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

By the Court: I do that because we are trying to expedite matters and as I construe the defendants' position they expect to, hope to find something in the documents which will indicate that the alleged disclosure was made before any of these documents, at least, reflect the disclosure was made or that they will in some way tend to corroborate defendants' position that this was the first disclosure.

If that is true, then I don't understand that my delay will in any way prejudice the defendants.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't claim any prejudice.

I will say one thing, then I will be quiet, but to insist the inspection tonight with reference to what Mr. Ryan said on the matter of work product—

By the Court: I will give you an opportunity to be heard on that and give you every opportunity to protect your rights on that.

89 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You were about to pick out the second document, Mr. Busby. Will you do that, please?

A. May I ask, the second document that was given to whom, for refreshing my memory?

Q. To the Government Agent or Agents.

A. When he came out to examine the books of Shotwell?

Q. Yes, sir.

By the Court: Is this Agent's name Liman, L-i-m-a-n?

By Mr. O'Brien: L-i-m-a, like Lima, Ohio.

By the Witness:

A. Specifically, these documents were handed to—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. No, just pick me out the second one, if you will.

A. That is what I was going to explain. I can't tell which one was handed to him first or second, I do know the first one, which is this.

Q. Speaking of Defendants' Exhibit 1?

A. That is correct.

Q. —for identification.

90 A. This one sheet. The additional date was available for him and he looked at it indiscriminately. It was all in support of this one item. I can't say whether I handed him any one of these papers. I would judge this would come second.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mark this Exhiibt 2 for identification, please.

(Document marked Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification.)

By the Witness: I presume—

By Mr. Ryan: I will object to his stating which came first and second and third if it is not based on some recollection that he had.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Not just what he thinks from looking at it would be the order.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't ask him that. I don't care which came first or second.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I just have noticed, Mr. Busby, there are two instruments here which look pretty much the same. This is one, is it not?

91 A. That is correct.

Q. Which is the other, that is what I want to know?

I will withdraw the last marking 2 for identification, and I will now submit to be marked as Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification a series of six sheets.

(Document marked Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Busby, you may state whether Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification was delivered to any Agent.

A. Yes, that was delivered to Mr. Sam Krane, specifically.

Q. Will you state briefly the occasion for the making of Defendants' Exhibit 2, Exhibit 1 having already been made?

A. Exhibit 1 is a summary of the findings with supporting sheets, such supporting sheets do not have descriptive headings for each column.

Further, the supporting sheets do not show a detail of unbilled shipments totaling $65,734.64, although the 92 total mentioned was included in the summary sheet.

Now, Mr. Krane came into possession of this.

By the Court: Mr. who?

By Mr. O'Brien: Krane.

By Mr. Ryan: Special Agent, Intelligence Unit.

By Mr. O'Brien: The gentleman sitting behind Mr. Ryan.

By the Witness: Yes, I know.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Krane came in possession of this Exhibit 1 and was discussing it with me and in an attempt to be helpful I added the descriptive columns on a copy of Exhibit 1 and furnished the details of the unbilled shipments, all of which added nothing to the summary sheet except for explanation purposes.

By Mr. O'Brien: May it also be stipulated, Mr. Ryan, that Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification are the photostats of papers that Mr. Krane gave us through your direction under one of the court's orders?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes, sir, photostats of records fur-
93 nished by the Intelligence Unit here in Chicago.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Busby, there are some other sheets from the same source which are before you.

Are any of these of like nature that were delivered to the Agents, or are they not?

I do not know.

A. That was delivered to Mr. Krane. Also this. Also this.

Q. But the documents which reflected your work up to and including, I think, July of 1948 are those marked Defendants' Exhibits 1 and 2 for identification?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, during the course of the examination by the Agents, can you state briefly what was made available to them in the way of the books and records and papers of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

By Mr. Ryan: From his own knowledge.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. All of the records, general accounting records
94 as well as some subsidiary records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company were made available.

Also, what we consider as public accountants private papers of Busby & Oury were made available.

These private papers covered the audit over the past several years, 1943 through 1947, as I recall it. And anything else that they wanted or asked for that I had acquaintance with was made available to them.

Q. Now, did the Agents makes copies, photographic, photostatic, or otherwise, of certain of the records, if you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know that personally?

A. Not specifically, no.

Q. In addition to the audit reports which you mentioned, were there other papers in the same category, such as work sheets which you prepared and gave to the Agents, which you had prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. Or did you keep all your work sheets?

A. Yes, we kept the principal audit papers and work sheets.

95 Q. Were these exhibited to the Agents, too?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Agents make longhand notations that you noticed during the course of their inspection of the records?

A. Yes, many of them.

Q. You said that you gave Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification to Mr. Krane.

A. That is correct.

Q. When did Mr. Krane come to the plant, approximately?

A. About the middle of 1948. I would say June or July, somewhere around in there.

Q. I mean, to work. Was he there for some time?

A. Mr. Krane, no. His work spread over a long period of time, but he wasn't there every day. He came in from time to time.

Q. Now, was Mr. Mammel ever at the plant?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you spell that, please? Is it M-a-m-e-l?

By Mr. Mammel: M-a-m-m-e-l.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the first name, sir?

By Mr. Mammel: Charles J.

96 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you recall approximately when it was that Mr. Mammel came to the plant?

A. About February of 1949.

Q. Was Mr. Mammel during the times that he has been at the plant out of the office of the Agent in Charge, Mr. Wright?

A. Yes, that is my understanding.

Q. The same Mr. Wright?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Mr. Mammel conduct an inspection and examination of the same books, papers and records?

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. How long a time would you say prior to the indictment that he was engaged in doing that at the premises, over what period of time?

A. More or less continuously from February of 1949 up to the time of the indictment, or a very short time prior.

Q. And at that same period from time to time Mr. Krane also was there?

A. That is correct.

Q. Going back to the instruments marked Defendants' Exhibits 1 and 2 for identification, and directing 97 your attention to the unbilled shipment item on the first sheet of those exhibits, $65,134.64—

A. —734.

Q. 60, what?

A. $65,734.64.

Q. Do you know whether since the preparation of those papers the company has learned that an item of $14,758.00 was erroneously included by it?

A. Yes, I was told that that is a duplication which had been billed for and included before in this recapitulation.

Q. And you saw that invoice?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, at the time that Mr. Krane came to the company premises, or in and about that time, did you talk to him?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it at that time that you—

By Mr. Ryan: Would you establish the date of that conversation, please?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, I am asking now, I suppose for the approximate time at which you gave Mr. Krane in the way that you described Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identifica-
98 tion?

A. I would say about the 1st of August, 1948.

Q. And did you have a discussion with him then?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to him and he to you on the occasion of your talk?

A. I told him in a general way the story as I had gathered it leading up to the summarization of these papers—

By Mr. Ryan: I am going to object to that and move it be stricken.

By the Court: It may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You just have to say what you told him. Keep that in mind. We just want the conversation.

What did you tell him?

A. I told him the figures—

Q. Tell us what you said. What did you say to him, and what did he say to you?

A. He asked me first about the summary sheet that I had turned over to Mr. Mammel—not to Mr. Mammel—Mr. Lima, which is the first sheet of Exhibit I that you have there.

I told him where I got the figures from, how I ar-
99 rived at them.

By Mr Ryan: Objection and move it be stricken.

By the Court: Yes, strike it out.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Again, tell me what you said. You do as many other witnesses do, but just tell us what was said. What you said.

A. It is kind of difficult for me to word it—the difference between "I told you" and "what I said."

I told him that I had been employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company to compile the statistics in a tentative way and this work I had done and was represented by this summary sheet which I had turned over to Mr. Lima when he came in to make an examination.

He asked me where I got the figures from and I told—

Q. Figures on the summary sheet? What document on the summary sheet?

A. Sheet 1 as attached to Exhibit 1.

And I explained to him that I had recapped them from the invoices in corroboration of the officers of the 100 company, Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, and I told him that I had been in personally prior to that time and talked to Mr. Sauber about the situation and Mr. Sauber had suggested that I make this compilation rather than to file an amended return since an amended return was only an approximation, and I told him Mr. Sauber had asked me to give this summarization to the Agent, Mr. Lima, when he came out to investigate, and Mr. Lima would make his own computations in corroboration with whatever help we could give him.

Mr. Krane asked me about the date of my conference with Mr. Sauber and asked me specifically about circumstances leading up to this matter.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I will have to object to that, and move it be stricken.

By the Court: It may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did he say?

A. That is all.

Q. From time to time after that did Mr. Krane request other things of you, documents, inspection of documents, or the like?

101 A. Yes, from time to time he asked for specific documents.

Q. Was he given them?

A. Yes, it was given to him, some of which he said he was going to photostat. All documents that he asked for were given to him if I had them.

Q. And he was permitted to photostat them?

A. Yes, as far as I was concerned.

Q. Now, Mr. Mammel you say came out about February of 1949?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he come alone?

A. Yes, I believe—he was alone.

Q. Did you see him shortly after his arrival?

A. Yes, I believe it was the first day he was there.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time?

A. Yes.

Q. What was said?

A. I asked him what he was going to do and he said he was going to make a detailed audit of the records of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

102 I told him I didn't see why that was neecssary, that Mr. Lima had been out and audited the accounts or was in the process of doing so, and he said, "Well, he hasn't made a detailed audit and I am going to make a detailed audit."

Q. Is that what you presently remember?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Mammel say about help?

A. Well, following the first conversation Mr. Mammel said that he was short of help, that the Department couldn't assign him sufficient help to expedite this investigation and that he was going to take whatever time was necessary to do it alone if he saw that that was necessary to do it that way.

Q. Did he ask for any help?

A. Well, he said he would appreciate any help that the company could give him.

Q. What did you do about it?

A. I discussed it with Mr. Cain, and Mr. Cain told me to put our staff at his command, give him whatever help he could in order to expedite the situation and get the examination through with as soon as possible.

103 Q. Did you do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you specially bill the company for that service?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true, as your affidavit says, that the bills for that work were in excess of $20,000?

A. Yes, spread over the period of a few years, two years at least.

Q. Diverting for a moment to your talks with Mr. Sauber, will you tell the court what years, if any, were mentioned to him?

A. The years 1945 and 1946 specifically; also 1944, 1945 and 1946.

Q. Also in relation to your talk with Mr. Sauber, your initial conversation, what, if anything, was said as to whether he was an agent or official to whom a disclosure may be made?

A. He said he was the proper officer to whom a disclosure could be made.

Q. During the times that the agents were at the premises, or in any way active in an inspection of the records or the auditing of the books to which you have referred, did any one of those agents ever tell you that the 104 work was not being done for the purpose that Mr. Sauber had stated?

A. No.

Q. Did you at any time that you or your associates were working in this way ever know that there was any other purpose?

A. No.

By Mr. Ryan: Purpose other than what?

By Mr. O'Brien: Other than the one stated by Mr. Sauber that they would be out to examine the books to determine an amount.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you know that?

Do you understand the question?

A. No.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read the question, Mr. Reporter?

(The last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did you at any time that you or your associates were working in this way ever know that there was any other purpose other than the one stated by Mr. Sauber that they would be out to examine the 105 books to determine an amount?")

By the Witness:

A. No, I did not.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you ever have occasion before this in 1948, Mr. Busby, actually to make or assist in the making of a disclosure of the type claimed here?

A. No. This is the first one that I had any experience with at all.

Q. Is it true that in your professional capacity you were acquainted with the published statements of the Treasury on the subject?

A. Oh, yes, sure.

Q. In speaking to the defendant and shortly after January 11, 1948, were there any of those published statements to which you directed their attention?

A. Yes, in particular the statement of Mr. Wenchel, the chief counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at that time.

Q. Was that the statement made in 1947?

A. Yes.

Q. In a speech delivered by Mr. Wenchel?

A. Yes.

106 Q. Or a paper read by him?

A. Yes, that was published quite a bit.

Q. Just two things, Mr. Busby:

I am not sure that I heard you right, but I think a little bit back there you spoke of an amended return as being an approximation. Did you say that?

A. If I remember the question at the time, Mr. Sauber advised me not to file an amended return, to include these over-ceiling omissions because not knowing what the amount was, the amended return still would not be correct and it would be much better for the taxpayer if he waited until the Agent came out and determined this amount on a basis that could be acceptable to the Department.

Q. Your approximation was the thing evidenced by Defendants' Exhibits 1 and 2, not an amended return, is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. The other thing I wanted to ask you: On your second visit to Mr. Sauber, that is, after the company had told you to come in and reveal its identity, and so forth, did you or did you not then tell him that you wished to make a disclosure on their behalf?

107 By Mr. Ryan: I object. It is leading and suggestive.

By the Court: Yes, I think the question is leading. At least, suggestive.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What, if anything, was said about disclosure at that time?

A. I told Mr. Sauber that the taxpayer wished to make a disclosure and to make whatever corrections and payments of taxes that were necessary.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all I wanted to make clear.

Before you start your cross examination I would like to offer in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 1 and 2 the instruments so marked for identification. It is merely for the purpose of showing what was done pursuant to what Mr. Sauber said.

By Mr. Ryan: No objection.

By the Court: Admitted.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and respectively marked Defendants' Exhibits 1 and 2.)

108 By Mr. O'Brien: The court will understand that I am reserving my motion and request that these documents too be suppressed, but I am offering them to show what was done in the way of their cooperative attempts, only for that purpose.

By Mr. Ryan: I have no objection to them being received in evidence.

By The Court: All right.

By Mr. Ryan: Anything else?

By Mr. O'Brien: I thought maybe we could stipulate without putting the physical documents in for the moment that the statements contained in the report of the hearings before the Subcommittee on the Committee on Ways and Means of the House, the proceedings had on January 23, 23, 24 and 25 of this year as issued through the Government Printing Office, that those parts we referred this morning in their full content manifesting the published policy of the Treasury Department be considered as in evidence. I don't like to deprive ourselves of the whole book but we can arrange later to have

109 that part—

By Mr. Ryan: I think we ought to identify what the statements are and I will agree to it.

The first published statement is an excerpt from a statement by the Secretary of the Treasury, Fred M. Vinson, regarding the tax drive published in the Washington Post on August 21, 1945; the address of J. P. Wenchel, Chief Counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue given at a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, on May 14, 1947; the statement for release to Sunday newspapers on May 25, 1947, of Secretary Snyder.

Do you want the statement terminating the policy?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, we might as well.

By Mr. Ryan: Agree to that then.

The statement of Secretary Snyder made for release on Thursday, January 10, 1952, reflecting the abandonment of the voluntary disclosure policy.

110 I stipulate that those may be received as evidencing the published statements involving the voluntary disclosure doctrine in this case. If necessary, abstracts can be made.

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't find it now, and I don't want to delay the proceedings, but I will reserve the right to offer also in the same connection the press release which was issued at the time that the policy was recalled or terminated.

By Mr. Ryan: That is what this purports to be, I believe.

By Mr. O'Brien: The particular pages are not complete, but I will find it.

You may cross examine.

Cross Examination By Mr. Ryan.

Q. You testified that you went to New York on a mission for Mr. Cain in January of 1948, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What date did you return from that mission to Chicago?

111 A. January 10, 1948.

Q. When you returned you testified that you made a report to Mr. Cain, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. You recommended against the loan and then you discussed with him certain information you received from Mr. Graflund concerning the receipt of over-payment moneys by the Shotwell Corporation, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. At that time did Mr. Cain tell you that the Shotwell Corporation had received over-ceiling payments?

A. Yes, he told me that.

Q. Did he tell you at that time what the Shotwell Company had done with the money they received as over-ceiling payments?

A. Yes, he said it was paid for the acquisition of raw materials for Shotwell to be used in the regular production.

Q. All of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you then have with him some discussion
112 concerning the implications that that might have for the corporation's tax liability?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you give him any advice as to whether that would affect his tax liability?

A. I advised him to file amended returns and get on record—

Q. Well, no, that isn't my question.

Did you advise him as to how it might affect his tax returns?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you tell him as to how it might affect his tax returns, the corporation's tax returns?

A. I told him that the corporation may have a tax liability.

Q. Now, can you explain how the corporation would have a tax liability as a result of that procedure?

A. Well, there would be in principle the corporation had taxable income. There was some question with respect to the disbursements, number one, the approving of the disbursements, and number two, whether the disbursements were allowable deductions.

Q. Did you advise him that there was some question whether the disbursement was an allowable deduction?

A. In my mind yes I did advise him.

113 Q. Did he advise you at that time that he had considered it an allowable deduction?

A. Yes.

Q. Then Mr. Cain did not at that time admit to you that he had attempted to evade any corporate taxes, is that correct?

A. Not specifically as such, no.

Q. Well, did he say something that indicated to you that he might have evaded corporate taxes?

A. Yes, he wasn't posted on the tax regulation.

Q. Did he profess belief that these expenditures were deductible?

A. He didn't know.

Q. Did he say he didn't know whether they were or not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you ask him why he had not recorded them on his books?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did he tell you that he had not recorded them on his books in order to evade income taxes?

A. Not at all.

Q. What did he tell you was the reason for not recording them on his books?

114 A. He didn't want to—in particular, he didn't want to show a violation of the OPA laws, Office of Price Administration—prices.

Q. In paying money or receiving money?

A. In receiving money, and paying it.

Q. Did he indicate to you that he was fearful that by indicating payments of over-ceiling amounts that he would thereby become implicated in price violations?

A. Yes, that was—

Q. In paying for material over ceiling?

A. Over ceiling price payments, yes.

Q. And that was the reason he had not included those payments in his books?

A. As well as the receipts, yes.

Q. I believe maybe you answered this question, you did say you advised him there was some question whether or not those payments were deductible?

A. Serious question, yes, I did.

Q. As of the day you were talking about?

A. Yes.

Q. Then your understanding of the situation at that time as gleaned or obtained from Mr. Cain was that 115 the over ceiling payments that were unrecorded balanced the gross, the unrecorded gross receipts, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that to the extent that they would be deductible they would wash each other out, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, did you consider that a failure to report these washed-out gross receipts, or failure to report these gross receipts and a failure to claim the deductions offsetting in the event that they were determined to be deductible might constitute the basis for criminal liability?

A. I considered that it was an incorrect return.

Q. Did you advise him that what he had done might result in criminal liability?

A. Yes.

Q. In spite of the fact he had denied that he had intended to evade?

By Mr. O'Brien: Object as argumentative.

By the Court: Cross examination. He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Cain is not a tax man and he relied, I
116 believe, on my advice that these items were not deductible. At that time, why he seriously considered that he was in violation.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, he indicated, did he not, to you, that he was learning then for the first time that they were not deductible?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, when you called on Mr. Sauber as you stated on the first occasion whenever it was you advised him that you had a client unnamed who had had some black market transactions and black market receipts and black market payments roughly offsetting each other, I believe you said.

Q. Is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation owed any income taxes?

A. I told him there was a possibility that they did.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation sought to defeat and evade any taxes?

A. Repeat the question?

Q. Did you tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation,
117 your client, had sought to defeat and evade any taxes?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Well, don't you know whether you did or not? Are you suggesting that perhaps you told Mr. Sauber that your client, the corporation, had sought to defeat and evade taxes?

A. As I recall it, I told Mr. Sauber that the corporation, the method of handling these receipts, was probably liable for tax.

Q. Probably liable for tax?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that was on the theory that the black market payments would not be deductible?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall now whether at that time the Tax Court had held that those payments were deductible?

A. Under certain circumstances, yes, but it was quite clear that it was very doubtful.

Q. But the only judicial pronouncement on the subject was that they were deductible, is that right?

A. I doubt that very much. Maybe if they were 118 cost of goods sold they may have been—

Q. Pardon?

A. If they were construed as costs of goods sold they may have been deductible.

Q. Did you know of a judicial pronouncement at the time to the effect that they were not deductible?

A. Yes, a serious question as to being deductible, particularly if they were construed as expenses rather than cost of goods sold.

Q. So it was a question then in litigation, is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. And the question of whether they were deductible or weren't deductible was something with which a taxpayer could hardly be expected to know?

A. Mr. Sauber advised us that they were not deductible based on his experience and the regulation.

Q. Now, then, when Mr. Cain told you that certain black market payments had been made, did you ask him to whom they had been made?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you?

A. Yes. I am sorry, you are talking about pay-
119 ments. He didn't tell me to whom the payments were made.

Q. What did he say when you asked him to whom they had been made?

A. He didn't know.

Q. What?

A. He didn't know.

Q. He said he didn't know?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ask him then how he knew that payments had been made if he didn't know to whom they had been made?

A. No, not specifically. He told me that the method of handling the cash transaction through the company would show that they had been paid out. In other words, the money came in and messengers came in to get the money and it was paid to them.

Q. Now, have you had occasion to work in the Treasury Department in tax cases, Mr. Busby?

A. Not fraud cases.

Q. Well, let me ask you this question: Do you know whether the Treasury Department or Bureau of Internal Revenue will accept deductions, large deductions, on 120 returns where they cannot be substantiated as to whom they were paid?

A. I wouldn't expect that they would accept them.

Q. Well, then, did you perchance at that time advise Mr. Cain to go in and give what information he could and seek to make a voluntary disclosure in order to avoid prosecution should it be true that he had not made these payments?

A. I advised him to go in and make—

Q. Was that your reasoning?

A. State your question again?

Q. That you advised him to go in and make some kind of disclosure to the Government on the possibility that there had been no black market payments made?

A. No, I didn't advise him that.

Q. It was because of this question about whether these deductions might or might not be taken that you advised him to go in, is that it?

A. I advised him to clear up his tax returns regardless of the reason. The tax returns were erroneous and from my standpoint they should be corrected.

Q. What was your purpose in advising him to 121 have the tax returns cleared up?

A. To avoid tax liability, possible tax liability.

Q. Tax liability?

A. Yes.

Q. For the payment of those taxes, is that what you mean by tax liability?

A. Yes, tax liability.

Q. Was it for the purpose of avoiding criminal prosecution?

A. I advised him to go in and make a disclosure assuming there would be no—

Q. For the purpose of avoiding criminal prosecution?

A. Well, the principal reason was to avoid the tax liability and get it paid.

Q. Do you avoid tax liability for civil taxes by disclosing to the Government that you owe them?

A. Yes, if they accept a corrected return you pay the tax.

Q. You don't avoid the liability, do you?

A. You pay it.

Q. That is right, you pay it rather than avoid it.

122 Then, was it your purpose to have him go in there in order to avoid criminal liability?

A. Only as implied by not paying the tax that is due.

Q. Only as implied by not paying the tax that is due?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, did you mean that you considered at that time that if a person didn't pay taxes that were due that criminal liability followed?

A. It is always hanging over their head.

Q. Now, have you ever heard of the term used by the revenue people "technical adjustment"?

A. Would you explain what it means? Not as you have stated it.

Q. An adjustment to tax liability. In other words, it increases, we will say, tax liability without any indicia of fraud being present?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you say when a person was in doubt whether the law was unsettled, whether something was deductible or not deductible, that would be more or less a technical adjustment that might result in higher tax lia-

123 bility, but without indicia of fraud?

A. Yes, that was standard issues, simple and small.

Q. And to the extent that black market payments had been balancing the gross receipts would that not have been the situation here in this case?

A. I didn't think so. This was a larger amount involved.

Q. Because of the size involved?

A. That has something to do with it.

Q. Despite the uncertainty of the law on the question?

A. Uncertainty to the deductions, yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Cain had told you that he had not attempted to defraud the Government, isn't that correct?

A. He had told me that he hadn't attempted to record his transactions because of the OPA regulation.

Q. And he had not attempted to evade his taxes?

A. I don't believe he made that statement. I don't recall discussing it as such.

Q. But he gave you a reason for not recording 124 them that was different from tax evasion, isn't that correct?

A. Federal income tax evasion?

Q. Pardon?

A. Federal income tax evasion?

Q. Did he say that that was the reason?

A. No, I said he gave me a reason different from that. Wasn't that your question?

Q. Yes.

Now, then, when you went to see Mr. Sauber you told him about these transactions whereby they received black market money and paid it out, roughly balancing, correct? And you told him that there might be tax liability or not, depending on the deductibility of those payments, is that correct?

A. Yes, I guess that is generally what I said.

Q. And you did not tell him that perhaps that the payments might have been made, isn't that correct?

A. No, I didn't know whether they were paid or not.

Q. Did Mr. Cain tell you at that time when you came back from New York and you had that conference that the Shotwell Company had made unrecorded sales?

By the Court: Repeat that again, please.

125 By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I ask the witness, in that conference with Mr. Cain after he came back from New York if Mr. Cain told him that the Shotwell Company had made unrecorded sales.

A. I don't remember that he did.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Sauber anything about this client of yours unnamed having made unrecorded sales?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. You told Mr. Sauber—what did you tell him concerning that?

A. I told him they had unrecorded income from black market collections and I saw one or two unrecorded sales.

Q. When did you tell him that?

A. During the first conversation with him and the second.

Q. Where did you get that information if you told it to him?

A. From Mr. Graflund.

Q. But not from Mr. Cain?

A. No.

Q. That information from Mr. Graflund came to 126 you on this trip from New York about the unrecorded sales?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Cain when you were talking to him if the corporation had made unrecorded sales?

A. I don't recall that I did.

Q. Now, you did tell Mr. Sauber in this first conversation that your client had made black market payments, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. But you stated a little while ago that you didn't know whether that was the fact or not?

A. I had been told that was the fact.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Sauber at that time that you would be unable to furnish the names of the persons to whom the alleged black market payments were made?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell him that you would be unable to furnish those names?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, on the occasion of your second visit to Mr. Sauber was Mr. Cain with you?

127 A. I believe not. I believe he was with me on the third visit.

Q. Well, what was the purpose of your second visit to Mr. Sauber?

A. It was to disclose the name of the taxpayer and to get instructions as to how to proceed.

Q. Did you receive such instructions as to how to proceed?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the occasion for your third visit?

A. I went with Mr. Cain to corroborate the conference, the information obtained from the second visit.

Q. What was the occasion for the fourth visit that you related?

A. I don't recall particularly, except in general the further instructions. There were several visits in there. I can't segregate the fourth and fifth, and so fourth. There were several visits that I made for instructions and reporting.

Q. Now, at the time that you were talking to Mr. Cain and advising him to make a disclosure, as you say, did you advise him that it would be necessary for 128 him to make a full and complete disclosure?

A. Yes.

Q. And an honest disclosure?

A. Yes.

Q. You advised him that that would be necessary?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on what date did you say you went to Mr. Sauber's office on the first occasion?

A. I would judge around the 12th or 13th or 14th of January, 1948.

Q. And approximately on what date did you visit him the second time?

A. Oh, somewhere around the early twenties, the 20th, I would say, of January.

Q. Did you make any contemporaneous memorandum of the date on which you went to Mr. Sauber's office?

A. No, I am guessing based on circumstances that would cause me to remember it.

Q. You state that you had read Mr. Wenchel's statement and the other statements relative to disclosure, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware of the importance of timeliness in making a voluntary disclosure?

129 A. Yes.

Q. Why didn't you see fit to make a record of the date on which you commenced this alleged disclosure for your client?

A. Well, when we discussed it, that is, Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan and myself discussed it after my return from New York there didn't seem to be any particular urgency about it and it was not considered too serious a matter at that time, and no particular emphasis was placed on recording dates.

Q. Well, then, you didn't attach much importance to the disclosure as bearing on your possible criminal liability, is that right?

A. I attached importance to it but whether it was today or two days later I didn't attach too much importance at that time.

Q. Well, you are aware of the Wenchel statement concerning voluntary disclosure, are you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you not at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware that according to the Wenchel statement that the period in which a voluntary disclosure could be made would be cut off by the assignment of a return for investigation?

130 A. Yes, I considered the Wenchel statement very liberal and gave me the impression to go in and discuss it at such time as was convenient, why, it would be satisfactory. I gave no thought to anyone being assigned to the case.

Q. Are you aware that an assignment of a return for investigation to an agent does not involve any publicity or notification of the taxpayer?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware that that could have taken place on or about the time of your first visit to Mr. Sauber?

A. There is a possibility, although I had no knowledge.

Q. But you still didn't see fit to make any memorandum of the date, is that correct?

A. No. It is pin pointed very well with the trip to New York as far as I was concerned.

Q. Well, did you see fit to send in any registered letter or communication to Mr. Sauber or any other Treasury official?

A. No.

Q. Evidencing your disclosure or alleged disclosure?

131 A. No. He gave us the impression that we had made a disclosure and that was all that was necessary and that he was a proper officer and could accept it, and that the instructions that he gave us for proceeding was going to be all right.

Q. You didn't ask Mr. Sauber for any such statement in writing?

A. No, I didn't think it was necessary at the time.

Q. Now, then, you state that Mr. Sauber advised you that it would not be necessary for your client to make amended returns, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And suggested that an effort be made to determine the liability or to determine the amounts involved in these black market transactions?

A. That is right, pending the time the agents came out to check and corroborate in this determination for themselves.

Q. And what did he tell you the agent would do?

A. He said he would come out and make the usual examination and go into this phase of it in particular.

Q. In other words, the agent would make an audit,
132 is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Of the returns for the years involved?

A. Sure.

Q. Or did he tell you that the agent would come out to assist you in arriving at these black market transactions?

A. Oh, no, he told us that the agent would come out and make his own investigation and we were to assist the agent.

Q. In other words, you weren't operating under the impression that this work of the agent would be any different than it would be in any case of any corporation where he was auditing a return, is that correct?

A. None whatsoever, except more extensive.

Q. Now, on the occasion of the first visit to Mr. Sauber when Mr. Cain was with you, did you not tell Mr. Sauber that the black market payments balanced the black market receipts except for a difference of five thousand some dollars which had been included on the 1946 return?

A. I told him that was my understanding, yes.

Q. From whom did you obtain that understanding?

133 A. From Mr. Graflund.

Q. Mr. Graflund?

A. Primarily, yes.

Q. Well, who secondarily or any other way if you found it out?

A. I can't say. Maybe Mr. Cain had something to say about it. There were general conversations back and forth.

Q. Was Mr. Cain present when Mr. Graflund told you that?

A. I don't recall. It was generally discussed.
Q. But you told Mr. Sauber that?
A. Yes.
Q. In Mr. Cain's presence, is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit 1, the first sheet which has been described as containing the summary, that is, a sheet which you turned over to Mr. Lima, is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. Does that purport to reflect a summary of the black market transactions, both the receipts and the expenditures?
A. That is the estimate. Most of this is based on 134 memory of the people that are involved.
Q. Whose memory?
A. Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund.
Q. Well, directing your attention to the disbursements, chocolate milk, corn syrup, from whom did you obtain those figures?
A. Those are approximations made by Mr. Cain.
Q. Those were made by Mr. Cain?
A. Yes, from memory.
Q. Is this Mr. Cain the only source from which you ever received any information as to the amount of these alleged black market disbursements?
A. Well, he was responsible for them, I guess.
Q. Well, is he the only source from which you received it?
A. Yes—Mr. Graflund and Mr. Roeser and Mr. Huebner were attempting to contribute, but they didn't make any contributions to speak of. Mr. Cain was the spokesman for it.
Q. In what form did Mr. Cain give you those figures that are contained on the disbursements?
A. A written memorandum on it.
Q. Do you still have that memorandum?
A. I don't know. I can't answer. Mr. Krane, I 135 imagine, has a photostatic copy of it.
Q. Did you seek to obtain information about the disbursements from Mr. Graflund?
A. Only in this conference with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner and Mr. Roeser, but they had no records from which they would draw upon to determine the disbursements and they just approximated them the best they could.

Q. The only people who had any recollection or furnished any information about disbursements was Mr. Cain, is that correct?

A. He assumed the responsibility for the statement.

Q. Did anybody else furnish you any information about the disbursements?

A. No.

Q. Now, when you submitted Defendants' Exhibit 1 to the Government, which listed those expenditures, had you verified the disbursements or substantiated them in any way?

A. No, and only partially the receipts. The whole schedule is tentative.

By Mr. Ryan: I beg the indulgence of the court for just a moment, if the Court please.

136 By the Court: We will take our afternoon recess. Suspend for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

By the Court: Proceed, Gentlemen.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Now, Mr. Busby, you testified to having certain conversations with Revenue Agent Charles Mammel, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At different times throughout the course of his examination of the Shotwell Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any memorandum contemporaneous memorandum, showing the dates and the substance of those conversations with Mr. Mammel at the time that you had them?

A. No memorandum, no.

Q. And you testified to certain conversations you had with Mr. Krane, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any contemporaneous memorandum respecting the dates and the substance of those conversations?

137 A. No.

Q. Did you make any contemporaneous memorandum respecting the dates and the substance of the conversations you had with Mr. Sauber when you were present alone and when Mr. Cain was present?

A. No.

Q. And as a matter of fact in connection with conversations that you had with Mr. Krane or Mr. Mammel you don't actually remember what the conversations were, do you?

A. Oh, yes, I do.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, didn't Mr. Sauber tell you at his office while Mr. Cain was present that this appeared to be a civil case?

A. No.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Did you know at the time you were advising with your clients on the subject matter of disclosure whether the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was then allowing the deduction of premium payments for goods acquired?

138 A. There had been some fringe deductions of this nature allowed, depending upon the circumstances in each case.

Q. Are you speaking now of expenses?

A. I am speaking of expenses, deductions as cost of sales.

Q. I am speaking of the cost of goods acquired.

A. That was the leaning at the time.

Q. Do you know what the regulations in effect at that time was?

A. I believe the regulation allowed the deductions if they could be substantiated as costs of goods sold. At least, the question was being debated and the decisions had been to that effect in the lower tax bodies.

Q. In 1948?

A. Yes, as early as some time in 1948, I recall. The Commissioner had not acquiesced in those cases, to my knowledge.

Q. That is my question: Was the Commissioner allowing them or wasn't he?

A. The Commissioner was not allowing them, no.

Q. That is my question.

Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 1, I think you 139 said that the first sheet was given to Lima?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At his appearance at the plant?

A. Yes.

Q. When or over what period were subsequent sheets made available?

A. Well, they were available to Mr. Lima when he came, but he made his examination in the regular way and, of course, it took time to get to all of these sheets and he was taken off the case, I guess, before his investigation was completed.

Q. Now, when you spoke to Mr. Lima about those sheets what, if anything, was said to him concerning their tentative nature?

By Mr. Ryan: I think I will object on the ground it is improper redirect. I don't recall going into anything like this.

By Mr. O'Brien: Sure, your very last question you asked the witness and the witness said that they haven't verified the disbursements and that the receipts also were partially tentative, if I understood him correctly.

140 By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: Read the question, please.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I told him that they were tentative, explained to him how I had gone about getting them together and that they were only a guide to his work in determining what the situation was, everything subject to verification.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is there any circumstance which you now recollect which fixes the date of your fourth visit to Mr. Sauber, that is, the time at which you and Mr. Cain went in there during the month of March? Is there any circumstance to which you can relate that visit which would enable us to determine the time?

A. Well, I don't know unless—we went in—Mr. Cain was in California, as I recall it, and the first day that he came back we were over to see Mr. Sauber.

Q. Do you know what that day was?

A. The best I can recollect is the first two or 141 three days in March. I can't say exactly.

By Mr. Ryan: Is that the fourth visit?

By Mr. O'Brien: The fourth visit.
By the Witness:
A. If I had to name a date I would say the 4th of March—the 3d or 4th, somewhere in there.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. At any rate, it was upon Mr. Cain's return from California?
A. That is correct.
Q. In that month?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you have any idea as to when it was with reference to the date of his return, how soon after his return?
A. That we called on Mr. Sauber?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. It was the following day. As a matter of fact, I had talked to Mr. Cain on the telephone and I knew he was coming in and he was coming in for that specific purpose, among other things. I don't know what else he came in for.
Q. Was it the day following the day he arrived, or was it the day that he arrived?
142 A. You mean from California, arrived here in Chicago?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. The day following the time he arrived in Chicago.
Q. Do you now know when it was that he arrived in Chicago? I mean, as to what time of the day.
A. It was the evening. I can't remember definitely, but I think I talked to him on the telephone the day he arrived. It was late. It was evening.
By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.
By Mr. Ryan: No recross.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all, Mr. Busby.
(Witness excused.)

143 BYRON A. CAIN, one of the defendants herein, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Your full name is Byron A. Cain?
A. That is right.
Q. C-a-i-n. Where do you live, Mr. Cain?

A. 1155 Mohawk Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Q. During the year 1948 what office did you have in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation?

A. I was president and treasurer.

Q. What office did Mr. Sullivan have, Harold Sullivan?

A. Executive vice president.

Q. And Mr. Huebner?

A. Vice president.

Q. And it is true, is it not, as Mr. Busby testified, that his firm was then and had for some years been the regular outside auditors employed by that company?

A. From the date that Mr. Sullivan and I acquired an interest in the company.

144 Q. When was that, about?

A. About the first of the year of 1942.

Q. Incidentally, at that time and for some years thereafter, Mr. Sullivan was active in the company too, was he not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember, while I think of it, whether Mr. Shotwell also participated in the information which went into this Defendants' Exhibit 1 and 2?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. What position did he occupy in the company?

A. Well, at first I was general manager and he was president, and then subsequently until his death he was chairman of the board. His death was just about eight months ago, six or eight months ago.

Q. You were present here during Mr. Busby's testimony, were you not?

A. All during it.

Q. I will come back to this more fully later, but I would like to see you now, if you were in California during the month of February, 1948.

A. Yes, I was.

145 Q. Where?

A. At the home that I rented—well, it was on Via Los Palmos in Palm Springs. I think it was 435, or something like that.

Q. I don't care about the exact address.

Is it true that early in March you returned to Chicago from Palm Springs?

A. Yes, I returned on the third day of March.

Q. 1948?

A. 1948.

Q. At my request did you have your secretary bring to my office the documentary data from your files establishing those dates?

A. I did.

Q. Is it true that you, upon your return, went with Mr. Busby to see Mr. Sauber?

A. We did.

Q. When was that?

A. It was on the 4th day of March 1948.

Q. Had the Shotwell Manufacturing Company had dealings with David G. Lubben and the companies, Eatsum Food Products and General Confections, Inc.?

A. It had.

Q. Both with the proprietorship known as Eatsum
146 Food Products, and the partnership business conducted under the same title?

A. It had, although we didn't know that there was a partnership. I don't believe, until after we got into this investigation. It was a carry-through.

Q. What is referred to as a proprietorship and partnership?

A. That is right.

Q. Had those dealings extended as far back as 1944, at least?

A. Yes, they had.

Q. And during all the war years?

A. During the balance of 1945 and a portion of 1946.

Q. Was any part of the year 1945 and 1946 when corn was in short supply?

A. During all of that period corn was in short supply.

Q. All during 1945?

A. I think so; at least, practically all of 1945, but a good portion of 1946.

Q. Was it more pronounced in one part of 1945 than in another?

147 A. Well, it kept building up. It started and just kept on to a peak and then dropped off.

Q. When did it hit its peak?

A. I would say in mid-1946.

Q. What products of corn did you require in the conduct of the business?

A. We required corn syrup and dextrose.

Q. Dextrose is corn sugar?

A. That is right.

Q. Could you operate the business, the candy manufacturing business, without these items?

A. It could not be operated.

Q. Could anyone else?

A. Nobody could.

Q. It was stated by Mr. Busby that it was not possible to say or to name the people to whom premium payments were made for materials.

A. That is correct.

Q. In the case of corn, briefly will you tell the court why that was so, something about the pattern as to the premium payments that were related to the acquisition of corn or corn syrup?

A. Well, during the years in question the farmers just quit selling corn. They just quit selling unless they 148 received a premium payment, and then some of the astute boys went out and offered them a premium, and assembled the corn and somebody would volunteer to us, we people who had to have corn to keep our factories running, had to have by-products of corn, to get us corn, upon payment of certain sum of money per car, and we could acquire that corn syrup one of two ways: We either traded some of our merchandise at ceiling price, or we paid out cash, and everybody in the business did exactly the same thing.

Every candy manufacturer in the United States did one of two things: He had to. He couldn't possibly operate, and that doesn't only go for candy manufacturers, that goes for all users of the by-products of corn, because the refinery was actually down. Several refineries went down. The farmers wouldn't sell corn at ceiling prices, period, and that is when this black market developed in corn.

Q. Just a little bit further. When these folks had acquired the corn available to be sent to the refineries were you informed of that in some fashion in some instances?

149 A. We either had reasonable assurance that the people who told us they could get the corn for us who were not the principals, understand, could have been a salesman for one of the corn syrups, "I can make this arrangement and send a man out to the plant," or "I will cause a man to be sent to the plant."

They tried to keep hands off—

By Mr. Ryan: I will object to conversations like these unless he tells whom he had them with, when, where and who was present.

A. If the Court please, I don't know.

By the Court: Wait a minute. I don't see that we are particularly concerned with this under the motion to suppress. It may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if the Court please, I think the detailed way we are not concerned with here.

The sole purpose of my inquiry is to give it to the court to the extent it may be deemed pertinent.

I intend to be very brief about it. I intend to prove 150 in view of the objection and ruling that the people who came in and advised them of the availability of corn which could be ear marked for them at the refineries were faceless people whose identity they didn't know, that they paid the money for the overage, the corn went into the refineries, and they got from it such an amount of syrup as the refinery chose to sell them, so that the cost per pound of syrup was determined by what they had paid for the corn in the form of overage only.

If the corn itself was paid for by the refinery in cash, I mean, invoiced at ceiling to the people who sent it in, the overage was paid in cash by our people and the syrup they actually got and the quantity was paid by check representing the cost.

I could elaborate on it but I offer to prove that to the extent it may be material.

By Mr. Ryan: I think that perhaps certainly only to 151 the extent that I cross examine him concerning any statement he made as to whom he got corn syrup from would there be any occasion for counsel to question him concerning it.

I think primarily perhaps the only thing to be concerned with is what he told to Mr. Sauber, what conversations he had with him.

By the Court: I would think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: The same would be true with respect to the other materials which were in short supply, sugar, chocolate. I assume the ruling would be the same. I didn't intend to go into that in detail.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What connection, if any, was there, Mr. Cain, in the sales at premium prices to Lubben's companies and the premium prices that were paid for the materials in short supply?

By Mr. Ryan: I think perhaps the same objection would go to that. What is important is what he said.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a preliminary question.

152 By the Court: It may be very material in determining the merits of the lawsuit, but I don't see how it is material now on this motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't intend to pursue it very far; just a preliminary question.

By the Court: All right, briefly.

By the Witness: Restate the question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Well, our practice was to make only premium sales when we were in need of premium money.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you make any premium sales, as you term it, to anyone other than Lubben and his companies?

A. None.

Q. About how many customers did you have?

A. Sixteen thousand.

By the Court: I wonder if we can't hurry along a little bit.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am skipping some material, Judge, because of what you said.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Cain, any occasion or an 153 occasion late in the year 1947 or early in 1948 when Lubben asked your company to lend General Confections $50,000?

A. I do.

Q. Is it true that you sent Mr. Busby east to investigate the financial position of General Confections, Inc.?

A. I did.

Q. Is it true as he said that on his return and on January 11, 1948, he reported to you at your home?

A. That is correct. Mr. Sullivan came over to my house.

Q. Harold Sullivan was present, too?

A. That is right.

Q. And will you state briefly what his report was?

A. He told us—

Q. His advice.

A. He told us that his financial condition was very bad, that $50,000 wouldn't do him a bit of good in his judgment from a cursory examination of his books, therefore, we would be very silly to enter into such a loan.

154 Mr. Sullivan and I were business men. We didn't make the loan.

Q. At that time did Mr. Busby speak to you and Harold Sullivan on the subject of premium receipts and premium payments?

A. He did.

Q. You were thoroughly familiar with those at that time, were you not?

A. We were.

Q. Prior to that time, prior to January of 1948, did Busby know anything about them?

A. Not a thing.

Q. Did he inquire of you if it was true that there was such payment?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And of Harold, too?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Did you tell him that there had been?

By Mr. Ryan: If there is going to be any more, I think there ought to be a question of what conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him what had gone on in the company,

155 that we had been taking over ceiling prices, and we had been making trade deals. We had taken over ceiling payments from Lubben and his various companies over a period of a couple years, and he promptly became exercised about it and said, "We must make an amended return."

Mr. Sullivan and I told him to go down and make whatever arrangements was necessary with the proper authority to make such amended return.

Q. What, if anything, was said as to the reason for your failure to incorporate those items in the 1945 and 1946 returns?

A. Well, our reasons, of course, were very apparent. We were in violation—

Q. No, what was said?

A. We told him we were in violation of the OPA and subject to triple penalty if we were, and we certainly didn't want to put that on our tax return. That was number one.

Q. How long did you and Harold Sullivan and Busby discuss it before you decided to have Mr. Busby go in to inquire?

A. My recollection would be at the top a week. It could have been longer, but I doubt it.

156 Q. At that time did you know whether any investigation of Shotwell had been commenced?

A. No, none.

Q. Did you have any information of any kind?

A. No, none.

Q. As to a pending investigation of Shotwell?

A. No.

Q. At that time did you have any knowledge or information of any kind as to any pending investigation against Lubben or any of his companies?

A. None.

Q. Did you discuss with Mr. Busby the question as to who was to contact the people at the Bureau?

A. Yes, we discussed that at great length. A suggestion was made by one of us, I think my suggestion was that we discuss the matter with Mr. Bowden; that Busby threw in Mr. Taylor's name, and Sullivan threw in another name, and finally we decided to let Mr. Busby go down and, at least, explore the situation with whomever he was going to explore it with.

Q. At the time of this discussion with Mr. Busby and before he was appointed to go down for any purpose, what, if anything, did he say to you about 157 the policy of voluntary disclosure?

A. He was very clear on that. He said if we went in and made a disclosure that is all there was to it. They would probably assess a tax and we would pay the tax, and that would be that.

Q. Did he say anything more about what the policy was?

A. I think that satisfied me.

Q. Did he say anything more about what the policy was?

A. At that time, Mr. O'Brien, I don't believe he did.

Q. Did he tell you before going into the policy what the effect of the failure to put these items in the return might be?

A. He said we might be subject to criminal liability if we didn't do it.

Q. And what did he say in respect to criminal liability if you went in?

A. He said there would be none.

Q. And was it then after a week or so that you asked him to go in to see the appropriate officer?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Did you or Mr. Sullivan or Mr. Huebner at 158 that time authorize him to reveal the name of the taxpayer?

A. The minute he reported back to us we—

Q. No, when you first sent him.

A. We told him not to make a disclosure of the name.

Q. Or of its officials?

A. Or anything.

Q. What did you ask him to ascertain?

A. To ascertain just to set a hypothetical case before whomever he was going to interview and outline it and ask him if there would be any criminal liability in that event, and to report back to us.

Q. Did you ask also what it is that you would have to do, to ask him to ascertain what you would have to do if a disclosure was made?

A. Oh, yes. You mean the mechanics?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. That, of course, I left up to him.

Q. Now, did Mr. Busby subsequently tell you that he had been in?

A. He did.

Q. Did he say who it was that he had talked to?
159 A. Yes, he told me he had talked to Ernest Sauber.

Q. Mr. Sauber was then the Chief Deputy Collector of Chicago?

A. That is correct.

Q. And he is still in this area, is he not?

A. That is right.

Q. When he reported back to you were any of the other officers of the company present?

A. I think possibly Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner were present because we made a decision and we would be present.

Q. What, if anything, was said as to whether Mr. Sauber was the proper person to make such a disclosure to?

A. Mr. Busby assured us that he was, and said that he was.

Q. What did he tell you that Mr. Sauber had said?

A. He said that after he presented this hypothetical case to Mr. Sauber, Mr. Sauber said that we were in no position to file an amended return because we seemed to have no definite knowledge of how much money we had taken in, and therefore it would be best just to leave it as it was and an agent would come out to the 160 company in question and compile whatever information they needed to assess a tax, if a tax was assessable.

Q. Let me ask you, Mr. Cain: At the time that you decided to have Mr. Busby explore the situation did you give any consideration, or was any consideration given to the question of whether there was any proceedings for criminal prosecution being instituted for violation of OPA items?

A. Yes, we investigated the OPA and found out that since, I think it was July 1, 1947, that no suit had been filed.

In other words, the agency had been disbanded and no suit had been filed and therefore all of the boys were going in, you know, one by one.

Q. Was that here in this district?

A. Yes, there was a lot of them going in.

Q. Following that did you tell Mr. Busby to go back to Sauber and reveal the identity of the company and make this disclosure?

A. I did.

Q. Was that and everything you have said here in relation to the corporate returns for the years 1945
161 and 1946?

A. That is correct.

Q. What did you tell Busby to say to Mr. Sauber?

A. Well, I told him to just state the facts, that we had taken in a lot of over ceiling money and that we spent a lot of over ceiling money. That we couldn't ascertain how much we had taken in and how much had been spent. We couldn't ear mark it, but that we had to give him a very rough statement of facts because it was quite a large job to try to assemble something—

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. The answer should be confined to the conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is saying what he told him to say.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Am I correct?

A. That is right, that is what I told Mr. Busby to do, to tell Sauber those facts.

Q. What, if anything, did you tell him to say concerning the payment of that tax which you planned to do?

A. I told him we were ready, willing and able to pay any tax that might be assessed.

162 Q. Did you tell him to tell Sauber that?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this still in January?

A. I left for California and drove out that year and I arrived at my house on the first day of February.

Q. I am asking you whether—

A. I am trying to answer your question, Mr. O'Brien. I am trying to figure the date. It is my best recollection that I had one meeting with Mr. Sauber personally prior to going out there, but I can't be sure, but this conversation that I had with Mr. Busby was before I went to California. You can rest assured of that.

Q. You are certain of your conversation with Mr. Sauber in March of 1948?

A. Very definitely.

Q. Is it your best recollection now in looking over the facts of this matter that you also saw Mr. Sauber before you left?

A. It is my best recollection that I did see him for a short time.

Q. When you were there personally, when you first met Mr. Sauber, what did you say to him?

163 A. I asked him about the timeliness—

By Mr. Ryan: Objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. No. You must say what he said.

A. I said, "Mr. Sauber, the only thing I am disturbed about in this whole situation is, have you had the agent check the file in this case, and if you haven't done so, will you do so?"

By the Court: When did you say it, sir, in February?

By the Witness: This was in January, Judge.

By Mr. Ryan: This is to Mr. Sauber?

By the Witness: That is my best recollection, Mr. Ryan.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Go ahead. You were telling us about what you said to Sauber.

A. I think that is my only purpose in going there with Mr. Busby, was to get that one thing over.

Q. When you saw Sauber in March did you ask him—what, if anything, was said between you and him as to the fact of whether any investigation had commenced?

164 A. He assured me that there had been no investigation commenced.

By Mr. Ryan: Object to that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, "Byron, for goodness sakes, quit worrying about it! There is nothing started about it, and just go on about your business and forget about it."

By Mr. Ryan: I don't know now who is telling Cain—

By the Witness: Mr. Sauber.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What, if anything, did he say he had done to ascertain that?

A. He said he had checked with the Agents' office.

Q. Did he say what they told him?

A. "He assured me that I could go out and whistle."

Q. No, what did he say? What did he say?

A. He said that he had checked with the Agents' office.

Q. And they told him what?

A. They informed him that everything was all 165 right, so I could forget about it.

Q. Did you then in March ask Mr. Sauber anything about the need for filing an amended return?

A. I certainly did. I went into it in great detail.

Q. What did you say?

A. I told Mr. Sauber of our problem in trying to ascertain the amount of money that we had received in over ceiling payments.

I said that the only thing that we could possibly do in dealing with a chap like this chap Lubben would be to take every invoice that we had sent to him and apply the maximum over ceiling price.

And then I said there definitely had been trade deals with Mr. Lubben, but there was no way for us to separate them, and if we applied the maximum over ceiling price—Now, this thing started, and I told him this—this thing started slow like all things like this. The over ceiling price of candy was low. Then it reached up like the corn market did to a peak. We used the peak price in our application to his invoices.

Q. Did you tell him you were—

166 A. I am talking to Mr. Sauber, this conversation. I said, "We will use the peak price and when we come up with that figure, that would be the best of our recollection."

He said, "You can't make an amended return. You just give us—we will have to send a man out there and you will work with him and we will get the best we can."

I said, "As to our expenditures I just can't tell you anything. I don't know."

Q. What did he say about expenditures?

A. He said "it wouldn't do any good if you did know because we wouldn't allow them anyway. We absolutely won't allow over the ceiling expenditures."

I said, "O.-K., but I hope you will take it into consideration and see that we are treated fairly."

I think that is the tone on which that particular meeting of March 4th ended.

Q. What, if anything, was said concerning the payment of the tax when and if the tax was determined?

A. Well, I told him in view of the government

167 situation where they make no allowances, we owe them a lot of money, and we stood ready and able to pay it immediately, and the sooner we would pay it the better I would like it, but I said that wouldn't stop us if at some future time we tried to get our money back or a portion of it for these over ceiling payments.

He said, "That is perfectly all right. All we want to do is get the tax. That is my job. I am a collector and I want to get the tax."

Q. What did you do about assembling the data that you told Sauber you would assemble pending the arrival of the agent?

A. We started out to make a compilation. We were primarily interested in over ceiling payments to us, anything that could be charged to us. That is the only thing we were interested in.

So we started out to assemble that data and as things usually do, the agent didn't appear and he didn't appear, so it dragged.

The minute he appeared everybody went to work on it again.

Mr. Busby, I think, had a man working on it continuously from about, oh, January, February, right 168 on through, but then we put the whole staff on it, Mr. Huebner, and the whole gang of us got to work, Mr. Sullivan, and we assembled what would give him something to go by and we told him that.

Q. What did you assemble?

A. We got the invoices that had been shipped to Lubben and through Mr. Huebner's memory we tacked the highest price that we in our judgment had ever been charged on over ceiling and we considered no trade deals, no straight deals with the fellow at all. Every single invoice we considered that we got some kind of a cash rebate on.

Q. Whether you did or not?

A. Whether we did or not, whether it was a trade or not, and then we finally came up with a figure of something like $400,000.

We said, "Here it is."

And then they were in a dilemma about what to do about the payouts, and I said, "I will tell you what we will do about it: Give me a piece of paper."

I said, "Busby, work it backwards."

I wrote it down this way—"There is your payouts."
169 It took me one minute, less than a minute and I knew they weren't any good, and we couldn't substantiate them, but I threw them in for what they were worth. I hoped they believed that we paid out something.

Q. Well, on that, Mr. Cain, you had available amongst the office records all of the invoices for materials purchased including those in short supply?

A. That is correct.

Q. Nearly everything was in short supply?

A. Everything that we used.
Q. Stuff that you used?
A. That is right.
Q. And you did have the invoices?
A. That is right.
Q. Showing the times of acquisition and the quantity?
A. The only thing we could prove by that, Mr. O'Brien—
Q. No, I just say, showing the time of acquisition and the quantities?
A. That is right.
Q. Is it a fact that Messrs. Sullivan and Huebner
170 were in New York in the early part of February, 1948?
A. Yes, they called me on two occasions out in California.
Q. Have you checked the records of the company to see if that is so?
A. That is right. One call was $15 and something; the other was $19.
Q. That they were there?
A. That is right, they were there.
Q. Did they tell you at that time of their conversation with Mr. Lubben concerning this $50,000 loan?
A. They did.
Q. Who did you talk to, Sullivan or Huebner?
A. I talked to Mr. Sullivan.
Q. What did he say?
By Mr. Ryan: I object. I can't see what bearing this has on the question at hand.
By the Court: Has it any bearing?
By Mr. O'Brien: I think so.
By the Court: In what way? There is no contention
171 that a loan was made to Lubben, so why go into it further? I assume there is no such contention.
By Mr. O'Brien: I am not going into the loan, but I assure your Honor that it could have some connection.
By the Court: If you will indicate to me what it is I will be glad to listen to you. I don't see it.
By Mr. O'Brien: I think the connection is, Judge, from what I understand to be the situation, that at that time, based on the part of the conversations that were had concerning that loan, it will be perfectly clear that as far as we can rely on what Mr. Lubben said, he was not or had no knowledge that their companies were under investigation in February of 1948, and it is in relation to that conversation that I am seeking to establish that fact, such as it may have relation to the primary issue here.

By Mr. Ryan: The question whether or not the defendants had any knowledge of it, they can testify whether they did or didn't. They have already done so.

172 If they had any knowledge whether Lubben was under investigation or they were under investigation, they say they did or didn't have the knowledge—

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, if the Government wants to stipulate that it is quite immaterial what was the fact, as long as we didn't have knowledge of it, why, I will go along with that.

By the Court: Tell me what you want to prove by this conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to prove that in this conversation of February, 1948, Lubben was threatening to go in and report the situation to the Revenue Office and that he hadn't yet been there.

By the Court: You mean he was threatening to report?

By Mr. O'Brien: Threatening that unless we gave him the money he was going in.

By the Court: Well, do you offer that as proof that there had been no investigation of Lubben up until that time?

By Mr. O'Brien: Proof of the fact that as far as 173 it is material Lubben was representing that there had been none.

By the Court: That isn't any evidence that there hadn't been any investigation of Lubben. You can't prove that by what Lubben said.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, but I can prove that he had not gone in.

By Mr. Ryan: You can't prove anything more than what Lubben said.

By the Court: Anything he said over the phone is hearsay.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, all right.

By the Court: It is hearsay in the sense of trying to prove the fact that no investigation had been made of Lubben.

Isn't that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true.

I will put Mr. Sullivan on to cover that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is it true, Mr. Cain, that you retained the services of Mr. Busby to work with you and the officers and your employes in not only assembling the data but in 174 assisting the Government agents in their audit work?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you continued to do that right up until shortly before the time of the indictment?

A. That is right.

Q. At any of those times from beginning to end did you have any intimation or notice from any agent, or from anyone else for that matter, that a conduct of that investigation was for any purpose other than to ascertain the amount due as Mr. Sauber had told you?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone tell you, did any of the agents or anyone else, tell you that there might be a criminal prosecution?

A. I was leaving for California—

Q. No, I mean during these times.

A. Mr. Sam Krane told me, finally.

Q. Yes, but I mean prior to that. While you were there?

A. Mr. O'Brien, they were there almost continuously from 1948 until we were indicted.

Q. When was it that Sam Krane talked to you?

175 A. He didn't call me, I called him. I was leaving for California this year and I don't know just when it was. Around the middle of February or the latter part of February.

Q. Right close to the time of the indictment?

A. That is right, and I said, "Sam, when are we going to get the case wound up? Please tell me when."

He said, "I think you better come down and see me."

I said, "All right."

He said, "This afternoon."

So I went down. I think it was two o'clock.

Q. I can't hear you.
A. I think it was about two o'clock in the afternoon.
Q. Yes, sir?
A. He took me into a little office and he said, "Your case is in the hands of the Justice Department."
Q. Meaning that they had recommended criminal prosecution?
A. That is right. That was about the first—it
176 may have been around the first of March.
Q. That is the first you knew about it?
A. That is the first I knew about it.
Q. What year was that, this year?
A. Yes, this year.
Q. Now, Mr. Cain, I want to ask you one other question in that connection:
As far as you know, was anybody at your company, any other officer or employe given any notice or any information prior to that time that a criminal prosecution was to be or might be recommended?
A. No, sir.
Q. During any time before the indictment in this case did the Department of Justice or the Bureau of Internal Revenue or anyone else tender you or invite you to any conference?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did they ever tell you what amount they had determined to be due?
A. No.
Q. And asked you to pay it?
A. No.
Q. They never notified you what the figure was?
177 A. I tried consistently to get it.
Q. You never saw it—is it true that you never saw it until you saw what they claimed in the indictment?
A. That is correct.
Q. And to your best knowledge and belief is that true as to the remaining defendants?
A. That is correct.
By Mr. Ryan: I will object to his belief.
By the Witness: Well, it is true. It is true as to the remaining defendants.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you have any information of anything to the contrary as far as the other defendants are concerned?

A. Not the slightest.

Q. In addition to inspecting and auditing your books did the agents go to your suppliers and customers, to your knowledge?

A. They did. In fact, they told me they were going to do that, and I told them that I would save the Government a lot of money, that I would give them and have Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner join me in an affi-

178 davit that we never paid any of our suppliers a penny over the ceiling, but they went out deliberately to embarrass The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. There could be no other reason.

By Mr. Ryan: I object to that conclusion and move it be stricken.

By the Court: That may be stricken.

By the Witness: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And did that, to your knowledge, have a good or bad effect on the business of the company?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. It is immaterial.

By the Court: Sustained.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In that connection did you decide to call upon Mr. Ernest Wright?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you do so?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. You say "we," you and who else?

A. Mr. Sullivan.

179 Q. Do you remember about when that was?

A. I would place the date in about sometime in 1950. I think there were two visits to Mr. Wright.

Q. The first visit in 1950?

A. It could have been in the early part of 1950—whenever they started out. The visit you are talking about is the one that was in connection with their going out and visiting the companies.

Whenever they started to visit the company right after that we went to see Mr. Wright.

Q. Can you place the date no more closely than that?

A. Well, let's call it mid-1950.

By Mr. Ryan: Mid-what?

By the Witness: That is just a guess, though.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I don't want your guess. I would like to have your best recollection on it.

A. 1949—

By Mr. Ryan: What is the answer, 1949?

By the Witness: No. 1949 Mammel came in. I was trying to get the sequence of events through my own head.

180 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When the agents were visiting the customers were they on the premises, at the plant?

A. No, they weren't on the premises. They would come in and go out, come in and go out.

Q. Were they there steadily?

A. They would disappear and then we would get reports that they had been calling on our customers, on our suppliers.

Q. Was there any time that they disappeared for a couple months?

A. Yes, I believe there was.

Q. Refreshing your recollection, I will ask you to state if that wasn't as late as 1951?

A. That was our last visit. Our last visit to Mr. Wright—

Q. Do you remember visiting Mr. Wright at that time or was that Mr. Olson?

A. That was Mr. Olson.

Q. Well, let's veer a minute. When did you visit Mr. Olson?

A. I visited Mr. Olson in October, 1951.

Q. Which Mr. Olson?

A. The Mr. Olson who was Mr. Wright's assist-

181 ant. I think that is Mr. Oscar Olson. Is that correct?

By Mr. Mammel: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were you alone or with somebody?

A. I was alone.

Q. What conversation did you have with Mr. Olson?

A. Well, I called Mr. Wright and he wasn't in, that is, by phone. I was called to the Blackstone Hotel—this is preliminary to my going there—and asked to take the chairmanship of a Democratic dinner for Frank McKinney who was being made National Committeeman of the Democratic National Committee, and I said, "Boys, I don't think I should. I have a tax case over there, and one of the newspapers is liable to pick it up or do something about it and I think I shouldn't."

They said, "Why don't you call over there?"

I said, "All right, I will call."

So I did call.

I couldn't get Mr. Wright so I saw Mr. Olson.

I told Mr. Olson very frankly just what I am stating here.

182 I said that I was asked to take this job and I begged off.

He said, "I would have no worry about it at all, but I would prefer you see Mr. Wright, but if I were you I'd have no worry about it at all."

And he went through all the steps that had to be done before anything could ever reach the public in this case. That was in October of 1951 and he knew, he was very familiar with it.

By Mr. Ryan: Would the reporter read that answer back, the last portion?

(Record read.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When was it with reference to that visit to Mr. Olson that you at last saw Mr. Wright?

A. I would say that we had seen Mr. Wright in the early part of 1951 and again in 1950. Mr. Sullivan and I visited him on both those occasions.

Q. On the occasion of your last visit early in 1951, was anyone present other than the three of you?

A. No, there was not.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Wright?

By the Court: When was this?

183 By Mr. O'Brien: Sir?

By the Court: When was this?

By Mr. O'Brien: As well as he could place it was early in 1951, Judge.

By the Witness:

A. We went into great detail about the case.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. No. I want to know what you said and what he said.

A. I told him that the company was suffering and suffering severely from the tactics that were being used by the agent and I wanted a bill, I wanted to get it over with, and he kind of smiled and said it was probably the condition of the market rather than the agents that were causing our business to suffer. The candy business wasn't too good, anyway.

Q. I want the whole conversation. What else was said?

A. Then he went into—we went into a discussion of the case itself and he wound up by asking us who got the money.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him we didn't know.

184 Q. What did he say?

A. He said we weren't cooperating with our Government.

Q. Did that end the conference?

A. Just about. He again assured us that he would check into it and see if a bill could be brought forth. Something like that. And we left on a rather pleasant note.

By Mr. Ryan: That a bill would be brought forth?

By the Witness: We asked him if we couldn't get the tax matter settled. That is all we were trying to do.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you recall about when it was that Mr. Lima left the plant and Mr. Krane came in?

A. I don't know too well, Mr. O'Brien. I don't believe I saw Mr. Lima at all when he was there. I know that he was there because I was there every day but, I don't think I saw him at all and I did see Mr. Krane discuss the problem with him, oh, two or three times, and I think he got out of the case in the fall or close to Christmas.

Q. What year?

185 A. Around 1948, the latter part of 1948.

Q. Did he come back later?

A. I don't believe Mr. Krane came back until 1951.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I may have a few more questions of Mr. Cain. But I think substantially I have covered it. I imagine I would save time if I go through my notes more carefully.

At what time do you want to adjourn?

By the Court: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

By the Court: Do you want to work tonight?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I have some interviewing to do of witnesses that I haven't seen that I have to get working on. I would more or less—

By the Court: Well, my problem is I should be in Minneapolis by Friday morning.

By Mr. Ryan: I do have some people to talk to.

By the Court: All of your witnesses are from here?

By Mr. Ryan: I brought some people from out of 186 town. I have som from New York. As a matter of fact, I have two people here right now from New York—three people, to be exact. They are not all local people. There are going to be some local people from the Treasury Department here.

As I say, the testimony of my witnesses will not be extensive, as extensive as this has been. It will be brief, for the most part. But I don't see how I can assure the court that we can finish tomorrow. I can review the situation with that in mind.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think it will be finished tomorrow.

By Mr. Ryan: As I indicated to the court, I thought I would probably take a day. I can't see other than that I will. I am trying to allow appropriate time for cross examination. It is always guess work.

By Mr. O'Brien: If you have to be back Friday, Judge, is there any time—

By the Court: I have to be back Friday morning.

187 By Mr. Ryan: I am willing to go ahead, Judge, for a time tonight. I would like to have some time. I don't want to work too late because I have to do some planning and interviewing.

By Mr. O'Brien: I worked until one o'clock this morning getting ready.

By Mr. Ryan: But I am willing to go ahead for a certain length of time, your Honor, and then I can talk to these witnesses afterwards, if that is agreeable.

By the Court: What documents have you that you want me to look over?

By Mr. Ryan: I have one more folder that apparently wasn't brought up. These are all the documents on the disclosure from the Treasury Department except—

By the Court: Are you contending that any of these documents are privileged as such or otherwise admissible except on the ground that they lack evidentiary value?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, they are all, there is a privilege, there is a regulation in the Treasury Department that 188 prevents the turnover of any files, not evidence that is gathered, but files that they have, correspondence, things of this type. They fall into the classification covered by the confidential files regulation and emyloyes are not permitted to turn them over without permission from the secretary of the Treasury.

Now, with respect to them, of course, there could be in any file of any papers a paper could be evidentiary for certain purposes and certainly files like these records of the Revenue Office showing the assignment of returns, those are evidentiary, they are made in the regular course of business. Some other documents I took out. These, I say, with respect to them, although they all fall within the meaning of the regulation, although the Secretary can lift it, and to the extent that they are not evidentiary they are represented there to the extent that I considered them to be represented I have separated them and turned them over to counsel.

189 With respect to the rest of these the tender has been made to the court for a determination that if he feels that they should be turned over they are being presented to him to be examined.

With respect to any particular documents from among that group the court would select to turn over I should then want to see them and find out if there was some public policy that I might bring to your attention against turning them over.

By the Court: I assume you don't intend to offer any of these documents?

By Mr. Ryan: I have no knowledge of any documents in there that I intend to offer.

By the Court: We will resume again at seven-thirty, Gentlemen.

(Whereupon a recess herein was taken to 7:30 o'clock p.m. of the same day, November 12, 1952.)

Met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Ryan
Mr. O'Brien

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143. United States of America v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Hearing on defendants' motion to suppress certain evidence.

By the Court: You may proceed.

BYRON A. CAIN, one of the defendants herein, resumed the stand, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

191 Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Cain, in your conversation or conversations with Mr. Sauber what, if anything, was said by you to him as to your ability to say who the premium payments were paid to?

A. Well, I told him it would be impossible for us to tell him who the payments were paid to because we didn't know.

Q. What did he say about premium payments in general?

A. He said that premium payments regardless of whether we could or could not tell would not be allowed by the Government.

Q. Did Mr. Busby tell you, Sullivan, or Huebner, that is, you or Sullivan in your talk on January 11, 1948, or any of your talks after that that there was any requirement for a disclosure other than those mentioned in the published policy?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of any other or further requirements?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know if it is the fact that your ability
192 to say to whom premium payments were made was or might be regarded as a condition precedent to a disclosure?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know at any time if it is a fact that the Bureau of Internal Revenue claimed a continuing discretion to recommend criminal prosecution even though a disclosure had been made?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you first hear of any visit by Mr. Krane to the Shotwell premises for any purpose?

A. It was either on June 21st or June 22d of 1948.

Q. Prior to that time did you have any knowledge or information of any kind that there was or may have been an investigation of Lubben or any of his companies?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

193 Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Now, Mr. Cain, before you sent Mr. Busby to New York and before he returned and told you that he learned you received over ceiling payments you knew, of course, that you had received over ceiling payments?

A. Certainly.

Q. Did you consider prior to that time that Mr. Busby talked to you the effect of these over ceiling transactions and the corporation tax liability?

A. Yes, we had.

Q. You had considered it.

Was it your thought it would effect your tax liability to increase it or that it would remain constant in spite these transactions?

A. Well, at that time we didn't know.

Q. Well, at the time that you filed corporation tax returns for the year 1945 did you consider that they were honest tax returns or an honest tax?

A. They couldn't have been.

By the Court: I don't hear.

By Mr. O'Brien: A little louder.

By the Court: They could not have been.

194 By Mr. Ryan:

Q. You mean that you considered at the time that the corporate return for 1945 was filed that it could not have been an honest tax return?

A. That is correct, inasmuch as it didn't reflect our total income or total expenses.

Q. Did you consider at the time the corporation tax return for 1945 was filed that it did not show the total of net taxable income?

A. Restate that?

(Record read.)

By the Witness:

A. I would say yes to that statement.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. That you considered it did not show the total of net taxable income.

By the Court: I don't think the witness answers the question. He nods his head.

By the Witness: I said yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. So when the 1945 tax return for the Shotwell Corporation was filed you considered it to be a fraudulent return?

A. Inasmuch as it did not reflect the total income 195 and total expense it was fraudulent, yes.

Q. And in that it did not reflect the total, in your opinion, the total tax due the Government, is that right?

A. In the opinion of the Government, yes.

Q. I mean, in your opinion. I am not questioning about the opinion of the Government. In your opinion.

A. In my opinion I would never give the Government any money unless they told me I owed it to them, as I would have to take the Government's opinion on taxes.

Q. My question is, when the Shotwell Corporation tax return for the year 1945 was filed, did you consider that you had omitted from it some of the net taxable income, the net taxable income that was in fact received by the Shotwell Corporation?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think he has answered that, if the Court please.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, then, you considered the 1945 to be a fraudulent return, is that correct?

196 A. That is correct, inasmuch as my modification of the answer previously.

Q. What modification is that?

By the Witness: Read it back to him, Mr. Reporter.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, did you or didn't you consider it a fraudulent return?

A. Yes, it was a fraudulent return inasmuch as it did not reflect the total income and expense of the company.

Q. Well, would you consider a return fraudulent if it showed all of the tax that was due from the taxpayer even though there were inaccuracies in it?

A. Yes.

Q. You would consider it fraudulent?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider that the 1945 tax return of the Shotwell Corporation was fraudulent because it did not reflect all of the net taxable income of the corporation and all of the tax due the United States?

A. I would say yes to that question.

197 Q. Did you consider the 1946 tax return of the Shotwell Corporation fraudulent as not reflecting correctly the total net taxable income of the corporation for that year and the total tax due?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, when you called on Mr. Sauber in company with Mr. Busby did you tell him that the Shotwell Corporation had filed false income tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes, I guess I did.

By Mr. Ryan: Mark this Government's Exhibit 1 for identification.

(Document so marked.)

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I show you, Mr. Cain, a copy of an affidavit which has just been marked Government's Exhibit 1 for identification, which purports to be a copy of an affidavit that you made in connection or in support of the motion to dismiss.

I ask you to look at it and see if that is the affidavit that you made—if it is a copy of the affidavit.

A. Are you trying to say that because I say omissions and misstatements—

198 Q. No, I am just asking you, Mr. Cain, if that is a copy of your affidavit.

A. Yes, this is a copy.

Q. Directing your attention then to the last page thereof and to the language:

> "Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corporation owes no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95 which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98 which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of said agents aforesaid were of such embarrassment. * * *"

Is that your statement made under oath?

A. That is my statement under oath, and it still stands.

Q. There is no question pending.

Now, then, directing your attention to a conference that has been testified to which you had with Mr. Busby when he returned from New York in January of 1948, at that time he asked you about those over ceiling transactions that the Shotwell Company had had, is that correct?

199 A. That is correct.

Q. At that time did you tell him that the Shotwell Corporation had made false tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. At that time I told Mr. Busby that we had omitted this over ceiling receipts and over ceiling payments.

Q. Did you tell him—

A. No, I did not.

Q. You did not tell him that.

You did tell him, did you, that you had had over ceiling receipts, you had received over ceiling payments and you had paid out over ceiling payments and that roughly they balanced or washed each other out?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you told him, did you, to go to the Bureau of Internal Revenue and make certain hypothetical inquiries concerning what should be done in a situation such as that?

A. That is right.

Q. In a situation where there were balancing gross receipts and additional deductions, is that right?

200 A. That is correct.

Q. Did you tell him to tell the official of the Treasury Department hypothetically otherwise that the Shotwell Corporation owed the Government taxes for those years?

A. He reported back that the Government told us that we did owe taxes.

Q. Well, did you not tell him to tell the Government or the Bureau of Internal Revenue hypothetically or otherwise that the undisclosed corporation owed the Government taxes?

A. I told him to tell the Government that because of our inability to ear mark the over ceiling payments that we would in all probability owe money.

Q. In other words, because of your failure to work them up, in other words, to report accurately on what you had received and what you had paid out, is that what you mean?

A. Well, Mr. Ryan, when you pay money out to faceless people it is impossible to ear mark it and to keep a record of it.

Q. Well, now, he came back and reported to you what?

A. He came back and reported to me and to Mr.
201 Sullivan that he had presented the case to Mr. Sauber, and Mr. Sauber said there was a lot of them at that time, and that he saw nothing unusual about it, but that we could not under any circumstances make an amended return because we couldn't give them the exact amount of money that had come in over ceiling, or the exact amount of money that had gone out; therefore, it would be necessary for them to send an agent out and assemble that information. He would appreciate it if we would help him with it.

Q. You sent him back the second time?

A. That is correct.

Q. On that occasion you told him, did you, to disclose the identity of the taxpayer?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you at that time tell him to advise Mr. Sauber that the Shotwell Corporation had made false tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I had quite a bit of confidence in Mr. Busby. He knew the case by that time.

Q. Did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false tax returns for those years?

202 A. I don't recall telling him anything. We told him what to do, to go in and disclose the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, period.

Q. Do you recall what you did tell him?

A. We told him to go to whomever he had been to before and disclose the identity of the taxpayer.

Q. And did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I don't believe I did. I don't think I had to tell Mr. Busby anything. We certainly told him to go in and do whatever was necessary to get the matter straightened out.

Q. Did Mr. Busby in the course of informing you about the requirements of the voluntary disclosure doctrine on or about January 11th or 12th of 1948 tell you that it was necessary that the taxpayer make an honest, full disclosure of all the material facts?

A. Mr. Sauber told us that we couldn't make that.

Q. No—Mr. Busby.

A. Mr. Busby reported back to us that Mr. Sauber said we couldn't—

Q. I am sorry, I mean, in the conference you had 203 with Busby before he went over to Mr. Sauber the first time.

A. No, he did not.

Q. He did not?

A. No.

Q. Did he tell you that at any time?

A. No. In this case it was utterly impossible to make it complete. It had to be dug out and dug up and even today we can't be sure it is complete and accurate.

Q. Well, in sending him over to Mr. Sauber you had in mind making a disclosure to avoid criminal prosecution, was that the purpose?

A. Very definitely.

Q. Did you, Mr. Cain, make any memorandum of the date upon which you went to Mr. Sauber to commence this disclosure?

A. Well, Mr. Ryan, we have reconstructed it in this way: That Mr. Busby was in New York on the 10th day of January, or returned to Chicago from New York. He reported to me at my house the next day, which was a Sunday, I believe.

We asked him to go in so it had to be shortly there- 204 after. I left for California on the 23d or 24th, and I saw Mr. Sauber before I left.

Q. Well, my question is whether or not you made any memorandum of the date on which he went over there for the first time.

A. No, I have not. I just have the facts.

Q. Did you make any memorandum on the date which he went over there on the occasion which he was instructed to disclose the taxpayer's name?

A. No, I made no memorandum.

Q. Did Mr. Busby advise you in January, on or about the 11th or 12th, before he went over to Mr. Sauber for the first time that one of the things that was important in a voluntary disclosure is that it be timely?

A. Yes, I think he did.

Q. And did he tell you that that required that it be made before the tax return and been assigned for examination by the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. I think he did.

Q. Were you not mindful of the importance of establishing the date upon which that disclosure was made for that reason?

205 A. Well, I didn't make a memorandum.

Q. It was important to you?

A. It has become important. I had implicit confidence in my Government and Mr. Sauber at that time, and I still do have.

Q. Did you suggest to Mr. Busby that he send any registered letter or notification to the Bureau of Internal Revenue concerning disclosure?

A. I made no suggestion.

Q. Or require any statement from them?

A. I made no suggestion.

Q. Concerning the disclosure.

Now, after Mr. Busby returned from the second conference with Mr. Sauber he reported back to you, did he?

A. On each occasion, yes.

Q. And on the second occasion when he reported back what did he tell you?

A. He told us he had disclosed the taxpayer's name and that Mr. Sauber had suggested that he would send somebody out from the Agents' office as quickly as possible and for us to go ahead and gather what data we could that would be helpful to the Agent in the meantime.

206 Q. Well, did you then yourself have a conference with Mr. Sauber?

A. I am inclined to believe that I did, Mr. Ryan, and prior to my leaving for California on the 23rd or 24th.

Q. And that would be the occasion of Mr. Busby's third visit, your first visit?

A. That would be right.

Q. And you think that was in January also?

A. It had to be because I left here on the 23d or 24th of January.

Q. That is if it was prior to your departure for California?

A. It was prior to my departure.

Q. You are certain of that?

A. That is right.

Q. At that time what conversation took place between you and Mr. Sauber and Mr. Busby?

A. Well, I went into the matter of the over ceiling receipts. He discouraged me on the matter of the over ceiling payments. He said it was out, that they might give it some consideration, but if they did it would be very little, that the Department's rule is they would 207 not consider over ceiling payments by us.

Q. Were you surprised by that statement?

A. Well, I wasn't surprised because I didn't know what I was going into.

After all, I was a business man. I got involved in this thing through no particular desire on my part. I wanted to build up a business and so I wasn't surprised nor was I disappointed.

I said, "We stand willing and able to pay any amount of tax that is assessed against us, and we are anxious to get the job done. If we find that we have money coming back or feel that we have money coming back, we will use every means to get it back, but we are ready to pay it right now."

Q. Did you tell him the corporation owed taxes for those years?

A. I did. We undoubtedly owed taxes.

Q. Did you tell him that before he told you that the disbursements in the black market would not be deductible?

A. Only because I told him I could not ear mark the disbursements. I thought if I go through them and ear mark a good portion of the disbursements that I 208 could get a deduction or at least that portion of them, that I could ear mark. I expected to be assessed for those that I could not ear mark.

Q. Whether you owed the taxes or not, is that right?

A. Whether I owed—I expected to be assessed for them.

Q. But to the extent that they would be deductible you would consider that you didn't really owe the taxes, even though—

A. You mean my own mental reservation on it?

Q. —even you might be in a position where you would have to pay?

A. That is correct.

Q. Well, then, you wouldn't have considered yourself guilty of any fraud at that time, is that right?

A. I don't understand this fraud thing all the time, Mr. Ryan. Under the terms of the Revenue Act I was guilty of fraud.

Q. Well, the statute involved provides that anyone who attempts to defeat and evade the payment of any tax imposed under the particular chapter, wilfully 209 attempts to defeat and evade, is guilty of what we call tax evasion, and that is the fraud to which we have reference, I have reference, in asking these questions—the wilful attempt to defeat and evade the payment of taxes, and on the basis of what you say your attitude was when you talked to Mr. Sauber you didn't consider that you were a wilful evader, is that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I object to that question. I think it calls for a legal conclusion of the witness. He made his position plain, his interpretation of a moot question of law. I don't think it is particularly helpful to the inquiry here.

By Mr. Ryan: It is a question of consciousness of guilt or the absence of consciousness of guilt.

By the Court: That is right. He may answer.

By the Witness: Will you read that question, please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

210 A. That is a long question, isn't it?

Well, I was certainly an unwilling evader.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, you mean, in the sense that your evasion was incident to something else, or in the sense that it wasn't wilful if there was evasion?

A. Mr. Ryan, if it hadn't been for the fact that the OPA was in effect and we had to do things in violation of that law, this tax case never would be. We would have reported every penny of income that ever came in to the company.

Q. Well, do I understand then that the answer to the question is that you felt in the position of a reluctant evader because you had to evade in order to conceal the black market operations?

A. I had to evade to stay in business, if that is the way you want to put it. I will answer it that way. Nobody could stay in business unless they got corn syrup, and we had to get corn syrup or close our factories and that was not only true of us, it was true of every manufacturer in the business in the United States.

Q. Well, then, you say that you did tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation owed taxes unquestionably?

211 A. We told Mr. Sauber that unquestionably we owed taxes, that is right, under their rules.

Q. How do you reconcile that with your affidavit in which you say that at all times you have maintained throughout these proceedings that the corporation owed no taxes?

A. Well, we morally owe no taxes. If we took in money and spent the money we owe no taxes, but under your rules we do owe taxes.

In other words, if the Government changes your income tax to ten percent, I am sure you are not going to give them thirty percent next year. That is why I say I have to go by the rules.

Q. Well, did you or did you not consider that in fact you owed taxes to the Government or the Shotwell Corpration owed taxes to the Government for the years 1945 and 1946 when you talked to Mr. Sauber the first time?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object. It is not a question of fact, if the Court please. It is a matter of a legal interpretation.

By the Court: It is a question of his own mental state of what his attitude was. That may play an impor-

212 tant part in so far as the Legislature is concerned.

By the Witness:

A. We told Mr. Sauber that we felt that we owed a tax.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Did you?

A. What is it?

Q. Did you? Did you feel that you owed a tax?

A. Yes, I felt that we owed a tax.

Q. Morally and legally?

A. My answer still stands. I felt that I owed a tax.

Q. Did you make any distinction between the feeling that you owed it legally and the feeling you owed it morally? You made the distinction a little while ago, that is the reason I ask.

A. Yes, I would make a very definite distinction between a moral obligation and a legal obligation.

Q. Did you feel that you owed it legally and morally, or just legally and not morally?

A. My attitude was such when I went in to Mr. Sauber that I said, "We owe you a tax. We want to pay that tax, whatever it might be, and if, if, your bill is too high, if it is too big, and we find some reason to come 213 back and try to get some of it back, we will do so."

Q. Did you mean what you said to him?

A. Yes, I meant that we wanted to pay the taxes.

Q. That you owed the taxes?

A. I really meant that. I meant we wanted to settle this thing.

Q. What did you mean in your affidavit when you say,

> "That at all times in your proceedings you and your associates have maintained that the corporation owed no taxes."?

A. Well, I am going over to the moral side of it now.

Q. Well, do you mean when you spoke to Mr. Sauber you were speaking legally, and when you spoke in the affidavit you were speaking morally, is that what you mean?

A. And when I spoke to Mr. Sauber and explained the case to him from the moral angle he understood just that.

Q. Well, of course, Mr. Cain, a taxpayer either owes taxes or he doesn't. There is a distinction between owing taxes and considering yourself in a position

214 where though you don't think you owe them you can't prove that you don't.

Do you understand that distinction?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, if I understand you correctly, you meant that you owed the taxes, in fact, and you said so to Mr. Sauber.

Is that right?

A. I meant that I owed the taxes and couldn't prove that I didn't.

Q. You owed them and you couldn't prove that you didn't?

A. That is right. I meant, that is just what I meant.

Q. Well, if you were charged with being in New York and couldn't prove that you weren't, that wouldn't mean that you were there, would it?

A. No.

Q. And if you didn't owe the taxes but you couldn't prove that you didn't that wouldn't mean that you owed them, would it?

A. Mr. Ryan, we took in quite a large sum of money and we couldn't say what happened to it. Because of our own negligence I felt that we owed the Govern-215 ment some taxes.

Q. Did you feel, did you believe, that the gross receipts unrecorded you had received exceeded the gross disbursements unrecorded?

A. At the time I made the disclosure?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't believe I knew the status of the situation at that time.

Q. Now, what other conversation did you have with Mr. Sauber after that first visit, or during that first visit you made to him besides telling him that you owed the Government taxes and were willing to pay whatever you owed?

A. I think my purpose in going there with Mr. Busby was to get his reassurance that he had checked the Shotwell file and that there was no investigation pending.

Q. What did Mr. Sauber say in that connection?

A. I don't recall on that visit, Mr. Ryan, but I am very definitely positive what he said on my visit on March 4th.

Q. Did you mention to him on the first visit the question of whether there was an investigation?

A. I am inclined to believe that we did. If we 215 didn't get his assurance at that time we got his promise to make a complete check and give us the assurance at a later date.

Q. Well, on the second occasion what did he say with respect to the timeliness of your disclosure?

A. He said that they had—the agents' office had checked the file and that there was no investigation pending.

Q. Did he say who in the agents' office had checked the file?

A. I am inclined to believe he said Johnson, but Johnson's name came into this thing—it is five years ago—but I believe it is the agents' office, but I can't say for sure. But it was the agents' office that checked the file and he told me to quit worrying about it.

Q. And what else did he say in that conversation? Tell us what else he said.

A. He said somebody from the agents' office would come out to the factory and get the figures on it and asked us to cooperate with him, with whomever came out there.

Q. Now, at which meeting, the first or the second, was it, that he told you as you testified that it 217 wouldn't make any difference whether you could prove the disbursements of these over ceiling moneys or not?

A. I think at both meetings. He emphasized that to us.

Q. He said to you that it made no difference so far as the Government was concerned?

A. That is right.

Q. Whether you proved that you actually made those expenditures or not?

A. That is right. He said it was the Government's policy that over ceiling payments could not be deducted.

Q. Now, in your conversations with Mr. Sauber, Mr. Cain, did you ask him if there would be any publicity in this case?

A. No, I did not.

Q. In your conversations with him did he ever tell you that this was just a civil case?

A. Not to my knowledge, although that is all I ever expected it to be.

Q. Would that be something that you would be apt to forget if he said it?

A. I don't think so because I had no reason to 218 ask it. He told me to go on and quit worrying about it. I thought it was something that would be in the normal course of events and clean itself up very quickly.

The only person I asked about possible publicity was Mr. Olson. That was in October of last year.

Q. Mr. Cain, I show you Defendants' Exhibit 1 marked for identification and direct your attention to the first sheet which has been described as the summary sheet, I believe, the sheet which Mr. Busby said he delivered to Mr. Lima as the first piece of disclosure evidence.

A. Yes.

Q. And ask you if you saw that sheet before Mr. Busby turned it over to Mr. Lima.

A. Well, I am not a bookkeeper, but I am inclined to believe that I did.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Cain, Mr. Busby asking you to whom you had made expenditures or over ceiling expenditures in order to obtain materials for your candy factory?

A. Yes, I recall him asking me to try to establish some expenditures in this thing.

219 Q. Did you do that?

A. Yes, I did.

I said, "It isn't going to make any difference anyway, so let's work the thing backwards and just charge it backwards. Let's put something on there and let's hope it will get in."

Q. Will you explain what you mean by working it backwards? How would you go about that?

A. There was a certain amount of cash left in the surplus account or the box or wherever it was kept, and that was deposited in the corporation, so we started with that as a base and we arrived at a figure of over ceiling payments, and then I checked that and just mentally closed by eyes and charge this, this, this, and this, without going into detail as to where it had gone.

We expected to go into detail on it and we have persistently tried to go into detail on it, but when we go into detail on it the only thing with the agents whom we have talked with seemed to want to know is not that we bought sixteen million pounds of corn syrup when we had a quota of probably seven million pounds, they don't want to know about the quantities of this 220 merchandise that we got, they want to know who got the money, and I don't know.

Q. Well, now Mr. Cain, directing your attention to the first item of disbursement that is scheduled here, chocolate, $45,000, does that entry on that sheet which you caused Mr. Busby to turn over to the Government mean that $45,000 was paid to obtain chocolate?

A. Not necessarily, no, and we so told them.

Q. What is it supposed to mean if it is not supposed to mean that?

A. Mr. Ryan, there was a summary sheet. This was a sheet that really was for our own purpose. We had made our disclosure months and months and months before this sheet was put out and when we got down to this figure, Lima was in. We had to do something quickly so I said, "Give him these figures and we will go ahead and work."

Now, to this date we haven't been able to substantiate all of the payments but those figures will all change if any of these gentlemen will give us a chance we can tell you in dollars and cents where—not where it went, but how it went. They don't want to know how it 221 went, but where it went and to whom.

Q. Do I understand correctly you did not and did not consider this summary sheet on Exhibit 1 as forming a part of the disclosure?

A. Definitely not.

Q. Definitely not?

A. Definitely not.

Q. And directing your attention to the second item $30,000 for milk, is that supposed to mean that the Shotwell Corporation spent $30,000 to obtain milk during the period involved here?

A. The same answer that I gave you on chocolate and that applies on milk.

Q. In other words, it doesn't mean that $30,000 was spent for milk, is that right?

A. No, because since that time we have made an investigation and we find that on corn alone, on corn syrup alone, a tremendous amount of money, far in excess that was on this sheet was expended for that one item and we are trying to rebuild those figures.

Q. But these figures don't mean what they say, is that right?

222 A. These figures are reasonably accurate.

By Mr. O'Brien: What do you mean by these figures indicate?

By the Witness: I am pointing—

By Mr. O'Brien: Describe them for the record.

By the Witness: The figures of over ceiling payments to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company that we were all vitally interested in because we had been told to be as accurate on that as we could with reasonable accuracy and I say only reasonable because we had not done the research that we have done since, but the payments —when Mr. Lima came in these figures were simply something we put down on the paper and each time they tried to pin us on it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Which figures? You say these figures.

By the Witness: The expenditure figures, but the expenditure figures are going to have to be revamped entirely.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. These figures don't mean what they say, is 223 that correct?

A. That is correct; that is correct, and Mr. Lima was told that.

Q. Were you present when Mr. Busby turned this schedule over to Mr. Lima?

A. No, I was not. I don't think I ever met Mr. Lima.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Busby to tell Mr. Lima that these figures on disbursements didn't mean what they said?

A. I can't answer that. I don't know.

Q. When you put these figures down or gave Mr. Busby these figures to put down and gave to Mr. Lima you knew they didn't mean what they said, is that right?

A. When I talked with Mr.—

By the Court: I think we would get along faster if you would answer the questions.

By the Witness: I can't answer that question, your Honor.

By the Court: Say you can't answer. Don't enter into a discussion.

By the Witness: I am giving him an answer to it.

224 By the Court: Answer the question.

Please read the last question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I knew that the figures above were as accurate as is possible to make them.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I am speaking about the figures below, did you know they didn't mean what they said, what you gave them to Mr. Busby to give them to Mr. Lima?

A. It was our best estimate at that time.

Q. Well, do you mean to say that the $45,000 figure here for chocolate bears some resemblance to the actual figure, if any, that was spent for chocolate?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. You just don't know?

A. I just don't know.

Q. And you didn't know then, did you?

A. It was strictly an approximation. We knew this was not going to be allowed.

Q. Well, then, you knew that what you were submitting to the Government was inaccurate information, is that correct?

A. Not so far as—they were told it was inac-

225 curate.

Q. Were you present when that occurred?

A. We at no time represented to the Government that we could rebuild these figures accurately.

Q. Well, Mr. Cain, what benefit did you think these figures that you had no reason to know were correct and that you knew weren't correct, what benefit did you think they would be to the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. I didn't know that they would be of any benefit to them. If they presented me a bill for the three hundred and ninety-odd thousand dollars, a tax on that, I would have paid it, and then I would have gone ahead and tried to build up this other item.

Q. But did you make an offer of money of taxes in that amount to the Government?

A. I have told everybody in this case that I am all the time ready and willing to pay any bill that was presented to me.

Q. But the Government apparently didn't see fit to render you just any bill, whether it was right or wrong, but they sought to find out whether or not these figures were correct, is that right?

226 A. No, that isn't right. They sought to find out who got the money.

Q. Well, wouldn't that perhaps have something to do with whether they were correct or not?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, the Government has received no assurance, you say, from you that they were truthful or that they meant what they said.

A. The Government told me that they wouldn't recognize them to begin with.

Q. Did any of the Revenue Agents tell you that? I mean, the investigating agents.

A. I don't know—I don't recall my conversation with the Revenue—but I believe some of them intimated there was no deduction allowed for over ceiling payments.

Q. To whom did you pay any of the money that you say was spent for the purpose of procuring materials over ceiling?

A. I didn't pay any of it to anybody.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I never handled a penny of it.

Q. Did you ever receive any of it from Mr. Lubben?

A. No.

227 Q. Personally?

A. No.

Q. Who did?

A. Oh, various people in the company.

Q. Well, who would they be?

A. Mr. Huebner, I think Mrs. Morrill received some, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser, and possibly one or two others.

Q. Well, who might the others be?

A. I would have to refresh my memory on it.

Q. But you did not?

A. I never did, no.

Q. Did you ever see any of the money?

A. I think on one occasion I might have seen the money.

Q. That is, between the time it was received and paid out?

A. You mean did I see it between the time it was received and paid out? Oh, I would think so. I was president of the company.

Q. But you are not sure whether you did or not?

A. Well, I didn't bother too much about it. It was either under the control of Mr. Shotwell or Mr. Huebner or under the control of Mr. Huebner.

228 Q. Are you sure that you never got it?

A. Well, I was kept advised of what was going on and I knew, I knew of my own knowledge from people calling me about the corn market that we couldn't possibly get corn syrup unless we got corn to the refinery, so I knew we had to get money or make trade deals, one of the two.

Q. In other words, because you were getting materials you concluded that you did, in fact, receive the money, is that right? Otherwise you wouldn't have had it to pay out for materials.

A. How much money we received I am not in a position to say, I don't know, but we did receive some money.

Q. Who paid the money out, if you received it?

A. Various of the individuals that I mentioned.

Q. Who would they be, who were they?

A. Mr. Huebner, Mr. Hogan, I recall he paid some money out, Mr. Roeser paid some money out; anybody that happened to be there.

Q. Are you sure that they paid it out?

A. Why certainly. We got the product that we paid for, that is my assurance.

Q. Did you pay for the product? Was it billed 229 to you and did you pay the bill?

A. It was billed to us at ceiling price.

Q. And it was reflected on your books at that price?

A. At ceiling price, that is correct.

Q. So that you did pay the regular ceiling price for all materials which you received in your factories?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And they were reflected in your books?

A. That is right.

Q. Then how are you sure that any of this money was paid out to anybody for materials? You didn't receive the money, you aren't sure you ever saw it, and you didn't pay it out?

A. I am an executive, Mr. Ryan, and I am just as sure that that money came in and went out as I am sure that raw materials came in and went out. That is my business to know those things.

Q. You say Mr. Huebner paid some of it?

A. I think he did, yes.

Q. Do you know whether he did or not?

A. No, I don't. No, I don't.

Q. Who was another person that you named?

230 A. I know that Mr. Kelly paid some out; I know Mr. Hogan paid some out.

Q. Mr. Kelly, what is his first name?

A. John Kelly.

Q. Is he an employe?

A. He was an employe.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Sales manager of the marshmallow division.

Q. Well, to whom did Mr. Kelly pay any of this money?

A. To a Dr. Doe.

Q. Where is Dr. Doe located?

A. Board of Trade Building.

Q. In this city?

A. That is right.

Q. What sort of a doctor is he, dentist?

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Kelly paid money to him, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. How much did he pay to him?

A. I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. You know that because Mr. Kelly told you he paid money to Dr. Doe?

A. I think that is right, and also somebody else 231 told me that Kelly had gone down to Dr. Doe's office.

Q. Who else told you that?

A. Somebody out at Shotwell.

Q. You don't remember?

A. No, I don't.

Q. And you don't know how much?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know what it was for?

A. For corn.

Q. Do you know whether it would approximate a hundred thousand dollars or five thousand dollars or two thousand dollars?

A. No, I don't know how much it would be.

Q. It could have either been a thousand dollars or a hundred fifty thousand dollars?

A. No, it couldn't have been a hundred and fifty thousand. It could have been anywhere from three thousand to fifteen thousand, I would say, or twenty thousand.

Q. I wouldn't want to pin you down—

A. I am just trying to say I don't think over fifteen or twenty went out at one crack on any one of those deals. In other words, we were dealing with faceless 232 men. This man, unfortunately, I wish he were, he is faceless.

Q. Do you know did Mr. Kelly send this money to Dr. Doe?

A. So far as I know, I don't know how the delivery was made.

Q. Do you know why Mr. Kelly paid the money to Dr. Doe?

A. Sure.

Q. Why?

A. Because he was told to by one of the salesmen for the corn syrup company. He was told to by one of his superiors, but the superior was told to do it by one of the salesmen for the corn syrup company.

Q. Mr. Kelly was told by one of his superiors?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know who that superior was?

A. In all probability it was somebody in the auditing department, or Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know who in the auditing department it would have been?

A. It could have been the sales manager, Mr. Hogan, or it could have been Mr. Graflund or Mr. Huebner.
233 Somebody told him to go down and give that money to Dr. Doe. Whether he gave it to him in person or put it in a slot in his door I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he gave it to him in cash?

A. Not definitely I do. It went out in cash.

Q. Do you know whether or not he got a receipt for it?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Well, do you know anybody else that received any of this money that was paid out?

A. Not of my own knowledge, no, sir.

Q. Who does know?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know who does know where any of the rest of this money was paid to, or to whom it was paid?

A. I don't know to whom this money was paid.

Q. Well, are you satisfied that it was so paid?

A. I am satisfied that it was so paid.

Q. Could you find out to whom it was paid?

A. I could probably find out some of the people, but I could never trace all of them. After all, Mr. Ryan, this money went to the farmer in the very great proportion with subcommissions off.

234 Q. You don't know that, do you?

A. Oh definitely I know it. I stopped out in the country time after time and would say to any of these fellows that were running the elevators what the black market price on a car of corn was and they would quote it.

Q. Did you pay any of the farmers any money?

A. No, I did not. I never paid a penny.

Q. Did you ever try to find out to whom any of this money had been paid?

A. No.

Q. But there were people in your own organization who knew, is that correct?

A. No, only a very few of these people were known.

Q. Did the people who got the money come to your organization and get it out of the safe themselves in disguise, or something?

A. No, they did not, but we made it our business not to know who they were. You have to get into the operation of this corn market to understand what was happening at that time.

Q. Yes, I know, but if an individual in your organization had to take money and pay it to someone he 235 would then know to whom he had paid it, wouldn't he?

A. No.

Q. He wouldn't?

A. No, not necessarily.

Q. Would he pay it to a man standing on the corner with a carnation in his lapel, or something of such arrangement, is that it?

A. He could pay it to the man who came to the office and said, "I came in on the corn deal, and we got a call from somebody else and said the corn deal was set up and this corn was going to be shipped, we will say, Corn Products Company or somebody else."

Q. What assurance would you have that that money, that you would receive this product?

A. This thing started slow and built up and we never lost a car of corn.

Q. Would some of the amounts paid been very large amounts?

A. Yes, quite substantial.

Q. As much as fifty thousand dollars?

A. No, not in one place at one time.

Q. Thirty thousand?

236 A. Thirty thousand might go—twenty or twenty-five.

Q. And that would be paid in cash to a stranger?

A. That is right.

Q. With no receipt or no identification?

A. Generally the amounts were smaller, but it could have been a substantial amount was paid out. But that would only be after a long time in dealing with that particular source.

Q. Well, now, in connection with the sugar that is shown on this sheet you show, of course, these figures aren't right, they don't mean this—

A. The total means something, Mr. Ryan.

Q. The total on the sugar?

A. No, not on the sugar; the total of money paid out means something and what we proposed to do was to substantiate as much of that money as we could, and then try to get the sum, but the time just wasn't there. It is like this lawsuit. All working all last night to get ready for it. When something happens you get started.

What I wanted particularly to do was to get our disclosure of the amount of money that we owed the Government, that we had collected over ceiling. I wasn't 237 particularly interested in that other item. The only thing I thought was important and the thing that Mr. Sauber impressed on me was important was how much money did we get.

Q. And you didn't think it made any difference whether this schedule, Exhibit No. 1, Defendants' Exhibit 1, was accurate or not because it didn't form a part of the disclosure, is that correct?

A. Our disclosure was made to Mr. Sauber. This was just a memorandum.

Q. And you didn't consider this as a portion of the disclosure?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you make an attempt to secure information as to what happened to the money and to whom it went for the disbursements?

A. We are still in the process of obtaining that.

Q. Was that for the purpose of turning it over to the Government?

A. Turning it over to the Government?

Q. Turning the information over to the Government, the substantiation of the disbursements?

A. That is correct. We just turned it over and said, "We will start with this and we will go from 238 there."

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Krane that you would never tell him what you did with the money or to whom you paid it?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Do you recall a conference with Mr. Krane on October 12, 1948—October 19, 1948, at your office, at Shotwell, do you recall a conference on or about that date?

A. I recall a lot of conferences with Mr. Krane.

Q. Well, do you recall telling him that you would not at any conference that you had with him that you would not ever tell him?

A. I think I was pretty consistent in my statements to all of these gentlemen that I did not know, I made it my business not to know, nor did I want to know where that money had gone. That is, to whom, not to where, but to whom that money had gone. Certainly, I wanted to know how we spent it.

Q. Well, then, so far as of the present time with the exception of the payment to Dr. Doe you have no further information as to who any of the money was paid?

239 A. That is right.

Q. Right now.

Now, Mr. Cain, when did you first learn that Mr. Lubben and his companies were under investigation by the Internal Revenue Bureau?

A. Whenever Mr. Krane came into our office.

Q. You mean for the first time?

A. That is right, for the first time, June 21st or 22d.

Q. And you did not know it at any time prior to that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Where were you on June 21, 1948?

A. I was in New York City.

Q. When did you find out that Mr. Krane had visited your office on that date?

A. I think I had a telephone call from my office either on the day or the day after his visit. We usually report in every day when we are away from there, that is, from the factory.

Q. Did you call your office?

A. I can't tell you whether I called or was called, but as I say, under normal circumstances we would call almost every day that we are away.

240 Q. Were you at the Waldorf-Astoria at that time?

A. Yes, at a candy convention.

Q. And you received the call from Mr. Graflund, is that correct?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. And he told you that Mr. Krane was there, did he?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time of his call?

A. That is right.

Q. And that he wanted, he was making certain inquiries?

A. Yes.

Q. And he wanted certain records?

A. That is right.

Q. Having to do with carloads of chocolate or chocolates?

A. I don't recall what it was, but whatever he wanted I told him to give him anything he wanted.

Q. Did Mr. Graflund tell you that he hadn't been able to locate records concerning these shipments of chocolates at that time on June 21st, 1948?

A. I don't believe he did, Mr. Ryan.

241 Q. Do you know why he mentioned it to you, why he mentioned Mr. Krane's presence?

A. Why certainly. When a man comes in from checking on a customer of ours like Lubben, that would be a normal thing for him to do, to tell me that Mr. Krane was out there.

Q. Did he tell you anything else in the course of that call apart from the fact that Mr. Krane had called on him?

A. I don't recall that he did.

Q. Do you recall whether he called expressly to advise you that Mr. Krane was then there?

A. I think he did. Now, whether that was the same day or the day after, I don't know.

Q. Don't you remember that he told you that Mr. Krane was right there as he was calling?

A. I think that is correct, that is my opinion of it.

Q. Do you recall why it was of sufficient importance for him to call you in New York and tell you Mr. Krane was there?

A. Well, I think that Mr. Krane was there investigating one of our customers which would be of sufficient importance in itself. If he hadn't done it, I 242 would have criticised him severely.

Q. Did Mr. Krane later contact you personally with respect to the same inquiry after your return?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, directing your attention to approximately a week later at your office, at Cain & Culhane, did you not see Mr. Krane about that same matter there?

A. I could have.

Q. Do you recall that he was still inquiring about these shipments of chocolates?

A. I don't know what he was inquiring about at that time.

Q. Do you know whether or not you furnished him the information that he was seeking at that time?

A. I am inclined to believe that we did.

Q. Do you recall calling Mr. Sullivan while he was there and making an appointment for Mr. Krane to see him to find out if Mr. Sullivan knew anything about the shipment of chocolates?

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I think I will note an objection to it. I don't see the relevancy in this matter. The time is fixed undisputed and it is not 243 proper cross examination, certainly. It hasn't anything to do with any subject matter of the direct.

By Mr. Ryan: I think it bears to some extent on his state of mind whether or not he was resting on the disclosure at the time. I might drop the last question and ask this one further question:

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Did you inquire of Mr. Krane when he saw you whether or not he was interested in your tax liability or the Shotwell Corporation tax liability?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Did you tell him anything about having made a disclosure or that you were in the process of making a disclosure?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Who was present with you in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel at the time you received that telephone call from Chicago?

A. In the suite that we occupied which was set up with a big display of candy it would be utterly impossible for me to tell you who was there, but occupying the suite and some adjoining rooms was Mr. Sullivan, 244 Mr. Huebner and myself, together with our wives. We were down there entertaining. We must have had a hundred and fifty—we had a thousand people in our room.

Q. At the time?

A. No, not at the time, but during the course of that convention, so I can't tell you who was there.

Q. Can you tell us who was present in your room that would have heard the call?

A. No, I couldn't.

Q. There were other people?

A. Could have been. There could have been a lot of people.

Q. Did you say anything to anyone after you received the call?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. About the call at all?

A. I don't recall saying anything to anybody.

Q. Now, you say that not until Mr. Sam Krane in February, January or February of 1952 told you that the report of your corporation's tax case had been forwarded to Justice, not before that did you have any 245 understanding that you might be prosecuted criminally?

A. That is right.

Q. Had you had conversations with Mr. Mammel prior to that time?

A. Quite a good many.

Q. Had he ever indicated to you that he didn't regard this as a disclosure?

A. On one occasion he would be lovely, and on the next occasion he would be very mean, so you couldn't tell what Charlie was doing.

Q. Did he ever tell you at any time while he was working there that when you said you were making a voluntary disclosure that you had not made a voluntary disclosure?

A. I don't believe he did. The only memory I have of discussing the disclosure with Mr. Mammel is when we were discussing it back and forth and I said it is my frank opinion it is our disclosure that caused the Lubben investigation and at that time he was agreeing with me.

Q. Did you in any of your conversations with Mr. Krane ever tell him that you were making a voluntary disclosure?

A. I was making one?

246 Q. Yes, that you were making one for the corporation.

A. You mean when he came in on this—

Q. At any time that you saw him in the course of the period during which he was investigating?

A. Well, he knew about it.

Q. Did you ever tell him that you were making and relying upon the fact that you were making a voluntary disclosure?

A. Well, he was out there investigating on the fact that we made a voluntary disclosure.

By the Court: You are not answering the question.
By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Did he ever tell you, or did you ever tell him that any time when he was out there investigating that you were relying upon the fact that you were making a voluntary disclosure of the corporation's tax liability?

A. No, but I don't think that was necessary. He never told me that he wasn't recognizing our voluntary disclosure so I don't know why I should become upset about it.

Q. He never told you that he was recognizing—

247 A. He never told me he was not.

Q. And he never told you that he was?

A. I didn't think he was the officer that I was going to be responsible to. I thought we made our disclosure downtown.

Q. Did Mr. Lima ever tell you that he was recognizing a voluntary disclosure which you were making?

A. I don't believe I ever talked to Mr. Lima.

Q. Did Mr. Mammel ever tell you that he was recognizing a voluntary disclosure which you were making?

A. Nor did he tell me that he was not. Neither one.

Q. Did you consider the type of investigation that the agents were conducting of the corporation's tax liability to be any different than the type of investigation they would conduct in the case of any corporation's tax liability?

A. I so reported to Mr. Wright at one time during the course of the investigation and testified about it this afternoon.

Q. I mean, as to purpose.

A. No, I didn't. I thought they were trying to force me to find out who, that is all they wanted to know, 248 who got the money. In other words, my theory on this thing is that they want to know so they can go out and do to other people what they have done for us. They want to find out who those guys are and get them over the barrel, and I haven't been too helpful on it. I have done the best I could, but I haven't been too helpful. They want to know who got the money and that seems to be their only purpose.

Q. Well, did it occur to you that perhaps the agents were only trying to verify whether or not the money had ever, in fact, been paid out?

A. I don't think at any time along the line, they said, "Mr. Cain, who got the money?"

And I said to them, "I don't know who got the money."

Q. Did you consider that they were seeking to find out actually whether or not the money had in fact ever been paid out?

A. I thought they were trying to wear us down to the point where we would put on a strenuous effort and call back all our salesmen that had gone and try to find out some more names for them, that is what I thought.

249 Q. Did you have any notion why they wanted the names?

A. My theory was they wanted to go out and investigate them, and I had—

Q. It didn't occur to you that perhaps they just wanted to find out whether in fact you had made these disbursements?

A. Mr. Ryan, I was told to begin with it didn't make any difference whether I made the disbursements or not, that they weren't going to be allowed.

Q. Did the agents ever tell you that?

A. I think Mr. Mammel told me that.

Q. Did you continue to believe it didn't make any difference to the Bureau whether or not you paid it out?

A. I think that was the ruling up until about two weeks ago, wasn't it?

Q. Well, did you continue to believe that the agents investigating your case weren't interested in whether or not you had in fact paid the money out?

A. I continued to believe that. I thought they were more interested in to whom we had paid than we were trying to substantiate where it had gone.

250 Q. Were you under the impression that they were satisfied that the money had been paid?

A. I think, of course, agents are hard to figure out. One time they are perfectly satisfied and everything is fine; the next time they are jumping down your throat and kicking you, so it is hard to say whether an agent is ever satisfied, but I think these fellows were reasonably well satisfied in their own mind from just the mass of merchandise of raw materials that came into that plant that money had to be paid out.

Now, whether they were ever satisfied as to whether all of it was paid out, I don't know. I can't read their minds.

Q. None of them ever told you they were satisfied that money had in fact been paid out?

A. Oh, I don't think they had any doubt in their mind money had been paid out. Neither one of them.

Q. And you considered their seeking of the names only an effort to harass those people who had received it?

A. I don't mean harass them. I mean go out and 251 collect more taxes for the Government.

Q. That was your construction of the persistency in trying to get those names?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you ever make any other overtures to the Bureau of Internal Revenue along the lines of possible disclosure than to Mr. Sauber?

A. No.

Q. You never had sent any emissaries to any other officials of the Bureau?

A. Oh, you mean since that time, or prior to that time?

Q. Since the time that you sent emissaries and went to Mr. Sauber?

A. I have not rested any six months period that I haven't been trying to get the Government to do something about this case to get it settled.

Q. Have you ever sent any other emissaries to the Government apart from Mr. Busby to Mr. Sauber subsequent to that time looking toward the making of a disclosure or the settlement?

A. Not a disclosure, certainly, but I have gone myself to Mr. Wright, Mr. Sullivan and I went to Mr. Wright on two or three occasions. I went to see Mr. Ol-252 son.

Q. Who else have you ever sent to any Bureau officials?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will object to that, if the Court please. It is way past the point of disclosure.

By the Court: I don't recognize the materiality of that.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, if he did send anybody else it might throw light whether he considered he made a disclosure.

By the Court: Whether he sent somebody else with reference to this matter?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Ryan: I mean the Shotwell tax liability.

By the Witness:

A. The Shotwell case tax liability?

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: The reason I object, if he sent 253 someone in on disclosure, that is one thing, I can see the materiality of that.

By the Court: He may answer.

254 By the Witness: A. I personally went to Mr. Schoeneman.

Q. And did you ever send anybody to anybody else in the Bureau?

A. Not to my knowledge, Mr. Ryan.

Q. Do you think that you might have and forgotten about it?

A. No, no. I have a lot of friends, and this case after four or five years, we had discussed it back and forth, but I don't believe anybody ever went to the Bureau. I went to Mr. Schoeneman myself. If I went to him myself, and my only purpose in going to him, and I so reported to the agent when I came back, and the agent at that time was Charlie Mammel, that I had talked with Mr. Schoeneman, I said my only purpose in going was "For goodness sakes to get the thing out of our hair. It is ruining our business. Let's get it done," and he said, "What did Mr. Wright say?" And I told him what Mr. Wright said on that occasion and he said, "I am sorry, Mr. Cain, you will just have to go on and fight the thing out on that field in Chicago," or something to that effect. "You are not cooperating with your gov-255 ernment in giving them the information that they want."

Now, we did employ counsel.

Q. Who?

A. We employed Dan Taylor—no, prior to that, about six months prior to—I can't say it was six months—maybe three months prior to the time.

Q. Did you employ any other counsel in connection with this tax problem?

A. William J. Frolich represents me personally.
Q. No, in connection with the tax problem?
A. Mr. O'Brien.
Q. Apart from Mr. O'Brien?
A. Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Taylor and Mr. Frolich.
Q. They are the only ones, only attorneys whose aid you ever enlisted in connection with this tax matter?
A. That is right. Some of the men from their office might have done something on the case, I don't know.
Q. I believe you said, did you not, that you had learned nothing considering the New York investigation prior to Mr. Krane's call, or Mr. Gratlund's call, in 256 New York on June 21st?
A. That is correct.
By Mr. Ryan: That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.
By the Witness: One thing, Mr. O'Brien.
By the Court: That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: Just a second, Mr. Cain. Was there any answer or statement that you wanted to correct?
By Mr. Ryan: I think there should be a question.
By the Court: If he wants to talk to you, all right, I haven't any objection, but I don't like volunteered statements. If you want to talk to him—
By the Witness: It has to do with the last question asked by counsel on the other side.
By the Court: If you think you haven't answered the last question sufficiently complete, you may add whatever you want to.
By the Witness: There is a possibility. I don't recall this of my own knowledge, but it has been told 257 to me that we have received some information that there was going to be an investigation of Mr. two or three or four days or maybe as much as a week prior to our going to New York, but I don't know it of my own mind.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. Going to New York?
A. To that candy convention in July 21st of 1948.
Q. From whom was that received, Mr. Cain, if you know?
A. From whom was the information received? One of the boys in our office received the information from a Mr. Tobias.

Q. Who was that in your office?
A. Stanley Graflund. Now, whether that was before—
Q. Who is Mr. Tobias?
A. He was a bookkeeper for Mr. Lubben.
Q. Did you know him?
A. No, I do not.
Q. You never met him?
A. Pardon?
258 Q. Have you ever met him?
A. I met him at that candy convention in New York.
Q. For the first time?
A. For the first time, to my knowledge.
Q. On what date?
A. It would probably be the 22nd or the 23rd.
Q. Was he with you on that occasion?
A. He came into our rooms and I don't imagine he stayed over ten minutes.
Q. That was the first time you have ever seen him?
A. To my knowledge.
Q. Or had been introduced?
A. That is right.
Q. Did you see him there after?
A. Not until we went on these depositions.
Q. That was the next time. Then you saw him only on one occasion, is that right?
A. That is right.
Q. And that occasion was in New York on June 21st?
A. It was between June 21st, some time during the candy convention. I can't peg it to the 21st.
259 Q. And that information, that rumor, was transmitted to you by Mr. Graflund?
A. That is right.
Q. Was that he received that information from Mr. Tobias a few days before that, that you went up to New York where you were on the 21st?
A. That is right.
Q. When did you leave for New York?
A. I can't tell you. I would have to check my records whether we flew or we went by train. We were there on the 20th, so we left on the 19th if he went by train. If we went by plane, we could have left on the 20th, so it is pretty close.

Q. Well, that was the extent of your contacts and dealings with Mr. Tobias, is that correct?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: We will resume again tomorrow morning at 9:30. What do you say about that?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all right with me.

By Mr. Ryan: That is satisfactory with me.

By the Court: Off the record.

260 (Discussion off the record.)

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until November 13, 1952, at the hour of 9:30 o'clock a.m.)

Chicago, Illinois,
November 13, 1952,

9:30 o'clock a.m.

Court convened pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Ryan
Mr. O'Brien
Mr. Hess
And other Counsel.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:-

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States of America against the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Hearing on motion of defendants to suppress certain evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, we have been talking about the parts of this book which we would like to offer 262 and last night I went through the book and made a memorandum of the places.

That part in the middle, page 140 down through page 150, I believe is already in on the prior agreement. Those pages contain the statements of policy in full.

By the Court: I don't know whether you identified it.

By Mr. Ryan: Yes, I identified it.

By the Court: Oh, did you?

By Mr. Ryan: I read each statement.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wasn't entirely sure either, but we meant to put those in.

Now, that is 140 through 150.

I think also that there was put in a short statement on abandonment, which must be 151. So that is already in, from 141 to 151.

Now, at page 78, however—I mentioned yesterday that I thought there was a longer statement on abandonment of the policy, and I find that at page 78, right under the subject of Voluntary Disclosure, is the press release of December 11 relating to that abandonment. That is at page 78 to 80 of the book.

By the Court: Well, have you listed here the 263 pages?

By Mr. O'Brien: I have listed these. I am now saying that those are the things I would like to put in evidence. I don't think that Mr. Ryan has any opportunity, has had any yet to see these or to look at them, with reference to this list, other than the things I have mentioned. But those are the ones.

By Mr. Ryan: I would like to do that. He has just designated them. I would like to look at them and then I will tell you.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: And this again, to state briefly my position, was that if these things were to go in, I would have no need of the testimony.

But in any event. I would have offered the book, but I am saying if it is offered and received, to that extent I do not need the testimony.

By the Court: Very well. You may proceed.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I shall not have any more witnesses on our case in chief. Technically, as I suggested last night, I shall keep it open, with your Honor's permission, for the matters that we are to look at, the documents.

264 By the Court: That may be so understood.

By Mr. O'Brien: And also for the disposition of the items we were just talking about and consideration of what, if anything, we should do about the witnesses.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Ryan: Then, I take it, the defense is resting on the motion?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, with the exception of what we should do about the witnesses and—

By Mr. Ryan: Yes, I understand your reservations.

By the Court: Yes.

The Defendants Here Rested Their Case In Chief With Certain Reservations Made Of Record.

Whereupon The Government, To Maintain The Issues In Its Behalf, Introduced The Following Evidence, To-wit:

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Sauber.

265 ERNEST J. SAUBER, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination By Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please.

A. Ernest J. Sauber.

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Sauber?

A. 209 East Washington Street, West Chicago, Illinois.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I am the Director of Internal Revenue for the Northern Illinois District.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Since May 20, 1952.

Q. And that was when the office was created?

A. That is correct.

Q. Prior to that date, what was your occupation?

A. Assistant Collector of Internal Revenue, from May of 1951 to May of 1952.

Q. And prior to May of 1951 were you in the Internal Revenue Bureau?

A. I held the position of Chief Field Deputy from November of 1946 until May of 1951.

266 Q. And that was Chief Field Deputy of the First Internal Revenue Collection District of Illinois?

A. That is correct.

Q. With offices in Chicago?

A. That is correct.

Q. How long have you been with the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. March of 1935 I entered the service.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As a deputy collector of internal revenue.

Q. How long did you serve as a deputy? I believe you did tell us when you were made Chief Deputy, didn't you?

A. I held other positions in the office.

Q. Now then, directing your attention to the year 1948, during that year you occupied the position of Chief Deputy Collector, is that correct?

A. Chief Field Deputy.

Q. And as such, very briefly, what were your duties?

A. Responsibility for the operation of the Field Division and the Office of the Collector of Internal Revenue.

267 Q. Now then, do you know one Leon Busby, a certified public accountant in this city?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I would say six, seven years.

Q. And he has had occasion, or has he had occasion from time to time to have contact with your office in connection with his profession?

A. I met him in the office on various occasions.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to discuss with him the tax liability of The Shotwell Manufacturing Corporation, a corporation, in this city?

A. I discussed The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with Mr. Busby, yes.

Q. When did you first have a conversation with Mr. Busby relative to the tax liability of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. March 15th, approximately, of 1948.

Q. Where did that conversation take place?

A. In my office.

Q. Who was present at that time, if anyone, besides yourself and Mr. Busby?

A. No one.

Q. Now, will you proceed and tell the court what 268 Mr. Busby said to you and what you said to him in the course of that conversation, as best you can recall?

A. Mr. Busby said that he had a client; that he had been requested to prepare amended returns for this client, and the client had engaged in over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases, and the over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases were not reflected in the books of the client; and that he had been asked to prepare amended returns for this client; that he had been unable to determine or ascertain the exact figures that were represented by the over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases, and he did not know how he could prepare amended returns without having the figures, and he asked my advice on how to proceed.

Q. And what, if anything, did you say?

A. I asked him about the details of the transactions.

Q. Just what did you say? Try to avoid generalizations like that, if you can, and just tell us what you said to him, as best you can recall.

A. I asked how these transactions were handled.

269 He said they were handled all in cash; that the sales were made, and the part that represented the over-the-ceiling payment on the sale was accepted in cash; the cash was kept in a cash box, and when they were required to purchase over-the-ceiling raw materials, they used the cash from the cash box to make the purchase for the over-the-ceiling purchases; and when the situation existed that it was no longer necessary to make over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases, the balance that was left in this cash box was taken into the corporation records and declared as income in that year that the OPA ceilings ceased to exist.

Q. Was there any further conversation that you recall.

A. I told him he could not prepare amended returns on the basis of the knowledge that he had; that the amended returns would be just as wrong as the original returns; and I suggested that he call all the people together in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company that had anything to do with the over-the-ceiling purchases and over-the-ceiling sales, and to get statements from

270 each one of the individuals in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company that had anything to do with these transactions, and from their statements to reconstruct the figures that would be necessary in order to have an accurate income tax return, and after the figures had been reconstructed, to ask the Internal Revenue Agent's office to audit The Shotwell Manufacturing Company return.

Q. Was there any further conversation at that time, if you can recall?

A. That was the gist of the entire meeting.

Q. Well now, did you have any further conversation with Mr. Busby after that relative to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company's tax liability?

A. Within a week Mr. Busby brought Mr. Byron Cain into my office and introduced Mr. Cain as the president of Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and said that Shotwell Manufacturing Company was the client that he had referred to in the previous meeting.

Q. And that was about within a week after March 15, 1948?

A. That is correct.

Q. Well, will you proceed now and relate to the 271 court what conversation took place upon the occasion of that meeting, what you said, what Mr. Busby said, what Mr. Cain said, if anything?

A. Mr. Cain told me the same story that Mr. Busby had.

He told me that Shotwell Manufacturing Company had engaged in over-the-ceiling sales over-the-ceiling purchases; that the over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases were not reflected in their tax returns; that they were handled in cash; that he had retained Busby to prepare the amended returns; that they did not have the exact knowledge of the total amount of the transactions; that quite a few people in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had taken part in these black market activities, and they had no way of ascertaining the exact amount that was involved, and they did not know how to proceed in order to correct their tax returns.

I gave Mr. Cain the same advice that I had given Mr. Busby, to call all the members of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company together that had participated in this activity and secure statements from them, and from 272 the statements that he secured from them, to prepare or reconstruct the figures that would represent the over-the-ceiling sales and over-the-ceiling purchases, and to ask for an audit of their returns.

Q. Do you recall any other conversation at the time?

A. Well, I know that we had a very lengthy discussion regarding the case.

Q. Well, to refresh your recollection, was there anything said about publicity?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you tell the court now what conversation you further recall, if any?

A. Well, Mr. Cain told me that he had two boys in school and he was worried about publicity.

He asked me if there would be any publicity on the case.

Q. What did you say?

A. I told him no, there would not be.

Q. Well, was there anything further?

A. I told him the only time publicity was issued, or the only time an income tax case received publicity was when there was an indictment. But an audit of a tax 273 return did not involve publicity of any kind, and the only time there was publicity in connection with a tax case was when there was an indictment.

Q. Was there anything said about a civil case?

A. Well, I told him in my opinion this was strictly a civil case and that it was not a criminal case, and that he had nothing to worry about so far as publicity was concerned.

Q. Now, was anything said about the subject of who made a profit as a result of these transactions?

A. Mr. Cain told me that no one in Shotwell Manufacturing Company profited by these transactions; that it was handled strictly on the basis of keeping all the over-the-ceiling sales in this cash box, making all the over-the-ceiling purchase payments out of the cash box, and at the end of the period the amount of money that was left was taken into the corporate records and declared as income, and that no one in Shotwell Manufacturing Company profited by these transactions.

Q. Now, then, did you thereafter have any conversation with Mr. Cain relative to this same matter?

A. Mr. Cain called me on the phone numerous times after that, wanting to know—well, I am a little 274 bit ahead of myself here.

He called me I would say within thirty days after the meeting with Mr. Busby and Mr. Cain.

Q. Did you recognize his voice?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. As Mr. Cain's voice?
A. He may have identified himself, but I would still recognize him.
Q. Then go on and relate what that telephone conversation was. You say about thirty days later?
A. I would say thirty days later.
Q. Go on.
A. He said that they had followed my advice, that they had had the meeting of all the people in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company that were connected with these black market transactions, and that they had prepared the figures, and he wanted to come in and turn the figures over to me; and I told him I had no jurisdiction in the case; that the Revenue Agents handled the examination of corporation income tax returns, and that he should call the Revenue Agent's office and request an audit of the returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Well, was that the extent of that conversation?
275 A. Well, he asked if I would take care of it for him.
Q. Take care of what?
A. Of having a man come out to audit the returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and I said I would see and I would let him know.
So I called the Revenue Agent's office and asked if they would audit the return or schedule the return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for audit, and they said they would.
Q. Whom did you talk to?
A. I talked to Ralph Johnson.
Q. Who is he?
By the Court: I didn't get the name.
By the Witness:
A. Ralph Johnson. He is a group chief in the Revenue Agent's office.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. I am sorry. I may have interrupted you in the course of your conversation. Did you complete it?
A. He said he would take care of it then, schedule the returns for audit.

Q. Well, then, when did you next hear about this 276 matter, if at all?

A. Probably thirty days later Mr. Cain called me and said he had heard nothing, that there had been no one out to the company to make the audit of the records, and I told him to be patient, that they had a lot to do, and just to sit back and wait, that it would be taken care of, the man would be out and audit the books, and he had to sit back and wait.

I explained the work load that we had in the Internal Revenue Office and how they couldn't take one return and schedule it for an audit immediately, and went on and explained, tried to explain the reason for what he thought was a delay.

Q. Did that represent the extent of that conversation?

A. It did.

Q. Did you hear from him thereafter?

A. He called me two or three times, asking each time when the man was going to come out, and I kept giving him the same answer, that we had a lot of work to do, and he would just have to bide his time, and it would be taken care of.

Q. Did you ever thereafter recontact Mr. Ralph 277 Johnson relative to the matter?

A. At one time when Mr. Cain called me, he was very insistent and he said that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had to prepare their financial statements and that they were going to have to have a statement on their balance sheet, that their figures were dependent upon an audit by the Internal Revenue Department, and he also said that they wanted to make a change in their capital structure.

As I recall, they wanted to issue some other stock or to add some capital, and he said it was very important to them to have this audit made so they could go ahead with their plans as far as the financial structure of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was concerned.

He was very insistent that the audit be started.

At that time I recontacted Mr. Johnson to ask him when the man would be out there to make the audit.

Mr. Johnson advised me—

Q. This is over the telephone?

A. That is correct.

Q. You had called him over at the Revenue
278 Agent's office?

A. That is right.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Johnson advised me that I had given him the wrong name originally, and that he had done nothing as far as having the return assigned for audit, and I asked him if he would have it assigned immediately, and he said, yes, he would.

He said he would have it assigned and have a man out there in a very short time; and I called Mr. Cain and told him of my conversation with Mr. Johnson, that the case had not been assigned due to an error or a misunderstanding between Mr. Johnson and myself as far as names, and the man would be out there in a very short time.

Q. Now going back to the conversation with Mr. Johnson, did you relate all the conversation that you can recall that you had with him on the phone in this last call?

A. I think I did.

Q. Well, to refresh your recollection, was there anything said by Mr. Johnson about Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. He said that I considered the name of the 279 company Shotwell Candy Company and I had given him the name Shotwell Candy Company, and he said there was no account Shotwell Candy Company; that there was an account of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did he say where there was such an account, as you put it?

A. Well, he said, "We have an account," or "We have a return for Shotwell Manufacturing Company, not Shotwell Candy."

Q. In the Revenue Agent's office?

A. That is right.

Q. And to refresh your recollection, was there anything else said by Mr. Johnson respecting assignment of that return, in connection with assignment?

A. Well, he said that he had done nothing about it and the return was not assigned, and he would have it assigned to one of the men on his own group and send one of his own men out there immediately.

Q. Now go on with your conversation, then, with Mr. Cain after your call to Mr. Johnson. I interrupted you, I believe.

A. I told Mr. Cain that I had called Mr. Johnson
280 and due to a mix-up in the names, the case had not been assigned for audit, and that Mr. Johnson would have it assigned immediately and the man would be out there very shortly.

Q. Now, did you thereafter hear from Mr. Cain in connection with this matter?

A. Yes, I did. Mr. Cain called me and said that they had had three men, I believe, out there auditing the—

By Mr. O'Brien: When was this?

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Tell us as best you can place the date.

A. I would say that was a year later.

He said that they had had three men out there auditing the returns, and he wanted to know what they could do to expedite the closing of the case.

I told him to see Mr. Wright, the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge and explain his problem to him and it was entirely up to Mr. Wright, and I had nothing to do with the case.

Q. Is that the extent of that conversation?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you thereafter hear from Mr. Cain again?

281 A. He called me I would say within a week, and said he had been in to see Mr. Wright and he had, I believe he said, gotten nowhere with Mr. Wright, and he asked me if I would find out why that case could not be expedited and closed, and I told him that I would see Mr. Wright and find out what the difficulty was.

Q. Did you have any further conversation then with Mr. Cain?

A. Well, I stopped to see—

Q. Well, did you contact Mr. Wright?

A. I stopped to see Mr. Wright.

Q. Did you then, after that contact with Mr. Wright, have any further conversation with Mr. Cain?

A. I called Mr. Cain back.

Q. What did you say?

A. And I advised him of the result of the conversation that I had had with Mr. Wright.

Q. Did you tell him what the conversation was?
A. I told him.
Q. What did you tell him?
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the conversation. I think that Mr. Wright's testimony—
282 By Mr. Ryan: No. I am asking him for what he said to Mr. Cain.
By the Court: He may answer.
By Mr. O'Brien: He is saying what Mr. Wright told him.
By Mr. Ryan: Well, this is what he said to the defendant.
By the Court: Proceed.
By the Witness:
A. I told Mr. Cain that I had talked with Mr. Wright and he advised me that the difficulty in The Shotwell Manufacturing case was that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company would not tell the Government to whom the over-the-ceiling purchase payments had been paid, and until such time as The Shotwell Manufacturing Company would tell the Government or identify the persons receiving the over-the-ceiling purchase payments, the case would not be closed, that they would be required to cooperate with the Government before they would consider closing the case.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. Was that the extent of that conversation, Mr. Sauber?
283 A. Mr. Cain told me he could not identify the persons receiving—
By the Court: State that again.
By the Witness:
A. Mr. Cain told me he could not identify the persons receiving these payments; the only persons that he knew of was a Dr. Doe in the Board of Trade Building, that someone had sent some money to, and that he himself thought it was a fictitious name and he would not appear ridiculous naming a Dr. Doe, and that was the only person he knew that had received any of these payments, and he would not reveal that name because he himself thought it was fictitious.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. Was that the extent of the conversation?
A. That was the extent of the conversation.

Q. Now, at any time in the course of any of these conversations with Mr. Busby or Mr. Cain, did you ever tell either of them that what they were doing constituted a timely disclosure under the voluntary disclosure doctrine?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever at any time during the course of 284 these conversations with Mr. Busby or Mr. Cain tell either of them that what they were doing constituted a sufficient disclosure under the voluntary disclosure doctrine?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever at any time tell them that you had ascertained that no investigation of the Shotwell Corporation had been commenced?

A. I related that when I talked to Mr. Johnson I had said the case had not been assigned for audit.

Q. To any particular Agent?

A. To any particular Agent.

Q. Beyond that, did you ever make any statement?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did either Mr. Busby or Mr. Cain ever ask you to inquire and ascertain whether or not any investigation had commenced against the Shotwell Corporation?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did Mr. Cain or Mr. Busby ever at any time advise you that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had made sales of merchandise, of products, that were not recorded on the books?

A. No, they did not.

285 Q. Did you ever advise Mr. Cain or Mr. Busby that there would be anything different about the proposed audit by the Revenue Agents from any other audit that might be made of any other corporation tax return?

A. No.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the nature of the question. It is a leading question.

By the Court: I think the answer may stand.

By Mr. Ryan: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Sauber, I take it that you talked to counsel about your testimony before your appearance here today, did you not?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How many times? I don't mean recently, but how many times did you talk to Mr. Ryan or his office about this case?

A. Twice.

Q. Over what period?

286 A. The past week, two weeks—last week.

Q. Outside of that, you had no other talk with Mr. Ryan's office?

A. That is correct.

Q. Prior to those talks and prior to the indictment in this proceeding, had you been requested by one of the Agents to give a statement?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And did you give such statement?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. In writing?

A. Yes, I did.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I should like to see that statement. It has not been given to me. I think it is not only essential for cross examination that I have it, but I am prepared also to show that I have a right to have it.

I know the statement because Mr. Ryan told me about it the other day when we were on the general subject of things of that sort, and I told him that—

By Mr. Ryan: There is such a statement. The court has it.

287 By the Court: I have some recollection of running across it in some files that are in my office.

By Mr. Ryan: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: At the time I talked to Mr. Ryan he said—

By Mr. Ryan: I did not consider it evidentiary since it was a hearsay recital of a statement taken from a witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: I said that I would have the right to it for the purpose of cross examination, and the authorities so hold in 145 F. 2d, page 76.

By the Court: What do you think about it?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I think I was correct in withholding it at the time I did, it not being evidentiary.

I haven't any particular objection.

By the Court: I think it may be in my files probably that were turned over by Mr. Ryan. I have no objection now, if you do not. I think I can find it very quickly.

By Mr. Ryan: All right.

288 By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you.

(Whereupon a short intermission was had.)

By Mr. Ryan: Sorry, I found out I had a copy.

By Mr. O'Brien: May the record show that the memorandum the court has just handed me is dated October 16, 1951.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were there any written statements or memoranda which you gave other than the one I have just referred to, Mr. Sauber?

A. No.

Q. And at whose request was this one given?

A. Mr. Krane.

Q. That is Krane sitting behind Mr. Ryan?

A. Yes.

Q. The copy which I have shows or purports to show that you signed—

By the Court: What is that?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. The copy which I have purports to show that you signed an original copy.

Where is the original?

289 By Mr. Ryan: Isn't that the original the Judge gave you? Maybe there was more than one copy. Well, they they are all copies of the same thing.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am inquiring for the original one.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, doubtless the original is in a different file. I mean, there are originals and copies. I would be happy to—

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, subject to checking with the original—

By Mr. Ryan: I think we can get it produced later and check it. I think they are all carbon copies of the original, and we can confirm that later, and if it turns out to be to the contrary, why—

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: The thing that disturbs me is the first sheet is green and the others are white tissue.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you prepare this statement yourself?

A. Yes, I did.

290 Q. Or did Mr. Krane write it out?

A. I prepared it myself.

Q. And you signed it and gave it to him?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will the reporter mark this copy of the statement Defendants' Exhibit 3 for identification?

(Whereupon said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 3 for identification, as directed.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, at the time Mr. Busby talked to you at your office—and your recollection of the time was about March 15th, was it, Mr. Sauber, 1948?

A. That is correct.

Q. —he told you that he had a client who wished to file amended returns, and he told you in a general way the reasons why the client wanted to do that, is that right?

A. Yes, the reasons.

Q. Now, from your experience as an officer in the Collector's office, did you then know that amended returns, the need for amended returns implied filing of a false return?

291 By Mr. Ryan: I will object to what he knew. It makes absolutely no difference; his state of mind is not important.

By the Court: Well, I don't believe I comprehend the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Ofttimes, Mr. Sauber, or at least sometimes when amended returns are filed, there has been fraud in the filing of the original return?

A. I can't answer that question. I can assume that there would be.

Q. Yes. I am not speaking of any particular case, but sometimes that is so, is it not?

A. Well, I don't know. I assume it is so in some cases.

Q. And in your view, in 1948, did you regard it as potentially fraudulent—

By Mr. Ryan: Objection as to what his view was. It makes no difference what his view was.

By the Court: Let him complete his question.

292 By Mr. Ryan: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the question?

(The pending question as above recorded was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. And in your view, in 1948, did you regard it as potentially fraudulent—")

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. (Continuing) —for a taxpayer to omit from his return or to fail to include in his return premium receipts for goods sold by him?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. What his view was is not important.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it is material, your Honor, particularly on cross examination. They were permitted to go at length into the question of the state of mind of the man who talked to them.

By the Court: We were in an entirely different situation there, about making a voluntary disclosure, and 293 I suppose the state of their mind and what they knew might have some bearing upon that question.

In so far as this witness is concerned, we have gone into the conversations he had with these parties, and to that extent and only to that extent I assume should he be cross examined.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it has to do with the conversations and with his state of mind at the time the conversations were had with him.

By Mr. Ryan: I think his state of mind is unimportant, unless the cross examination throws some light on whether his testimony was not complete or was not truthful or something.

Why, the examination has no office.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Sauber, did Mr. Busby tell you, when he first talked to you, that his client wanted to make a disclosure of the intentional omissions in its original returns?

294 A. No.

Q. Sir?

A. No, he did not. He said they wanted to file amended returns.

Q. Did you interpret that to mean that he was disclosing that there were omissions in the original return?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. The same objection, what his interpretation was.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Will you repeat the question, please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I would say, yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I notice in your statement, right after Busby left your office and on that day you called Revenue Agent Ralph Johnson on the telephone and told him what Busby had said and what you had said.

Is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then you say that within a few days Mr.
295 Busby brought Byron Cain, who was also personally known to you, into your office and told you that it was The Shotwell Manufacturing Company who was the client, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, they didn't tell you it was the Shotwell Candy Company, did they?

A. I don't know exactly.

Q. You don't now know?

A. I don't know whether it was Shotwell—it was mostly just using the word Shotwell.

Q. In your memorandum which you prepared, you say Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

How did you learn that Shotwell meant Manufacturing Company, while it is generally understood by the folks to be a candy company? How did you learn that?

A. I would say that at the time I talked to Mr. Johnson and he told me that I had given him the name of Shotwell Candy Company and they had a return for Shotwell Manufacturing Company and gave me the address, I said that is one and the same taxpayer.

Q. You just said that naturally and without any 296 further investigation, did you?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you say to Johnson that he might have done the same thing?

A. Will you repeat that?

Q. Did you say to Johnson that he could have acquired it in the same way as you did?

By Mr. Ryan: I object to that. I don't think anybody can understand what it meant. I can't.

By the Court: Read it, please.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, let me rephrase it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You knew, without looking the matter up, that it was Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and that Shotwell Manufacturing Company or Shotwell Candy Company, as you put it, was likely to be one and the same company, is that true?

A. I would say yes.

Q. I just wanted to know if later on, when you talked to Johnson, who said that he got the names mixed up and therefore had sent no one out, whether he didn't know that that was true, that the companies were one 297 and the same company?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection to asking him what Mr. Johnson knew.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am asking him if he told Johnson that.

By the Court: I think he did tell him that. He so stated he told Johnson The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and the Shotwell Candy Company were the same taxpayer.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

Do you have the original documents that you gave me yesterday, Mr. Ryan?

By Mr. Ryan: Which documents are you referring to?

By Mr. O'Brien: The ones you produced under the court's order.

By Mr. Ryan: You mean the ones that you returned to us?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson kept saying that they would have an Agent out there shortly to make the audit?

A. Mr. Johnson? No.

298 Q. You said that?

A. I said that.

Q. Was that based on your talks with the Agent's office?

A. It was based on my original conversation with Mr. Johnson regarding having the case assigned for audit.

Q. Yes, and is that the only conversation you had with him, your original one?

A. No.

Q. I can't hear you.

A. I would say I had three conversations with him.

Q. Yes, sir; and in those conversations did he tell you that he would send someone out to make the audit?

A. In the second conversation he said he would have the return audited.

Q. And that involved sending someone out?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know whether someone was sent out?

A. I don't know, no, not personally.

Q. You never heard it?

By Mr. Ryan: That is a different question from the first one.

299 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, did you ever hear that someone was out there?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was first sent out there?

A. I think Revenue Agent Lima.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I asked for some papers and I was handed some. We have been all through them and we made a memorandum of them, but I can't find anything in the papers that were handed me concerning the admitted visit of the Agent Lima to the premises and his audit. There is no paper in those that Mr. Ryan has given me about that.

By Mr. Ryan: About the admitted visit of Mr. Lima to the Shotwell Corporation?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: There is not necessarily a document in the Bureau's files as to when an Agent—no official formal document as to when an Agent goes out to a taxpayer. There is a formal record made of the assignment of returns for examination.

300 Now, Mr. Lima might have put a recitation in a report that he made as to when he first called on the taxpayer. He might have done that.

By Mr. O'Brien: There isn't anything in these papers about that.

By the Court: Well, do you need that now for the cross examination of this witness?

By Mr. O'Brien: Why, I certainly do. Of course I would like to have those papers.

By Mr. Ryan: This witness doesn't even have any knowledge he went out there. He admits he heard he went out there.

By the Court: I don't think it is necessary now.

By Mr. Ryan: I might say that Mr. Lima will be called and such inquiries can be put to him.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When Mr. Cain first came to your office with Mr. Busby, Mr. Sauber, your memo says that was on or about March 15th.

How did you place that time?

A. No, I said when Mr. Busby came to my office 301 it was on or about March 15th.

Q. How did you place that time?

A. I recalled the conversation, asking Mr. Busby why this had not been taken care of earlier, and he said that he had only learned of it recently, and that he had been busy during the income tax filing period with his regular work and he had not had too much time to spend on this.

He said he had been working on it and had not been able to get very far as far as ascertaining the exact figures, and it was due to the income tax filing period that he had not been able to spend more time on it.

I also checked back with Mr. Johnson as far as dates are concerned and tried to work back from the time that the records would show that Mr. Johnson had the case assigned and tried to work back to see what transpired before that, and I came up to March 15th as the approximate date of the visit.

Q. When you asked Mr. Busby why he hadn't taken care of it before, what did you mean by that?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection.

302 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did you mean by "taken care of it"?

By Mr. Ryan: What difference does it make what he meant by it?

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Why he had not gone to work and prepared the amended returns, or whatever he was trying to do at that time, why what he was trying to do at that date had not been done at a prior date.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And he said he had just heard of it recently and from that time he had not been able to get anything much together?

A. Well, he said he had been working on it, but he had not been able to devote his full time to it.

Q. That he was very busy getting in tax returns?

A. That is right.

Q. Did Mr. Busby tell you during March of 1948 that he was going to take his vacation at that season, right at the tax return season, do you remember that?

A. I don't recall any discussion with him about 303 vacations.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No.

Q. And you don't know as a fact whether he was on vacation at that time?

A. I don't know.

Q. You never heard that?

A. No.

Q. During the time of your talk with Mr. Cain, when he appeared, either on the first occasion or the second occasion, when he was in the company of Mr. Busby, do you remember Cain saying that he had to return west, that he was giving a party out there?

A. No.

Q. You never heard of that?

A. No, sir.

Q. He never made any such remark that you can now recall on the occasion of his visit to you, on any of his visits?

A. No.

Q. At the time that you first talked to Mr. Sauber about this matter, and on a hypothetical basis, without the name having been revealed—

304 A. Talked to whom?

Q. Mr. Busby, I am sorry.

—did you know of the disclosure policy of the Bureau or of the Treasury?

A. Will you repeat that question, please?

(Whereupon the question as above recorded was read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were you familiar with a statement which had been made on that subject by Mr. Wenchel during the year 1947?

A. Generally, yes.

Q. Now, I believe you testified that Mr. Busby told you that the cash or residue of the cash which was in the box was put into the company's account when it became no longer necessary to keep it after the termination of the OPA limitations.

Did Busby tell you that?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Sauber, whether at that time Busby also told you that the reason it was there in the first place, I mean that he expressly told you 305 that the reason it was there in the first place was because of the criminal sanctions of the OPA, that is why they had done that? Did he tell you that?

A. I don't recall him saying that.

Q. Did Cain say anything to that effect when you talked to him?

A. I can't recall the conversation regarding OPA.

Q. There was some, but you can't recall just what was said?

A. I can't recall the conversation. We discussed when OPA ceased to exist and then it was at the termination of the OPA regulations that this money was taken from the box and reported as income, that it was at that point that they set the money up in their income account, and that is my only recollection of OPA being discussed.

Q. How long was it after Mr. Busby first saw you that he came back with Mr. Cain?

A. It was a matter of a few days. I would say within a week.

Q. Well, that was March 15th when Busby was in, and then within a week, which would be about the 22d, Cain was there, is that correct?

306 A. I would say that.

Q. I asked you if you knew about a party, if Cain mentioned anything about a party.

Don't you remember his being in, when he was in to see you, and he said he was going back to California where he had a large St. Patrick Day's party?

By Mr. Ryan: Objected as asked and answered.
By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't ask him that one.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I do not recall a conversation about a party.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Or anything stated about his return to California for St. Patrick's Day, whether for a party or not?
A. No.
Q. Sir?
A. I do not recall mentioning that.
Q. Now, prior to the time that you first saw Cain in your office about the matter, how many times did you talk to Busby about it?
A. Once.
Q. And then pretty quick he came in with Cain, 307 is that it?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did you have any talks with him outside your office?
A. With whom?
Q. With either Busby or Cain.
A. I may have. I can't recall any particular time.
Q. Now, when you talked to Ralph Johnson and he said that there had been some misunderstanding as to the name of the company, did he say he would do anything about it?
A. Yes. He said he would have the case assigned to one of his men on the group and take care of it right away.
Q. Do you remember when that was about? Let us say when it was with reference to the March 15th date.
A. Well, I know when it was, from our records, it was in July.
Q. What day in July.
A. I don't know the day.
Q. But sometime in July?
A. Yes. I called Mr. Johnson to ask him and he 308 told me it was in July.
Q. By your records, do you mean the records of the Agent? I am not clear. It must be this way: You called Johnson, he told you it was in July that it occurred, and you noted it that way in your records?
A. It was noted in his records, put it that way.

Q. Before that Johnson had not called you back at all to tell you there wasn't any such outfit as Shotwell Candy Company?

A. No.

Q. Sir?

A. No, he had not.

Q. It was you who called him to stir it up, after Cain had importuned you to do something about it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, there isn't anything different about an audit that is made under these circumstances and any audit of a return, is there?

A. I don't know how I can answer that question. I would say, no.

Q. If you can't answer it, all right.

By Mr. Ryan: He said he would say no.

By Mr. O'Brien: Sir?

309 By Mr. Ryan: He said he would say no.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In your talk with Mr. Johnson, this talk in July, he said that they did have a return of Shotwell Manufacturing Company, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. What did he mean by that—that such a company had filed a return for those years?

A. That is right. There would be a record in the Revenue Agent's office.

Q. Of everybody who files?

A. No, not of everyone who filed.

Q. Of whom?

A. Only the returns that would be sent back to the Revenue Agent's office for potential or possible audit, only the returns that would be up for audit would be in the Revenue Agent's office.

Q. Did Johnson say that he had a return from Shotwell in his office?

A. He said there was a return for Shotwell Manufacturing Company in their office, yes.

Q. Well, what did that mean to you? I don't understand the terms of the Department. What did that mean to you when he said they had such a return in their 310 office?

A. Well, it meant it was there for assignment to be audited or to be surveyed. I would have, to properly answer your question, I would have to go into the operation of the Department as far as auditing and surveying of returns.

Q. He didn't say at whose request it was there?

A. It wouldn't be there on a request of anyone.

Q. Well, I am confused, Mr. Witness. Why would it be there, then, if it wasn't there on request?

A. Well, it is the auditing organization in the Internal Revenue Department, and all the returns that are up for audit or that will be audited are sent in to the Revenue Agent's office and they survey the returns to decide which ones are going to be audited.

Q. And Johnson said he would take care of it and assign it out?

A. The last time, yes.

Q. At the time that Mr. Krane requested the statement which I have marked Defendants' Exhibit 3, Mr. Sauber, did he tell you that the Agents were contemplating the recommendation of criminal prosecution?

311 A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he tell you for what purpose he wanted the statement?

A. For the record.

Q. For his record?

A. For his record.

Q. That is all he said about it? He just said he would like to have a statement for the record and you gave him a statement?

A. That is right.

Q. Did he first talk to you about or as to what the situation was before you made the statement?

A. No. He cautioned me to be accurate in the statement and to take my time and think the entire situation over and try and make a statement to the best of my recollection of what the facts were at that time.

Q. Well, that might be and I have no objection to your saying so, but my question, Mr. Sauber, is, did you talk over with him what the facts were, as you understood them, before you made the statement?

A. At that time, no, not at the time he requested the statement.

312 Q. I say before you made the statement, the written statement.

A. Quite a while prior to the written statement, yes.
Q. Well, how long before?
A. Oh, I would say a year and a half before; just a part of the original investigation that Mr. Krane was working on.
Q. A year and a half before; that must have been along about in 1949 sometime, Mr. Sauber?
A. To the best of my recollection. It may have been 1950.
Q. How extensive were your discussions with Mr. Krane at that time?
A. Well, he merely asked me the circumstances and I related what I knew about the case.
Q. This is on the occasion a year and a half before?
A. I would say yes.
Q. Did you tell him everything you knew about it?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. At that time?
A. That is right.
313 Q. Was that over the phone or in his presence?
A. I would say it was in his presence.
By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to ask counsel if he has a statement covering that conversation.
By Mr. Ryan: The conversation he had prior to this statement, with Mr. Krane?
By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, about a year and a half before.
By Mr. O'Brien: There is no memorandum of such a conversation. There was such a conversation before this was prepared, but this apparently was the formal writing up of the statement by Mr. Sauber.
There is no other statement of memoranda of conversations with Mr. Sauber. There is none that I know of.
Mr. Krane tells me that he has no other memorandum or statement of Mr. Sauber, or never received any other.
By Mr. O'Brien: I mean that was written up as a result of the conversation with him a year and a half before, not by Mr. Sauber, but by Mr. Krane or anybody else.
314 By Mr. Ryan: There was no memorandum you have ever written up other than this one?
Mr. Krane: No.
By Mr. Ryan: You have no memorandum you wrote up about your conversation with Mr. Sauber?
By Mr. Krane: No.
By Mr. O'Brien: And there is none in the Bureau?

By Mr. Krane: There is none I ever wrote up.

By Mr. Ryan: I can't take an oath there isn't, but if he says he did not write any up, I can't see how there could be any.

I am advised there may be one that Mr. Mammel wrote up.

By Mr. O'Brien: I know that.

By Mr. Ryan: I thought you said Mr. Krane.

By Mr. O'Brien: I said that, but then I said anyone in the Bureau.

By Mr. Ryan: I understand there is one that Mr. Mammel wrote up.

315 By the Court: We aren't making a lot of progress here.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am eliminating a good many of my notes here, Judge.

There are some differences, your Honor.

By Mr. Ryan: Differences where?

By Mr. O'Brien: Between the statement and some of the things which the witness has said. That is, he said in the statement, or what he said in the statement is different than what he stated here.

So I would like to offer it so we have the complete story.

By Mr. Ryan: I haven't any objection and will be very happy to have the court read it. There are no significant differences.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Whereupon said document was received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit No. 3.)

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By the Court: We will take our morning recess.

(Whereupon a recess herein was taken.)

316 By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Ryan: I have no redirect.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: Dr. Doe.

ADOLPH CHRISTY DOE, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please, sir.
A. Adolph Christy Doe.
Q. Where do you live, Dr. Doe?
A. 541 Aldine Avenue.
Q. What is your business or occupation?
A. Dentist.
Q. How long have you been a dentist?
A. It will be thirty-five years this next January.
Q. You have an office?
A. In the Board of Trade.
Q. How long have you had an office in the Board of Trade Building?
317 A. Just about ten years.
Q. Do you know a man by the name of Byron Cain?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know or have you ever had any contact with a corporation by the name of Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you ever received any money from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for any purpose at any time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you ever undertaken to procure any raw materials for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, sir.
Q. To be specific, corn syrup or corn?
A. No.
Q. Did anyone ever seek to have you do so?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you ever been paid any mysterious sums of money—
A. No, sir.
Q. —that you didn't know the source of?
A. No, sir.
Q. To your knowledge, did you ever receive any 318 envelopes in your office containing sums of money from mysterious or unknown persons?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of John Kelly formerly associated with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Frank Huebner, formerly associated with Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No, sir. I went through that list with Mr. Krane.

Q. I know, but I must ask you these in court.

Do you know a man by the name of Howard Roeser, associated or formerly associated with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you the same question concerning a Mr. Emmett Hogan?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

I think, Judge, I will make a motion to strike the doctor's testimony, as being immaterial.

319 By the Court: I will deny the motion.

(Witness excused.)

FRANK J. HOLZ, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please, sir.

A. Frank J. Holz.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Holz?

A. 5433 North Campbell Avenue.

Q. Chicago, Illinois?

A. Chicago, Illinois.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I am the head of the Audit Division in the Director's office.

Q. What Director?

A. The Director of Internal Revenue, Chicago.

Q. That is Mr. Sauber's office?

A. That is right.

Q. How long have you been with the Bureau of 320 Internal Revenue?

A. March 30, 1920.

Q. Since that date?

A. That is right.

Q. What is the nature of your duties now?

A. The nature of the duties now consist of seeing that the audits are made of all types of income tax returns, excess tax returns, estate and gift tax returns, all tax returns other than alcohol and tobacco tax cases.

Q. Directing your attention to the years 1945, 1946 and 1947, what were your duties then?

A. I was then one of two assistants to the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge in Chicago.

Q. Were your duties similar at that time?

A. Similar. I participated in the overall management of the Internal Revenue Agent's office.

Q. Were your duties similar in 1947 and 1948 to what they are now?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Are you familiar with the procedure followed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in determining what tax returns will be audited?

A. I believe I am, yes.

321 Q. Would you tell the court as briefly as you can what that procedure is?

A. Well, after returns are filed—

By Mr. O'Brien: That it is, or what it was?

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, tell the court what the procedure was in the years 1947 and 1948.

A. After returns are filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue, I am speaking of corporate returns—

By Mr. O'Brien: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. I am speaking of corporate returns.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. You might carry that back through the year 1945. Then we will have it all covered.

A. All right.

The procedure has been for years, many years, that after returns are filed and with the Collector, they are sent to the Bureau at Washington for statistical purposes and for classification purposes.

The Bureau would make a survey of the returns and select those which it believed were worthy of exam-322 ination in the field.

Those returns would then be sent to the office of the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge.

The Agent in Charge, or rather, under the supervision of the Agent in Charge, or directly under my supervision; let us put it that way, there was a further classification made of those returns in the local office, Chicago office.

Those returns which we believed—

By the Court: I am sorry.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) Those returns which we in the local office believed required investigation were retained, sent to our record section for carding, in other words, make a card record, an office record of it, and then they would be sent to the various groups for assignment for investigation by their agents.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Now then, these cards that you mentioned, pursuant to that custom it was the regular practice to make such a card as a record in the office of the Internal Revenue Agent, for the purpose for which you indicated?

323 A. Oh, yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Would you mark this document Government's Exhibit 2 for identification, and this second card Government's Exhibit 3 for identification.

(Documents so marked.)

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I show you now Government's Exhibit 2, marked for identification, and ask you to examine it and state whether or not it is a record produced from the files of your office, the office of the Internal Revenue Agent in Chicago.

A. That is correct. This is the original record.

Q. And is that a card of the type which you have just described?

A. That is.

Q. And was the card which you have in your hand made pursuant to the practice which you described?

A. That is correct.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 3, marked for identification, another similar card, and if I ask you the some questions about that card as I did about the other, would your answers be the same?

A. Exactly the same.

324 Q. I direct your attention to the various entries on Government's Exhibit 3 for identification and ask you if you understand the significance of those particular entries on that card.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you explain what the different entries on the card reflect?

A. This card indicates—

By the Court: Which card?

By Mr. Ryan: Government's Exhibit 3 for identification.

By the Witness: 2, Exhibit 2.

By Mr. Ryan: Oh, Exhibit 2. I am sorry.

By the Witness:

A. That is right. It indicates that the case was originally assigned to a group chief named James Granahan.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. The card appears to bear the typewritten name Shotwell Manufacturing Company, 3501 West Potomac Avenue.

What is the significance of that entry?

A. That is the name and address as shown on the return filed for that year.

325 Q. This is a card record pertaining to that return, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the "1946," what is the significance of that?

A. That means it is the return for the year 1946, and amended; and this is the serial number (indicating).

Q. Of the—

A. Of the original return.

Q. And directing your attention to the—you say that when the card is made, that the card is made after the return has been surveyed and it has been determined that it will be audited, is that correct?

A. That is right, after it is classified, then it is retained.

Q. Is there any entry made on the card to reflect that determination, or does just the existence of the card reflect that?

A. The mere fact the card was made out is an indication that the return was retained for audit.

Q. Directing your attention to the numbers at the bottom, "dh12-11-47," in the manner in which a date is customarily expressed, what does that mean?

326 A. This "dh" represents the initials of the clerk who prepared this card.

The "12-11-47" indicates the date upon which he made this card.

Q. That means that card was made on December 11, 1947, is that what it indicates?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell us what would be the next entry that would be made on that card from your examination of it?

A. The next entry would indicate that on December 16, 1947, this return was assigned to Group Chief James Granahan.

Q. For what purpose, from your knowledge of the procedure in the Revenue Agent's office?

A. For investigation in the field by one of his agents.

Q. And that would be the same as what has been referred to as audit?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you find what would be the next entry in point of time that is on that card?

A. The next entry indicates that the return was 327 sent to Group Chief Johnson. That is this letter "J" signifies that.

Q. Upon what date?

A. On July 22d, I think it is.

Q. Of what year?

A. 1948.

Q. What would the next entry be in point of time?

A. The next entry would indicate that it was sent to another Group Chief Raymond Williams, now deceased, on February 4, 1949.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit 3, marked for identification. That also bears the name Shotwell Manufacturing Corporation, with the same address, does it not?

A. That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Have you been talking about No. 2 or 3?

By Mr. Ryan: I have been talking about No. 2.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Does the existence of that card represent the determination that a certain return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was surveyed and it was deter-328 mined that it should be audited or investigated?

A. That is true.

Q. Does it reflect on what date such determination was made, or what is the first entry that you find there in point of time?

A. It doesn't show the date, but the initials of the party who made this card are P.L. That is on here, but the date isn't shown.

Q. Now, what is the first date in point of time that is shown on that card?

A. January 15, 1947.

Q. And what is the significance of that entry?

A. That is the date upon which this return was assigned to Group Chief Magnus, assigned to him—

By the Court: Assigned to whom?

By the Witness: Group Chief Magnus, for audit in the field.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. What is the next entry in point of time?

A. The next entry indicates that Mr. Magnus assigned it to an agent by the name of A. S. Korman.

Q. On what date?

A. On January 20, 1947.

Q. And is there a subsequent date?

329 A. A subsequent date indicates the date that Agent Korman's report was received. That was on August 5, 1947.

Q. Now, does the record—

By Mr. O'Brien: When what report was received?

By the Witness: The examining revenue agent's report.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. That was who, Mr. Korman?

A. Mr. Korman.

Q. That he filed his report on August 5, 1947?

A. That is correct.

Q. Does the card indicate whether or not that operation was ever concluded?

A. Well, at that time there was an agreement signed as to the deficiencies that were found.

Q. That is as of August 8, 1947?

A. Well, either he may have gotten it with the report or the agreement may have come in later.

Q. And have all the Bureau proceedings with respect to that examination been terminated, if you can tell from the card?

A. From the looks of this card, yes. There is 330 only one thing this card does not show.

First of all, this card, I might say, this shows two returns, the income tax return for 1945 and the excess profits tax return for 1945. There were two separate returns.

Q. They were required to be filed for that year, separate returns for those different kinds of taxes?

A. That is correct, and this one report Mr. Korman submitted covered both types, the income tax and the excess profits.

Q. Would this card reflect the existence of termination or conclusion of the post audit review?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that. He has answered it. He says it does indicate it.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, my question is would this card indicate the completion of or the commencement of the completion of what is known as a post audit review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. It does not?

A. This card merely shows the report was submitted, an agreement was received, and the agreement would 331 specify that the taxpayer waives his right to petition the tax court and consents to an immediate assessment of these deficiencies.

Q. And so far as you can determine from the card, that may have occurred on August 8, 1947, or later?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Ryan: Your Honor, I offer Government's Exhibit 2 for identification and Government's Exhibit 3 for identification into evidence as Government's Exhibits of the same number.

By the Court: Well, Gentlemen, I assume the only question we have now is whether or not you have any objection to the foundation or the materiality of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have a right to cross examine the witness.

By the Court: Indeed you do, if you ask for that right. But I haven't heard your desire in that regard. If you want to cross examine as to the foundation, you may.

By Mr. O'Brien: I was trying to determine, your Honor, because I see some notes on the back, to which no 332 reference was made.

By Mr. Ryan: I am sorry. I didn't even know there were any notes on the back, and I presume we should iron out what the significance, if any, of those are. I have no objection to counsel going into that, but I am not offering what notes appear on the back. They have no materiality.

By the Court: Is there any objection?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Whereupon said documents were received in evidence as Government's Exhibits 2 and 3, respectively.)

By Mr. Ryan: You may cross examine.

333 Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Holz, I think you said that after the returns go to Washington, it is common to select those of the corporate taxpayers particularly and to have an audit made?

A. The reason I mentioned corporate, because it is corporations involved here, and I just did not mention individuals, but the idea is the same.

Q. And you have many thousands of such?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. That is sort of a spot check that is made as to returns in excess of a certain amount?

A. Well, no, I wouldn't say that.

By the Court: Counsel, if you stand there he is going to talk to you and I can't hear him and counsel can't hear him.

By Mr. O'Brien: You are right, Judge.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I say that is done in an effort to spot check returns which on some basis or another you would like to audit?

A. Meaning the Bureau selects them, the Bureau classification?

334 Q. Yes, in Washington. How do they determine which returns are to be sent out for audit?

A. I imagine they take a number of things into consideration, such as we do here. They may see—

Q. Well, do you know what they take into consideration in Washington or do you know what they take into consideration here?

A. I know what we take into consideration here, and that is based largely on instructions we receive from Washington as to what we should take into consideration.

So I am assuming Washington is doing the same thing.

Q. That you assume, but don't know?

A. Pardon me?

Q. You don't know?

A. Oh no, not definitely, because I haven't been down there to watch any of this classification.

Q. But there are many thousands of returns on some basis that are sent out by Washington to the various agencies every year for examination?

A. That is correct.

Q. And for audit of some kind or another?

A. That is correct.

335 Q. Now, does the fact that a return is submitted for auditing on the basis which you have just described, an annual practice, indicate a special investigation of any sort?

A. Oh, no.

Q. In the case of Exhibits 2 and 3 here, I am a little confused from the standpoint of time.

Which is first in point of time?

A. You mean received first?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I would imagine the 1945.

Q. And that is Exhibit 3?

A. That is correct.

Q. I think that is what threw me off, the 3 and the 2. Now, this card doesn't show—

By Mr. Ryan: Which card?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. (Continuing) Exhibit 3—

—whether any payment was made by the taxpayer according to the agreement, does it?

A. No. Our cards never show payments.

Q. Do you happen to know that in the month of May,

1947, there was a payment by Shotwell in respect of 336 this audit by Mr. Korman, and that in the month of September of that year the final payment was made in accordance with that agreement? Did you know that?

A. We in the Agent's office know nothing about payments at any time.

Q. Do you preserve any sort of record in the office that would show that or would that be reflected only in the Collector's office?

A. Only in the Collector's office.

Q. Is there anything on this card that would indicate to us the fact, if it is a fact, that Mr. Korman had finished, had left the premises in July of 1947?

A. No, the card doesn't indicate that. It merely indicates his report was submitted.

Q. Does it show when his report was submitted?

A. Yes, on August 5, 1947.

Q. I see, and then the card further shows at the bottom

"Disposed of September 26, 1947,"

does it not?

A. That is when the report leaves the Revenue Agent's office.

337 Q. I just want to know if that isn't what the card says.

A. That is correct, September 26, 1947.

Q. Are the notations on the back of Exhibit 3 any part of the formal record?

A. No. I have an idea—I may be wrong, but I have an idea this is Bureau information. What leads me to believe that, the section in the Bureau that reviewed Revenue Agent's reports of the Chicago Division was called Section D in the Bureau, and I see it says D4, and the 4 was a unit of Section D that reviewed corporation returns.

Q. I see.

A. I think that is what it means. It is not our record.

Q. Take Government's Exhibit 2 for identification. I notice three dates.

A. Yes.

Q. The first of which is December, 1947. Can you tell by looking at the card whether anything was done about that or the matter was assigned out at that time?

A. No. This date, December 16, 1947, is associated with the initials J.G., which means that that is the 338 date upon which the return was assigned to Group Chief Granahan for field investigation.

Q. And is there any indication that he made an investigation or made a report?

A. No. He did not, apparently.

Q. Then in July, 1948, the matter was assigned out, was it not?

A. It then was transferred from Group Chief Granahan to Group Chief Johnson on July 22, 1948.

Q. Let's see, Group Chief Johnson, is that in the agent's office?

A. That is right. These are all in the Agent's office.

Q. In your office too?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you anything in your records to show what Johnson did with it?

A. It doesn't indicate as though a report was submitted by Johnson.

Q. Is there anything on the card to show the assignment of Mr. Lima on this return to investigate?

A. No, not on here.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Lima worked under 339 Group Chief Johnson?

A. He did.

Q. And then the next assignment and last assignment here noted is February 4, 1949.

Now, who was that assignment to?

A. That was assigned to Group Chief Raymond Williams, now deceased.

Q. And who replaced Mr. Williams in your office?

A. Temporarily there is a man detailed by the name of John Rover.

Q. At that time, 1949, was Mr. Maimmel in your office, the Agent's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he connected with that group?

A. 1949? I believe at that time he was connected with the Williams group.

Q. And there has been no report from that group, according to this card?

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Ryan: No redirect.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Joseph Lima.

340 JOSEPH M. LIMA, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please.
A. Joseph M. Lima.
Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Lima?
A. 1700 Rainbow Drive, Clearwater, Florida.
Q. What is your business or occupation?
A. Internal Revenue Agent.
Q. How long have you been employed as an Internal Revenue Agent?
A. Since July of 1942.
Q. Where are you presently stationed?
A. Tampa, Florida.
Q. How long have you been there?
A. Since January of 1951.
Q. Where were you stationed prior to that time?
A. Chicago, Illinois.
Q. In what office did you work here?
A. Internal Revenue Agent in Charge.
Q. And in what capacity?
A. As an Internal Revenue Agent, field audit.
341 Q. Were you assigned to any particular squad in the Internal Revenue Agent's office here in Chicago?
A. I was assigned to the squad of Ralph Johnson.
Q. Did you ever have occasion in the course of your duties as a Revenue Agent to conduct an examination or audit of any of the tax returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, an Illinois corporation?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you recall when you first entered upon that examination?
A. Sometime subsequent to July 30, 1948.
Q. Do you know a Mr. Leon Bushy, a certified public accountant in this city?
A. I do.
Q. And did you have any contact with him in the course of your investigation, such investigation as you conducted of tax return or returns of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I did.

Q. Incidentally, what return or returns did you have of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I believe it was the fiscal year of 1946.

342 Q. I show you what has been marked as Defendants' Exhibit—the first sheet previously referred to as the summary sheet of Defendants' Exhibit 1, which appears to be a photostatic copy, and ask you to look at it and tell the court whether or not you have ever seen and if you know the original of that?

A. This isn't familiar.

Q. Will you examine it carefully before you answer and be sure whether you have seen it before, if you can recall?

By Mr. Ryan: Counsel, I will direct your attention to what I will have marked as Government's Exhibit 4 for identification, and will ask counsel if you will stipulate that that is the typewritten material, which is identical with the handwritten material in the document the witness is now examining, Defendants' Exhibit 1.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, that is it.

(Whereupon said document was marked as Government's Exhibit 4, for identification.)

343 By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 4, marked for identification, appearing to be a typewritten document, accounting document, with figures on it, and ask you if you have ever seen that document or the original of it before.

It appears to be a copy.

A. I believe this is the copy of the original. It appears to be the same.

Q. Have you seen the original of that?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you first see the original of that document?

A. I was given that document at The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Busby.

Q. Now, did you have a conversation with him at that time and place?

A. I did.
Q. Or at that time?
A. I did.
Q. Approximately when was that, if you can recall?
A. Some time after July 30th of 1948.
344 Q. Can you tell approximately how long afterward?
A. No, I can't. It is between July 30th and October 1st, somewhere in that period I made my examination. I can't pin point the exact date.
Q. Was there anyone else present at the time that you received the document from Mr. Busby?
A. No, there wasn't.
Q. Would you proceed and relate the conversation you had with him on that occasion at that time?
A. As near as I can remember, Mr. Busby stated that he had been an auditor for the company for some time, and a while previous to this examination he had been told that there had been some over-ceiling prices, money paid for raw materials, and there had been some over-ceiling payments received, and that he had taken the necessary steps and found out from the necessary people just what he had to do, and that he had prepared this statement to the best of all the knowledge to be had at the company at the time and that represented the income as near as they could figure.
Q. Well, you say the income. Will you look at the sheet and see whether it reflects anything other 345 than income?
A. Well, it reflects both receipts and disbursements for different years.
Q. Well now, if you recall, was there anything said about the disbursements?
A. The disbursements?
Q. You said Mr. Busby said that it reflected the income a closely as they could compute it.
A. I mean by that, the payments received and the disbursements made.
Q. Well, did he say that?
A. Yes, he did.
Q. Did you have any contact, in the course of your investigative work in this matter, with Mr. Byron Cain?
A. I met Mr. Cain out at the plant.

Q. Did you have any contact with any of the other officers or officials of the corporation?

A. I met Mr. Huebner and the lady that had charge of the books, I believe is the only people I dealt with. I don't remember her name.

Q. Those were the only individuals you dealt with?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, did you ever at any time tell any of the 346 individuals whom you dealt with in this investigation that you understood that they were making a voluntary disclosure?

A. Will you repeat that, please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I only discussed this matter with Mr. Busby and it was understood to be a first disclosure made to myself of the figures.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Well, was there anything said about disclosure, or was it just a case of your referring to the turning over of this document to you?

A. This document represented a disclosure.

Q. That is what you referred to as a disclosure?

A. That is right.

Q. Or are you repeating something that was said to you?

A. I referred to it as a disclosure.

Q. Is that the extent of any discussion you had with any of these people about disclosure?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: You may inquire.

347 Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Before you went out there, Mr. Lima, did you talk to Mr. Williams or Mr. Johnson, rather?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You had no conversation with him at all?

A. Other than the assignment of the case.

Q. He was your group chief?

A. That is right.

Q. What did he tell you he wanted done?

A. All he did was ask me if I had time to field the case, if my inventory was in such a position that I could work the case.

Q. And you were to make an audit?
A. That is right.
Q. You were to make an audit of the return or returns?
A. That is right.
Q. When you got to the premises, or after you had gotten there and talked to Mr. Busby, did you tell Mr. Busby that you knew that a disclosure had been made to Mr. Sauber?
A. No.
Q. Who, if anybody, used the word "disclosure"?
348 A. I said I don't think it was used at all.
Q. And this paper that Mr. Busby handed you, you say you called that a disclosure?
A. I did.
Q. Well, when, you mean here on the witness stand or in talking to Busby, or where?
A. When I received it, I was told the story of the operations of this over-the-ceiling prices, both for purchases and disbursements.
By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Lima.
By the Witness:
A. (Continuing) I was told, after I was told the story by Mr. Busby of how the operations of this over-the-ceiling prices, purchases and disbursements and receipts of cash, were, why, then the figures were submitted to me on a sheet of paper and that represented to me a disclosure.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You treated it in that way?
A. That is right.
Q. As though it were so. Then you were going on to audit for whatever you considered necessary in that situation?
A. I just made a preliminary audit to determine 349 certain facts that I might deem pertinent before I would discuss the matter with my group chief.
Q. You were there from July to about October 1st?
A. Somewhere in that time.
Q. And you can't say, though, how long it was after your arrival on July 30th that Mr. Busby handed you that paper?
A. The first day.
Q. You now say it was the first day?

A. Yes, it was the first day.

Q. Is there any special reason why you remember that right now rather than on your direct?

A. Well, when I began the audit, Mr. Busby and I went into an office and we discussed the entire situation. That was in the morning, I believe, the first day, he made the first disclosure.

Q. And he had that all ready for you when you got there, didn't he?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, did he on that day show you any of the sheets which are attached, or was it on some later date?

A. I don't recall seeing the work sheets of how 350 he got the figures. I am not sure of that. I don't even remember. Just the first page.

Q. The first page sticks in your mind?

A. This sticks in my mind, but not the work sheets.

Q. Do you know whether Busby or some member of his staff submitted the work sheets to you?

A. I never had the work sheets.

Q. Is the same true of Defendants' Exhibit 2, which purports to be a typewritten copy of the summary sheet? How about the work sheets attached to Defendants' Exhibit 2?

A. I don't recall any work sheets of any kind in that particular matter.

Q. Well now, the summary sheet, that is the first sheet, pertains to how many years?

A. I believe three years.

A. 1944, 1945 and 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. And it shows a total of unreported receipts?

A. Whatever it is.

Q. Yes, a total. I didn't say what it was. Did you ask for any supporting data to show how that was reached?

A. No, I didn't.

351 By the Court: Well, Gentlemen, I think we will be in recess now until two o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess herein was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, November 13, 1952.)

352 * * (Caption—52 CR 143) * *

Chicago, Illinois,
November 13, 1952,
2:00 o'clock p.m.

Met pursuant to recess.

Present:
Mr. Ryan
Mr. O'Brien
Mr. Hess
And other counsel.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Motion of defendants to suppress certain evidence.

By the Court: You may proceed.

JOSEPH M. LIMA, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, having been previously sworn and examined, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

353 Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Lima, you told us that on the day you got out to Shotwell, Mr. Busby gave you the typewritten sheet, a copy of which is the first page of Defendants' Exhibit 2.

A. That is right.

By the Court: Is that 2, or Exhibit 1?

By Mr. Ryan: 1.

By Mr. O'Brien: Exhibit 2.

By Mr. Ryan: The typewritten sheet is 2.

By Mr. O'Brien: The typewritten sheet is Plaintiff's Exhibit 4. It is also contained in our Exhibit 2.

By Mr. Ryan: The copy of the typewritten summary is marked as Government's Exhibit 4 for identification.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: And it is also a part of Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification, or in evidence, I believe.

By Mr. O'Brien: In evidence.

By Mr. Ryan: And it apparently has been stipu-
354 lated it is the same as the handwritten summary sheet in Defendants' Exhibit 1. Is that correct?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, that is what they gave you at that time. When you were assigned to that audit, were you given anything by your own office to bring with you?

A. No.

Q. Any file or reports, or anything else?

A. Just the income tax return folder.

Q. And nothing more?

A. Nothing more.

Q. You were not at that time given the reports of any investigators or prior agents or anything else?

A. No.

Q. You didn't have any ports or files or directions from New York?

A. No.

Q. Or from New York through the Chicago office to you?

A. No.

Q. And in addition to Mr. Busby, during your 355 visit you talked to Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner, and the bookkeeper?

A. That is right.

Q. Was that Mrs. Morrill, if you remember?

A. I am not sure of the name.

Q. Is it the lady sitting in the end of the jury box there?

A. I believe so.

By Mr. O'Brien: And you are Mrs. Morrill, for the record?

By Mrs. Morrill: Correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Ryan: No redirect. You may step down.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: I will call Mr. Mammel at this time, to avoid a delay.

356 CHARLES J. MAMMEL, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please, sir.
A. Charles J. Mammel.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Mammel?
A. 7639 Colfax, Chicago, Illinois.
Q. What is your business or occupation?
A. I am an Internal Revenue Agent.
Q. How long have you been so employed?
A. Since February 1, 1920.
Q. Now, have you had occasion in the course of your official duties to make an audit or examination of any of the tax returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, an Illinois corporation?
A. Yes.
Q. What returns of that corporation did you have occasion to examine?
A. Well, on February 14th I appeared at the Shotwell plant—
By the Court: February 14th?
By the Witness: 1949.

357 By the Witness:
A. (Continuing) I appeared at the Shotwell plant to make an examination of the tax returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1943 through 1947, inclusive.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. And, if you know, had an examination of those returns, or some of them already come in?
A. The returns up to and including 1945 had been examined and reports rendered. The year 1946 had been somewhat examined by Mr. Lima.
Q. Now directing your attention to the first 5½ months, we will say, of your investigation of these particular returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, just in general, if you can describe it, in what particular activity were you engaged during that period?
A. Well, of course, I appeared at the Shotwell plant knowing of these black market transactions. I saw Mr. Grafiund and told him I was there for that purpose.

Q. I don't want you to go into conversations with persons other than the defendants, but I want you to tell, if you can, what particular type of work you 358 engaged in initially during that period.

A. Well, this being known as a fraud case—

By Mr. O'Brien: I—

By Mr. Ryan: I will agree that that be stricken out.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. I want you to just tell, Mr. Mammel, what type of work, what particular phase of investigation work you were doing during this first six months.

A. Well, I started out to reconcile all the assets, liabilities, income and expense accounts on the records from 1943 through 1947, inclusive, to the tax returns.

Q. In simple language, were you tying the tax returns in question to the books?

A. Exactly.

Q. Now, did you during this six months period, this first period when you were engaging in this particular activity you described, have occasion to have a conversation with Mr. Cain about your doing that type of work?

A. I did.

Q. Now, when, to the best of your recollection?

359 A. Well, I would say in March of 1949.

Q. Now, where did that conversation take place?

A. Well, it took place in either his private office or the private office of Mrs. Morrill.

Q. Now, who was present, if you recall, besides Mr. Cain and yourself?

A. Well, I don't recall that.

Q. You don't recall if there was somebody else present or not?

A. I don't, no.

Q. Will you proceed and tell the court as best you recall what was said in that conversation?

A. Well, I told Mr. Cain it was fundamental for me to tie all the accounts of the corporation to the tax return in this investigation, and that I was doing that, and I don't know but because of what was involved in this particular case, but that there might possibly be prosecution, and therefore, I had to do the job, do a perfect job—it was a tremendous job—so that I wouldn't have to do the work over again.

Q. Was there anything that Mr. Cain said at that time apropos of that conversation, of that subject?

A. Well—

360 Q. If there was.

A. Not that I recall. I had many conversations with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner almost every day, and also with Mr. Busby.

Q. Did you ever at any time, in any conversations with Mr. Cain or anyone else, say that you understood that the Shotwell Corporation had made a voluntary disclosure?

A. Never at any time did I consider—

Q. I am not asking you what you considered. I am asking if at any time you ever said that you understood, to any of the people, to Mr. Cain or to anybody; that you understood that they were making a voluntary disclosure?

A. Well, not just in that way, no. Of course, I had a document, which is that summary sheet that has been, that is in evidence around here, a similar document?

Q. I understand you say you had a document. What I am trying to find out here, what I am asking is if at any time you ever said to Mr. Cain, to any officer of the Shotwell Corporation, to any of the defendants in this case, or to anybody, that you understood and consid-

361 ered that what they were doing constituted making a voluntary disclosure or that what they had done constituted making a voluntary disclosure.

A. No.

By Mr. Ryan: You may inquire.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Mammel, before you went to the plant did you know that Mr. Lima had been assigned?

A. I knew that Mr. Lima had the case before, yes.

Q. How did you know that?

A. Well, I believe it is on the card, on the record card, or I may have been told by Mr. Sam Krane.

Q. Would that normally be on a card of some kind kept in the Agent's office, if Mr. Lima had been assigned?

A. Well, he would have to sign for the tax return.

Q. No. But my question is would it be on a card?

A. He would sign for the tax return on a card.

Q. Are you talking of cards like Government's Exhibits 2 and 3?

A. Something like that.

362 Q. But not the same card?

A. Well now, I don't recall now just what the card looks like.

Q. Well, I will show it to you.

A. Let me see what it looks like.

I am not sure, but it is a card of this nature. We sign down here (indicating) for this tax return, you see, because that makes us responsible for the tax return.

Q. Well now, after a matter is assigned to you, you pull the tax returns, is that the idea?

A. No.

Q. Well, what do you do to get possession of it?

A. Well, the squad chief comes with the return and he says, "This return has been assigned to you, Mr. Mammel," and there is a card with the return.

Q. Right.

A. And I sign on the card for that return, and then the return is handed in to his secretary, and I am responsible for that tax return.

Q. Where does the squad chief get the return?

A. Well, he gets it, of course, from the office.

Q. And is the process by which he gets it called 363 pulling the return?

A. I don't know of such name, no.

Q. If Mr. Lima was assigned at any time to this case to make an audit, you can't tell it from these cards, can you?

A. No. That is, I don't see his name on there.

Q. Except as the witness Holz—you heard him testify?

A. Well, I don't remember just what he said in that respect there.

Q. Except for what he may have said about it, as to the indications of the squad chief which appear on this card or the squad chiefs?

A. Oh, yes, that of course.

Q. And that is by code of some kind, is it?

A. I don't think so. I never paid much attention to these cards, as a matter of fact. But I could, of course. I know these dates, I can see these dates here, and R.W. I imagine would be Ray Williams, but I wouldn't know it specifically.

Q. Prior to the time that you receipted for the return, do you know whether Mr. Krane had requested that a file be made and an investigation be commenced?

364 A. I don't think so. I tell you, the first I knew anything about this case was on February 7, 1949. Then is when it was assigned to me. That is the first I know of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a second.

By Mr. Ryan: Don't volunteer information, Mr. Mammel, unless some question is put to you.

By the Witness: Oh, I beg your pardon.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Krane is not in the same office or section as you, is he?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Krane is in the Intelligence Unit?

A. That is right.

Q. And you are in the Agent's office?

A. I am in the Agent's office, in the fraud squad.

Q. But not in the Intelligence Unit; you are not and were not then in the Intelligence Unit?

A. No.

Q. Now, before you ever got the file—Well, I guess you wouldn't know about this. I will ask someone else.

One of the papers that has been produced here, and 365 which I would like to have the reporter mark for identification as Defendants' Exhibit 4, is the document signed by Mr. Krane and approved by A. P. Madden. Do you know A. P. Madden?

A. Yes, sir, very well.

(Whereupon said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 4 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. It is dated September 22, 1948, in which he asks the Collector of Internal Revenue for the income tax record of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

A. I don't know.

Q. You didn't know anything about that?

A. No.

Q. It was not in your office?

A. No.

Q. But following that, and early in February, 1949, you came to do your work?

A. I got the case February 7, 1949.

Q. Now, Mr. Mammel, you say that you told Mr. Cain that there was a possibility that the company or its 366 officers would be prosecuted?

A. I said that there was a possibility that there might be prosecution in this case.

Q. Prosecution of whom?

A. Well, the company, of course, its officers.

By the Court: Just what you said, not what you conclude.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Tell us what you said.

A. Well, I said just exactly that, what I said a moment ago. I went no further than that.

Q. Now, do you have anything to do with the decision as to whether there should be a recommendation of prosecution?

A. I do not.

Q. And the discretion in that, in your office, in the year 1949, was vested in whom?

A. Well, that is the Intelligence Office.

Q. In other words, it would be the Intelligence Office which would have to do with the recommending or withholding of prosecution?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in 1949 you were not in that office?

A. I was not, but in my reports—

367 Q. Just a minute. I just want to know where you were. You were not in that office?

A. No.

Q. And in any case, the question whether there is to be criminal prosecution or not, any fraud case or any case which is deemed a fraud case, that is a discretion which is vested in different people along the line, all the way up to the Department and through the Department of Justice, isn't that true?

A. It is, but if I think there is prosecution, I recommend it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute.

By the Court: You have answered the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't ask who could recommend it. I asked who could decide and exercise the discretion.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. It is also true, is it not, Mr. Mammel, that you can recommend prosecution and they can refuse to prosecute?

A. Right.

Q. Now, have you in your experience seen some 368 disclosure cases in which there has afterwards been a prosecution?

A. This is the first disclosure case I have ever had.

Q. Now, I understood you to say, however, that you yourself did not consider that there had been a disclosure made in this case?

By the Court: I don't think he said that.

By Mr. Ryan: I asked him if he had ever said that he considered that a disclosure had been made.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I stand corrected on that. I didn't mean to mislead. You are right, Judge, that is what he did say.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Let me ask, Mr. Mammel, did you consider that there had been a disclosure in this case?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. Absolutely immaterial.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

369 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In any of your talks with Mr. Cain or with Mr. Huebner, did they tell you that they had been in to see Mr. Sauber?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone tell you that?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I will object to whether anyone did, since I can't see what difference it makes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just want to know if he knew.

By the Court: You mean at what time, later or before?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. While you were working at the plant.

A. Oh, no, no. No, not while I was working.

Q. Where did you get the sheets, Defendants' Exhibits 1 and 2? Who gave those to you?

A. Mr. Krane.

Q. He had them in his file?

A. Why, I expect.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Ryan: No redirect.

Oh, one moment.

370 Redirect Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mr. Mammel, when you said this was the first disclosure case you ever had—Well, strike the question. Let it go. He has answered it satisfactorily.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Toohig.

JAMES J. TOOHIG, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please.

A. James J. Toohig.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Toohig?

A. 172 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, New York.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. Special Agent, Racket Equad, Intelligence Unit, Treasury Department.

Q. Now, do you know a man by the name of David 371 Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have occasion in the course of your official duties to make an examination of either his tax returns or the tax returns of any corporation or company in which he was interested?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will object to it, if the Court please, on the ground that is immaterial.

By the Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. What returns falling into that category—

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have a standing objection, your Honor, to the questions directed to those subjects?

By the Court: Very well. I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. What returns falling into the classification I gave you have you had occasion to examine?

A. Well, when you are referring to whether I have, sir, the Revenue Agent who was working with me—

372 Q. I mean that you had occasion to work on and investigate.

A. Yes, sir. From 1943 up to around 1948.

Q. Of what companies?

A. David G. Lubben, doing business as Eatsum Food Products Company; David G. Lubben, principal partner, one of the principal partners in Eatsum Food Products; and General Confections, Inc., New York and Hillsdale, New York.

Q. In other words, David G. Lubben, General Confections, Inc. and two partnership returns?

A. One partnership.

Q. When did you commence your activities?

A. There are others he was interested in, and I don't know whether you want me to name them.

Q. That is sufficient unless counsel cares to go further.

When did you commence your investigative activities in connection with these Lubben enterprises? When did you first come into that matter?

A. It was first assigned to me in November, 1945.

By Mr. Ryan: Mark this Government's Exhibit 5 for identification, please.

(Document so marked.)

373 By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Mr. Toohig, I show you a document which I have had marked as Government's Exhibit 5 for identification and ask you to examine it and state whether you have ever seen it, it purporting to be a photostat in handwriting, or whether you have ever seen the original of it before.

A. Yes, sir, I have seen the original of this.

Q. And have you seen that one, do you know?

A. Sir?

Q. Have you seen that one?

A. Well, I may have. I just don't remember.

Q. You are satisfied from looking at the contents that you have seen the original of this?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. When did you first see the original of that document?

A. On March 4, 1948.

Q. Where did you first see it?

A. The office of the Intelligence Unit, New York City.

By the Court: March 4, 1948?

By the Witness: March 4, 1948, sir.

By Mr. Ryan:

374 Q. Now, prior to the time that you received this document, Government's Exhibit 5 for identification, had you learned of any connection whatever between the Lubben Companies and the Shotwell Company?

A. I did.

Q. In the course of your investigation of the Lubben companies you mentioned?

A. I was investigating the Lubben Company at the time I learned of this connection.

Q. Did you read this document, Government's Exhibit 5 for identification, after you received it on March 4, 1948?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were then aware of its contents, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Ryan: If the Court please, I offer this document Government's Exhibit 5, into evidence as Government's Exhibit of the same number.

It contains, as it will disclose, information concerning over-ceiling payments to The Shotwell Manufacturing 375 Company by the Lubben Companies.

It is offered for the purpose of showing the acquisition of knowledge of that on the part of these agents, and for no other purpose. It puts them on notice as to the information contained therein.

By Mr. O'Brien: We object to it; your Honor, on the ground that there is nothing here—it is not a document kept by their office. It is one of obviously a number of sheets which are not attached, and if they are going to disclose anything about it, it all ought to be there. We ought to have a chance—

By the Court: I can't hear you, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry.

It is only one of several sheets, and it is not a document made by the Government, but one produced from where, I don't know. It is apparently from their file, and it is a statement made by someone else, whose name does not appear. I can't tell anything about it.

376 By Mr. Ryan: I agree that there were other sheets, and I have no objection to their being put in, but I can see no materiality they have to this matter. They deal with other matters.

By the Court: Well, I don't understand that you are objecting because this is a photostat?

By Mr. O'Brien: No. No, I am not.

By the Court: Your objection is directed to the fact that this document isn't complete, is that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: That was one objection.

By the Court: What is the other?

By Mr. O'Brien: And also to the fact that it does not purport to be a record made by the Government or by Mr. Toohig's department, but something which comes from someone else who is not produced here.

By the Court: Well, I don't believe that makes any difference. If there was any memorandum made at the time, a memorandum he had written, or if somebody had written him a letter about some connection between 377 the Shotwell Company and Lubben, and he received the letter at that time and identified it as the original letter he received, whoever it may have been written by, it may have some bearing upon the alleged information contained in the letter.

By Mr. O'Brien: Also, the part that I have here bears no date that I can see.

By Mr. Ryan: That is right, it doesn't. It is simply offered for the purpose of showing that on that date—

By Mr. O'Brien: On what?

By Mr. Ryan: The Agent came into possession of that information as it is written down on that document.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is that on March 4th?

By Mr. Ryan: On March 4, 1948.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is that what you said, Mr. Toohig?

By the Witness: Yes sir, that is what I testified.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no date on the instrument itself. All right.

378 By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

(Whereupon said document was received in evidence as Government's Exhibit No. 5.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have the rest of the sheets on that so that we may see them?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes, I do have them. I should like to submit the other sheets to the part for his determination as to whether they are of any use to counsel, since they do represent confidential information which I can see no need in this case to divulge, if they have no materiality, and this is one of the documents which counsel—well, I am willing to submit the rest of the sheets to the court.

By the Court: I hope you can continue with your examination of this witness:

By Mr. Ryan: That is all. You may inquire.

379 Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. You are sure that this sheet marked Government's Exhibit 5 was in your possession by March 4th of 1948?

A. Yes, sir, March 4th.

Q. Now, how do you fix the date March 4?

A. Well, I kept a diary of what happened that day, and in the diary it states that this information was obtained and the notes were taken.

Q. Where is that diary? Is that here?

A. In my office or in the office downstairs.

Q. Did you make any record at your office, other than that contained in your own personal diary, Mr. Toohig?

A. Not on that day. I discussed this with the chief of the racket squad I believe on the 8th of March, a few days later, and he made a contemporaneous memorandum of our conversation regarding this.

Q. Was that Mr. Cordez in that year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you see the man who wrote this memo?

A. Yes, sir.

380 Q. Did you see him at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it written on that day?

A. Yes, sir, right in my presence. I should say at another desk, but right alongside.

Q. Was he alone or someone with him?

A. No, alone.

Q. Is this the only memo which you had from any person regarding the same subject matter at or about that time?

A. No, sir. There were other memoranda at the same time regarding this same subject matter of over-premium payments by Lubben and his companies.

Q. Was Lubben present at this time?

A. No, sir, he was not.

Q. But you had met Lubben?

A. Subsequently.

Q. How long after?

A. I would say about either the latter part of June or early July, 1948. I think it would be the latter part of June or early part of July.

Q. And not until then?

A That is right, when Mr. Cordez and I met him together for the first time, I am almost positive.

381 Q. Now, the Racket Squad, you were still on that, you were on that squad in 1948?

A. No, sir, I was not.

Q. Then I misunderstood.

A. No. I am in the Racket Squad now. I was transferred around 1949. But I was working in two squads, in the textile squad and in the racket squad. I was on a different floor than the racket squad in 1948 when these notes were taken. I was on the tenth floor, my official floor.

Q. Was the same true of Mr. Cordez or was he just in the racket squad?

A. He was in charge of the racket squad, yes.

Q. So on this occasion you were working under or with him, in 1948?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On this particular thing, and prior to that time—

A. Although not attached to a squad officially, and there was a reason for that, sir, too.

Q. I am not curious. But I mean, you were interested in the racket activities during 1948?

A. That was the idea, sir.

Q. But not quite so extensively as beginning in 382 1949?

A. I would say that is correct. All my activities then were shifted to the racket squad.

Q. And as far as Lubben is concerned, your communications and contacts with him personally starting in June of 1948 or so—

A. To the best of my recollection, sir, the latter part of June.

Q. That is all right, Mr. Toohig, I don't care about the time.

But about that time, that led you into many other situations in the East, did it not?

A. Well, not at that time.

Q. No, but since?

A. Oh, since, yes, sir.

Q. And one of the most extensive of those is the one having to do with Giglio, who was Lubben's partner in Eatsum Food Products, the partnership, right?

A. I would say that is correct.

By Mr. Ryan: I will object.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

383 Q. And in 1948, even, your attention was focused largely on those matters in the East, was it not?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. It is not proper cross examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is a preliminary question. I am not going to pursue it.

By the Court: Preliminary as to what? Something material?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, I think so, Judge. Oh, yes. I am not having fun.

By the Court: All right. If you say it is, go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. I would say that is correct, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, you went ahead with that work pretty promptly after March 4, 1948, didn't you?

A. I was working on all phases of it, not just one part of it.

Q. And as far as Shotwell is concerned, did you or Mr. Cordez, to your knowledge, communicate with Chicago or the agency here when you became aware of its connection?

A. Not immediately, sir.

384 Q. How much longer was it before you did that?

A. June 21, 1948.

Q. And in what form?

A. Telephone call to Chicago.

Q. When, if ever, was your first written communication to Chicago?

A. Shortly thereafter, when we confirmed the telephone conversation.

Q. Do you have that letter?

A. I believe it is here.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have it, please?

By Mr. Ryan: I believe it is among the files that Judge Nordbye has.

By the Court: It may be.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, did you write that letter by choice or in accordance with the regulations of the office?

A. Well, there is no regulation that I know of that says you must immediately confirm anything.

Q. I agree.

A. And we confirmed it when we thought that the information we had to send to Chicago was sufficient enough to make out, start out investigation.

Q. I am not being critical, sir.

385 A. I understand. I was trying the best I can.

Q. I merely wanted to know whether you had a specific reason for notifying Chicago.

A. I would say we had some.

Q. What was it?

A. In the development of the part of the case, we thought that by notifying Chicago and giving them certain information to act on, that it would further the development of the case, to the best interests of the Government.

Q. And did you in any written notice to Chicago ask them to pull the Shotwell returns?

A. At that time, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. How much longer was it before you did that?

A. We never requested them to do that, that I can recall. That is not something we would have asked Chicago to do at that time. They would have determined what to do when the information was received by them, if they thought it was necessary and deemed it advisable.

Q. You say there was no regulation, is that correct, there was no regulation which required you within a 386 certain time to communicate with an outside agency?

A. That is correct, that I know of, and I am referring to telephone, letter or something else, and not requesting returns. That is a different thing. There is no regulation, except what we heard discussed here today or during the week.

Q. Was there any, if not a regulation, was there any order of any kind from the Treasury to the Agents, telling them what they were to do when they had a matter under investigation in which the name of some other taxpayer arose?

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. Didn't the Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner issue an order to that effect, following the Wenchel statement?

A. Are you referring to tax returns, sir, or to telephone and other communications?

Q. I am referring to tax returns.

A. That may be true, sir, but I was not referring to tax returns.

Q. Well, now let us go to tax returns for a minute. It is true, is not not, Mr. Toohig, that if an investigation commences in New York in your office and it takes 387 you to another company, that the order I am speaking of requires you to notify the Agent within the jurisdiction of the other company and to request that Agent to pull the file, the return, and to advise the New York agency in writing that it has done so? Do you remember that?

A. I am afraid I must plead ignorance to that. I don't know if that is that way. You might have read it lately. I don't remember if that is it.

Q. Tell me how you recall it.

A. If there is a tax case that we feel should be brought to the attention of the Government, we can do one of two things, either request the returns ourselves and notify the other agency, or send a telephone communication or communication by letter, because we don't know what is going on at that end. They may have all knowledge of what we are transmitting to them, they have already pulled the return, they might be working on the case. We have no way of knowing that. There is no central file I can refer to.

Q. But you, Mr. Toohig, would do one or the other?

A. I did what I thought best in making a tele-
388 phone communication on that date, June 21, 1948.

Q. And by so doing, you elected not to pull the return yourself?

A. At that time, yes, sir.

Q. But did you later pull the return?

A. No, sir. I don't believe—Well, wait a minute, now. I believe that, it was my policy at the time to request the returns anyway, to see just where they were, and I believe, if I am not mistaken, that I did the following month or so. That I am not positive of the date, but I believe I did that on every case, 'most every case. I don't remember a case that I didn't do it, so I think I did it in most cases.

Q. If you did it in this case, would you have the document with you evidencing that?

A. I may have it in the file that is here. As our United States Attorney said, the files are with the Judge and it may be in there.

Q. Did you take whatever you had in your file and bring it to the United States Attorney for that purpose?

A. Yes, sir. Whatever the summons or the subpoena requested, we tried to comply with it fully.

389 Q. Mr. Toohig, I have forgotten, did you say that you first called Chicago and then wrote Chicago?

A. I believe a letter followed within a short time, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have such a letter or is that among the court's papers?

By Mr. Ryan: It isn't separated.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't here.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. But you did call Chicago. What Agent did you call here?

A. We don't call any particular Agent, sir. We call the division, the Intelligence Unit.

Q. Now, you say "we." In this case did you do it?

A. Well, Mr. Cordez happened to do the calling. I was there. We drafted the message together and he happened to pick up the phone.

Q. The two of you drafted it and he called, rather than you?

A. That is right. He did the speaking, yes.

Q. Can you remember whom he was speaking to?

By Mr. Ryan: I object. I think that this line of 390 examination has gone far enough. We put in that certain information came into their hands on a certain date, and I don't know that there is any purpose in pursuing it beyond that. The question of what he would have done or what he did do later—

By the Court: I think this purports to inquire as to with whom they were speaking in Chicago.

By Mr. Ryan: I mean, he brought that out himself. I didn't cover that portion of it. All I covered was that he received this document in New York on March 4th, and he has now gone quite extensively into this.

By the Court: This may have a bearing upon the March 4th date.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what I am doing. Not only the March 4th date, but the applicable law controlling this situation, which we will come to. Mr. Ryan can't shut me up on cross examination by asking just a 391 couple of sentences on a vital thing like a date. He has a March 4th date, and there is the question of time limit involved.

By the Court: He may answer the question as to with whom they were speaking in Chicago, if he knows.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you know?

A. I believe it was Mr. Olson or Mr. Madden. But Mr. Cordez could tell you exactly.

Q. Now, you were present when the call was being made?

A. I am not sure whether I was in that room exactly at that time. I believe that I had stepped out, and the call was made by Mr. Cordez from the memorandum we prepared.

Q. But you did help prepare the memo?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did that memo have to do with an investigation of Shotwell or did it have to do with specific information that you wanted about Lubben or his companies from the Shotwell file?

A. The message requested that Chicago obtain information that was in the files or in the Shotwell 392 Company, or information that they would look for in the files of the Shotwell Company. That was the message to Chicago.

Q. Right. In other words, Mr. Toohig, you wanted the cooperation of Chicago, instead of sending a man here to Chicago to check something on the Lubben companies, you wanted Chicago to cooperate and go on over and get it for you?

A. No sir, that wasn't the idea. We had already received the information regarding premium payments to Shotwell and unbilled shipments to Shotwell, which looked fraudulent, and we were investigating it, and that is why we sent, to start, if it needed starting, or to give the information to Chicago that we had learned—let me see, I think that came a little later, around March 12th or 14th, I forget—the particular request that we made, a little later, and we submitted it on the June 21st conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 5 for identification.

(Document so marked.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you get the information which you requested?

393 A. I believe we did.

Q. How long after?

A. That I don't remember exactly, sir, but it was assigned to Special Agent Krane, and whatever he sent.

Q. And he sent it?

A. That is right.

Q. And he sent it the same month, didn't he?

A. He may have. I don't remember. I was working, sir, at that time on three or four fraud cases in textiles, and that is what I can't say exactly that I did it the next day or within a few days, because I was working on other cases.

Q. Well, Mr. Toohig, there has been handed me from the plaintiff's files an instrument I have marked Defendants' Exhibit 5 for identification, which purports to be a memo transcription of a phone call received from Walter Murphy of the New York Division on June 21, 1948. Will you look at it and see if it correctly reflects the substance of what you helped Mr. Cordez to prepare and to inquire of Chicago about?

A. I would say, sir, that is the message that was 394 telephoned to Chicago on June 21st, 1948.

Q. Now, are you able to say from memory when the first written communication to Chicago occurred?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I again object, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just want to know if he can.

By Mr. Ryan: I can't see how this throws any light on whether he got a certain document on March 4th.

By the Court: Well, I think you have gone into that. He said they later wrote Chicago on this matter. He said he didn't know the exact date.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will get it from the file.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you have, or do you have any entry in your own diary, Mr. Toohig, about Shotwell prior to this March 4th date?

A. I don't think I have the—

Q. Have you looked?

A. I believe I have. I don't think I have the name. 395 I just have discussions with the person that I was having the discussions with, and I didn't list any names.

Q. Now, I noticed that this first page of a long-hand memo, which is Government's Exhibit 5, whoever it was who wrote that says, among other things, down towards the bottom of this memo, that in March of 1948 certain things were done.

A. In March of 1948?

Q. That is what he says, or she, whoever it is.

A. I see.

Q. Now, as I understand you, this memo was written—

A. On March 4th.

Q. Right there on March 4th?

A. That is right. That is correct.

Q. But the writer is talking, if you will look at it, as though of a month that had elapsed or passed.

Do you know why that is?

A. What paragraph? Would you point that out?

Q. It is about five lines, starting about five lines from the bottom, right in here (indicating). It is telling about something that happened in March, as though March 396 was a month which had gone by.

Do you see that?

A. Yes, I see that. That may be for this reason. I guess—I don't know whether you asked me or not whether this was my handwriting. It isn't mine. I said, "Write it out because it is too much to listen to," and what was put down is exactly the way it was put down.

Q. It was put down by whoever it was that you had talked to?

A. That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't like to interrupt, Judge, I do want to get along, but sometimes I worry about the papers, not that I am not ultimately protected, but on the examination of the witnesses, before they leave or go away.

By the Court: Well, what are you asking for now?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am referring now to the papers which you still have.

By the Court: Which one particularly?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, any letters or communica-
397 tions which have come out of Mr. Toohig's office to Chicago, along the line that he has been describing, and apparently those letters and things are amongst—

By Mr. Ryan: I am sorry?

By Mr. O'Brien: Those letters which Mr. Toohig was speaking of are amongst the papers which the Court has. I don't doubt anything Mr. Toohig tells me, incidentally. I know he is truthful. I just want the letters.

By Mr. Ryan: I assume if we could have access to the documents, that Mr. Krane probably could locate them quicker than almost anybody else, or if they are in Mr. Toohig's file he may himself find it.

But this is a letter, the original of which would be received in Chicago?

By the Court: Suppose we take a ten-minute recess.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

(Recess taken.)

By the Court: Mr. Ryan, I think I will turn these 398 back over to you. You may want to review them.

I may say to Mr. O'Brien, in looking over the rest of the documents that were attached to Government's Exhibit 5, a sheet was found that apparently belongs to Government's Exhibit 5. It was inadvertently, as Mr. Ryan says, left out, and that should be attached to Government's Exhibit 5.

By Mr. Ryan: That is right.

By the Court: The other documents which I have here are all pertaining to other concerns and make no reference to the Shotwell Company. In fact, they are listed under different names and in no way refer to the Shotwell Company, nor do they in any way refer to any testimony that this witness has given.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

By the Court: I understand that Mr. Ryan has some letters they found.

By Mr. Ryan: Yes. Well, I would like, your Honor—
I mean, I have to see what is in them, so I can be 399 sure if there is any reason why we shouldn't turn them over.

On the confirmation of the phone conversation, there is one paragraph in the letter that does not appear to have any materiality to the matter at hand, and it relates to no matter so far as the defendants are concerned, but the personal business of someone else, and I would suggest, I would tender that paragraph to the court for him to read and then, because we don't have a copy at hand, just cut that off at the bottom and the top of this page and submit the balance of the letter to counsel.

The paragraph I am directing attention to begins at the bottom of the second page.

By the Court: You mean beginning "The present inquiry—"?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes.

By the Court: Yes, you may leave that out.

By Mr. Ryan: Then we will just physically remove that and give the letter to Mr. O'Brien. We can 400 restore it to its former condition afterwards.

By the Court: You want to cut it off?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes. That is the only thing I can do in order to give it to them.

By the Court: Well, can't you explain to Mr. O'Brien what you have in mind and what there is in that letter you want to refer to?

By Mr. Ryan: He is the one that is seeking to refer to it. I don't know what use he wants to make of it, but there is only that one paragraph—

By Mr. O'Brien: If it is a paragraph which the court says has nothing to do with this matter, I will accept it.

By the Court: Well, you can show it to Mr. O'Brien, and let it be made a part of the record, and later on put in a substituted copy.

By Mr. O'Brien: Be glad to do that.

By Mr. Ryan: As far as I am concerned, I don't know what the significance of it is anyway. The Special 401 Agent knows more about it than I do.

By the Court: Well, if you want to eliminate that portion of the letter by some means, I haven't any objection to it, if that is what you want to do.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I am not sure myself what the significance of it is, and I haven't time enough to go into it now.

By the Court: Well, it hasn't any bearing on this controversy.

By Mr. Ryan: No.

By Mr. O'Brien: How about the other letter?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, Mr. Krane has read that one and wants to speak to me about it.

I will give you this one.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Who is Walter Murphy, Mr. Toohig?

A. He was the Assistant to the Special Agent in Charge of the office in New York.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark these three sheets Defendants' Exhibit 6 for identification.

402 (Documents so marked.)

By Mr. Ryan: With respect to the second communication, only the first paragraph, which confirms the fact that reference was made to a telephone request of the office, it seems to me, has any bearing on the case.

If the Court wants to have that read into the record, I have no objection to it.

The rest of it I don't see any reason why it should be disclosed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is it considered irrelevant?

Apparently this first letter, I don't know what is excluded, but it must have something to do with the Shotwell situation.

By Mr. Ryan: The Judge read what was excluded.

By the Court: No, nothing at all. Entirely a different person was mentioned.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, with that, it is immaterial. I misunderstood.

403 By the Court: Well, you might be right as to the first paragraph being material only in so far as the examination of this witness is concerned. There may be matters in this letter that may be material as far as the general subpoena is concerned.

By Mr. Ryan: That is why the letter is with the group. That is why it was with the group.

But, as I understand it, he is seeking confirmation of a telephone conversation, and the first paragraph covers that, and the rest of what the Agent is communicating to Chicago, why, it seems to me is strictly department business, and I don't know—

By the Court: Well, at least it isn't a part of the cross examination of this witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am thrown in the dark, but I can only say that there is already some disadvantage, perhaps unavoidable, in the fact that I have not been able to look at all the documents that were produced 404 at the start of the trial.

Anyhow, I don't think it should be further cut up into sections, according to witnesses, with witnesses coming and going, so that I am untimately left with a group of documents and nobody to question them about.

By Mr. Ryan: All of these documents fall within a confidential area, and ordinarily counsel doesn't plow through all of the Government's files, and I don't have any authority to make them public. I can only express myself to the court and my feelings with respect to them and such observations as I make. I have no authority to turn any of this material over.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, all I am observing is that the test as to whether I should see the documents should not be what witnesses on the stand.

It is whether the documents are revelant to the whole matter and which are without the bounds of any proper privilege.

By the Court: Well, I think I desire to give fur-
405 ther consideration to the balance of the letter, and the only materiality that I consider now pertains to the first paragraph.

This is a communication from Toohig to Murphy, is it?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, it is forwarded on to Mr. Arthur P. Madden in Chicago. That is the way in which Mr. Toohig suggested that this information to be transmitted to Mr. Murphy be forwarded to Chicago. That is the form it took. It was an enclosing letter here.

Well, is it suffice—the court has read it—if I read it for the record?

By the Court: Yes, read the first paragraph.

By Mr. Ryan (reading):

"Reference is made to the telephonic request of this office to the Chicago division—"

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the date of the letter?

By Mr. Ryan: September 13, 1948.

406 "Reference is made to the telephonic request of this office to the Chicago Division on June 21, 1948, that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Incorporated, North Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois, be immediately contacted to secure certain invoices evidencing sales to the above concern and to General

Confections, Incorporated, Hillsdale, New York, and New York. The records were subsequently furnished this office and having been photostated are returned herewith, pursuant to the request of Special Agent Sam Krane of the Chicago Division in his letter dated August 31, 1948."

By Mr. O'Brien: Whose letter dated August 31, 1948?

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Krane's letter.

By Mr. O'Brien: Where is that?

By Mr. Ryan: Pardon me?

By Mr. O'Brien: Where is that letter?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, at the moment—

By the Witness: The one you cut, sir.

407 By Mr. Ryan: That is the one you have all except one paragraph.

By the Witness: That is dated the next day, sir. The typist was just a little late.

By Mr. O'Brien: The letter I have was dated July 1, 1948.

By Mr. Ryan: Apparently you are wrong, Mr. Toohig.

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: This letter was dated September 13th and it makes reference to a request of Special Agent Sam Krane for the return of the photostats which Mr. Krane made in his letter dated August 31, 1948.

Now, that letter is not one of these two, and it is probably in the file. There has been no request for it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do I understand that is a letter requesting the return of the photostats?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes, that is what it says here. That is all I know. I don't know if I have ever seen it. I 408 don't think I ever have.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am not concerned with that.

By the Witness: I think the July 1st letter is the one you want.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. The July 1st letter, Mr. Toohig, is marked Defendants' Exhibit 6 for identification, and this is the response, is it not, which you received to the request of June 21, 1948, except for the portion which has been deleted?

A. This letter, sir, is confirmation of the telephone call by Special Agent Sam Krane, complying with the request we made by telephone.

Q. Well, in addition to being a confirmation, is it also the letter which furnished you the data which you had requested?

By Mr. Ryan: If it did.

By the Witness:

A. I would say, yes, sir, in substance.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is there any other letter which you wrote to Chicago, you or your office, concerning the companies 409 which you were investigating in the East, I mean the Lubben companies?

A. The companies that traded with Lubben, sir?

Q. No, the Lubben companies.

A. I didn't understand your question.

Q. I will rephrase it.

Are there any other letters which you wrote to Chicago Agents for further data or information concerning the Lubben companies which you were investigating?

By Mr. Ryan: I will object. I can't see how this is proper cross examination.

All I asked this witness is if he got a document from somebody and when he got it.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was there any letter which you wrote to the Chicago Agent asking the Chicago Agent to pull the Shotwell Manufacturing Company returns?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection. It is improper, and it has been gone over already, anyway.

410 By Mr. O'Brien: I am asking for the letters, if the Court please. I have been over it, it is true.

By the Court: Are you asking if there are any letters on or about the time we are now considering, early in 1948?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, Judge. I have already asked the witness, and he said there was a telephone call which he said fulfilled that purpose.

I asked him if the telephone call was not merely a request for certain specific data that they wanted in their eastern investigation, and he said, no.

There was a notice to the Chicago office that was a substitute for a request that the Chicago office pull the return.

And then he gives me—

By the Witness: I didn't say that, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then he gives me a letter of June 21st, which is a mere request. I am still trying to find whether there was any letter from New York to Chicago in the year 1948, informing Chicago that the name Shot-411 well Manufacturing Company came up in the course of the investigation in the East of the Lubben companies, and requesting Chicago or advising Chicago to pull the returns.

By Mr. Ryan: I think he answered that. To the extent he didn't, I will admit right now there were no such communications.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true, but the reason I have to ask him again is because he said there was a letter, a couple of minutes ago, in the Judge's chambers.

By the Witness: If I did say there was a letter, I didn't say we requested the Special Agent's office of Chicago to pull any returns at all of anybody. The procedure is not that way.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And what is the procedure?

A. If we are interested in a return, we do not write to the Special Agents' office. We either write to the Bureau or the Collector or whomever we are interested in at that time, wherever the return may be located. We 412 don't ask for the Special Agent.

Q. Very well.

Is there any letter from you or your office to anybody requesting them to produce the Shotwell returns?

A. I already answered that, sir, in the previous answer when I said I do not think of a case I handled, where I was interested in developing it, either in this office or somewhere else, that I did not make a formal request to see if returns were filed, and that was done usually to a collector.

Q. Very well.

Then if you had such a letter in this matter in reference to Shotwell, I ask you to produce it.

A. The copy of the letter sent requesting any returns from anybody in Chicago?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. That would be in the file, I suppose.

Q. That is what you said before, and I am still trying to get it.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't know whether there is or not, if you are asking me, I am frank to say.

413 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you have any recollection or knowledge yourself, Mr. Toohig, beyond your ordinary practice, as to whether at or about the time that you had this memorandum delivered to you of March 4, 1948, which mentioned the name Shotwell, do you have any independent recollection of calling for the returns of Shotwell?

A. I believe they were requested from the Collector later on, subsequent to that time.

Q. Well now, you say—

A. You asked me the question, do I think.

Q. Do you base that belief on what you usually do?

A. I said I cannot remember a case in which I did not. If there is an exception, I don't know of it.

Q. Is that why you say you believe?

A. I think I would have done that in any case.

Q. Do you have any specific knowledge of the Shotwell Company?

A. I have no specific knowledge of that one company. I was handling a number of companies.

Q. But you do think if it was done in this case, 414 as it was usually done in other cases, it was done some time later?

A. I imagine that is so. If I did request it, if I did request it.

Q. And how much later, do you know?

A. How much later?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, in the first place, sir, it was not a New York case. We are inquiring about something that happened in a Chicago company. So it might be when I could get to it, in maybe a month or two.

As I said before, I was working on four cases. I believe, at that time, and that is why I may not have acted immediately, I explained.

Q. It might have been as late as August, might it not?

A. It could be, sir. It could be three or four months, sir. It is very possible. I would say it is very possible that inasmuch as it was not a New York firm, I would have made a request at some later date, for the reason that it may be worked by that other office. I don't know. It was not a New York case.

Q. I understand. But if you did make such a
415 request, the letter should be in whose files—the Treasury Department?

A. It would be in Treasury's, yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is one of the things, if it is there, your Honor, that I should like to see.

By the Court: Is that on your theory as to the date of disclosure?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I don't suppose, according to your theory, it would be particularly material, anyway.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Just one more question. The matter in Government's Exhibit 5 for identification, you yourself did not communicate to Shotwell or anyone connected with it, did you? The references to Shotwell contained in Government's Exhibit 5, you didn't tell any of the people at Shotwell about that?

A. Personally?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir. I did not know anybody in Shotwell personally, sir.

416 Q. I understand, you didn't, sir, and you didn't tell anybody to tell them, did you?

A. Directly telling them to get in touch with Shotwell about this? No.

Q. To inform Shotwell.

A. No, sir.

Q. And I take it that the matter contained in this memo was given to you by an informer of some sort?

A. Yes, sir, confidential informer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all

Redirect Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mr. Toohig, just one thing. You made some reference in your testimony to unbilled shipments, you said, to Shotwell.

Is that what you meant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Unbilled shipments to Shotwell?

A. Unbilled shipments of Shotwell to the Lubben companies.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer in evidence, if the Court
417 please, these documents that have been identified as Defendants' Exhibits 4, 5 and 6.

By Mr. Ryan: No objection.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and respectively marked Defendants' Exhibits 4, 5 and 6.)

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: Oscar Olson.

OSCAR W. OLSON, called as a witness on behalf of the Government herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. State your full name, please.

A. Oscar W. Olson.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Olson?

A. 4837 Wellington Avenue, Chicago.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am the Assistant District Commissioner of 418 Audits, Chicago Division.

Q. And how long have you been so engaged?

A. Since May 20th, this year.

Q. Prior to that what was your occupation?

A. I was Assistant Agent in Charge, for about twenty-eight years, I guess.

Q. Now, have you ever met one Mr. Byron Cain?

A. I met him once. He came to my office about a year ago.

Q. In what month was that, that he came to you?

A. I don't know. Time flies so fast. I imagine it was about a year ago. Probably October, November. I don't just recall.

Q. Is that the only occasion on which you had a conversation with him in your office?

A. I think that is the only time. I don't think I talked to him before.

Q. Was there anybody else present besides yourself and Mr. Cain?

A. No.

Q. Would you proceed and relate the conversation that you had with Mr. Cain at that time?

A. Be glad to. Mr. Cain came into my office and he said he had just come from a political meeting, at 419 which he had been offered the chairmanship of some dinner of some kind, and that he called at our office, wanted to talk to Mr. Wright, and he not being in, why, he talked to me, about whether or not it was proper for him, because of the investigation of his income tax returns, to accept this chairmanship of this political get-together.

I told Mr. Cain that as far as we were concerned, that it was not up to us to decide whether or not it was proper, that it was up to him to decide whether or not it was proper, and that we could have nothing to say about it; that regardless of whether he accepted the chairmanship or not, that the case would go forward, the investigation would go forward until its final conclusion, and that was about the extent of the conversation.

Q. Is that all the conversation you recall?

A. Oh, there might have been some other talk about the weather and things like that.

Q. Did you at that time tell Mr. Cain that he had nothing to worry about?

A. I did not.

420 By Mr. Ryan: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. From your position in the office, Mr. Olson, you knew, didn't you, that this investigation was going on of Shotwell?

A. Oh, yes, I had heard about it.

Q. And at that time, October of 1951, or November, whenever it was, a year ago, that Mr. Cain came in, the investigation was still in progress?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember telling Mr. Cain about the various steps and levels to which the matter would have to go before there could possibly be any publicity about it?

A. We never talked about that.

Q. You don't recall that?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Ryan: No redirect.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Ryan: If your Honor please, at this time I have a document I would like to identify and 421 offer.

If the Court please, I should like to have the copy of the affidavit of Byron Cain, which is marked Government's Exhibit 1 for identification, received in evidence as Government's Exhibit of the same number.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I have no objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibit 1.)

By Mr. Ryan: If your Honor please, that concludes the Government's evidence.

The Government Here Rested Its Case On The Above-Entitled Motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: We still have that book and the documents, and I would like to get through with those before I put on any witness that I might have.

Beyond that, I don't expect to have any witness, but perhaps one.

By the Court: I think Mr. Ryan was going to familiarize himself with that.

By Mr. Ryan: I am sorry, I was trying to get 422 the book in time. I didn't hear what counsel said.

I am willing to waive any question of competency with respect to these statements, these questions, testimony, or whatever it is, that you seek to have in, the testimony given before a Congressional hearing.

However, I do object to it on the grounds of the absence of any materiality, since these statements were made before a Congressional Committee in 1952 and could not possibly have come to the attention of the defendants at or prior to the time they were making the alleged disclosure. Therefore, they could not possibly have acted upon them.

For that reason, I say that none of the material, except the published statements that had previously been published, has any materiality in this matter.

By the Court: What do you have in mind in offering statements of this kind?

By Mr. O'Brien: Because they are statements of officials concerning the whole disclosure policy, not as of 1952—indeed, it was abandoned in 1951—but a discussion and testimony, which takes it right down through the 423 period that is involved here, takes it at either end of that period. This shows what the policy was at the beginning, how it shifted from time to time, what it was during years like 1948, and how it was construed and interpreted by the proper officials, and the difficulties which ensued, which is very plain were there right along, but not published.

By Mr. Ryan: The theory here is and is bound to be one of reliance.

By the Court: I would think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, that isn't necessarily so, under the cases. I have pleaded and I have a right to support my theory—

By the Court: This is being heard just by the court and I can receive it and give such weight to it as I think justifies the situation.

By Mr. Ryan: Yes. We have no jury here.

By Mr. O'Brien: The primary issue is the published policy, but if it is contended to be something over and beyond that, why—

By the Court: Well, I will receive the exhibit. I don't know in what way you have identified it now.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would it be satisfactory to the 424 Court, since there is no jury, and to Mr. Ryan, if I made arrangements with Mr. Ryan's approval, to have the pertinent parts which I have indicated copied in by the reporter?

By the Court: Well, is it sufficiently identified so I am able to take the document?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, I think it is.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I haven't any objection. I mean, just so it is such that the Judge can find what it is. You can read the whole document, for that matter, since we are involved only with the court here.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the little table I have got gives the pages, starting with 78.

By the Court: Well, you say page 7.

By Mr. O'Brien: Page 7, yes.

By the Court: I assume you are offering that entire page, is that it, page 7?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Well, that apparently is a letter written to the Secretary of the Treasury.

By Mr. Ryan: On page 7?

By the Court: Page 7—No. That is a statement by the Secretary Snyder, in which he quotes on page 5 a letter from Robert Ramspeck, and then he goes on ap-425 parently with his statement, and page 7 purports to reflect the statement by Secretary Snyder.

Is that correct?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. It really jumps to 78, where there is the press release, which sums up the situation, on page 78.

By the Court: Well, you may take this for the time being.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, Judge.

By the Court: Well, then it is understood that you are going to copy the portion that you have introduced and make it available as an exhibit for the record, and it will be identified by the stenographer as Defendants' Exhibit 7.

Is that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir, that is fine.

There are two other things, Judge.

Had you finished with this one?

By the Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that my order calls for this document, but I don't know whether it is there until we have a chance to see. But I am informed by Mr. Wenchel that there was an order to the various agents—it is really implementing the objective test laid down in 426 these published articles and binding on the agents, and without compliance with that, there would be nothing to stop a disclosure by someone, a taxpayer outside of the district, whose name came up somewhere in another district.

By Mr. Ryan: Is that order in here?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, it is not in here.

By Mr. Ryan: I mean, I don't know about such an order.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, perhaps not.

By Mr. Ryan: I mean, if there is such an order.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am told that the order was signed by the Assistant or Deputy Commissioner to that effect, to the various agents.

Now, that order I am interested in finding in the papers, and which is not in the papers, and having these papers produced by the Treasury, it is sort of double-barreled—it is in my subpoena, and it ought to be amongst the papers that they produce.

By Mr. Ryan: You say that this particular order of general application in the Treasury Department is covered by this subpoena which had to do with the docu-
427 ments that have to do with the voluntary disclosure in this case?

I wouldn't think it would be interpreted by anybody along the line that way. I didn't interpret it that way.

By Mr. O'Brien: It has to do clearly with it.

By the Court: Is it a public document?

By Mr. O'Brien: No. It was sent to the agents in the Treasury. It would be published, but I haven't been able to find it so far.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't even know of its existence. I won't challenge it, if you have seen it, but I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: What I want to say is that if that is so, I would expect the Treasury to produce it, if it is not a public document, but one which the agents have.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, as I interpret the subpoena, it would not have been covered any more than would these official copies of pronouncements or something on the policy. I construed the subpoena and I assume the Treasury people have construed it the same way, as requesting documents which dealt with the disclosure in this case, and therefore, I wouldn't assume that it would appear in any of this material or that it would be covered by the 428 subpoena, if they have such an order.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, would you inquire, Mr. Ryan, and if there is such, if you folks have such an order, whatever it is called, bring it in?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I will inquire. Apparently Mr. Toohig doesn't know of it. I will ask Mr. Krane and the people I have here if they know of such an order, and find out if they are aware of the existence of any such order.

By the Court: It couldn't be covered by your subpoena.

By Mr. O'Brien: I see. I suppose not.

By the Court: It may be covered by some other order that the court has made.

By Mr. Ryan: I didn't know of the existence of it. We don't have it, unless the agents may have something in the manual of instructions or something.

By Mr. O'Brien: What should we do, Judge?

By the Court: Now, let's see, have we any further testimony?

By Mr. Ryan: I don't have anything further, Judge.

By Mr. O'Brien: I thought that I might possibly 429 have one more witness on rebuttal, but I do not want to go into that until I see the documents. I may not then go into it all. I would have to see the documents, in any event, what I am to see.

By the Court: I think it would be helpful if I had the benefit of counsel's respective positions, so I know just exactly where we are.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I am assuming if counsel and if the court is willing to hear it, that counsel will urge his motion and argue it now, if he so desires.

By Mr. O'Brien: Urge what motion?

By Mr. Ryan: Your motion to suppress.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am not finished. I have some documents yet.

By Mr. Ryan: I see. You just want to know our theory, to enable you—

By the Court: Well, none of these documents, by reason of your respective theories, may have any materiality or relevancy whatsoever.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am beginning to understand why some of the officials have difficulty with this policy, in trying to state a theory, but I would say, Judge, as far as I can express it, that our position, our primary 430 position is that there was a voluntary disclosure made under the terms of published statements—for present purposes, the Wenchel statement made in 1947 would be enough to refer to.

The policy differed over the different periods.

So I am taking it as to that time, being the closest to 1948, the one made in 1947.

Now, that statement itself laid down certain conditions, and it was those that were held out to the public, or that group similarly situated.

It is my position that upon compliance with those conditions, that is, the thing that constitutes the disclosure is not the ultimate determination of the dollar amount of liability and not the preparation of any instruments, papers, summaries, or what have you, but the thing that constitutes the disclosure is the exposition of the taxpayer to tax authorities, bringing itself forward, putting himself in the way of whatever may ensue—if they have already started an investigation, the disclosure is untimely, of course—putting themselves forward and thereby making themselves liable to criminal prosecution, which they might have escaped had they stayed away; in 431 any event, identifying himself as one who is going to have to pay some additional taxes, with substantial penalties, that he might have avoided by keeping away; in other words, as the statement says, a simple thing, the mere act of coming in and telling, and from there on they will follow it, the amount will be determined, the subject of penalties, which could run as high as 70 percent in some cases.

Now, some people think of a disclosure, I have heard it so referred to here, as something which transpires only somewhere along the end of the line, when the papers are all completed and when the amount is determined.

There is nothing in the statements or in the law to warrant that conclusion, I think.

Now, on the point of timeliness, there is some ambiguity in that all of the statements say in effect before an investigation is initiated or before an investigation is commenced—and one wonders whether that means investigation of the taxpayer, investigation of someone else which might or might not ultimately lead to the taxpayer, and there is a view that it means the taxpayer, but there is some difficulty about that.

432 Now, there is that factual matter in the case.

Your Honor, clearly, if an investigation of Shotwell had commenced before it made the alleged disclosure, then the alleged disclosure, even if sufficient in every respect, would be untimely. But there again, it is not every investigation which is included within the term. It must be an investigation of a particular kind, not a routine nor current audit, such as is made of a certain number of all the large taxpayers of the country—some percentage goes through automatically such an audit. They simply haven't the means to audit them all, because it would be quite difficult. They would like to audit them all, but they can't.

There is some ambiguity on the question of the kind of investigation, who is being investigated, and I think on the facts of the case here, there is no investigation of Shotwell which commenced prior to the time of the alleged disclosure by Shotwell itself.

Then as I pointed out in the last argument, there is a question which might arise as to whether the investigation of the people in the East, in connection with which 433 the name of Shotwell would and apparently did arise ultimately, whether it could be said in an investigation of Shotwell, it had commenced before it made its disclosure.

By the Court: May I interrupt, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I have been wondering just in my mind, perhaps we can work out a plan that would be satisfactory to counsel and to the court. I don't think this should be for the record.

(Whereupon a discussion was had off the record.)

By the Court: While I have a fairly good idea of your respective positions, I think it would be helpful if each one of you set forth in writing briefly your positions, or as fully as you desire, and then if you get it up to me by the middle of next week, I would come down next Friday morning and we can finish it up.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

By the Court: Then I think I will turn these documents over to you, Mr. Ryan, so I won't have to have the responsibility.

By Mr. Ryan: All right, sir.

By the Court: We will make our date for Friday at two o'clock in the afternoon.

434 (Whereupon the further hearing in the above-entitled matter was adjourned to Friday, November 21, 1952, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock p.m.)

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Ryan
Mr. O'Brien
Mr. Hess
And Other Counsel.

By the Clerk: Number 52 CR 143, United States of America versus The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al; hearing on defendants' motion to suppress certain evidence.

By the Court: Gentlemen, I have looked over the correspondence that the Government has turned over to me, and I have concluded that of all the letters and documents, the following may possibly have some bearing on the issues that we are considering.

436 First, is this copy of a letter to Mr. McCahey, of September 7, 1950.

Then there is the letter written by Mr. Madden to Mr. Woolf, and the first paragraph is the only portion that I believe has any bearing on the issues. The rest of it is not evidentiary.

Then there is the letter written by Mr. Krane, Special Agent, to Olson, Special Agent, the first, third, fourth, fifth and sixth paragraphs, with the exhibit attached. I think I have eliminated the second paragraph.

And then there is the letter written by Mr. Krane to the Chief of the Intelligence Division, page 4 and the following matters which may have some bearing.

Then there is the letter written by Mr. Wright to the Deputy Commissioner under date of June 30, 1949.

A letter written by Mr. Krane to the Chief of the Intelligence Unit under date of September 19, 1950.

A letter written by Mr. Adair, Special Agent, to Mr. Palmer, Special Agent of Atlanta, Georgia, and the 437 affidavit of Mr. Lima is attached thereto.

By Mr. Ryan: Now, with respect to those, of course, my position stands with respect to all of them, because I think the Court understands I haven't any authority to make the turnover. If they are turned over, it will be because the Court has determined that they have a bearing and they should be turned over.

Now, beyond that, however, I think perhaps this one entitled "Requisition For Return," I think perhaps that would be evidentiary. In other words, I am just going to express myself with respect to that, not on any matters of policy that might be involved; and I take it, as I say, this is evidentiary, and the Court is turning it over to Mr. O'Brien.

Now, with respect to the Revenue Agent's Report or the Special Agent's Report, that is a narrative of the things that happened. I don't see in what sense it is evidentiary.

Perhaps if it was a question of the impeachment of Mr. Krane, there might possibly be some merit to it.

He hasn't testified in this proceeding as yet, and 438 he is only relating certain things in a report.

A report of investigation is essentially a confidential sort of thing, and I don't think that—unless there is something that this report by its existence evidences, I don't see how it could be evidentiary.

Now, I don't mean to tell you—there is no reason why I want to keep these things from being turned over, and there is nothing in them that I am concerned about, but I have to take this position because of the fact that they are confidential records and documents.

It simply reflects a reference to the situation and Mr. Krane's appraisal of it, and I don't see how that is evidentiary here with respect to that.

In other words, the analysis or discussion of the facts or evaluation of them, it seems to me, is a matter of professional opinion and certainly not factual in any sense.

That is all I care to say. As I say, I feel it incumbent upon me to take that position, and there may be other things discussed in there that are not germane. There are, doubtless, that have to do with the Government's 439 theory with respect to this case, generally, apart from the disclosure, and I don't think that type of material should be—of course, your Honor indicated before, the page following, and I assume you mean that is the only part you would consider turning over.

By Mr. O'Brien: I, of course, haven't seen the papers, Judge, but from what Mr. Ryan says, these things appear to me, first, as far as I can now think, I am not interested in proving as a fact, as true or false, many of the things which one might expect to find in these papers.

I don't think that is the issue, as to whether the thing is true or false.

The pertinent thing is in connection with the thinking of the Bureau and in connection with the repudiation of the disclosure or its effect, as well as the subject matter of timeliness, which the Court has to deal with.

Now, as I said, I don't know what the particular papers are, but I think that they have a bearing. If they show or tend to show the basis on which the Bureau acted in disclaiming or repudiating the disclosure, they would be pertinent to my theory of the case.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I would disagree with that.
440 I don't think the thinking of anybody in the Bureau is material here.

There are certain things that happened and there are certain legal consequences that flow from it. How somebody in or out of the Government evaluated them, I don't see that that is material here or relevant to any issue we have here.

By the Court: What other observations have you with respect to these?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, with respect to the Adair letter and the affidavit, now, this is a work product that represents an attempt by the Government to find out what Mr. Lima had to say.

Mr. Lima was here on the witness stand.

The Government wanted to be informed on the premises and they sought to have Mr. Lima interviewed, and a statement was taken from him, and thereby the Government was informed as to what he had to say about it.

Now, Mr. Lima has been here and he has testified and he has been subject to cross examination, and unless there is something in here purportedly—

By Mr. O'Brien: It would have been of some advantage to have had that at the time of the testimony, al-441 though it was admittedly not practical to do it.

By Mr. Ryan: That is the only observation I have about that.

About the letter from Sam Krane to the Chief of the Intelligence Bureau, there again it is a narrative of something that happened.

To the extent that it reflects Mr. Krane's thinking or represents a communication from Mr. Krane to the Chief of the Intelligence Unit, I don't see how it could have any bearing on the facts in issue here. It would reflect only Mr. Krane's interpretation of things.

It is only second hand, in a sense, a work product, his work.

By Mr. O'Brien: On that point of work product, Judge, I again looked at the Hickman case, as I suggested in my letter, which I sent Counsel a copy of, I think we have a difference of legal understanding of that term.

I find no justification in the books for the assertion that intra-office or inter-office memoranda prior to the trial attains the status or acquires a degree of privileged communication of that nature.

By Mr. Ryan: It depends on what they are offered 442 for. If all the material they contain is by way of recitation or narrative, then I think it merely reflects the thinking of the author.

The same with respect to Mr. Krane's communication to Mr. Olson, with an exhibit attached, and again, that letter was written to advise Mr. Olson concerning the status of the case and the facts of the case, and I don't see how that communication could be evidentiary of anything here, and also the exhibit attached to it.

The same thing with respect to the other communications that are here.

Now, with respect to this letter of Mr. Sullivan's, again it may be evidentiary and I haven't any objection to him having it, except to the extent that it is a confidential record of the Department. Presumably he has a copy of it too.

By the Court: Well, I will overrule the objection, Mr. Ryan.

By Mr. Ryan: All right.

By the Court: And insofar as Mr. Krane's letter, which I referred to and which is dated February 8, 1952, addressed to the Chief of the Intelligence Division, I will overrule your objection to that portion of the letter which covers the item Voluntary Disclosure, 443 beginning on page 4 and ending with the so-called Exhibit 6 on page 5, and that portion of the letter may be made available to Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. Ryan: I will physically remove that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then I had a motion, if the Court please, which I have transmitted to you and a copy to Mr. Ryan. I think I had two.

One we need not take the time here now with, except I note from Mr. Ryan's letter, and I think he otherwise told me, that he does not assert any objection.

By the Court: With respect to this motion concerning the General Commercial Acceptance Company, I have left the date blank as I was not informed as to what dates you had in mind, as to the return date of the subpoena.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it would have to be Wednesday.

By the Court: You have seen this?

By Mr. Ryan: I have no objection to it.

By the Court: You have seen the form of the order?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes.

By the Court: The 25th of November, then?

By Mr. Ryan: That would be the 26th, Wednesday.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, sir.

444 The other motion, if the Court please, has to do with papers which we think are pertinent to the proceedings here now, and was made because I did not think that the papers called for are to be considered within the provisions of the orders which you heretofore entered.

The motion has to do with orders or directives or mimeographs or manual procedure relating to disclosure matters or to the assignments of returns for audit or the procedures which are involved here.

Since it has been testified to, the transmission of corporate returns from Washington to the various agencies for audit, and the procedures by which that is carried out, the orders, mimeographs and directives have more particularly to do with situations where there is a case, such as Mr. Toohig testified to, communications to the agents in New York involving mention of a taxpayer in another district, what, if anything, is prescribed as to that.

By the Court: Well, let us go over your motion, so I may follow you.

By Mr. O'Brien: The motion itself?

By the Court: Yes. Your motion covers many things, and I don't—

445 By Mr. O'Brien: Section A covers orders, directives, communications and mimeographs from the Treasury Department to its—

By the Court: It is entirely taken care of by the subpoena which has been issued and return has been made and the order of the court is made and it has all been taken care of.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think not, Judge.

By the Court: I think that is the fact.

By Mr. O'Brien: In the sense that I do not understand the subpoena itself expressly stated that the subpoena was so understood by the Government.

By the Court: It was as broad and comprehensive as any subpoena could possibly be.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will have to look at the order to refresh my recollection.

I would say not, your Honor. It is broad as far as it extends, but your order reads this way: that there are to be produced from these files correspondence, memorandum, telegrams, copies of memoranda and transcription of telephone conversations relating to the subject-matter of the alleged disclosure.

Well, I do not regard—to be candid about it, I

446 think, and I said so before, I do not regard the unpublished orders or directives from the heads of the Treasury or the Bureau to the various agencies, as papers of that kind. They are directives and things which describe a procedure, which, in spots, may touch upon this subject, but I do not think it is in the nature that these items are.

By the Court: You mean generally, with reference to voluntary disclosures and not with reference to this specific matter?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right, your Honor.

By the Court: What do you say?

By Mr. Ryan: My position with respect to that is simply that it is not relevant to any issue. It doesn't make any difference what somebody in the Bureau of Internal Revenue wrote or what the disclosure was. There were certain published statements and it is for the court to state to what extent you will accept those statements; not to accept the many instructions, inter-departmental, with respect to what the people inside the Treasury Department would do, which could not be published, could not possibly be acted upon by the public.

Further, they were confidential in which they dis-
447 closed the purposes of the Internal Revenue and those things are not things which are common. They are procedures and the public are not concerned with those internal procedures. They are concerned with any policy that is held out to them and they may act upon and they are entitled to have the court interpret what they mean and what they can take out of it, but they cannot possibly act upon things they do not know about. They have no bearing on this.

There is no way. It makes no difference how somebody in the Bureau interpreted it throughout, if it never came to the attention of the public.

By Mr. O'Brien: As to the pertinency and the materiality, let me illustrate: the witness Toohig put in evidence through Mr. Ryan a memorandum from an informant disclosing, incidentally, the name of Shotwell and testified that he himself had made a memorandum on March 4th, the very day that this was brought in to him.

The purpose of that here, I suppose, has to do with the timeliness issue and it is intended to show that by reason of that occurrence, some investigation had 448 commenced and to which you could relate back the commencement of the Shotwell investigation.

By Mr. Ryan: That wasn't it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let us assume it was, for a moment. And I say, and I have made inquiry to find out that there are directives and orders of the kind that your Honor characterized which tell the various agents over the country in a situation of that kind what they must do in respect to the taxpayer whose name is disclosed, who is from another district, what they must do in order to fix the time at which it may objectively be said that a commencement of the taxpayer so mentioned—a commencement of the investigation of the taxpayer so mentioned, has occurred.

That is merely illustrative. I am not debating that.

By the Court: Well, I will sustain the objection to paragraph A.

By Mr. Ryan: He has gotten into paragraph B, at the same time, on that.

I have a teletype on that from the Acting Commissioner.

By the Court: Let me hear about paragraph B.

By Mr. O'Brien: B is specific. It is a case of 449 the same nature, but specifically it is related to such directives or orders as there may be.

By the Court: Of course, I might say, counsel, that our adjournment to today was merely for the purpose of enabling the court to go into these documents that the government produced in response to your subpoena.

The testimony was closed and there was no further testimony to be offered on the motion to suppress and no further proceedings, as I understand it.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is not my understanding.

By the Court: That is the Court's understanding. I am telling you now how you can do it.

You are proceeding on this motion and it is untimely in view of the resting of both parties, except in so far as referring to the correspondence and documents and the Court made that available to you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I have the record on that. I did not rest. I said, and the record will show—the record said that I would have rebuttal and I said I did not want to go into it until I saw the documents.

450 By the Court: Well, I don't know about paragraph B. You are the only one that introduced any testimony as to the so-called policy of the Department. The Government didn't produce any witness in that regard. How can you say paragraph B of your motion, is by way of rebuttal. I don't understand.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I can understand it. The pertinency of the rebuttal part arises out of the testimony that they put on through Mr. Toohig.

By the Court: You mean, we are talking about paragraph B now?

By Mr. O'Brien: I do. I asked Mr. Toohig if it was not true that there was such a directive and he would have to write such a letter to Chicago. He said that was not—there was no rule or order of that kind. I asked him if he had written. He said he didn't for a month.

By the Court: I understand that by paragraph B, it seeks to implement an order or directive, if any issued—that part that is given by J. P. Wenchel, Commissioner from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, May, 1947.

451 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: It is an implement.

By Mr. O'Brien: I meant to tell you, your Honor, it says that the time of disclosure and the time of investigation begins when it can be ascertained with complete objectivity and certainty. The thing which implements it and makes it possible is the directive and teletype.

By Mr. Ryan: I have a teletype that will throw light on it. It says there was no such implementation. Nobody I have found has ever seen such a document.

He says there was no such implementation.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like the record to show also the complete record of Mr. Ryan's assertion that there is no such item.

By Mr. Ryan: On the authority—of course, I haven't searched myself, but I have received that information.

By the Court: All right.

452 By the Court: What do you have to say about "C"?

By Mr. O'Brien: It is more specific on "B", your Honor. The disposition would have to be the same.

By Mr. Ryan: I didn't remember there was a "C"; no way of knowing such a document was in existence. It couldn't possibly make any difference. It would fall into the same category as "A", and it would be intra-departmental, not published, and nobody could rely upon it. For that reason—furthermore, when I put that testimony of Mr. Toohig in, Counsel misconceived my purpose.

The statement was made in court here that there was no communication from him prior to the date of the alleged disclosure even on the testimony of the Government's witness. I was making no point concerning that. I put that evidence in and that document in for another purpose.

By the Court: You don't contend there was any investigation by the Government as such by reason of any disclosure made to Mr. Toohig by the confidential informant?

By Mr. Ryan: No, I don't because it happened after the Wenchel Doctrine, and the Wenchel Doctrine speaks of the manner and methods by which an investiga-453 tion is commenced and I don't rely on it for that.

I have another purpose with respect to whether the corporate records are involved here or not.

By the Court: Does that enlighten you at all, Mr. Ryan, as to the Government's position?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, it does. It enlightens me in both respects.

We have one left.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And that has to do with the manual of procedure pertaining to the assignment of returns for examination and audit. The relevancy in that connection is the testimony of Mr. Holz on that subject. Your Honor may recall, will recall there were two cards offered in evidence through him, Plaintiff's Exhibit 2 and Plaintiff's Exhibit 3, some conversation about the assignment of the 1946 Tax Return of Shotwell. It was in that connection that there was testimony about some of the group leaders or squad chiefs or whatever they were called.

By Mr. Ryan: My position is the same with that. It is intra-bureau and it is for the Court to decide when an investigation has commenced within the meaning of the published statement.

454 I think that Mr. O'Brien would probably agree with me the nub of this is whether the assignment of a return to a group chief in 1947 can have the effect of an institution of the investigation under the Wenchel Doctrine.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that was one of the purposes of the testimony.

By Mr. Ryan: To that extent my position is the Court has to interpret that doctrine.

By the Court: Your position is what, please?

By Mr. Ryan: That the Court is going to have to look at the Wenchel statement and say whether that constitutes an assignment of the return to a revenue agent, special agent, collector, or Bureau of Internal Revenue within the meaning of the Wenchel statement, and nothing anybody said or any procedures that are adopted in the Revenue Bureau, intra-bureau procedures, can have any effect on that question. That is a question for the Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is a question for the Court when the pertinent facts are in, and any regulation as to what shall be done in a case of an assignment and what constitutes an assignment, and so forth, is binding on all of the agents and is of very great probative value 455 on this question. I think this is the last one.

By the Court: Is there such a manual?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, there is a manual for special agents but it doesn't contain anything about as to what constitutes an assignment, when an assignment is made within the meaning of the Wenchel Doctrine, and it is most confidential since it has to do with government procedures.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not interested in it if there is any part that is of that nature. If the statement is made by the United States Attorney that the manual that he has relates only to special agents and not to the office of the agent in charge, I am not interested in what it is.

By Mr. Ryan: This manual has only been produced very, very shortly. This is for special agents?

By Mr. Burman: That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: Is there another one for Revenue Agents?

By Mr. Burman: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Do you know whether that has any bearing—

By the Court: Well, you better confer with him and you may state what your position is.

456 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, while he is doing that, in view of your statement about the rebuttal, I went to the record just to make sure.

By the Court: I think that is true. I merely made the observation, I don't think this is rebuttal.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't have the other manual. Of course, I did try to gather up and find out whether there are documents that existed. There was no order and I didn't have any instructions from the Treasury Department whether I could even make a tender of them, but I am hoping to get through this if we can without the necessity for delaying further the hearing, and I will say with respect to any such manuals I have no reason to know there is anything like that in them, but they are strictly intra-bureau and to the extent they deal with procedures within the Bureau, they are not matters that should be public property. They cannot affect the situation since they cannot possibly act upon those things, and the Court in the last analysis can only decide for the public what they are entitled to take out of the published statements.

In addition to that, as your Honor says—I put in 457 evidence about the same return on December 16th.

By Mr. O'Brien: If Mr. Ryan wants to strike the testimony of the witness, I have no interest in the question.

By Mr. Ryan: No, I can't do that.

By Mr. O'Brien: The Government has adduced the evidence for what it is worth.

By Mr. Ryan: I simply put that man on to identify records and to produce a record card which reflects under the assignment of return on a certain date to a group chief, and the only question that remains is whether in the published Wenchel Doctrine, that constitutes the commencement of an investigation, and what opinions may be held by anybody doesn't make any difference.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not talking about opinions. I may say, Judge, that that question, not to hear the case on the evidence you got, but generally is the one which the whole disclosure policy as the report and other publications show, and it is so difficult that the Bureau itself, the officials are this way (gesturing) on some nice law question? Not at all. On the simple question as to what is it that marks the commencement of an investigation within the meaning of those words. If you

458 have a manual effective with binding force on the people in the agent's office which says what shall be done in order to commence the investigation, I imagine that would be of a mild degree of interest on this question.

Now, if it isn't here, all right, say so, that they don't have such.

By Mr. Ryan: We have no order on us yet to produce anything. I have done this in an effort to expedite this thing should we be required to take any action on it. There has been no order yet. As I say, I fail to see how it makes any difference. The Bureau might even make an ultra conservative decision on the matter, but it still wouldn't mean that the doctrine wouldn't go a great deal further.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to add one fact just to remind the Court one elementary bit of evidence and the very facts which are peculiarly within the knowledge of the other side, such as a fact of this kind. I have no burden of establishing, but I am inquiring into it in connection with the subject that they brought up.

By Mr. Ryan: The position of the defendants here is that there were certain published statements and 459 they acted upon them.

Now, as to what their published statements mean, it is for the Court to say what a reasonable person would be entitled to take out of them, not the construction that might be placed on them by different people within the Bureau, and until such time as the Court pronounced on these things, no one would know for sure what they did mean, even the man who made the pronouncement would not be competent for him to get on the stand and say what he meant by it, what construction he placed on it, because it isn't what he thinks it means, it is what the Court says a reasonable person can take out of it. He may say it means something entirely different from what it says, but that doesn't change it. It still means what it says and what the Court says the public is entitled to take out of it.

By the Court: While, on the other hand, you take the position in your brief that the assignment of the 1946 Tax Return of Shotwell to Group Chief Granahan constituted an assignment of the tax return to an Internal Revenue Agent or other Bureau Officer, that is your position?

By Mr. Ryan: That is right.

460 By the Court: Under the terms of the so-called Wenchel Statement. You contend that an investigation thereby was initiated. The Wenchel Statement, however, indicates that the mere record of a name does not mean that an investigation has been initiated. I take it that Mr. O'Brien is concerned with whether or not he would have any manual or any rules of procedure which would indicate what such an assignment means in the handling of tax returns. In other words, is it a mere routine affair that takes place in every tax return, or does it have some specific significance under your procedure?

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Holz was here who introduced the cards and explained the making of that record and the returns are surveyed in Washington and sent out to the officers in the field for examination, and then they are surveyed again and then are assigned to groups in the office.

Now, the plain fact of it is as has been established in the record just what is done. They are sent out from Washington to be surveyed and assigned for investigation. Some of them they may not decide to audit in the field. They may send them back to Washington. Those that they do, they assign to group chiefs, who, in turn, give 461 them to agents to go out on.

The only question is whether an assignment to a group chief as distinguished from an assignment to the working agent constitutes the commencement of the investigation under the Wenchel Statement. I assume that is the crux of it, isn't it?

By Mr. O'Brien: All I want is to have the whole sequence of events before the Court, the facts from which the Court can draw the conclusion, whether a fact of law or mixed one as to when the investigation commenced.

By the Court: Your position is that the assignment of a tax return to Group Chief Granahan means what?

By Mr. Ryan: It means that an investigation was commenced, that irrevocably that return was—

By the Court: That may be a conclusion.

By Mr. Ryan: That is the cut-off point for disclosure.

By the Court: When it was assigned to Group Chief Granahan, what was Group Chief Granahan required to do?

By Mr. Ryan: He was required to turn it over to a working agent as soon as one was available to make the examination, have him go out and make an 462 audit.

By the Court: Are there regulations in any manual which indicates that that is the procedure that should be followed upon the assignment of the tax return to a Group Chief?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all I am interested in, in the manual, not otherwise seeing it. I don't care to look at it. You can look at it.

By Mr. Ryan: I haven't seen—

By the Court: Might that not be of some significance?

By Mr. Ryan: I suppose conceivably it might, but Mr. Holz was here the other day on the stand to testify with respect to the practice which was in effect, and I think Counsel cross examined him. They were surveyed and then turned over to the Group Chief and he was to assign them or turn them over to an agent to go out and make the audit. That is my recollection of it. It may be nceivable that—it may be conceivable someone coming in here testifying what the significance of an assignment to a Group Chief is. I don't know what that might throw out, except whether the return was assigned to a Group Chief, it therefore meant an audit would be made. I presume that is the only thing. I don't even know if there 463 is any regulation that deals expressly with that.

Mr. Burman has sent for the manual and we can look at it and see if it says specifically that, but as I say, this order wasn't on us to produce yet, and while I tried to gather up some of the stuff and expedite the hearing, I didn't feel that we had been ordered to produce this material as yet, and I haven't even clearance from the Treasury Department that authorizes me to make a tender of it, and I must have that before I can—not myself, but the Bureau Representative must have that before he can make a tender to the Court, or otherwise he is in violation of the regulation and the statute.

464 By Mr. O'Brien: What is the violation there of the statute?

By Mr. Ryan: Well, if anybody in the Bureau turns over files of the Bureau without authority from the Secretary of the Treasury, he has violated the Regulation, not the statute.

The statute deals with returns only.

Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know whether you are speaking from your standpoint, I guess that is all you are speaking from, what you agreed to.

By Mr. Ryan: I have a manual here. At the present time, I cannot even tender it to the Judge. I have not yet received instructions from the Treasury Department whether I can. There has been no order yet in which I could.

By Mr. O'Brien: My motion in that connection is on the plaintiff to produce it, not on you, and the plaintiff, is prosecuting a criminal case. It is the plaintiff, in addition to being the United States.

The Court: Well, we first have to determine whether or not it is in existence before the court can make any order on it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well, I understood from 465 the gentleman—I don't know his name—Mr. Berman, was it that there is a manual in effect in the office of the Agent in Charge, just as the one you physically saw here is in effect pertaining to the office of the Special Agents.

I take it that would be the Intelligence Unit or other special agents, as distinguished from the ordinary revenue agents.

By Mr. Ryan: That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: And that it does, therefore, exist.

By the Court: Is there anything further we should now consider?

By Mr. O'Brien: One thing, Judge. What was the court's direction about the sub-section D, on the Manual?

By the Court: We are awaiting the return of the messenger that was sent out.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, I missed it. Then there was nothing on that.

I had one other motion that I sent you.

I had this to say, Judge, if I may, but I would like 466 to ask Mr. Ryan, first, concerning the matter that we discussed the last couple of days, whether there has been any word from Washington on the papers?

By Mr. Ryan: I haven't as yet. I am still awaiting word from New York that instructions have been issued by them to the Department: I have taken every step.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't want to get deeply into that. I do want to say this, Judge, and then I will be happy to get the business at hand and finish it, but I don't feel free to do it without going at the earliest time into what has transpired in this case in relation to the orders that we had for papers.

That is, that Tuesday my people, my auditors and associates were in New York to look at the papers, and the United States Attorney's office in the Southern District of New York, in the first instance, and later the Bureau of Internal Revenue, in the second instance, refused to comply with the order, and I informed Mr. Ryan.

He took it up with Washington.

We found also, when we got there, that all these papers, having been there so long, we had to discover them

467 on investigation, on deposition, and then produce them through your orders; that at that late date, when so close to trial, when my people sought to take off the figures, that all of a sudden Chicago wants the figures back here. Not all the papers, but some, and there is a situation which I do wish to discuss seriously.

I would have brought it up this morning when you were here, but I was in the Court of Appeals at 9:30 until 12:30 on two matters we had set for argument.

But I want you to know that. I want you to know it is something I wish to discuss before you get away. I would like very much, unless you direct something else, to go ahead and get done with this, this motion, whatever remains of it, and then to go into that.

Of the papers which were handed to me at the opening of this session, I should like to offer in evidence the Madden letter, dated August 30, 1950.

By the Court: Suppose you have it marked; that will be Defendants' Exhibit 7.

By Mr. O'Brien: Number 7, I think, is the excerpts from the book. You assigned that number, Judge, the 468 last time we were here.

This would be 8. Otherwise you are correct.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to have these sheets marked Defendants' Exhibits 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13, respectively, for identification.

By Mr. Ryan: The same objection I made to the turnover.

(Whereupon said documents were marked respectively Defendants' Exhibits 8 to 13, both inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien: And will the Reporter mark Defendants' Exhibit 7 for identification the transcript of the excerpts from the committee hearings.

Number 7, I understand, your Honor, was received in evidence subject to verification by counsel.

By the Court: Well, I think I said subject to the objection. Of course, it is quite apparent that hasn't any evidentiary value, but is before the court.

By Mr. Ryan: It is in.

By the Court: That is right.

469 (Whereupon said document was received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit No. 7.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer then the papers which at the Court's suggestion I had had marked for identification Defendants' Exhibits 8 to 13, respectively.

By the Court: Will you identify them, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. Number 8 is the Madden letter of August 30, 1950, to Woolf.

I mean no disrespect in describing these gentlemen. I just want to make it short.

The second is a memo of August 30, 1950.

By the Court: Defendants' Exhibit 9?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is Defendants' Exhibit 9, yes, sir. In fact, it is one memoranda consisting of five sheets.

By Mr. Ryan: It is the Krane memorandum.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is the Krane memorandum, apparently.

By the Court: That is Exhibit 9?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir, 9 to 13. Each sheet bears a number.

By Mr. Ryan: The same objection. It is narrative. It is confidential.

470 By the Court: Well, it will be received in evidence.

(Whereupon said documents were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 8 to 13, both inclusive.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not assigning a number, but I would like the record to show that the exhibit bears two attached slips. I suppose they could be marked 8-A and 8-B, respectively, to show that they are here.

By the Court: Very well.

(Said documents were marked respectively Defendants' Exhibits 8-A and 8-B.)

Thereupon The Defendants, Further To Maintain The Issues In Their Behalf, On The Aforesaid Motion, Introduced The Following Evidence In Rebuttal, To Wit:

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Graflund.

H. STANLEY GRAFLUND, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

471 Q. What is your name?
A. H. Stanley Graflund.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is only one other thing on the papers produced, Judge. I would like to mark these Defendants' Exhibits 14 and 15 for identification.

By Mr. Ryan: Same objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: As a matter of fact, this is a duplicate. You can take that back. Is it all right to separate it?

By Mr. Ryan: It doesn't make any difference. You can separate it. It is the same thing.

By Mr. O'Brien: So it will be Exhibit 14 only. 15 is out.

By the Court: What is it?

By Mr. O'Brien: 14 is a letter from Mr. Krane to the Chief of the Intelligence Unit.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 14.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. State your name?

472 A. H. Stanley Graflund.

Q. Were you formerly an officer of Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I was.

Q. What office did you hold, Mr. Graflund?

A. Vice-President and Secretary.

Q. Did you have any occasion to take currency to the office of a Dr. Doe in the Board of Trade Building?

By Mr. Ryan: Objection to the form of the question, leading. You should start back a little further and lead up to this point.

By the Court: No. He may answer.

By the Witness: I did.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you state to the Court the circumstances of what you did and the occasion in which you did it?

By Mr. Ryan: I will object to that. That is a little too broad, the circumstances and the occasion. It may involve all kinds of conversations and everything.

I have no way of knowing what he is going to say, so I can object.

By the Court: Well, we will find out.

473 Go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. Toward the early part of 1946, I was approached by Mr. Huebner and told that the company needed corn syrup.

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. In the early part of 1946, I was approached by Mr. Huebner—

By Mr. O'Brien: Talk over this way, will you, so the Judge can hear you, Mr. Graflund.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) All right. I was approached by Mr. Huebner who said the company needed corn syrup and in order to obtain that corn syrup the company would first have to purchase raw—

By Mr. Ryan: I object to a recitation of what the company would have to do. It is hearsay.

By the Court: Yes. I sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Just state what you were told to do and what 474 you did.

A. I was told to take some money down to Dr. Doe's office.

Q. For corn?

A. For corn.

Q. Where was the office?

A. In the Board of Trade Building.

Q. And did you go alone or were you accompanied?

A. Alone.

Q. Do you recall the office number?

A. I do not.

Q. What did you do when you got to the building?

A. I looked for Dr. Doe's number on the board in the lobby.

Q. And then?

A. I took an elevator up to his office floor.

Q. You entered the office?

A. I did.
Q. Can you describe it very briefly?
A. Two rooms, an outer room and an inner room; some dental equipment in the inner room.
Q. Anybody in there, in the office?
A. Two men.
Q. How were they dressed?
475 A. One man had on a white jacket, and I am not sure of the other, but I believe he had on a cocoa jacket, cocoa color.
Q. All right, sir. What did you do?
A. I extended the envelope to the man in the white jacket.
Q. What was said?
A. I said, "I am from Shotwell."
Q. What was done?
A. He took the envelope.
Q. What did you do?
A. I left.
Q. Did you have any occasion before or since that time to act in the same way with Dr. Doe?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever meet him before or after?
A. No, sir.
Q. You appear here upon subpoena served upon you, Mr. Graflund?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were heretofore subpoenaed by the United States Attorney in this matter?
A. Yes.
Q. What day was it that you were down here?
476 A. I believe it was Thursday of last week.
Q. Was it the 12th or 13th?
A. That would have been the 13th, wouldn't it?
Q. All right, sir. Did you talk to the United States Attorney?
A. I did.
Q. Did you tell him what you have stated here today?
A. I did.
Q. At what time of the day?
A. In the noonhour.
By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.
By Mr. Ryan: Well, I would like to say for one thing, I think this question about whether he talked to me in the noon hour leaves a little unfair inference in this record, because under the circumstances I did what was the ethical and proper thing.

Dr. Doe had been on the stand.

I disclosed this man's testimony to counsel and I advised the court of it, and for the benefit of anybody that might have heard of this, I want the record to show that as soon as I learned of this man's testimony or be-477 fore it could have affected this inquiry, I notified counsel and the Judge of it.

By the Court: I think that is true.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no doubt about that. I should like to read the letter, however, of November 19th, by which that was done, which was the occasion for my mentioning the hour.

"This evidence was presented by the Government during the morning session on Thursday, November 13th."

I asked the court to take judicial notice of the fact that the official transcript shows that the evidence was produced at the opening of court at two o'clock, Dr. Doe's testimony.

By Mr. Ryan: What time?

By Mr. O'Brien: Two o'clock.

By Mr. Ryan: At two o'clock inthe afternoon?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: I am sorry, that is wrong, counsel.
478 Dr. Doe was the last witness before noon.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know that it makes any difference.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, it certainly does to me.

By Mr. O'Brien: Page 315 of the record:

"By the Court: We will take our morning recess."

Then a recess was taken.

By Mr. Ryan: The record appears that way?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Ryan: Then the record is wrong. Dr. Doe was the last witness that testified.

By the Court: We recessed for noon. A morning recess means we recessed about 11:00 o'clock or 11:30. If the Court takes a morning recess, that is a morning recess.

By Mr. O'Brien: I may be mistaken.

By the Court: I don't remember when he was called.

By Mr. O'Brien: My record was that Dr. Doe was the first witness at 2:00 o'clock.

By the Court: If his testimony is before the noon
479 recess—

By Mr. O'Brien: Although, frankly, I don't know that it would make any difference.

By Mr. Ryan: I think it makes a difference to me. I learned what this man had to say to us after Dr. Doe had testified.

By the Court: Well, are there any further questions from this witness, Mr. Ryan?

By Mr. Ryan: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mr. Graflund, do you know how much money was in the envelope you say you took to Dr. Doe's office?

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Ryan, excuse me a minute. The record does show that the adjournment to 2:00 o'clock was taken after Dr. Doe's testimony, as Mr. Ryan said.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. How much money, if you know, was in this envelope that you say you took to Dr. Doe's office?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Do you know that there was money in the envelope?

A. Yes, sir.

480 Q. Did you see it?

A. I saw a glimpse of it, yes.

Q. In other words, it was not sealed so you could not see it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Dr. Doe?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not he was in the office?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you have any instructions to give the money to Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you don't know whether you did or not, is that right? You didn't know whether the man you gave it to was Dr. Doe; you assumed he was, is that it?

A. I assumed he was.

Q. Because he had a white coat on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Graflund, you stated on direct examination that you occupied an office in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

481 Q. And directing your attention to the years, well, 1945 through 1950, would you tell the Court what office you held, or offices, if you had different positions, with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. From 1945?

Q. On through 1950.

A. Well, I was Vice-President during that period and Secretary.

Q. All during that period?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you also Comptroller during that period?

A. Not during 1945, no, sir.

Q. Well, during 1946?

A. Part of 1946, yes, sir.

Q. 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1948?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1949?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1950?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I will object, your Honor. What is the materiality of that?

482 By the Court: That is to identify him.

By Mr. Ryan: I was not in this office. I have to show the man's connection with the corporation, for the record.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By the Witness: May I make one point there?

By the Court: Well, if you want to clear up anything in your testimony you may, if that is what you have in mind.

By the Witness: My only point was I did not have the official title of Comptroller. I was Vice-President and Secretary.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Were you the Comptroller when you took the money over to Dr. Doe's office, as you say?

A. No.

Q. What were you then?

A. I was Vice-President and Secretary.

Q. Vice-President and Secretary?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

483 By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Holz, will you step up here, please?

By the Court: He has been sworn, I believe.
By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, he was, Judge.

FRANK J. HOLZ, recalled as a witness, having been previously sworn and examined, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Holz, you appeared here today in response to a subpoena which my office served upon you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you brought with you the papers, or some of the papers mentioned in that subpoena?
A. The only paper that I could obtain was this examination record card Form 1247 for the year 1946, because the rest of the file, I find is already over here. That was obtained, I think, by Mr. Krane previously.
Q. This is a photostat of the original?
A. That is correct.
By Mr. O'Brien: You have no objection to my using the photostat?
By Mr. Ryan: No, none at all.
484 By Mr. O'Brien: Would you mark the photostat, Defendants' Exhibit 15 for identification, please.

(Whereupon said document was marked as requested.)

By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Referring to the card marked Defendants' Exhibit 15 for identification, I will ask you to state, Mr. Holz, if this is—if this is related to the card you brought in during your direct testimony?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. But it is the card which shows the names of the field agents to whom the return is assigned for audit or investigation?
A. That is right.
Q. It is true, is it not, that the other day I asked you, or called your attention to the fact that Mr. Lima's name did not appear on either of the cards which you had brought, Plaintiff's Exhibits 2 and 3?

A. That is right.

Q. And Mr. Lima's name does appear on this card, 485 does it not, Defendant's Exhibit 15?

A. Yes.

Q. And above it, Mr. Madden's?

A. That is right.

Q. And the respective dates to which the matters were referred to them for investigation?

A. That is correct.

Q. Were you asked the other day to bring this card in as well as those which you brought?

A. No. You see, the file—this—let me explain.

Q. No. I just want to know. I just want to know if you were asked to bring this card?

A. No.

Q. Now, in the year 1947, speaking of corporate returns, was it the practice of the Bureau at Washington to send those which disclosed the gross income of $75,000 for examination or audit?

A. That was the general rule, although there were others that showed less than that?

Q. Where there were special reasons?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in the case of all returns of corporations which disclosed a gross income over $125,000, was there a 486 practice during the year of 1947 to send those to the agencies for audit?

A. They would come in the category of those above 75,000, surely.

Q. Now, on your direct examination the other day, you testified that these corporate returns, when they reach your office, are distributed by you to various group chiefs for assignment for investigation by their field men, is that correct?

A. After, when they are received in our office—

Q. After you have screened them?

A. Oh, yes. I was going to bring that out. We classify them first.

Q. I will ask you about that later, but my question now, which I didn't phrase so well is whether you allocate or distribute the returns which you have screened or retained for audit, to the various group chiefs for assignment for investigation by their field agents?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, you have general supervision over the group chiefs?

A. That is correct.

Q. In any given year—let me ask you this first:
487 Do the group chiefs themselves, in turn, screen the returns to see which shall be returned without audit or shall be audited?

A. They do.

Q. And in any given year, it is true, is it not, that there are a good many corporate returns which you have retained for audit which do not get audited but which are returned, due to pressure of work and all that?

A. We always have more work than we can possibly deal with.

Q. Yes.

A. But our aim is to examine those which look most—well, fruitful, let us say, and yet, on the other hand, we also take those which show possible refund.

Q. I didn't want to inquire too closely into your practice, Mr. Holz. I just want to know this, as a matter of fact: After the allocation of the work or inventory to the group chiefs, is there, in any given year, always a group of returns which they are unable to get to and do the auditing on?

A. I wouldn't say always.

488 Q. Sometimes?

A. Oh, yes. That happens.

Q. The card which you brought in, is it sometimes referred to as an investigation assignment card?

A. We call it an examination record card.

Q. Yes, sir. Only that?

A. That's all.

Q. It bears no label, does it?

A. Yes.

Q. That is where?

A. On the left-hand corner. Do you notice that Number 1247 Examination Record Card?

Q. Yes. These cards do not have anything to do with investigations which are initiated by special agents, do they?

A. This card would indicate that an agent in our own office has this case.

Q. Yes, but I said special agents?

A. No.

Q. The special agents would be in the Intelligence Unit, for the most part?

A. That is correct. To that, may I inject something else?

489 Q. Defendants' Exhibit 4—

A. Could I inject something there? I might not have understood the second to the last question. You said something to the effect—

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Holz?

By the Witness:

A. I am not too sure whether I placed the right construction on the second to the last question.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you read the question for the witness, please?

(Whereupon the questions and answers were read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. In other words, if a special agent initiates the investigation, this card has nothing to do with what he is doing.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 4, and tell me whether that is a document coming from a special agent?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. The assignment shown on Defendants' Exhibit
490 15 under date of 7-30-48 was through Group Chief whom?

A. Johnson.

Q. The card does not show that there had been any prior assignment by Group Chief Granahan?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is it true, is it not, that at or about the 30th day of July of 1948, this return was redistributed or reallocated to Mr. Johnson, Group Chief Johnson, or some time prior to that?

A. Well, yes. Mr. Johnson received this first on July 21, 1948.

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 15, the document so marked for identification.

By Mr. Ryan: No objection.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Defendants' Exhibit 15 in evidence.)

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.
By Mr. Ryan: No.
By the Court: Do you want to cross examine?
By Mr. Ryan: I didn't know he was finished. Yes, sir.

491 Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Can you tell, Mr. Holz, from the card how long Mr. Granahan held the return before it was transferred to Mr. Johnson, the Group Chief?
A. According to this card, he held it from December 16, 1947 to July 20, 1948.
Q. Apparently without assigning it to a particular agent?
A. That is right.
Q. You said, I believe, that the Group Chief had the right to again survey these returns and return them if he didn't see fit to examine them?
A. That is right.
Q. Is the delay, or the fact that he held it for that length of time indicative of what his intentions would be?
A. No.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that, unless he knows.
By Mr. Ryan: If he knows.
By Mr. O'Brien: If the Group Chief is available.
By Mr. Ryan: Well, the Group Chief, his father
492 is dying right now. He is with him at the hospital. That is Mr. Granahan.
By the Court: Well, he may state whether in the ordinary course of handling matters of this kind, that delay had any significance.
By the Witness:
A. No. The mere fact that a Group Chief has a case for any length of time may mean he has no one available to handle this case where he has so many cases ahead of him to assign.
By Mr. Ryan:
Q. Would that delay be consistent, from your knowledge and practice, of an intention not to examine?
A. Well, no.

By Mr. O'Brien: I note an objection.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. What was your answer?

A. That was a consistent practice.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is a conclusion of the witness, as I see it.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, if he knows and if there is any practice—

By the Court: Inasmuch as he is now testifying 493 as to the practice and custom, he may answer.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. The fact of the delay, the period of time which Mr. Granahan held this return, under your understanding and practice in the office, does that indicate anything with respect to whether he was going to return, reject the return for examination or whether he was going to have it examined?

A. If anything, it would indicate he was going to examine.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I move to strike that, if the Court please. He can't state what the practice is. I think the question of what it indicates is up to the Court.

By the Court: It seems to me it is a mere conclusion on the part of the witness.

By Mr. Ryan: Perhaps there should be something further.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Are you familiar with the practice which you describe, of Group Chiefs themselves surveying returns assigned to them for examination?

A. Yes, as they have them, as these cases are 494 assigned to them in groups. There may be hundreds of them at a time. They will make their survey on their second classification at that time.

Q. At what time? As they are assigned?

A. As soon as they have an opportunity, as they are assigned to them, and I know some of the group chiefs make it a practice of setting aside those for examinattion which to them are the more substantial cases. Let us put it that way. And those with the least likelihood of change, they keep those to the last. So in the event their work becomes too heavy, they can take the minor cases at a later date and send them back to Washington.

495 Q. Would your former answer be incorrect, previous to that, he was going to have them examined?

A. It would simply indicate he intended to have them examined, that is right, but he may not have had anybody to examine them.

By Mr. Ryan: No further questions.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all, Mr. Holz.

By the Court: Mr. Holz, did I understand yesterday when you answered Mr. Ryan's question that the Group Chief screens the returns that are assigned to him?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: What do you mean by that?

By the Witness: Well, he looks it over again and the back of the card, for instance, will show if there is any prior history on the case. He may take it upon himself to go to the record section, or have one of his men go to the record section and look at the prior history, the prior history which may tell him something about whether this return is worth examining.

They, as a general rule, do their classifying as 496 soon as they can after they get the returns. Now, that may be a week or a month or two months. There is no specific time that they do it, and they can't do it all at one time. They do a few today and a few tomorrow and so on.

By the Court: On the other hand, supposing the Group Chief, as a matter of fact, assumes that it isn't worth while to have the matter returned, assigned to an agent who does an audit—does he?

By the Witness: Yes.

By the Court: Then, have they discretion to return it or what then will he do?

By the Witness: Oh, he still has discretion, but if he believes it is worth examining, he is going to keep it.

By the Court: Does he have discretion either to have it assigned later on or to have it referred back to the place from which he obtained it?

By the Witness: Oh, yes.

By the Court: Who sends it to the Group Chief?

By the Witness: I do. I should say, the Record 497 Section. Write down the Record Section.

By the Court: The Group Chief may send back an audit to you?

By the Witness: No, he doesn't.

By the Court: What does he do?

By the Witness: When he screens it, he sends it back to the Record Section with a return, to send a return to Washington without an examination.

By the Court: In other words, he is satisfied that the return is such that examination is not suggested and he returns it to the Record Section?

By the Witness: That is right, with a notation to return it to the Bureau.

By the Court: How is that?

By the Witness: With a notation to return it to the Bureau without an investigation.

By the Court: And what does that mean?

By the Witness: Pardon me?

By the Court: And what does that mean?

By the Witness: That means there will be no investigation made.

By the Court: But then the assignment to the Group Chief does not necessarily mean it wouldn't be sent 498 to an agent for audit?

By the Witness: Well, I think, yes, that is true.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is ambiguous. What is true?

By the Court: Yes. What do you mean by that?

By the Witness: Well, the way you stated the question—

By the Court: Perhaps my question is not too clear. The mere fact that the return was sent to the Group Chief, does that mean it is going to find its way—it will be audited?

By the Witness: Not necessarily.

By the Court: He then has discretion to determine whether or not it will be referred to an agent or whether or not he will screen it or make other determination and make such investigation as he may see fit to do or he has the discretion to return it back to the Record Section?

By the Witness: That is correct.

499 Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. You said there were hundreds of returns, Mr. Holz. Not to be precise about it, but about how many returns would a Group Chief be allocated, say, in the year of 1947 or 1948, just approximately?

A. Well, it could be anywhere from oh, a thousand to four thousand.

Q. Now, the returns have to go back—you either have to set an amount for audit or you have to send them back by a certain time, don't you?

A. Well, there is no time limit. You send them back.

Q. Well, in practice, how long do you retain them?

A. Well, we usually send them back before the statute is going to expire.

Q. That is it. And up to that time, you may not know for sure whether you are going to reach it for audit or not, isn't that true?

A. If we have any idea that that return should be audited and we still can't reach it for investigation, we will have an agent go out and get a waiver of the statute of limitations.

500 Q. I don't know as that is my question.

What do you do with the returns that you are unable to reach for audit?

A. Just as I stated, if there is a return that indicates that it should be examined, we will send an agent.

Q. You are specific on that. Well, what do you do with the others?

A. Those that we believe should not be examined?

Q. Yes.

A. We send them back to Washington.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that's all.

By Mr. Ryan: Just a moment.

That's all.

By the Court: We will take a recess.

(Whereupon a recess was had.)

501 LEON J. BUSBY, recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants, having been heretofore duly sworn, was examined and testified in rebuttal, as follows:

By Mr. O'Brien: Does Mr. Krane have the photostat he showed me the other day?

(Counsel handing document to Mr. O'Brien.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Mark this Defendants' Exhibit 16 for identification.

(Document so marked.)

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit 16 for identification and ask you if that is the sheet or a copy of the sheet of the longhand figures prepared by Mr. Cain which on your last appearance here you said you did not have but thought that a copy had been given to Mr. Krane?

A. Yes, this is a copy.

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer it as Defendants' Exhibit 16, your Honor.

502 By Mr. Ryan: I don't think there is any objection. Well—

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know whether it was given to Mr. Lima or Mr. Krane. I am not clear.

By the Witness: It was given to Mr. Krane.

By Mr. Ryan: No objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Whereupon the above-referred to document, Defendants' Exhibit 16 was admitted by the Court in evidence.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. It was prepared by Mr. Krane's visit?

A. Yes.

Q. And before Mr. Lima's visit?

A. That is correct. It was offered to Mr. Lima but he didn't use it.

Q. Mr. Busby, when did you take your vacation in the year 1948?

A. March 16th through April 10th.

Q. Where did you go?

A. California.

Q. What day did you leave?

503 A. On the 16th of March, 1948.

Q. Between those dates, did you return to Chicago?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go alone or with—or were you accompanied by Mrs. Busby?

A. I was accompanied by Mrs. Busby and one other guest.

Q. Did you at any time in the month of March 1948, subsequent to the time that you left for your vacation visit Mr. Sauber with Mr. Cain?

A. I don't recall. No, I didn't.
Q. You say you don't recall?
A. I didn't. I wasn't here.
Q. Did you, with Mr. Cain on March 15, 1948, or alone, visit Mr. Sauber? I mean, in relation to this matter?
A. I don't—no, it would be almost impossible to visit him on the 15th. We are too busy with tax returns.
Q. And did you work on your regular matters, profession, right through the 15th?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. That was the deadline on the many tax returns?
504 A. Oh, yes.
Q. Have you at my request referred to your records to make sure when it was that you left on your vacation?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Do you have those here in court?
The answer is yes?
A. Yes.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mr. Busby, did—you didn't make any memorandum at all of the dates on which you went to see Mr. Sauber, did you?
A. No, not written.
By Mr. Ryan: That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.
(Witness excused.)

505 BYRON A. CAIN, one of the defendants herein, was called as a witness on his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified in rebuttal as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. You have been sworn and testified before, Mr. Cain, have you not?
A. I have.
Q. You said you returned to California leaving there March 3, 1948?

A. That is correct.
Q. And that you returned by plane?
A. That is right.
By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark these items Defendants' Exhibits 17 and 18.

(Documents so marked.)

By Mr. O'Brien: These are the transportation papers.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. The instruments marked Defendants' Exhibits 17 and 18 for identification, are those papers?
506 A. Yes, sir, they are the airline charges.
Q. Copies of the originals which I hold in my hand?
A. That is right.
By Mr. O'Brien: I offer them as Defendants' Exhibits 17 and 18.
By Mr. Ryan: No objection.
By the Court: They may be received. I am not clear as to what they are. What are they?
By Mr. O'Brien: They are the receipts covering the plane transportation, Judge.
By the Court: Very well, they may be received.

(Whereupon the above-referred to documents, Defendants' Exhibits 17 and 18 were admitted by the Court in evidence.)

By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Did you thereafter return to California?
A. On the 11th day of March.
Q. When did you next return to Chicago?
A. The latter part of April.
Q. Have you likewise consulted your records to 507 verify the March 11th date?
A. I have.
By Mr. O'Brien: I ask that there be marked as Defendants' Exhibits 19 and 19 A, B, C and so forth, the group of papers which I now submit to the reporter consisting of four checks and a copy of a letter of March 13, 1948 and a letter of February 20, 1948.)

(Documents so marked.)

By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Calling your attention to the checks evidenced by 19 for identification, will you tell me where the first check in that list was drawn?

A. The check in the amount of $2,500 was drawn on Muriel—

Q. Where, I mean?

A. In Palm Springs, California.

Q. And the next check, 19-A?

A. On the 11th of March in Chicago.

Q. And the third check in the group?

A. On March 12th in Palm Springs, California.

Q. Those are all drawn by you, your own signature and handwriting?

A. That is correct.

508 Q. And they were delivered by you personally at those places?

A. That is correct.

509 Q. Is it true that in March of 1949, you had a conversation at the plant with Mr. Mammel?

A. I think that is true, yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the court what was said in that conversation by you and by Mr. Mammel?

A. I went in and said, "How do you do" to Mr. Mammel.

By the Court: I don't hear.

By Mr. O'Brien: A little louder, Mr. Cain, please.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) I went in and said, "How do you do" to Mr. Mammel.

He was out there to audit the books, and he told me that he had a big job, he had been with the Government a long time, he was very meticulous in his audits, that he did things just one way, and asked if it would be possible for us to give him help in order to expedite this case.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did you say?

A. I told him we would certainly give him help; this was a disclosure case and we would be very happy to give him all the help that he needed.

510 Q. What, if anything, did you then do about it?

A. I instructed Mr. Busby and the office, the auditing staff in the office, to give Mr. Mammel every bit of help that could possibly be given to him.

Q. On that occasion or on any other occasion did Mr. Mammel say to you that this might be a case for criminal prosecution?

A. At no time.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Ryan: May I see the checks, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I better offer it first. I will offer them as Defendants' Exhibit 19, the group, and under the numbers which have been assigned.

By Mr. Ryan: Will you defer action until I read them?

Well, I will object to them on this ground, that they serve no purpose in the re rd since they certainly do not tend to contradict any government evidence.

There is no evidence that Mr. Cain was in Mr. Sauber's office on any of these dates, and he might very well have been in California. Mr. Sauber said 511 Mr. Busby came in on March 15th.

By Mr. O'Brien: And a couple of days later—

By Mr. Ryan: No, within a week that Mr. Cain came in, and that these checks are dated March 3, 1948, March 11, 1948, March 12, 1948, so that I don't see how they tend to do anything in the record.

Apart from that, I don't have any objection. But I don't see what office they serve.

If they are offered to impeach anything, I don't think that they do.

By the Court: I will receive them.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibit 19.)

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask one question before you proceed, Mr. Ryan? I am sorry, I forgot it.

By Mr. Ryan: Certainly.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Calling your attention to Defendants' Exhibits 512 17 and 18, will you tell the court the significance of the February 28th date on Exhibit 18 and the March 3d date on Exhibit 17?

A. The February 28th date means that I brought my transportation in Palm Springs, California, through to Chicago for March 3d.

This billing on March 3d means that I had some excess baggage to the tune of $12.65, and that they billed me for that on the 3d day of March when I did take the plane back to Chicago.

By Mr. Ryan: I make the same observation about those records. I haven't any particular objection, except I don't see what office they serve in the record.

By the Court: I think you said you have no objection to them, so I will receive them.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, I just wanted to make that point clear.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and respectively marked Defendants' Exhibits 17 and 18.)

By Mr. Ryan: Were these offered?

513 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, they are part of the same Exhibit 19.

Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mr. Cain, do I understand you testified with respect to the second check on Defendants' Exhibit 19, that you cashed that check in Chicago on March 11th?

A. That is correct.

Q. You cashed it at the Uptown National Bank?

A. I cashed it at the Uptown Federal Savings and Loan. It was canceled on the 12th, if you will look at it.

Q. Yes, I noticed it was canceled. You state you did this in person, yourself?

A. Yes. I don't draw checks to cash unless it is in person.

By Mr. Ryan: Now, there is a course of correspondence here offered as a part of Defendants' Exhibit 19, and I don't remember any particular foundation being laid for it.

By the Court: I thought just the three checks
514 were offered. I didn't understand anything more was offered.

By Mr. Ryan: There are some letters here from persons who are not present and who haven't identified them—any of the parties to this correspondence—and I have no way of knowing anything about it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I have no interest in the correspondence. The first letter is the letter by Mr. Cain's office to another man, telling him that yesterday he left for California; and a letter from the other man.

But I don't know about them. They were all annexed with the group, and being in the same file, they are there. I don't care.

By the Court: Suppose we limit the offer to the three checks.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think there are four.

By Mr. Ryan: Four checks. There are four on the paper.

By the Court: Four.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

515 By Mr. Ryan: They are in.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. After you went to California on the 11th of March, Mr. Cain, as you testified, you say you returned in the latter part of April?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you remained in California all the time between those dates?

A. Continuously.

Q. And how did you return?

A. By car.

Q. By automobile?

A. That is right. It seems from my records that I left there about the 21st or 22d and was in my office the latter part of April.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

(Witness executed.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Mrs. Morrill.

And this is the last witness, Judge. She will be short.

516 GLADYS MORRILL, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants herein, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. State your name.

A. Gladys Morrill.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Morrill?

A. 5707 N. Kilbourn.

Q. You are connected with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And were during the years in question here, I suppose, 1948 and subsequent years?

A. Yes.

Q. In what capacity in the year 1948?

A. Office manager.

Q. And as office manager did you have charge and custody of and familiarity with the books, accounting books of the company?

A. I did.

Q. And you were in that capacity continuously during and since the year 1948 while the company was operating?

517 A. Yes.

Q. And have been since, as a matter of fact, is that true?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, have you prepared at my request a list of the books, records and items which were exhibited to the agents on the occasion of their work out at the plant?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Starting with the visit of Mr. Lima?

A. Yes.

Q. And down through the visits of Mr. Krane and Mr. Mammel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To a time shortly preceding the indictment?

A. Correct, I have.

Q. And do you have those lists with you?

A. Yes, I have. I have the original and one copy.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't know what the purpose of this is, but I can't see how it is rebuttal, Judge.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, that may well be, it is not rebuttal. This is my last witness. I am merely trying 518 to identify the papers which Mrs. Morrill knows were exhibited.

I would like to have the sheets marked Defendants' Exhibit 20.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. There is just this one exhibit, Defendants' Exhibit 20?

A. Yes. That is in greater detail. It has all the supporting papers.

(Document marked Defendants' Exhibit 20 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Calling your attention to Defendants' Exhibit 20 for identification, will you tell the court whether you know of your own knowledge that the items thereon listed were exhibited to or examined by the agents?

A. Yes, I do know that they were.

Q. And in some instances did they make copies of items.

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And notes from the records?

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer the document as Defendants' Exhibit 20.

519 By Mr. Ryan: Are you through examining her on direct?

By Mr. O'Brien: I have just one more question, and let the offer ride until counsel's examination.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Since the indictment and its return, there has been a further examination of books and records of the company under the court's order or subpoena?

A. Yes, there has been.

Q. And the agents since that time have been there and still are there in that work?

A. That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. Mrs. Morrill, you state that you do know of your own knowledge that the records enumerated on Defendants' Exhibit No. 20 were turned over to the Revenue Agents or Special Agents that were conducting the investigation?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the court to understand by that, that you 520 turned them over to them?

A. Well, in most cases, yes.

Q. To the extent that you did not turn them over, what is the basis of your knowledge that they were turned over?

A. Well, Mr. Mammel always approached me for any requests that he had to make for books or records, and I would find them and give them to him.

Q. And then such, if any, books you would turn over to him, then you would know you turned them over, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. How about the ones you say you did not turn over to him yourself?

A. Well, Mr. Busby found his own working papers, his audit papers, and gave them to him. I saw him lay them on the desk and they were there for days.

Q. Can you indicate to me anything on here which you yourself did not turn over?

A. Mr. Busby turned over some of the tax returns and I turned over a few. I am not too sure what year right now. Then Busby's analysis, working papers, were turned over directly by Mr. Busby.

Q. Those are the work papers. Well, was it only 521 with respect to these work papers and these returns that you indicated, that Mr. Busby may give, you say, turned over to the agent, only those items? You said some of the corporation—

A. Well, the corporation returns. We had a missing one. I know the year 1945 was missing.

Q. Where you retained copies?

A. Yes, and Mr. Busby supplied his copy.

Q. And then Mr. Busby's work papers?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those the only items reflected on there that you yourself did not turn over?

A. Well, if you want to be technical, I don't think I turned all the sugar rationing deposit slips. That was turned over by our purchasing agent who had charge of the rationing deposits, these receipts.

Q. You did not turn that over. Well, did you see that record turned over to the agent?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You were present, and anything you say you did not turn over yourself, you say that you were present and you saw turned over, is that correct?

A. Yes, that is right.

522 Q. And you can identify it and you remember they were turned over?

A. Yes, I can identify it.

Q. Well, did you turn over to the agents all of the records—except for where you have indicated that you saw someone else turn them over—all of the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the course of this investigation?

A. Well, all that they asked for, yes.

Q. Did they ever—

A. All that I could find.

Q. Did they ever ask for anything that you didn't turn over or couldn't find and didn't have?

A. Oh, I think that happened.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I will object to that, if the Court please.

By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness: Did you say I may answer?

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sometimes we couldn't find a canceled check.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. Did you ever turn over any records of cash
523 received or paid out?

A. Well, I didn't have—I had cash remittance slips that I turned over, if that is what you mean.

Q. I am speaking of any records of cash received or paid out which was not entered upon the regular corporation books.

A. I didn't have any record to turn over to them.

Q. Did you at any time ever have such records?

A. I had a scratch paper that I kept one time of a record, yes.

Q. You had a scratch paper of what?

A. We had a record of some cash brought in and cash given out.

Q. And did you turn that over to the agent?

A. No. It was not there when the agent came.

Q. Where was it?

A. It had been destroyed.

Q. By whom?

A. I destroyed one paper and I don't know who kept the other or who destroyed it.

Q. Well, why did you destroy it? Were you told to destroy it?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object, if the Court please.
524 I don't see how it is proper cross examination.

By the Court: Well, of course, you are indicating that you exhibited good faith in turning over these books and records to the agents, and I suppose if it appears that certain books and records were not turned over, that may have some bearing on the issue here.

By Mr. O'Brien: That still wouldn't make it proper cross, I respectfully submit. I simply asked for a list of what was exhibited.

By Mr. Ryan: That is the purpose this evidence was offered for, to show a turnover.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, to show what we did turn over, so it is indentifiable.

By the Court: Well, she may answer.

By Mr. Ryan:

Q. On whose instructions did you destroy?

A. Mr. Cain.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

In respect to the exhibit; on the basis of the testimony, no objection.

525 By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibit 20.)

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mrs. Morrill, I have one question.

Were those slips destroyed before or after the disclosure?

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear that. Perhaps you better reframe your question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When were the slips destroyed?

A. Well, when you say disclosure, you mean—

By Mr. Ryan: Objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not asking that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am asking when were the slips destroyed?

A. I think they were destroyed before the disclosure.

By Mr. Ryan: Well, objection. I move it be stricken.

526 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I would like to know when was it, what year, or month or day, as near as you place it?

A. Well, it was either late 1947 or early 1948. I don't remember.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that closes our rebuttal and whatever remains of the case in chief.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't have anything further.

I don't know that I have any right, but the only witness I could produce would be Mr. Granahan, and his father just died, and I haven't disturbed him.

By Mr. O'Brien: What are your Honor's plans as to time? Did you intend—we got the impression from what was said last week that you might be here tomorrow, but I didn't know if that was for work.

By the Court: I think I said that when I would know how long the Government's case would take, and then when Mr. Ryan told me that their testimony would not take as much time as he anticipated, I assumed we could conclude today.

527 By Mr. O'Brien: I suppose that would be possible. We would like to argue the motion, Judge.

By the Court: Be glad to hear you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Unfortunately, there has been so much time in trying to get ready and doing this collateral work, it has not been possible to streamline it.

I was thinking if you would be here in the morning, perhaps we could have a definite allotted time, so as not to impose on you. Then I could proceed fast. I don't think I should do it this minute.

By Mr. Ryan: I will argue either time, any time that is acceptable to the court or counsel, tonight or tomorrow morning.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will be willing to start early in the morning.

By the Court: I think we will proceed now.

I haven't any objection if you want to take a short recess before you commence your arguments. Of course, if you would rather resume this evening, I have no objection to that.

If you want to recess now until 7:30, I haven't any objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like it very much, if 528 that is satisfactory.

By Mr. Ryan: No objection at all.

By the Court: Then you may have a little rest.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, Judge.

By the Court: All right, we will adjourn until 7:30.

(Whereupon a recess herein was taken to 7:30 o'clock p.m. of the same day, November 21, 1952.)

529 * * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

Chicago, Illinois
November 21, 1952
7:30 o'clock P.M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Ryan,
Mr. O'Brien,
Mr. Hess,
And Other Counsel.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143. United States versus Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Hearing on defense motion to suppress certain evidence.

530 By Mr. Ryan: If the Court please, in talking to Mr. Holz during the recess, I discovered one additional fact which I did not know which I think in view of the examination of Mr. Holz is most important to the Court on this question, and I should like to recall him to elicit that fact. I will make an offer of proof as to what it is.

It is this: That Mr. Holz advises me that not only as the Group Chief does he have the right to survey and determine that he will not examine the return, but the working agent to whom he assigns also may survey and return the return without investigation, which I think renders the distinction between them that was made nil, since the one has as much right apparently to return the return as the other.

By the Court: Well, perhaps Mr. O'Brien will concede that Mr. Holz will so testify.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know that it is material, but I can't tell. My mind is focused on some other things here. I can't tell, and I don't like to concede that.

By Mr. Ryan: Mr. Holz.

531 FRANK J. HOLZ, recalled as a witness by the plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further in rebuttal as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Ryan.

Q. You are the same Frank Holz who was previously sworn and testified and gave evidence in this case, are you not?

A. Yes, sir,

Q. Now, Mr. Holz, on your direct examination you stated that the fact that a return was assigned to a Group Chief for examination didn't mean that he would necessarily have it examined, but that he might, upon survey, return it if he didn't think it was necessary to examine it, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Tell the Court, what if any, privilege or prerogative, or right, a working agent to whom it may be assigned for examination by a group chief would be able to survey a return?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will object to the cross examination.

532 By Mr. Ryan: It is cross examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will still object in the absence of the production of the manual.

By Mr. Ryan: As I explained, I haven't any authority to make any tender of the manual.

By Mr. O'Brien: The suit is maintained—

By the Court: He may state what the practice and custom is in that regard.

By Mr. O'Brien: By the manual, I mean, for the record, that which I asked to be produced.

By the Witness:

A. After a group chief assigns a case to an examining officer for investigation, the examining officer has the privilege of making a survey of that return and writing a survey report giving his reasons why he believes that an examination is not necessary.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

533 Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. In this case, Mr. Holz, there is nothing of record, nothing in Defendants' Exhibit 15, the original of which you have retained, to show that either the group chief or any field agent surveyed the return, is there?

A. You mean if there is anything on the card to show that?

Q. Yes.

A. No, the card wouldn't show that.

Q. If such a survey was made, would there be a written report?

A. If the survey was made by the examining agent, not by the group chief—

Q Yes.

A. —he would make a survey report.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Ryan: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: Gentlemen, have you any suggestions as to the time you think you should have for your arguments?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that what I have to say 534 ought to be within an hour, if the Court please.

By Mr. Ryan: I certainly won't exceed that.

By the Court: I think if you moved that table back a little, if you weren't so close to the bench, and speak a little louder, I think I could follow your arguments better.

Thereupon Mr. O'Brien addressed the Court in argument on behalf of the defendants, as follows:

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, the matter comes on on the motion of the defendants for the suppression of the evidence referred to in the motion on the ground that the defendants in reliance upon a published policy of the Treasury, identified themselves, or rather, the corporations, as one whose returns failed to include or failed to accurately reflect or misstated income or receipts.

535 The policy was such regardless of which version of the policy be accepted that any taxpayer in that sort of a group who came forward before an investigation had commenced and admitted omissions or misstatements in his return would not be criminally prosecuted. I will come more precisely to the language and refinements of the policy in a moment, but I am speaking now primarily of the motion and its basis, and it is alleged by the defendants that in reliance upon that published policy they came in and identified themselves, disclosed the corporation and thereby made it certain that they would be open to such assessment as might be determined with consequent penalties, and even with indictment or criminal prosecution should their disclosure prove to have been untimely.

In the first or primary part of the motion the promise of immunity and the reliance of the defendants upon that promise, and the subsequent repudiation of that promise is the basis for the motion to suppress the evidence which the facts show was obtained, not only the documentary evidence, but that revealed by the in-536 dividual defendants themselves all, it is said, in violation of the Fourth and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution. That is the primary part of the motion.

The motion also says, however, that on the facts at bar and whether there be a sufficient or timely disclosure or not—or to put it the other way—even if the disclosure be regarded either as insufficient or untimely, nevertheless, the evidence should be suppressed; that there is an estoppel to use the evidence in view of the repudiation of the disclosure or alleged disclosure relied upon, and the failure of the plaintiff's representatives to give any indication at any time of any intent so to repudiate, but a continued utilization of the papers, records and books so obtained without any such indication.

Before coming to a definition of disclosure, as I understand it, an understanding I think justified by the words, and I would like to refer to some of the published statements in part, and in so doing I stress the fact that the basic policy, if you please, is that stated within the Bureau on July 2, 1934, and never thereafter changed, until the complete abandonment of the policy last year.

537 That, I think, your Honor, could follow better if you had the book itself, the excerpts.

At page 139 the matter is stated this way:

> "Where a violation of the internal revenue laws is deliberate and with intent to defraud and is discovered by internal revenue officers or is disclosed by a taxpayer after the Bureau had initiated an investigation, the criminal liability will in no case be compromised by the Treasury Department. Prosecution will be recommended solely on the basis of whether the evidence is sufficient to afford reasonable grounds for the belief that a conviction can be secured. In cases in which taxpayers make voluntary disclosures of intentional evasions before investigation by the Bureau has been initiated, the Bureau will not recommend criminal prosecution but will impose the maximum civil penalties unless there is substantial doubt as to collectability."

That paragraph, that statement, is, as a matter
538 of history, the representative of the basic disclosure policy as shown in the press release of a running account of the policy there contained which appeared, your Honor, at page 78 of the book which you have, and I think that press release issued at the time of abandonment of the policy gives you a pretty good picture of the history and evolution, and I would like to allude to that.

They say that the former voluntary policy, they mean the same one we have here,

"While first adopted in 1919 had its origin in the controversies as to whether criminal liability should be compromised under the law. As early as 1912 the Bureau followed a policy of not accepting monetary payments in compromise of criminal liability where the evidence was sufficient to afford reasonable grounds to believe that a conviction could be secured.

"On August 22, 1919, the first half of the policy statement respecting voluntary disclosures was issued. This was the result of successful criminal prosecutions in cases involving fraudulent tax re-539 turns and the publicity attending the indictments in such cases.

"It was then found that the tax evaders were responding to the vigorous prosecution work of the Bureau and realized that such an enforcement program would eventually disclose the deficiencies in their returns and result in criminal prosecution.

"The Bureau then found that many of these tax evaders were coming forward and throwing themselves on the leniency of the Bureau with the hope that they would thereby escape prosecution.

"The conclusion was reached that the increasing enforcement activities would result in additional criminal cases which would, in turn, induce additional voluntary disclosures.

"The initial draft of the policy statement provided that where voluntary disclosure was made of intentional evasions which, if discovered by internal revenue officers would be the basis of criminal prosecution it would be the policy to impose maximum civil penalties and to accept offers in compromise in criminal liability instead of instituting prosecution and possible jail sentence.

"Some three weeks later, on September 8, 1919, this policy statement was changed to provide that offers in compromise of criminal liability would be considered rather than accepted in voluntary disclosure cases.

541 "At the outset of the policy there was no outstanding public invitation from which tax evaders could imply a promise of immunity if they came in before the Bureau initiated an investigation.

"From 1919 until 1934 in voluntary disclosure cases, the Treasury entered into legal and binding compromises under the statute where the decision was made not to prosecute because of the circumstances surrounding the voluntary disclosure.

"On July 2nd, a decision was reached that the Treasury Department would in no case compromise criminal liability and prosecution would be recommended."

This is the section I read before.

"With the exception of the drive against black-marketeers by the Treasury Department in 1945, wide-spread publicity was given to various statements by Treasury and Bureau officials announcing the existence of the voluntary disclosure policy,"—not a new policy; the same one—"it was then hoped that such publicity would result in securing additional 542 revenue which would not otherwise be reached through investigation.

"As a result of this publicity, many tax evaders who were not under investigation came forth in good faith and in reliance upon the promise of immunity disclosed their deficiencies.

"There were also instances where tax evaders already under investigation came forward and attempted to secure immunity on the basis of the public announcements.

"In these cases, no difficulty was encountered where the investigations had proceeded to the point where the Bureau could establish that the disclosure was in fact made with knowledge of the investigation and not in good faith reliance on the immunity held out by the policy.

"The principal difficulty in the administration of the policy resulted where despite the prior initiation of an investigation, the Bureau was unable to clearly establish that the Taxpayer had knowledge that he was under investigation before he made his alleged 543 voluntary disclosure. In these instances, lack of knowledge on the part of the taxpayer was easy for the tax evaders to simulate, and the difficulty was with the Government to disprove the alleged lack of knowledge.

"In the administrative consideration of these cases, regardless of whether the question was raised in the Collector's Office, in the Office of the Revenue Agent in question, before the Intelligence Unit, or before the Chief Counsel's Office, the representative of the Bureau was faced with a border-line case.

"The cases which followed in this twilight somewhat depending on the decision made were usually susceptible of criticism that the administrative officer abused his discretion in resolving the case one way or the other.

"If the disclosure had actually been made in good faith reliance on the promise of immunity, the taxpayers confession and the self-incriminating evidence submitted by him could not be used against him because of the constitutional privilege against self incrimination.

544 The independent authority of the Office of the Collector, the Agent in Charge, the Special Agent in Charge to initiate investigations resulted in situations where the taxpayer under investigation by one of those offices would attempt to make a voluntary disclosure before an officer of one of the other two" et cetera.

And then they go on with further discussion and finally reached the conclusion that the abandonment should be recommended, and so on.

Now, as to the essence of disclosure or definition of it, as against that background, I say, and I don't know of anything in any reported case that contradicts this: The disclosure, as stated by Wenchel and the others, is not all of this subsequent action to which collusion is made here. That is not the overriding important thing.

The important thing, from the standpoint of either taxpayer or government, is the fact that the taxpayer comes forward and identifies himself.

It is plain that the reason behind that policy is really the pragmatic one of obtaining revenue, revenue which otherwise might go by from shortage of men to inves-
545 tigate, which was peculiarly true in the years in which this wide publicity was given. Those were the years of high brackets and high tax and assessment, the black market operations which made for large amounts and it is obvious from any reading of the material which was put in evidence in this exhibit 7, that the Government didn't want that to escape, or wanted to attract as much as it could.

Consequently, the invitation, public for the first time in 1925, revealed the essence of the policy and inviting people to come forward subject to the one condition that they do so before investigation had commenced.

Now what happened under that policy when a taxpayer would come forward?

What would or might happen if he stayed away?

If he stayed away, he might escape criminal prosecution. He might even escape payment of the tax and consequently have penalties, but he took the risk.

If he came forward and made the admission, he also took a risk, because if his appearance was untimely, if an investigation was already under way, he was re-546 vealing information which could certainly do him no good if and when there was a prosecution.

If he came forward and submitted the basic records from which an assessment of a deficiency could be made, he very likely would become liable for penalties up to a very substantial percentage. My recollection of what is contained in books is as much as 70 percent.

So that the promise of immunity against criminal prosecution if he came forward before investigation commenced was not too much in the Government's view of the policy in exchange for what might be realized.

And neither would the Government, if it is of interest in the matter at bar, as I see it, and opinions differ, but I do not think, contrary to some of the views expressed here, that the Government was dealing with a malum in se. It was a malum prohibitum. It was not a contention of crime or universally conceded by man as crime at large.

So that there was nothing immoral about the policy,
547 though it was pragmatic and that was its base, the effort to get those taxes.

Now, in this situation, the Shotwell people came forward, identified the corporation and I can't say there is any real issue of fact on this record, if we break it down into segments.

As to this first segment, the outstanding fact is that they went in and they talked to one of the officers designated in the published policies.

They went through Busby, their auditor; through Cain, an official. The officer, the Chief Deputy Collector, I believe, acknowledged their presence. They differ only in this respect: As to date. And the Exhibit 11 which was put in evidence here, the memorandum from Mr. Krane, alludes to that visit, but I think it is sufficient to say that I find no dispute on the record as to the fact that they were there. It is not just simply, as they say themselves, coined.

The question of timeliness has been present throughout the hearing and even as late as the commencement of this session, another bit was added to it, but there are papers among these exhibits which certainly seem to me to 548 say that there just wasn't anything pending in this matter at the time these folks went in.

Now, I am looking for it. Let us take Defendants' Exhibit 5, produced for me by the plaintiff.

It is a transcription of the telephone message from Walter Murphy of the New York Division to Chicago in connection with which, if your Honor will recall from Mr. Toohig's testimony, Mr. Krane, as a matter of accommodation, went out to procure the information which they requested in their situation down there and concerning which Mr. Krane reported in writing as to what he procured for them in writing.

549 Now, this is in point because attached to this Exhibit 5 is a government memorandum—if your Honor please, I will take the liberty to hand it to your Honor.

It shows, as of June 21, 1948, a search was made at Chicago in respect of the named people, with a negative result disclosed on that paper.

It was not until September 22, 1948, that, as shown by Defendants' Exhibit 4, the special agent with the approval of Mr. Madden, commenced an investigation of Shotwell.

I don't know if your Honor has seen that close up. I think you have seen them all. Now, a little more detail on the matter of timeliness. At first, the thing went off in two directions. I suppose that Mr. Toohig was put on to show that there had been some investigation in the East of the Lubben companies on March 4th, or at least related to March 4th, in which, on that day, the name of Shotwell was mentioned and that that having occurred before the March 15th date, as fixed at or about March 15th by Mr. Sauber, that there would be a contention 550 of the commencement of a pendency of a prior investigation.

Well, I didn't think that what came out there showed that on the merits. Mr. Toohig had a memorandum in his book of the date March 4th. He said that that was the same day that this photostated longhand memorandum of the informant was written and handed to him which oddly enough—if you give me that exhibit, Mr. Ryan, that photostat—that memorandum of the informant showed that while allegedly written on March 4th—towards the bottom, about the sixth line from the bottom it showed that in March of 1948, David G. Lubben, through his—I can't read the next word—oh, his aunt, Janet Moran, purchased the mortgage, et cetera.

Now, I don't think that if the answer of that document really had written it on March 4th, that the statement would be made in that way.

It is about six lines from the bottom, and I think he would have said yesterday or two or three days ago or on March 1st, or whatever it is, that that event transpired, but I don't think that he would say that in March of 1948 that event transpired.

551 Moreover, I think Mr. Toohig was unable to produce his diary. I think he was mistaken in his recollection because he was mistaken in his recollection as to the context of the letter of June 21st, which again is this —not letter, but telephone conversation of June 21st, of which this is a transcription, because he told us that in that communication, they were not merely asking for some items which they wanted Mr. Krane in Chicago as a matter of convenience to get for them; that they were telephoning to Chicago to tell them what the situation was and Shotwell, going on, reproduced the transcription of the telephone conversation.

We find that he was in error. We find that he was in error when he said, or rather, when Mr. Cordez, his associate, made the telephone call.

We find that Mr. Cordez didn't make it at all, that Mr. Murphy made it and Mr. Murphy is mentioned again in the Krane memorandum so that the man, I think, was clearly mistaken on that date and moreover, he later admitted that he didn't write Chicago until a month after anyhow, and that he undoubtedly wrote them to tell them about it and not because he specifically remembered 552 it, but that it was always his policy. But that writing, if any, occurred a month later. Mr. Krane said it didn't happen. I don't see need to dwell on that in view of the admission that they made by the United States Attorney that that is not the contention.

So again on the subject of timeliness, on the Chicago situation—incidentally, your Honor, the first page looks all right to me on that. That page looks long compared with the one I had. Is that the same one? Ed and I had one sheet instead of two.

By Mr. Ryan: The second sheet was found on the next page.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just wanted to be sure I was talking about the same one.

By Mr. Ryan: I think it probably bears an exhibit mark or something.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. I was talking about the Chicago situation and I think the most conclusive thing that there is on it, the thing that carries the most sanction and is most objective, is the memorandum annexed to Defendants' Exhibit 5 and produced from the Government file.

553 But in addition to that, Mr. Holz came in to testify for the plaintiff and he was—I don't know whether he was requested to or not, but he brought with him two cards which are in evidence as Government Exhibits 2 and 3 and those are record cards which to anyone unaccustomed to the detailed agents procedure, would purport to be the record and the full record having to do with the assignment of the return for audit or investigation.

554 And those cards, two of them, which appertained to the 1945 return and it showed only because of a report made by the field agent Corman—and that, I think, was Government's Exhibit 3—which showed a termination of that matter on the report of Corman.

And the other card, Defendants' Exhibit 2, showed an initial assignment to Group Chief Granahan under date of something like December 16, 1947, and then those figures are stricken and horizontally next are the figures 7/30/48 or thereabouts, and finally, at the end of the horizontal, February 7, 1949, approximately, as the last date indicated.

Above those dates were initials. The initial above the July date was "J" and was explained by the witness to refer to Johnson, Group Chief Johnson.

Well, I subpoenaed Mr. Holz. I didn't know what to ask him on cross. I am not familiar with the procedure but it happened that later when Mr. Mammel testified, he testified on cross that when a field agent receives a return, he receipts for it and gives that to the group chief or to someone and it looked like there must have been 555 some other card.

So, I subpoenaed Mr. Holz to appear as my witness and he produced that card, whereas the cards originally brought in did not even show the assignment to be admitted, assignment to Field Agent Lima by Johnson in July of 1948.

Exhibit 15, the date produced, shows that assignment and it shows the subsequent assignment to Mr. Mammel. And that is the card that shows the assignments.

In the absence of it, there might be an ambiguity. We would be left with the impression that an assignment or allocation of these inventories of returns to the group chiefs, is the equivalent of an assignment of the return for an investigation or that it would fulfill the condition or limitation of the published policy, which in varying terms, refers to commencement of investigation.

Those terms, your Honor, I say, are not like this. As that Exhibit 7 will show:

"Before investigation is started, before an investigation is under way, before the Bureau has begun 556 investigating their cases, before any investigation is initiated:"

Now, there is a troublesome question, admittedly, with that policy on the point, as the officials testify: When is an investigation considered to commence? What is it that marks the commencement of an investigation?

And it has been only the failure and refusal of the Bureau to define both before Congress or anywhere else that has made for such confusion as there is.

As shown by the report of the tax section of the American Bar Association of the comment of the lawyers and the committees, some of which are included among the papers in evidence as our Exhibit 7, but in reason, an investigation is under way or has begun or is started when the person who is doing the investigating has been delegated to go and to do it.

In some of the cases, the courts have moved a step closer than that. They are more liberal than anything that we need here.

In the Liebster case, the court will recall the investigation had admittedly already commenced but the taxpayer didn't know it and thereafter they went on taking 557 his material. He relied upon a supposed disclosure and at the end of the route, when the point was raised, the court said, "You can't do it."

Even if an investigation did commence before he went on without his knowing about it and before making his disclosure, he was barred from using the papers. The implied promise estops you and it is a violation of his constitutional privilege.

In another case, the question arose and turned on whether a call had been made to the taxpayer by the field agent who admittedly had been delegated to proceed with the investigation. Generally, after such assignment to the field agent, he makes an appointment, he makes a call and the question turned to the dividing line, the breakdown line. The breakdown line was dependent on whether he had or had not made that call.
558 The Court never wasted much time. The Court just didn't go in to a consideration of the question whether a mere assignment of that agent who might be walking around with twenty, twenty-five returns in his pocket marked an investigation actually underway.

But here we have not even the assignment. It isn't a question of matter assigned on a phone call. There is no appointment. There was no appointment of anyone to do that until July of 1948. Johnston came and picked up the return in Granahan's inventory, handed it or assigned it to Lima who signed for it and sent him off about his task and he did that some four months out of time due to the confusion which was testified to between the names Shotwell Candy and Shotwell Manufacturing Company. So I don't think it can be seriously urged 559 that the disclosure which stands undisputed as having effect was untimely or occurred after any of the investigation was underway. If you take any other view in reason, if the Court please, if you go back of the time the delegation to the man who was actually to do the investigating, you could go back a long way. It would be equally logical to take it at any point along the line because the law compels the auditing of return of all corporations where they are over a certain amount as the agent admitted today.

From the very time you file a return, you would be forever precluded due to the pendency of such a return somewhere along the route for audit from ever making a disclosure.

If you are going to interpret a policy of this kind, you have to interpret it in the way that gives it some meaning and not in a way that would emasculate the thing, make it worse than it was, because it would be a gross misrepresentation to the people who are asked to come in and make that, or invited in, at least, and make that radical change in their position.

560 Now, that leaves the matter of cooperation and other subject things. In this case I haven't heard about the other things. I might say this, your Honor, it isn't in our written memorandum but I say it to you now: I filed the motion and in the last part of that motion it said that in view of the actual yardsticks, tests, and conditions which the various officials of the Treasury employ or use in determining whether there is a disclosure many of which are over and beyond any of the published statements, the conditions, requisites, requirements revealed to the public, that their action in accepting or inviting or accepting from a tax payer a disclosure under promise of that kind where they do not publish something else to tell the people about those various tests, amounts to a withholding of material facts equal or equivalent to a misrepresentation or a lure to that taxpayer. I said so because it is a fact as shown by those papers, but I said it only to meet the theory alluded to by Judge Wyzanski in the Massachusetts case, in which he was overruled, by that I mean, the point being saved for the trial and proceedings in which it was sought to suppress evidence from the Grand Jury on a pre-trial basis.

561 What I mean is, the taxpayer came in and proved the facts and when he got all through in Judge Wyzanski's view, you didn't even need to hear from the Government, because he said there was nothing in the evidence to show that, granted a disclosure, and granted the Government had taken it, that there was any tinge of misrepresentation. Well, I don't think that that expresses the law. I think when you have a background of reservations and conditions different than those in the published policy and do not disclose them to the public, that is the equivalent of a misrepresentation. It is a non-disclosure of material facts which they should have.

But there was no publicity at all contained in that book. There was never anything to give any sanction to the additional conditions which you will find in the views that the men in the Bureau have imposed. That was the purpose and the only purpose of that averment in the motion and it explains also the reason why I wanted some of these items contained in Exhibit 7 in evidence here.

Coming to the particular case and away from the general, after these folks were in, on the general situa-
562 tion as to basic books and records they set about making these summaries. I doubt if your Honor would ever have occasion to look at them, but Mr. Busby described in detail what was done.

If you will look, if the Court please, at the second sheet, for example, and the succeeding sheets, I don't know how many of them there are, you will see a complete recap and tabulation of specific invoices, invoice numbers, dates and so on, and you will find the added figures, and the totals extended.

Now, all of that through those sheets, the second one and those following has to do with unreported receipts.

The basic fundamental records for determining that, as I say, were not only recapped, but from the time that the first agent got there in response, really, to Cain's importunance to come and get the amount determined, and it was their job to determine the amounts, the company gave the utmost assistance, they had this ready, they had the invoices ready, they had all the data ready, and they had gone out, or went out, and checked with 563 the purchaser of the goods who had made those payments to get as close an aggregate figure as they could. I am not talking about the payouts. I am

564 talking about the premium receipts.

Now, I want the court to know that there never has been the slightest intimation in any exhibit—I haven't seen all that the court was privileged and rightfully so to look at—but in those I have seen and from their context I would hazardly state that there is nothing contained in any you saw which says that this company was guilty in any way of failing to do its best to show what the aggregate of the premium receipts were, so that the Commissioner, or whoever it was, could assess a proper tax which they said without dispute from anyone including Mr. Sauber, they stood ready and willing to pay.

Now, not only so, your Honor, but testing it out here against the bill of particulars. You will recall there is one in this case. And that bill of particulars adds up on the candy items, the sales, this is the Government's charge, a total of $455,643.01.

Now, what is in our disclosure statement?

I am calling it that because some of the witnesses referred to it that way.

565 There is one more thing I will want to come back to and that is the definition of disclosure, and the effect of it, but not to interrupt now these sheets that were prepared by Mr. Busby.

The total is $405,763.54.

Now, your Honor, contained in our figures is an item—or contained in the government figures in the bill of particulars is an item of about $49,000—to be precise, it is $49,076.51. That item is contained in our figures, but we deny any overage on that item.

The mention of the transaction is made but not overage.

The invoice numbers are given. There is no concealment of that fact.

Why does the Government say that there was $49,000 of overage in these Reserve Trading Company items? Because Mr. Lubben says so. But we never had and never claimed to have any dealings on our records with many others than as we set them out in these sheets.

Now, the point is, leading out a patently disputed item, and one which we did not conceal, but which we revealed, the difference in these figures, in these large amounts, 566 and over the years in question, after all of this work and investigation, just on the face of it is about $50,000 of unreported income, or a difference of 11 percent.

The Government has not claimed by any witness, it has not claimed in any document, that there was any failure on our part to give them the data from which, by audit checked with Lubben & Companies, an amount could not be arrived at on which an assessment could be based. I mean, assuming that there is anything in the policy it is to enable the Government after the event, after the change of the position of the taxpayer, to come forward and impose these different conditions and to pull strings if it is varying subjective tests or unannounced tests are not made.

The only claim made by the Government as shown from these various reports and as shown by the testimony of Mr. Cain, his conversation with Mr. Wright, his conversation with Mr. Schoeneman, the only thing they ever claimed was that we were uncooperative in that Shotwell or its officials could not or would not say to whom the 567 overpayments were made.

I shouldn't take the time in view of the limitation I have set to go into detail on the memorandum. I will be glad to hand Mr. Ryan a copy of what we have given your Honor, but I will go this far for continuity and coherency now.

In that memorandum we show that in the year 1948 and all the way down to a recent date, some date last September, I think, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue steadfastly maintained the position that there was no deductions which might be made on account of premium payments even though they were in fact a part of the cost of the materials acquired which went into the production, f the goods sold. There was no decision on that subject even of the tax court until the month of December, as I recall it, of 1948.

Following that decision in the Selinger case there were a series of cases right down to recent times both in the District Courts and in two or more of the Courts of Appeals.

There was no controversy in the courts. Both the District and the Court of Appeals without any controversy held that items established, that if you could prove 568 they were moneys paid out as a part of the cost of goods even in the form of premium payments they were deductible, and finally the Commissioner last September acquiesced in that view, and did so in public statements which are quoted in our written memorandum.

I say even if it were permissible contrary to the declared terms of the published policy to impose conditions subject or otherwise different from those contained in the published policy that it was utterly immaterial and irrelevant at all times in question who the money was paid to, because the Commissioner did not need that information to assess and collect a tax. Not only so, but I tried to show not that it was legally material or relevant, but I made a brief attempt which was shut off ultimately on objection by counsel to show the nature of the transactions and the patterns of the transactions in connection with which those premium payments were made so as to demonstrate the inherent impossibility of saying it, and I have been doing it on the theory that if that kind of a subjective test on the part of the Commissioner long after the event has anything to do with it 569 that I, at least, ought to show your Honor what the picture was, how it was, that it was not possible to give names, street addresses, and the like of those people on those kind of payments, but there was objection.
570 I made an offer of proof. It was rejected too. So I don't see how that contention, and in view of the record here, is a proper one; that we could not say I do not think that fundamentally it is required by a policy. Nobody can point to a published word on it, and the controlling fact is that all of the material records of this corporation enabled the Commissioner or the agents to determine what the unrecorded income was, and to make an assessment.

We are only $50,000 apart on it, at that.

One more thing, if I may, your Honor. I feel I have gone somewhat over my time, but I wanted to say that the comments of the officials of the Treasury as shown on pages 91, 92 and 93 and 94 of that report of the Ways-and-Means Committee make it perfectly plain to the extent that this has anything to do with it that those officials were of the firm opinion that this policy which was abandoned was such as to give immunity when the people came forward before investigation commenced, immunity from criminal prosecution, not in the discretion of the Treasury officials, not in the varying tests that they may apply, but by fixed terms of words as they 571 put it—I can read you just one or two—Mr. Lynch, the Attorney for the Commissioner, at page 92 of the printed book, I think you will find the comment, your Honor:

"Mr. Lynch: Mr. Keogh," he says to the committee member—"I wonder if I could answer along a different line and then come to this. I think our difficulty with the voluntary disclosure policy has made it a fact it is an open promise of immunity. That means that it is fixed in terms of words so that anybody could say that there is an open statement from the Bureau of Internal Revenue that anyone who comes in and does that—" and then he is interrupted.

Now, that kind of statement—now, here is Mr. Dunlap who was one of the witnesses I subpoenaed. He didn't come, but I felt that the statement was just as good as any he could give here.

On page 94, he says:

"There is a directive, an explanatory mimeographed directive in preparation on that subject 572 now. That is right. That is our attitude towards it. Their right under the Constitution would provide our making it retroactive."

He is speaking of the abandonment of the policy.

By the Court: You probably have consumed your time.

My Mr. O'Brien: I thank you, Judge. You have been very patient. I am aware of that.

Thereupon Mr. Ryan addressed the Court in argument on behalf of the Government as follows:

By Mr. Ryan: If your Honor please, the issues have certainly been well clarified as to what the contention of the defendants in this case is. We have passed the question of whether a contract between the Government and the defendant as to prosecuting and not prosecuting, and on this motion you have only the question of whether there has been a misleading, an overreaching, a deception by the Government, the extraction of evidence by 573 trickery or false representation, the purpose in mind to use the evidence against the defendants.

Now, the basis of it being the voluntary disclosure and we have to examine what it is.

Now, I went into this before and I made myself fairly clear, I think, to the Court, that the Government takes the position that the doctrine of voluntary disclosure contemplated as one of the officials said even the willful evader may escape punishment if he repents in time, and it provides if a person makes a disclosure of tax evasion and comes in and says that he has evaded his taxes, that he owes some taxes, he tried to evade, but that he was willing to pay and do everything to re-establish himself with the Government to make the Government whole, then the Government says, as a matter of policy: "We will not prosecute that man if he does that timely."

From a general examination of the doctrine, it must be apparent that since what is promised is immunity that there must be the possibility of some criminal prosecution. Clearly, the Department doesn't contemplate that anybody will be even seeking immunity if all he has is some innocent mistakes on his return. If he owes no
574 tax, in fact, or feels he owes no tax, in fact, he had no intent whatsoever to evade, he wouldn't be concerned with a matter of voluntary disclosure. He 575 might come in and say that there are errors in his returns and then maybe the Collector or other officials would say, "Well, if there is no difference in the tax and saw no reason to investigate, well, maybe he will write us a letter or there might not be any necessity for investigating or for filing of amended returns. There would be no net loss of revenue to the Government.

Nobody would contemplate, and the official approach wouldn't contemplate that there was any question of voluntary disclosure because there wouldn't be any background or any indicia of fraud. There would be nothing to indicate that there would be any prosecution or any need for immunity, so obviously when the Government promises immunity to someone for a disclosure it is for a disclosure on something on account of which they might be prosecuted. And that is the invitation that is held out to them.

Now, to say that this has application to any other type of situation or disclosure is to suggest that the Government is offering immunity to someone when there isn't any indication whatever for it, and it makes the doctrine senseless in that application because there is no occa-
576 sion to seek immunity where there is no wrong doing, where there is no tax owed, where there may be some errors in one's return.

Now, to demonstrate that that clearly was the fact, and it strikes me it is expressed in every one of the public declarations, I set them forth in my memorandum to the Court and I have argued them before, and Counsel even this morning as Counsel read from these various documents as your Honor doubtless noted, there was a constant reference by these people to a disclosure of intentional evasion, intentional evasion, and in the statement that were set forth in the defendants' motion the same thing is true.

The Wenchel statement from which I have quoted in my memorandum to your Honor and which the defendants set forth in their motion, they said:

> "The Department acting under that power,"—being the discretional power that Congress has sanctioned—"does not recommend prosecution of the evader who repents in time.
> "Voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion for years, the position of the Department has been that 577 where the taxpayer makes a voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion before investigation has been initiated, criminal prosecution will not be recommended."

In the Wenchel statement, in the Snyder statement that followed that by days, the Wenchel statement was May 14th of 1947, and the Snyder statement was made May 25th, 1947, Secretary Snyder said:

> "One of the important elements in settling cases with civil penalties and without prosecution has been the Treasury's policy of not prosecuting persons who make a voluntary disclosure of their fraud before the Treasury begins an investigation of their cases."

This means that in order to assure himself against criminal prosecution, a repentent taxpayer must disclose his fraud to an official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue before the case has been assigned for examination."

And then further down in the statement it says:

578 "That prior to such action within the Bureau, a taxpayer may make a voluntary disclosure and escape criminal prosecution even though his name may appear in an active file of suspects. This presumes, of course, that the repentent taxpayer cooperates with agents of the Bureau in determining his true tax liability."

Now, referring to the testimony of Richard C. Schwartz, which has been offered by Counsel, an excerpt from the Congressional Hearings, I took the position that it wouldn't bind them since it wasn't set at that time, but since it is offered I will refer to it.

Mr. Schwartz in his testimony said, among other things:

"Incidentally, before I forget, in my description of the policy, I think I omitted to say that the disclosure must have been one of intentional evasion of the Internal Revenue Laws."

Now, that was put in evidence by Counsel. As I say, that wasn't a public statement at that time, and they 579 couldn't have seen that at that time because it was testified to later, but to the extent that it has any office in this record, it is there, and that is what it said.

Now, in all of the voluntary disclosure cases that have involved these questions, and there aren't very many, there is Lustig and Weissman and Liebster, White, Levy, I may have omitted one, but I don't recall offhand, I don't think so, not in a single one of them is there anything except the indication, either expressed in the opinion or directly implied that there were admissions or confessions of guilt, that the taxpayer owed taxes, that he withheld them, that he hadn't put them on his books, but that he owed taxes, and in many of them it refers to his confession, so that there is no disclosure case where evidence was suppressed.

580 Whereas here, as is evidenced by the record and even in the defendants' pleadings, I say by the testimony of Mr. Sauber and by the pleadings in affidavit offered by the defendants,, where there was a negativing of tax due is it not in a single one of them. In every one of them it appears that there was an admission of wilful evasion. The only one in which there was an expression of evidence was the Liebster case.

Counsel has referred to the Liebster case here. I think it is important to bear in mind the distinguishing features of the Liebster case.

In the Liebster the disclosure was made, the alleged disclosure was made, in 1946. That was before the Wenchel doctrine. There it is true, as counsel says, that there had to be an assignment of a return before that disclosure was made. But it was also true that there was no Wenchel doctrine at that time. The Wenchel definition of when an investigation has commenced was not in existence at the time that disclosure was made and it was determined under the situation the law as it existed prior to the Wenchel statement and consequently although the case was decided after the Wenchel 581 statement,—the Wenchel statement, which was not retroactive, affected it in no way whatsoever.

And accordingly, it cannot be urged that the result in the Liebster case can be the law now or controlling in any sense because now the Wenchel statement definitely says when a return is assigned for examination that is the cut-off point. So that the Liebster case is no authority whatsoever in this case. It is the only case, however; the only case. It is a District Court opinion where any evidence was ever suppressed on this theory.

In every other case the motion to suppress was overruled.

Now, I concede in those other cases the court went in and made findings of fact which supported its decision. The court did not say in them as a matter of law in deciding them that evidence could not be suppressed on this theory if the facts were right, but they went ahead —in none of them is there any authority for the proposition that it would accept the Liebster case.

By Mr. O'Brien: The Court of Appeals in the 582 White case said it could.

By Mr. Ryan: They held in that case the evidence wouldn't be suppressed, but there is no decision necessarily to the effect it would be. There may be language. It is the Fifth Circuit in the White case.

Now, in this case the question is what was disclosed?

Well, in Mr. Cain's affidavit in support of the motion to dismiss, he says under oath, and it is in evidence as Government Exhibit 1, Mr. Cain said there that:

> "Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corporation owes no taxes over and above the sum of x number of dollars which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457 some hundred thousand dollars which it paid for the year 1946—"

Now, owes no tax. At all times he and his associates have maintained that.

Now, in the motion to suppress, there is no indication except that the payouts they claim to have had exceed 583 in amount the gross receipts unrecorded.

In other words, the alleged unrecorded expenditures exceed the admitted unrecorded gross receipts and that statement appears on page 3 of the motion, the end of the first paragraph when speaking of those payments, the motion alleges such payments exceed any alleged unreported income on which the plaintiff bases its claim for additional taxes.

Now, what does that amount to?

That amounts to an allegation on this motion that the deductions which they have to balance the unreported receipts exceed those unreported receipts.

Now, what is the testimony?

Well, Mr. Sauber says that they told him that they washed—each, Mr. Busby and Mr. Cain, both testified they had unreported receipts and unreported expenditures and that the unreported receipts exceeded the unreported expenditures by five thousand some dollars, and that that money was picked up on the 1946 tax return.

Mr. Sauber says that that is what Mr. Busby told 584 him, and he says that is what Mr. Cain told him.

In view of the statement contained in the affidavits of those two persons in support of this motion that is certainly corroborated for they say—Mr. Busby says in referring to these black market transactions apparently the said statement, and referring not to the statement that was made to Mr. Sauber, but the subsequent disclosure to the agents, the said statement among other things showed the net balance as a result of the operations therein referred to was $5,898.00 and that said sum had been deposited in the corporate defendant's bank account during the year 1946.

585 "Affiant further states that the amount so deposited was given effect to the income tax return of the corporate defendant for that year."

Now, that statement was furnished to the Government. That is the summary statement. It is in the affidavit. It is in Mr. Cain's affidavit, the same thing that Mr. Cain says also, phrased in much the same manner, I am sure. I have Mr. Cain's affidavit out here, Government's Exhibit 1, and he says:

"Affiant further avers that the said statement, among other things, showed that the net balance as a result of the operation reflected was $5,989.00, and that sum was deposited in the bank and picked up in the tax return."

Exactly the same language.

Now, what does that mean?

That means that the disclosure was a group of unrecorded receipts and balance or almost balancing unrecorded expenses and that the difference was placed in 586 the 1946 tax return, so therefore to the extent that those payments were actually made and to the extent that they were deductible there wouldn't be any tax liability. Whether or not they were deductible was a question of law. The courts have been ruling on it, and as far as I know what is alleged here there was no claimed ruling contrary that all the decisions, the tax court and the Court of Appeals, I think it is alleged in their motion, have been that they are deductible, but the Commissioner for a time did not acquiesce in them so it appeared that it might be necessary for the Supreme Court to pass upon the question, but I am advised, and I am advised very recently that the Commissioner has acquiesced in that a month or so ago and that he is conceding that they are deductible, and therefore the implication for this case would be that there wouldn't be any tax liability if those were the facts, because those are chargeable. If they were established they would be deductible. So that would mean that there could never, there could never, be any successful prosecution in this case if it was established that they had made those payments because there could be no proof of a tax due and owing and it is necessary in a case of evasion that there be 587 proof of a tax due and owing.

Even if it was proved that they thought at the time they owed tax it would be akin to a case of a man attempting to kill somebody and shooting at the log. There would be a failure of the corpus delicti. There couldn't be such an act because there would have to be the subject of it, and there couldn't be a tax evasion if there wasn't a tax, even though someone thought that there was, so, therefore, there was no admission of tax evasion here. Not even any admission that the tax was due except in so far as testimony was given, somewhat equivocally by Mr. Busby and Mr. Cain on that subject when they testified here, but that testimony is contrary to the affidavit and motion and everything else, and of course came after the Government took the position that there couldn't be any evasion here unless there was an admission. There couldn't be a disclosure unless there was an admission of tax evasion.

Now, to go on to say there could not be any disclosure here, to move on to the next point, any disclosure that is made even if it is a disclosure of tax evasion has to 588 be made in good faith. The Government doesn't bargain for the privilege of being deceived. The Government doesn't offer immunity for someone who comes in and doesn't give them the facts or who gives them misrepresentative facts.

Now, if in this case those payments were made in fact and if they were made to the extent that they equalled or exceeded the gross recorded receipts there could never be a conviction in this case.

So to the extent that there is ever a conviction in this case that will be a determination that this disclosure was not truthful because they said they owed no taxes. At all times they maintained they owed no taxes.

Now, it may be that this is not the time on this motion to try and litigate the entire question of whether there is a tax evasion case here because that would have to be at a trial to see if you were going to have a trial and try exactly the same things as I indicated at the outset, but to go along, at no time, there is no evidence here, that at any time during this alleged disclosure was there 589 ever any substantiation given of these payments.

Now, if they were made and if the defendant establishes them, then they prove that they are not tax evaders, but those things lie within the peculiar knowledge of the defendants. The law is in this type of matter that a taxpayer is bound by the deductions which are shown on his tax return. In other words, the tax return is an admission that he had those deductions and nothing more, and if it is proved that a taxpayer has unrecorded income, income that isn't on his books and therefore isn't on his tax return, proof of that unrecorded income if it be a substantial amount, plus evidence as to what deductions he claimed on his return, the fact that he didn't record that income makes out a prima facie case of tax evasion.

He must show that he did pay that money out and that must be substantiated. That is decided here in this Circuit in the case of United States v. Hornstein where the situation was similar so far as deductions were concerned. There was a claim of additional deductions,
590 additional cost of goods sold. He was a jewelry dealer and he claimed, he admitted those—he didn't admit, but it was proved he had the unrecorded sales and his contention was in defense that he had also unrecorded deductions. He never proved it. He never proved a
591 penny that he spent. There was no evidence indicating that he had them. He didn't sustain the burden. His admissions were there in the tax return, and accordingly, there was a conviction in the case, so that unquestionably is the law. The Government has no way of knowing unless the defendant can show them and demonstrate and establish they had those deductions. That is something for the trial. The issue of guilt or innocence is not what is involved here. It is a question of whether there is a good faith disclosure and so far there has been nothing to satisfy that burden on the part of the defendants other than to say the money was paid out by faceless men, two-faceless men, or strangers, or they don't know their identity except to the extent one man was named.

I would like to speak about that for a minute. One man was named by Mr. Cain on cross examination and just as soon as we could, we brought that man in and what did he say? He said he didn't know them, he didn't know the corporation. He never received any money from them, mysterious monies or from anybody, and that he had never undertaken anything on their behalf.

592 That was in the morning of Thursday of last week. He was the last witness before noon and at noontime I found Mr. Graflund whom we asked to come into my office. He was brought in there. He was identified with the defendants' firm. It was not known whether he would talk to us. There was some indication maybe he would. We brought him in because maybe he would be able to bring light on this.

In the course of the questioning, in response to some question, I don't remember either by myself or Mr. Krane, he said he had taken money over to Doctor Doe, to Doctor Doe's office. He didn't know if it was Doctor Doe. He assumed it was. It was a man in a white coat.

When I learned that and before there could be any decision in this case and before this Court could act, I notified both the Court and the defendant and I gave defendant a witness then if they didn't know about him before because I was on notice that maybe Doctor Doe wasn't telling the truth, and I don't know who is, and I can't determine that, but to the extent that Mr. Graflund's testimony was true—and before I go on, I

593 might say that I think that is eminently fair, and would come with ill grace without making a sufficient examination to indicate that instead of that I had him on in the afternoon and therefore I knew about it beforehand,—if what Mr. Graflund says was true, what was proved there, that simply money was taken over by them apparently for corn syrup, and that is what the record seems to indicate, how much that is is not established. Well, that isn't the rest of it. If some money was taken over there for corn syrup and there was no indication what was done with the money, and so forth, it either went back to the defendants or went for corn syrup. I don't know, and I don't say what was done, because I can't know. That lies within the peculiar knowledge of the defendants. Somehow, there had to be some contact with these people, but the idea of spending thousands and thousands of dollars and not getting receipts and then waiting and hoping there will be delivery is, at least, out of the ordinary course of business.

So I say that without regard to whether these payments were made or they weren't, there is no sustenance of that burden in the disclosure at all, and the Govern-594 ment can't concede them unless there is some substantiation.

Now, in addition to that, getting on to the subject of these payouts, what was offered the Government in the way of a good faith disclosure of the payouts?

The testimony came from the stand here and it was something that apparently would have been utterly of no value of them, and that was $45,000 for corn syrup. I am not sure that the amounts were right, but whatever they were, $35,000 for milk, and so much for chocolate, and we heard from this witness stand that that doesn't mean a thing. It just doesn't mean anything. It was just put down.

Now, the Government doesn't bargain for that type of thing in a disclosure, because if you don't know, then you say that you don't know, but when you say that so much was expended for this and that, you are making a representation. It misleads. At least, the kindest thing that could be said about it was the gravest mistake of judgment and it was not good information.

Now, I make reference to this statement again of Secretary Snyder in this connection of good faith which 595 says:

"This presumes, of course,"—speaking of the disclosure—"that the repentent taxpayer cooperates with the agents of the Bureau in determining the true tax liability."

Well, we certainly do not have a record of that here. There was no help to the Government in substantiating these expenses although there has been effort on the Government's part.

With respect to them, the only thing the Government has received is information that is not correct.

596 I refer again to the Centracchio case, and I think we discussed that with your Honor before, simply for the purpose of saying, and I know it was decided on other grounds by the court, but the court did not denounce the language of the lower court.

The language of the lower court pertains to a different matter that I haven't reached yet.

This is the language of the reviewing court, and it isn't a decision, but it is a pronouncement of the Court of Appeals and it is as good as the White case from another Circuit.

> "If it be assumed for the moment that evidence disclosed to the Treasury officials on the faith of the announced voluntary disclosure policy and in compliance with its conditions should be excluded from evidence in a subsequent criminal trial it would seem that the taxpayer would have to satisfy the court that he made a voluntary good faith disclosure of all data necessary to a correct disclosure of all data necessary to a correct computation of his income tax deficiency and that he made such disclosure, before 597 an investigation before an investigation was under way."

I think that is a good sensible statement, even if there wasn't a decision in that case. Certainly the Government bargains for nothing less.

Now, in addition to that we have the fact that the indictment does charge that there was an evasion of income in excess of the amount admitted in the alleged disclosure by the defendants, not the amount—I have figured it up, and Mr. Kane has, and it is subject to refutation if it is wrong. The summary sheet shows they received $366,459.24. The indictment charges evasion of $500,719.52, so there is a discrepancy there between the summary sheet and what is charged in the indictment.

Now, certainly as to the extent that is true there wasn't a disclosure here, there is a substantial amount of income that is not accounted for even on the summary sheet. And the Government, of course, undertakes to prove that there was a wilful evasion with respect to that sum.

Now we come to the question of timeliness.

598 Now, maybe I should have made a statement at the outset. It might have saved some time, although I did make a statement in the course of the proceedings, perhaps it wasn't complete enough, but the Government with respect to timeliness in this case relies upon the fact that there was an assignment on December 16, 1947, to Mr. Granahan. The Government did not offer evidence of this statement that Mr. Toohig received from an informant for the purpose of indicating that the express activity in New York represented a commencement of the investigation in this case for the reason that that appears to be preexcluded by the Wenchel doctrine. That was offered for the purpose of demonstrating that eventually in spite of this disclosure the Government was going to be examining these corporate books and records. That was the purpose for offering it. That is the reason it was never implemented with anything else, and there was never any contention made it was transmitted to Chicago at all. There was no such action with respect to it before this alleged disclosure such as would satisfy the Wenchel doctrine. The purpose of the Wenchel 599 doctrine is very apparent. It was to establish an objective test, an objective break-off point that wouldn't be affected by what the taxpayer knew or what his motives were, but just a time when after which there could be no disclosure, so that it would eliminate those arguments.

That certainly must be apparent from its very language.

Also in the case of the United States v. Levy, that doctrine was discussed by the court. United States v. Levy reported in 99 Fed. Supp. page 529, and it is a decision of the District Court for the District of Connecticut handed down June 15, 1951.

That is a case where the decision turned on the fact that returns had been assigned for examination prior to the disclosure, and the court in deciding it said with respect to the Wenchel doctrine—

By Mr. O'Brien: The assignment here was to a field agent.

By Mr. Ryan: Yes. There is no case I know of, Counsel, I will say, in which there was an assignment of return to a group chief.

600 When this case is decided, if it is decided on that basis, it will make the law on that, as far as I know.

The opinion refers to the Wenchel statement and says:

"It plainly, in unequivocal language limits the departmental policy to forego criminal prosecutions to cases in which voluntary disclosures have been made before an investigation has been initiated. And it provides that an investigation is initiated when,"—among other things—

"an Internal Revenue Agent is assigned a return for examination. It is not necessary for me to decide from the evidence herein whether the lawyer knew of the statement either when he advised his clients to disclose or on June 9th when he made the disclosure in their behalf: The only reasonable inference is that the statement was available and I hold that the defendants are bound to have known its existence and contents.

601 Further on: "The defendants contend that the definition of the departmental policy should be interpreted to mean that the time for voluntary disclosures is terminated not by an assignment of a return for routine examination, as in this case, but upon the initiation of a fraud investigation which under departmental practice begins only if and when the return is assigned to the fraud section upon the uncovering, either in the routine examination or from other sources, of information indicative of fraud.

They point out that an assignment for examination is an intra-departmental piece of routine of which the taxpayer has no knowledge.

From this, they argue that a policy limited to a disclosure before the routine assignment would fail to achieve the objective thought in that taxpayers desiring to avail themselves of the policy could not know whether a present disclosure would be timely and hence would fail to disclosure.

This contention cannot be sustained as sound basis for the interpretation sought. True, an occasional delin-

602 quent may withhold a disclosure because, without knowledge that no assignment of his return has been made, he cannot be sure that he will earn the immunity afforded by official policy. But substantially the same results would occur if an assignment of the return to the fraud section were the event which terminated the "tempus penitentiae": Such an assignment is no more within the knowledge of the delinquent than the initial routine assignments. And thus the defendants in logic are forced to the extreme position that the official definition should be expanded to mean that any disclosure will be timely if made before the delinquent has knowledge that his return has actually been assigned to the fraud section. That a policy of such scope would achieve the objective of bringing in more revenue with less expense is far from plain; it might well have the effect of inducing a delinquent to believe that he could safely await developments in the routine examination and then make a disclosure, in anticipation of an assignment to the fraud section, only if his observation of the course of routine examination gave him cause to fear that his exposure was imminent.

603 "If such a course were permissible, a loss of revenue might result from disclosures never made which otherwise would have been forthcoming. It is altogether reasonable to infer that the Wenchel definition was formulated because the Bureau saw the unwisdom of providing a tempus penitentiae, the boundaries of which depended upon an absence of knowledge of an investigation begun or imminent—a negative fact so easy for a delinquent to simulate and so hard for the Bureau to dispute. And that the Bureau has the power to broaden or narrow its policy as to disclosures thereafter made is too obvious to need demonstration. I have no power under the guise of interpretation to extend the official policy.

And I am far from satisfied that the plain language of the official statement of the policy was intended to cover a disclosure such as this made after the routine assignment of the return.

In support of their claim in this connection defendants cite in re Liebster, D. C. 91 F. Supp. 814. But this case involved a disclosure made prior to the Wenchel state-
604 ment of 1947. Even if the holding of the Liebster case may be deemed sound under the policy as then defined, the later Wenchel statement must be deemed as intended to sharpen and narrow the policy as it had theretofore existed."

I won't read the rest, but the Court in that case denied the motion to suppress.

Now, with respect to whether the assignment of those group chiefs constituted an initiation of the investigation: Well, the Wenchel Doctrine says that investigation is initiated when a special agent, an Internal Revenue Agent, a Deputy Collector or other Bureau officer is assigned to return for examination and other things that have to do with what Counsel is talking about, out-of-town investigations, likely.

Now, there are three specific types of agents, Revenue Agents, Special Agents, Deputy Collectors. They are the people who ordinarily, as we all know, conduct the field of examination, who go out and do the work. Bureau officials do not do that. They do not go out. They do not go out, certainly not as a matter of practice and audit people's books. They don't work on them.

Well, I submit to the Court, why is that in there?
605 If all of the working agents are only enumerated, what is the term "or other Bureau officer" doing in the statement?

Well, does it perhaps mean the assignment of return to another Bureau officer, even if he doesn't do the work on it, is a cold objective point that that can be a cut-off point?

So far as the defendant is concerned, it makes no difference. He doesn't know about it anyhow. It is a question of what that term is in there for. It must be there for some purpose. It is not to be presumed that Mr. Wenchel is just talking. He must have put it in there. He put it in there advisedly.

It appears to be a paper that was read and it says "other Bureau officer" after enumerating all the working officers, so it must have been intended to indicate that an assignment, even behind or before an assignment to the actual working agent is an objective act indicating the initiation or the indication that actual work of an audit is going to commence and that it is therefore, a cut-off point.

I submit this argument to the Court because of the 606 presence of that term "Bureau officer", that I don't know what else it could mean.

Now, it was brought out on cross examination of Mr. Holz apparently, that the group chief has the authority to serve the return and return it without an examination. And then I learned—I didn't know either of those facts but I learned then that the agent himself could do that. So I say, that renders that a negative fact. It is as true in the case of the working agent as it is in the case of the Bureau official.

So, that is a negative circumstance, if any assignment to an agent means that the cut-off point is there. It makes no difference whether they can return it or not because they can both do it.

Now, that is the argument with respect to time limit. As I see the New York situation, I can't see how it could be since there was no communication of information, no request of New York to quote dates of the alleged disclosure. When I mention the dates of the alleged disclosure, I want to say that I don't think it makes any 607 difference whether it was January, February or March. I think those dates are after December 16th, and apparently nobody here made any record of when it was. Now, there was no testimony by Mr. Sauber that Mr. Cain was in his office in February or January—or February, when he shows evidence here that he at least flew back and forth to California and on the question of the evidence that he went back to California on the 11th of March and returned in the latter part of April, well, there is no corroboration of that as to when he returned, if he went on the 11th.

He returned by automobile. As to Mr. Busby's testimony today, he says that he went on a vacation on the 16th. He was away for two weeks. Now, when Mr. Sauber testified that on or about the 15th, the end of the file period came in and, he came in, and the reason he remembered it was because he had been doing a lot of work and because of the file period and having made up returns, he didn't come in as soon as he could.

Mr. Sauber says that the reason he remembers it was on or about the 15th, apparently—that was the reason 608 he remembers it. If that statement could have been made explanatory of a later appearance or an earlier appearance, it couldn't have been that.

Mr. Sauber says it was about a week after that. That is approximately, I think.

Mr. Busby came in again with Mr. Cain. According to Mr. Busby's story, if he was in California two weeks after the 16th, he couldn't have come in after the 15th. Maybe he came in two weeks after the 15th. That was the time he came from California. There wasn't any memorandum made by anybody. It doesn't make any difference, for the purpose of this argument, when it was made, January, February or March.

Finally, I would like to say that I don't suppose there is any particularly reason why I have to rely on it. I don't think it is the most essential thing here but it is true that there is no evidence in this case, I think, that is not subject to attack that Mr. Sauber said that this was a timely disclosure. He says he didn't say that. And they say he told them that everything was all right, nothing had been done, or something like that over in the Internal Revenue Agent's Office.

609 Well, he says he didn't even determine that until later and he did say to them later, after the taxpayer was identified and all the steps had been taken and when they ordered him to have the audit commenced—that he told them that it hadn't been assigned as yet, it hadn't been pursuant to their request.

Now, that was after they had told him all of these things. It wasn't a case, as they said in their affidavits, that they went in and first meticulously made and ascertained it. They didn't tell anything until the return had been assigned.

Mr. Sauber told them there wasn't any activity. It couldn't be assumed he had been misled by Mr. Johnson by that fact or he had any reason to mislead the defendants. It was after these conferences with Mr. Busby and with Mr. Sauber and with Mr. Cain calling him on the telephone, Mr. Cain asked him if he wouldn't have the agents make the audit.

Now, as to sufficiency, Mr. Sauber says there wasn't any conversation about disclosure that he talked about or that he testified about. There was a question asked as to 610 whether there would be publicity. He said no, there was publicity only in criminal cases. This appears to be a civil case. That would be his frame of mind in a situation where they contended return washed out transactions, to the extent those were the facts.

I believe it was in Mr. Busby's or Mr. Cain's testimony. I think it was Mr. Busby that said those were the facts; there was nothing to be concerned about except collecting taxes, or something like that. That is even Mr. Busby's version, that if those were the facts, there wasn't anything to be concerned about.

Well, that hasn't been established that those are facts.

Now, there is no evidence here that Mr. Sauber sought to obtain evidence from these people upon a false promise of immunity which he then, or somebody in the Government, had a purpose to violate. There isn't any question of the Government misleading by statements, because I have read from the declarations of policy and they indicate that it is a repentant taxpayer they are talking about and one who makes a disclosure of tax evasion and I think it is clear enough in all those statements and certainly 611 I think there is no over-reaching by the Government. There is no deception. There is no conduct that can be described as illegal obstruction of information in violation of this privilege against self-incrimination and I submit, for all of these reasons, that the motion to suppress evidence should be denied and that this case should proceed to trial in order that the real issues here should be determined.

Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I don't want to take any more time in argument, but I do have some cases that there was not time to go into, cases on the basis of the motion and relief and the connection between the promise of immunity and violation of the constitutional right.

If your Honor wishes to hear them—

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear what you said.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have some memoranda of cases, your Honor, on the question of the constitutional provision and the application or analogies of illegal search and seizure as applied to the motion at bar and I would 612 like to submit that to your Honor with a copy to counsel in the morning.

If you would like to have it I can supply it. I find that I just didn't cover that point in the argument.

By the Court: Didn't I have some of these cases on the memorandum you left with me?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, sir. Those are not there.

By the Court: Well, Gentlemen, I have given very careful consideration to this motion and I have listened attentively to the arguments and considered the briefs which counsel have submitted and I am quite clear in my own mind that the motion should be overruled and the motion will be overruled.

The lateness of the hour does not permit that I should indulge in any lengthy discussions as to my own views in the matter and I have reserved the right, of course, to file an appropriate memorandum of findings of fact and conclusions of law, so that my views may be set forth in some detail.

Of course, if you go to trial, as you will, and you fellows are found not guilty, of course, there will be no necessity of the court filing a memorandum or making 613 any finding, so far as that is concerned.

On the other hand, if you go to trial and the defendants are found guilty, the court shall express its views in an appropriate memorandum or appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law.

I have some rather fixed views that I would want to express, but I would rather take the time to do so with more care than I can now.

Moreover, I have this feeling: I don't know this is just the appropriate time for the court to make any comments upon the credibility of any of the witnesses or my views in regard to good faith or other matters that may enter into this proceeding because if I will try this matter I believe it would be quite appropriate for me to indulge 614 in any comment on this matter which, of course, is not a trial on the merits.

In any event, as I stated, I have been quite clear in my mind that this motion must be overruled. If Counsel desire that I should file a memorandum forthwith, I have no objection, of course, to doing so, but I didn't see that there would be any haste about it and we are so close to the trial date that time is of the essence and I haven't completely time to spend in the preparation of a memorandum.

We are shorthanded in my own district and one of the judges being in the hospital is the reason I tried to take in so much work during the day.

Now, that record may disclose the ruling on the motion that the defendants have made with reference to the production of certain documents. I think I have already indicated in my ruling as to the majority of the sub-sections, but so the record may reflect my ruling, it was ordered that the motion is denied.

I think that disposes of all matters that I have now before me by way of any motion or any other proceeding that requires my ruling, and counsel will remember 615 that I have set this matter, the time of trial for December 1st, and I will expect that counsel will be ready to go to trial at that time and the Court will expect counsel to be ready to do so at ten o'clock on December 1st.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, on that last point, I wish to remind you of what I said at the opening of the argument—I wonder if there would be any time available in the morning to discuss that with you? By that, I mean the matter of the failure of the plaintiff to make available the books in New York.

By the Court: There isn't any time between now and tomorrow.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you like time tonight?

By the Court: I can't be here in the morning. You mentioned something informal in your letter. I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't say anything in the letter about this subject.

By the Court: About what subject?

By Mr. O'Brien: At the start of the argument, I tried to say to your Honor that I had a very serious matter to discuss before you went back.

By the Court: It was something you haven't told me about before?

616 By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, yes.

By the Court: Oh, I didn't understand you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. I say, we have sent our auditors to New York and the United States Attorney had refused to make available the records of the partnership and I also said that a certain important set of records of the public companies which depend—

By the Court: Well, have you taken it up with Mr. Ryan yet?

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, indeed, I have. I have done my very utmost in that way, practically, and I asked him as late as today if any word has been heard from Washington.

I say, if your Honor will get that train tonight, I suggest we communicate with you in writing. I have full-affidavits on the facts here now. I have worked on the thing right down in the midst of the preparation for this right through the last two days, the last two or three days, with Mr. Ryan. I don't think he has anything to do with the willful defiance of the order in the effort, although they have had his letter since December 10th, since that time.

Unless these records are available, it would be utterly 617 impossible to proceed.

By Mr. Ryan: Apparently on Tuesday of this week, or Wednesday of this week, as nearly as I am informed, representatives of the defendant went to the U. S. Attorney's Office in New York to examine such records as are there.

I have sent them a request and a copy of the order. The first I learned, I believe was what Mr. O'Brien told me there was an indication an Assistant U. S. Attorney in charge of the tax cases was considered not complying with the order. That is, not considered not complying with the order, but he was considered as taking the position that the order didn't require him to turn over what was there and I immediately got in contact with him and I have done a great deal of telephoning on it, and I have talked to him and I have made my position clear and my opinions clear and informed him that I did not have sympathy with his position and that I felt he should comply with the order and the substance of the order.

He took the position that the order directed him to turn over documents obtained from Lubben and the named companies by seizure and by process did not require him to make the turnover since the documents he had,
618 none of them were acquired from those persons but rather, according to what he informed me, a person by the name of Gabliel; that they had been required by seizure but had been voluntarily turned over and that he felt it might prejudice his case to turn them over and that he didn't think it required him to. I told him it was a technicality and the substance of the matter was that the Court might have entered the order and requested the records of the companies that were in the office, and 619 that further, I couldn't see whether it made much difference whether they were turned over by seizure or process if they were turned over under Rule 16.

They were turned over, a good part of them under Rule 17, and certainly, if they couldn't be obtained prior under Rule 16, they could be obtained for the trial.

I talked to the Attorney General in Washington in the Tax Division and requested his cooperation in seeing that the order was executed. On his suggestion, I called the Chief of the Criminal Division at his office in New York and discussed it with him and made my position clear. He indicated he did take it up with the United States Attorney. He called me back about four-thirty or five o'clock on Wednesday, or was it Thursday?

It was Wednesday. And he said that he had referred the matter to the Criminal Division of the Attorney General's Office and I immediately then called back the Tax Division which has jurisdiction over the matter and asked them to get in touch with the Criminal Division and straighten the matter out. And I have received no word yet that that has been accomplished.

I have done all that I can as of this time to clear
620 that situation and I will continue and there is now being made an effort in connection with it, and I have adopted Counsel's suggestion and suggested to the Department that all work records be brought into Chicago and here we will make them, under the order, or the intent of the order, open for inspection.

As I say, as of this time, as a result of this position taken from other records which were already under inspection in the Special Agent's Office in New York were denied as a result of this interpretation down there, and I have worked on that problem and requested all those records be brought out to Chicago and I expect that the Department of Justice is going to concur with me and that that will be the result.

I just don't know whether they will be here Monday morning or when they will be here. I am trying to get them here as fast as I can.

By Mr. O'Brien: Not only that, but it isn't just the U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York. It is the Bureau of Internal Revenue on Broadway, in New York City.

621 I came over here. I spent a good part of two days here and was back and forth on the phone and I had my people there ever since Tuesday and had them until some time last night. It was my suggestion that all those papers be brought here because in addition to what you have been told, when my man got down there, the Government Agent was there from Chicago to bring certain material, papers back here for our own use at this late date, for our own inspection.

By Mr. Ryan: For use in the trial.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have plenty of time to get them back for the trial. Actually, I am informed from New York that Mr. Mammel brought them here. We have no way of coordinating our search down there.

Now, I have accordingly prepared and I give a copy to Counsel and I want to file a copy with the Court—a motion and affidavits to meet that situation. I say nothing specific but I certainly do not intend to have my people jeopardized in this trial by the unavailability of documents.

The essence of the motion is that arrangement be made under the circumstances. If we had the paper—by that I mean, if we had the papers last Tuesday, our auditors

622 were prepared to finish. The matter is indispensable to the defense, as shown by my affidavit and by what occurred there and the other things are all there, but I certainly am not ready on the auditing phase of this case for trial without complete papers.

I also show, if the Court please, the pains I took to go to my time sheet to find out exactly what I have been doing right along the line. There has been no time wasted in any way and we have everything ready except that. That is not in our control.

By the Court: You had better have somebody in Washington get busy, Mr. Ryan.

Mr. Ryan: Judge, I have been working on it and certainly I have been doing, I think, everything possible.

By the Court: Something more is necessary than the telephoning. Perhaps somebody will have to go to Washington if we are going to trial on December 1st because we can't have shifting from one department to another.

By Mr. Ryan: The Tax Division has jurisdiction over cases and the matter, as I undertsand it, is being taken up with the Deputy Attorney General.

By the Court: What you are trying to do now is 623 to bring them here?

By Mr. Ryan: To have all of them brought out to Chicago.

By Mr. O'Brien: That was my suggestion and I offer to pay for all that to save time, to get them here and get them back.

Mr. Ryan agreed to that and said my men could go on and examine until it was cleared with Washington, until it was released.

623 By Mr. Ryan: I hadn't any idea at that time, as counsel knows, that there would be any interference with this.

The difficulty at the time was in the U. S. Attorney's office and I assured counsel at that time and I think he heard me talking to the Assistant U. S. Attorney, that I would do everything to get it.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't you but—

By the Court: Gentlemen, I don't know that there is anything I can do tonight.

By Mr. Ryan: I realize the importance of the matter and I am not going to relax in my efforts to see that the records are brought to Chicago here at the earliest possible moment. I suppose if there are any other emergencies arising, such things as telephone calls or telegrams, your Honor can be communicated by counsel.

By the Court: Of course I will be available so that you can reach me every day next week by telephone.

By Mr. O'Brien: We will keep in touch with you.

By the Court: I don't know that there is anything I can do now. I have already passed on it.

By Mr. Ryan: I don't see that there is any reason 625 indicated.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like leave to file my motion in support of the affidavits. I don't like to leave it with the Clerk. It is a matter which requires your Honor's consideration.

By the Court: I can't rule on it tonight.

By Mr. O'Brien: Not tonight, but may it be sent to you, your Honor?

By the Court: No. That will be all, Gentlemen.

MOTION

The defendants, by Vincent O'Brien, their attorney, move that the trial date of the above-entitled cause be continued generally on the ground that the plaintiff has failed to comply with the orders of this Court entered October 31, 1952, pursuant to the motions of the defendants made under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and has thereby prevented the defendants from examining, copying and analyzing matter indispensable to their defense.

Defendants also move for leave to file, within a short day to be fixed by the court, such motion or motions in respect of such noncompliance by the plaintiff as defendants may deem appropriate.

In the alternative, the defendants ask that in the event the plaintiff does comply with said orders on or prior to December 1, 1952, that then the trial of the above-entitled cause be continued for a time not less than the time during which the plaintiff has been in noncompliance with said orders.

154 In support hereof defendants submit the attached affidavit of Vincent O'Brien and the attached affidavit of George D. Sullivan, Jr., and John A. Lynch.

AFFIDAVIT

Vincent O'Brien, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is chief trial counsel for the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of their foregoing motion.

He avers that:

1. All of the books, records, documents and papers to be produced by said orders of October 31, 1952, are indispensable to the defense in the above-entitled cause by reason of the averments made in the indictment and in more detail in the bill of particulars filed herein.

2. During the early part of November, 1952, Special Agent Sam Krane made available for photostating and microfilming a large quantity of papers in his possession in Chicago, which required three days to photostat in part and to microfilm as to the remainder. During that time, the said Special Agent informed affiant that it had been necessary for the Bureau of Internal Revenue to reconstruct the records of Eatsum Food Products Co., a partnership, and to that end, to procure certain bank
156 statements and photographs of checks of said partnership in the City of New York which he was not making available to defendants because he considered said material to be work product within the meaning of said orders, but affiant contends that within the doctrine of the case of Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U. S. 495, said material and any like material, whether in Chicago or in New York, and otherwise within the compass of said orders, is not work product. Affiant so represented to the court in his letter of November 17, 1952, a copy of which is attached hereto, marked Exhibit A, and made a part hereof.

3. Said order of October 31, 1952, entered pursuant to Rule 16, required the plaintiff, through attorneys for the Government in this proceeding, to advise counsel of record for the defendants of the places where the items so obtained by seizure or process from the said companies are held, and ordered the plaintiff to make them available to the defendants, their attorneys and agents for inspection and copying at the place or places so designated. On November 10, 1952, the United States Attorney wrote affiant the letter hereto attached, marked Exhibit B, and by reference made a part hereof.

4. As will more fully appear from the affidavit of George D. Sullivan, Jr., and John A. Lynch, also tendered in support of said motion, reference thereto being had and to which affiant refers, the plaintiff, in defiance of the Court's orders, on November 18, 19, and 20, 1952, failed and refused to make the books, records, papers and documents therein mentioned available for inspection and copying, not only those at the United States Attorney's office in the Southern District of New York, but also at the office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Affiant on Wednesday morning, the 19th day of November, 1952, 157 conferred with First Assistant United States Attorney Edward Ryan and Special Assistant Attorney General Arthur Cunningham, and in an effort to work the matter out on a practical basis in such way as not to inconvenience either the Government or the defendants, suggested that all of the papers in New York within the compass of said orders be immediately shipped to Chicago at defendants' expense, and assured said persons that defendants would likewise pay the charges for returning said papers to the East; and further suggested that they be sent to the United States Attorney's office in Chicago where the parties might have joint access. Affiant further avers that thereupon Messrs. Ryan and Cunningham said that they were agreeable to that suggestion and would try to clear it with their superiors in Washington, to the end that all of such papers at the Bureau of Internal Revenue and at the United States Attorney's office would be so sent to Chicago, and that, pending approval thereof, the accountants and the said George D. Sullivan, Jr. would be free to examine those at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 253 Broadway, New York City. Affiant agreed that defendants would prepay such shipment in order to avoid the delay that would ensue if the charges had to be approved through the usual governmental channels. As of the close of the hearing on defendants' motion to suppress evidence Friday night, November 21, 1952, no clearance had been forthcoming and the United States Attorney admitted in open court that access to said items had been denied to the defendants—all of which will more fully appear from the official reporter's transcript of said proceedings.

5. At said hearing, the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois stated that the United 158 States Attorney's office in New York had taken the position that the Court's order directed him to turn over only documents obtained from Lubben and the named companies by seizure and by process; whereas, the papers of the partnership in his possession were acquired from a person named Giglio and not by seizure, but voluntarily, but that Mr. Ryan advised him that, in any event, a good part of them would be required to be turned over under the order entered on Rule 17, and that, in any event, they could be subpoenaed in for the trial and thus would have to be here in any event.

Affiant heretofore procured and hereto attaches as Exhibit C, a certified copy of a sworn petition filed in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York on behalf of the said Giglio showing that in July, 1952, the said Giglio was served with a subpoena duces tecum calling for the production of the books, papers and documents of some twelve corporations and partnerships, including those of Eatsum Food Products Co., and that pursuant to said petition the court ordered that said subpoena duces tecum be quashed as to the books, records and papers of certain partnerships, including Eatsum Food Products Co., except as to such books and records as had already been produced in response to said subpoena. Affiant further avers that the said William Giglio had been a partner of David G. Lubben in the partnership doing business under the name of Eatsum Food Products Co.

6. The motions on which said orders of October 31, 1952, were entered were transmitted to the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye on September 30, 1952, with a letter, a copy of which is attached hereto, marked Exhibit D, and by reference made a part hereof. In that letter affiant said:

159 "As I see it, the motions under Rules 16 and 17 are as of course. They are controlled by the decision of the United States Supreme Court in United States v. Bowmon, 185 F. 2d 159, 71 S. Ct. 675. * * * We hope that there may be orders as of course without need for argument because the sooner such material is exhibited, the sooner we can inspect and analyze it and use it in the preparation of the defense."

The Government desired argument, although on the argument it conceded that the decision in the Bowman Dairy case was controlling. The argument could not be had until October 17, 1952, because of the need to complete the depositions which were in process.

When the said orders were settled by agreement with the United States Attorney the date of November 5th, 1952, was inserted for the submission of said papers. In a letter of affiant written October 30, 1952, to the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, a copy of which was sent to the United States Attorney, affiant said, without any subsequent objections or correction by the United States Attorney:

"Apparently, the records of Lubben and his companies in the East, which we traced down in the course of the investigation concluded just before the giving of the notice for the taking of depositions, are exceptionally voluminous and since their respective dates have been separated and grouped by the governmental agencies in the East for use in various local investigations or actions. Before they can be submitted to us, the Government desires to restore them to their proper places and to remove all compilations and other matter made for their own purposes. The agents earnestly insist that it will take up to as much as two weeks to fully accomplish that task. By November 5th, however, they believe that they will be ready to start exhibiting the material."

Affiant further avers that Special Agent Sam Krane informed him of his desire to go East to assist the agents there in and about the matter mentioned in said letter, but was prevented from doing so because his assistance was required in connection with the preparation and 160 hearing of the motion to suppress evidence. In addition, the presence at said hearing of Special Agent James Twohig, who is in charge of the same matter in

New York, was required, with the result that it was impossible to make arrangements for the inspection of the data in New York until after the time that said hearing was adjourned to November 21st.

The inspection and copying of the papers mentioned in the orders of this Court is but one operation. When that is done, the copies must be separated into those which are relevant and those which are not, for it is not feasible to do that at the places appointed in the orders; and then the accountants must study and analyze the same to arrive at a conclusion in respect of the averments of the bill of particulars and of the indictment as to moneys allegedly paid by or through said parties to the corporate defendants. Already, there are more than 5,000 items of microfilm copy and several hundred photostats so to be analyzed, and affiant is informed that the greater bulk of the material remains to be obtained in New York.

7. Affiant avers that the material turned over to the defendants in Chicago as aforesaid, contains nothing concerning the partnership, Eatsum Food Products Co.; that all of such papers are in New York with the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and only a portion of the records, documents and papers of the proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products Co., and the corporation, General Confections, Inc., is in Chicago and that the remaining portions in the possession of the Government are in New York City. Affiant further avers that he is informed by his said accountants that all 161 of said books, records, papers and documents are essential to the preparation of the defense.

8. Affiant further avers that the books, records, papers and documents of the said companies in the office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New York aforesaid, have been there for approximately three years, during all of which time they were available to the agents in Chicago, and that said agents in fact selected from said material many items which were delivered to the defendants or their representatives here in Chicago early in November of 1952, as aforesaid, and which had been procured by said agents prior to the return of the indictment in this proceeding.

In re: United States v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Dear Judge Nordbye:

At the last hearing, I orally requested the production of any order or directive that there might be to the agents by way of implementing the objective test as to the commencement of an investigation mentioned in Mr. Wenchel's paper. Since I am not sure that that item and similar items bearing upon the subject are within the scope of your orders of October 31st, I am enclosing a motion for an order on the United States to make available such items, if any. The reason is that they are not published documents so far as we have been able to ascertain. I am delivering to the United States Attorney a copy of that motion.

Notwithstanding my views on the disclosure and its effect, it would be less than prudent if we were to relax in our preparation for the trial. At all times I have endeavored to meet the schedule which is set, and I want to have everything that the lawyers can do behind them and on time. I am making the same effort in respect of the acccuntants. One of the things that I thought we had done was to procure an order under Rule 17 for the production by the Government of items it expects to offer in evidence, save for the work product of Government counsel.

A good deal of such material has been turned over to us in Chicago, although not yet in New York. We are about to procure the material in New York and have no question concerning it at this time. I do believe, how-163 ever, that we have not been supplied with all of the material that is here according to our construction of the order. I cannot be specific, except as to certain records of checks paid through the Manufacturers Trust Company of New York, and except as to documents, calculations and other papers evidencing the reconstruction of the patrnership records of Eatsum Food Products Co. Mr. Krane, the Special Agent, told me that due to the unavailability of the books and records they had reconstructed them. Moreover, I assume that there are compilations and sheets that were worked up by the agents which they will desire to offer in evidence pertaining to figures in general. I am speaking, of course, with reference to items that were procured prior to the suit and not by or under the instruction of the United States Attorney for the purpose of prosecuting the case. I consider that the matter of lawyer's work product is controlled by the decision in Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U. S. 495, and that, therefore, we are entitled to such papers; whereas, I think that the agents feel that since the items in question were those which they worked up themselves, rather than documents actually taken from the named companies, that they are beyond the purview of the order—even the order under Rule 17(c). It is likely that the same will be true as to the papers in New York. It might be helpful if you had the opportunity to give this some thought before the next session.

I am notifying the United States Attorney of the actual lodging of the depositions with the Clerk, and a copy of this notice is enclosed for your information.

I also enclose a motion and order for the production in advance of trial of certain papers or records of General Commercial Acceptance Company in New York. The depositions on file reveal that the invoices of the Lubben companies, that is, their accounts receivable, were hypothecated with that company which was acting as a factor. The materiality arises out of the fact that Lubben and certain of his representatives testified that the invoice prices were physically raised on the face of the invoices to an amount which would include alleged overage or premium payments. Thus, for example, in the case of a Shotwell invoice as to which premium payments are claimed, the invoice price would be stricken and the full price they say would be inserted.

164 We are sending you as soon as it is completed, a memorandum of our conception of the opposing theories, the points and authorities, and pertinent excerpts from the record of the hearings of the Sub-Committee of the Ways and Means Committee of the House pertaining to the subject matter of disclosure. Unfortunately, there is not time for more until the argument.

Respectfully yours,

Dear Mr. O'Brien:

Re: United States v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al

I wish to confirm the information communicated to you by Mr. Ryan of this office in a telephone conversation, in which you were advised that such of the records directed to be made available to the defendants by Judge Nordbye in this case, as are presently situated in New York City, may be examined at the Office of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in that city and the Office of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, at the United States Court House in New York City.

As Mr. Ryan advised, it is suggested that you contact Mr. James Twohig at the Intelligence Unit first, since Mr. Twohig is more familiar with the records involved than is the United States Attorney's Office at New York City.

Very truly yours,

J. Gerard Cregan, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. That he is the attorney for the above named defendant, William Giglio.

2. That the defendant is charged in two informations filed September 14, 1950, with willful failure to pay income taxes.

3. That these informations are presently marked off the trial calendar but are subject to restoration in October of this year and deponent has been informed by the Assistant United States Attorney in charge of the case that he expects to move the said informations for trial in said October term.

4. That the defendant in September of 1950 entered a plea of not guilty to these informations and bail was fixed in the sum of $5,000.00.

5. That in July of 1952 defendant was served with a subpoena duces tecum calling for the production of certain books, records and papers of some twelve corporations and partnerships.

169 6. That this motion is made under Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure on the grounds that the said subpoena duces tecum is oppressive and unreasonable in that it requires the books and records of three partnerships, to wit: Loraine Food Company, Tavern Fruit Juice Company and Eatsom Food Products Company, which are the personal property of this defendant and which the said defendant requires for his defense of the aforesaid information. To require him to produce these partnership records would be tantamount to violating his constitutional privilege against crimination and he would be required, in effect, to be a witness against himself.

7. That it is well settled law that partnership books and records are privileged as to the partners when they properly assert they are privileged as the defendant does here.

Wherefore, deponent prays that an order be entered quashing the subpoena duces tecum of July 1950 in part and specifically as to the books, records and papers of the aforementioned three partnerships, to wit: Loraine Food Company, Tavern Fruit Juice Company and Eatsom Food Products Company.

Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye
United States District Judge
Minneapolis, Minnesota

In re: U. S. A. v. Shotwell, et al.
Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division, No. 52 CR 143

Dear Judge Nordbye.

Enclosed are the following motions:

1. Motion of defendants to suppress certain evidence; to set same for hearing, and for issuance of subpoena for production of certain documents, etc., in advance of the hearing so to be set;
2. Motion of defendants for discovery and inspection pursuant to Rule 16; and
3. Motion of defendants for a subpoena for production of documentary evidence pursuant to Rule 17:

copies of which, together with a copy of this letter have been given to the United States Attorney. We should like to have the motions filed and to have you set a date for their disposition.

As I see it, the motions under Rules 16 and 17 are as of course They are controlled by the decision of the United States Supreme Court in United States v. Bowman, 185 F. 2d 159, 71 S. Ct. 675. If there is any question about it, we are prepared to argue the motions. We hope that there may be orders as of course without need for argument because the sooner such material is exhibited, the sooner we can inspect and analyze it and use it in the preparation of the defense. If we have to argue it, for reasons hereinafter referred to, it will not be possible to do so until the depositions presently scheduled have been taken.

171 The motion to suppress is of a different character. We are not entitled to the primary relief requested until the facts on which the motion is based are determined. To that end, there must be a hearing before the court (see Rule 41(e), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure; In re: Liebster, 91 F. Supp. 814; In re: White, et al., 98 F. Supp. 895, 194 F. 2d 215; Burdeau v. McDowell, 256 U. S. 465; Go-Bart Importing Co. v. U. S., 282 U. S. 344; In re No. 32 East Sixty-Seventh St., 96 F. 2d 153, 156; United States v. Hashmall, 97 F. Supp. 42; McNabb v. United States, 63 S. Ct. 608; Glasser v. United States, 62 S. Ct. 457; United States v. Franklin, 188 F. 2d 182; Roberson v. United States, 165 F. 2d 752; and May v. United States, 236 Fed. 495), and a date for that purpose should be set as requested. To enable us to prepare for that hearing, we have asked that the documents in the Government's files pertinent to the alleged disclosure be ordered produced and that a subpoena issue for them returnable for same date in advance of the date set for hearing, at which time we may inspect them, etc.

The depositions which are to be taken are noticed to commence October 6th, in New York, and to continue during that week there, in New Jersey, and in Miami, and then, October 13th, in San Juan Puerto Rico. Nearly all of the witnesses have been subpoenaed and the other arrangements have been made. If the depositions proceed in a normal manner, we should be back in Chicago by the 15th or 16th of October.

Subject to the Court's convenience, we should, therefore, like to have the hearing on the motion to suppress and the date to be fixed in advance thereof for the production of documents, set for sometime as soon as possible after October 16th, but, preferably, not on October 20th, on which date we have motions specially set before Judge Barnes in two other cases, which I take it will be disposed of in a day, or a day and a half. I anticipate that Judge Barnes will hear them on the 20th, but if not, it will be on October 27th, because he hears such matters only on Monday as a general rule.

As far as the legal points are concerned, they have been thoroughly briefed and we are ready to argue them as I have indicated.

172 We have not attempted in this letter to do more than cite some of the cases which we think are enough to show that the requested discovery should be ordered and that a hearing should be set on the motion to suppress.

Since we are to leave Sunday for the depositions, we would appreciate hearing from you this week if possible. When we do hear, if there is occasion to prepare any order, Mr. Wattling will take care of it while I am away.

Respectfully yours,
Vincent O'Brien

AFFIDAVIT WITH RESPECT TO INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS

State of Illinois }
County of Cook } ss.

George D. Sullivan, Jr., and John A. Lynch, being severally sworn upon their respective oaths, depose and say:

1. George D. Sullivan, Jr., is a licensed attorney, assisting in the defense of "United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al"; John A. Lynch is a Certified Public Accountant who, with his staff, is working on certain factual accounting material for the defendants in the case; and that they, together with Joseph J. Fitzgerald (an accountant employed by the firm of John A. Lynch) went to New York City for the purpose of examining the records ordered to be made available for inspection by the defense under the order entered on October 31, A. D. 1952.

2. That they spent in New York the days of November 18 and 19, and George D. Sullivan, Jr., alone, the day of November 20, A. D. 1952, in an unsuccessful attempt to obtain that examination which the order provided the defendants were to have.

3. That on the 18th of November, A. D. 1952, they 174 called at the Internal Revenue Offices and were allowed in a room in which were piled various records of the Eatsum Proprietorship, but none of the Eatsum Partnership; Reserve Trading Company; Cole Trading Company and some canceled checks, but none of the books, of General Confections Company. Their access to this material lasted for approximately an hour, when it was stopped by Agent Mammel, who said that all of the material which would be used by the Government as evidence, was being bundled and being shipped to Chicago for examination by the Special United States Attorney, Arthur Cunningham: that affiants protested that they could work neither in New York nor in Chicago because there would be parts of the records in each city; but all the affiants were allowed to continue to do was to make a listing of the books, this continuing for the afternoon of November 18, 1952, and being done by Fitzgerald, with the agents' physically taking away every book just as soon as it had been listed by Fitzgerald.

4. Sullivan and Lynch, seeking the whereabouts of the Eatsum Partnership records, were told by Agent Twohig that they had to confer with Assistant United States Attorney Leone; this conference took place at 5:00 P. M., and was inconclusive in the sense that Leone left the office, deferring any information or records for the time being.

5. The following day, November 19, A. D. 1952, Leone, at 11:00 A. M., told Lynch, Sullivan, Fitzgerald, Twohig, Mammel and Agent Mann, that he had had the Court's order since November 10, A. D. 1952, and that he had conferred about it with his superiors, but that he was not going to let them see any books, because, amongst other things, he considered the order to be:

175 (1) Not clear.

(2) Not binding on the New York District Attorney, in the absence of the New York District Attorney being made a party to the proceedings, which resulted in the order.

(3) Based upon the Bowman case, which he personally had theretofore studied and disliked.

6. Sullivan explained the proceedings which had been followed to arrive at the order, but Leone was adamant and insisted he would produce nothing.

7. In the early afternoon of November 19, A. D. 1952, Sullivan, having talked with Vincent O'Brien, Chief Counsel for the defendants, told Lynch and Lynch told Mammel that a tentative agreement has been reached between O'Brien, Arthur Cunningham and Assistant United States Attorney, Edward Ryan, of Chicago, that all of the records were being boxed and shipped air freight to Chicago at the defendants' expense. Lynch commenced arrangements to accomplish the physical shipment but was stopped by Twohig and Mammel, who said that such arrangements were not going to be carried out, and that Fitzgerald and Lynch were to leave the building, and, indeed, Mammel went and got Lynch's coat, held it for him, and told him to leave. Lynch and Fitzgerald left, as they were ordered to do, without at any time having had any actual inspection of the books accorded to the defendants.

8. On November 20, A. D. 1952, Sullivan asked Mammel again if inspection could be had and Mammel again refused, saying that he was going to select such papers as he felt would be used on the trial and he, personally, was going to bring them out to Chicago.

Affiants further state that they in all respects re-
176 lied upon and asked to have honored the order of October 31, A. D. 1952, but in spite of the best and most courteous efforts, have entirely failed in securing the provisions for inspection called for in the order.

Further affiants saith not.

ORDER

The above-entitled matter was by order of this Court on September 9, 1952, set down for trial on December 1, 1952. The defendants, under date of November 24, 1952, have presented to this Court a motion for an order continuing the trial date on the ground that the plaintiff has failed to comply with the orders of this Court entered October 31, 1952, pursuant to motions of the defendants made under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and which failure has allegedly prevented the defendants from examining, copying, and analyzing matters indispensable to their defense.

After the motion was presented and before hearing thereon, the Court under date of November 25, 1952, was notified by counsel for the defendants that the records which should have been made available to them under the orders of this Court entered October 31, 1952, were now available for inspection at New York and requested a continuance of the date of trial for a period of ten days. Now, therefore, the Court being fully advised in the premises, and after due consideration,

It Is Ordered: That the date of trial of the above-entitled matter be continued from December 1, 1952, to December 9, 1952, at ten o'clock A. M., at the United States Court House, Chicago, Illinois.

In the performance of his official duties, affiant is in charge of the prosecution of indictment C139-206, C139-304 through 308, inclusive. Said 6 indictments charge various violations of the Internal Revenue Code (Title 26, U. S. Code), and a conspiracy in violation of Title 18, Section 371, U. S. Code, to violate various sections of the Internal Revenue Code. The aforementioned indictments name the following defendants: William Giglio, Louis J. Roth, Frank Livorsi, Howard Lawn, and American Brands Corporation.

On the 25th day of November, 1952 two subpoenas duces tecum, which are a part of the record before this court, were served upon Myles J. Lane, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. This affidavit is being submitted to this court to request this court to stay the production of the books, records, papers, and documents set forth in the bodies of the subpoenas in question.

181 Since certain motions have been made before this court in which it has been alleged that the Office of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, generally, and affiant, specifically, have arbitrarily refused to comply with certain orders of this court, it seems only proper that the following facts be brought to the court's attention:

On November 10, 1952 a letter was received from Otto Kerner, Jr., Esquire, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, by the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. Said letter was received by the affiant on November 12th. There were enclosed with the letter copies of two orders of this court made pursuant to the provisions of Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and entered on the 31st day of October, 1952. Said orders required the production of certain books and records by the attorneys for the plaintiff for inspection and discovery by the defendants in this case. Affiant had not previously been made aware of any such order having been entered nor of the contents thereof.

Included in the body of the letter was a reference to Special Agent James J. Twohig of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue located in the City of New York, and to the fact that Mr. Twohig was conversant with the material covered by the orders. Mr. Twohig at that time was not in the City of New York, and affiant did not speak to Mr. Twohig until either the afternoon of November 17th or the morning of November 18th, at which time Mr. Twohig advised affiant that he would call upon affiant in the company of Messrs. Sullivan and Lynch, of counsel to the defendants, from the City of Chicago. The gentlemen in question arrived with Mr. Twohig at affiant's office at approximately 5 p. m. on Tuesday, October 18th. Only a few minutes prior to their arrival affiant had received a telephone call to the effect that 182 his father-in-law was in a coma and would he please drive his wife to her father's home as quickly as possible. Affiant saw Messrs. Sullivan and Lynch, who to affiant's best recollection, may have been accompanied by a third gentleman, and explained to Messrs. Sullivan and Lynch that at that time he was unfamiliar with the order but assured them he would consider the matter that evening and would be able to give them some sort of an answer the following morning. Meanwhile, affiant's father-in-law having expired early in the a.m. of November 19th affiant advised Mr. Twohig to call the aforementioned gentlemen and request them to appear at affiant's office at about 11:30 a.m. Affiant then stated to Messrs. Sullivan and Lynch that he had discussed the matter with his superiors, namely, Joseph P. Martin, Chief of the Criminal Division, United States Attorney's Office, and that he was unable to comply with the order at that time until further word was received from the Office of the Attorney General of the United States. The request for instructions from the Attorney General was made at the first possible time, that is, on November 24, 1952.

Affiant while discussing the matter did state, academically speaking as an attorney, he did not agree with the law promulgated in United States v. Bowman Dairy. However, at no time did affiant's personal "like or dislike" for the Bowman Dairy decision, have any bearing on whether or not the records were to be produced in this case.

In view of the fact that affiant's wife was in a state of shock due to her father's death, affiant following the conference did not return to his office until Monday, November 24th. On that date a telephone conference took place with the Deputy Attorney General of the United States, Ross J. Malone, Jr., and Mr. Ryan of the United States Attorney's Office, Northern District of Illinois, and Special Assistant to the Attorney General Arthur 183 Cunningham in which the Attorney General advised affiant that he was not to raise any technical objections to the aforementioned order which he had received by mail from the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois. Said order was complied with, and affiant is informed and verily believes that defense counsel was accordingly informed.

On November 25th a conference took place at Washington, D. C. between affiant and the Deputy Attorney General of the United States and Meyer Rothwacks of the Tax Division of the Attorney General's Office. At that conference it was decided that, in view of the situation regarding the books and records and the necessity of having those books and records to which reference is made in the aforementioned order in New York, for the prosecution of the pending tax indictments against William Giglio, et al, that a request would be made to this court for a stay of compliance with the subpoenas which were served upon the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York.

Vincent O'Brien, Esquire, Chief Trial Counsel for the defendants, has alleged in a letter addressed to this court that the delay in the production of the records located in New York City and which are needed by the defendants in this case is but an attempt by the plaintiffs to delay the prosecution of the Shotwell case. Affiant avers that such is not the case. Rather, that the delay has only been due to an honest attempt by a public official to prosecute a case of which he has charge, and to expedite that prosecution. Further, the delay has not been arbitrary but is the result of the impracticability of having different and unrelated parties with divergent interests attempting to 184 have access to the same records at the same time. In fact, Mr. O'Brien has stated that people from affiant's office "were working on the books and records" in question at the time that he sought them.

The New York case has been assigned by the Honorable John G. Knox, Chief Judge of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, to the Honorable John F. X. McGohey for trial. Judge McGohey will be in criminal court in the Southern District of New York on January 3, 1953 and the trial of the case will commence on that date. The government in the Giglio case could proceed to trial tomorrow were the defendants ready to do so. However, since the defendants have been granted until December 19th for the making of motions, which means that the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York must be served with Notice of Motion by December 9th, the Giglio case could not be tried prior to January 3rd. However, it is submitted to this court that it would be most impractical to have accountants and counsel from Chicago examining books and records which are located in the Southern District of New York, when said books and records are needed by the plaintiffs in the case of United States vs. Giglio.

Mr. O'Brien, at page 7, paragraph 6 of a motion entitled, "A motion to Reset (the trial) from the first day of December, 1952 to such date as the court may deem just . . ." has stated:

> ". . . greater bulk of the material remains to be obtained in New York. Affiant is informed by the defendants' auditors aforesaid that it is physically impossible . . . but that if 6 weeks additional time is allowed by concentrated attention, it can be completed."

This statement by counsel is not deemed by affiant to be an exaggeration of the facts since the records in New York are voluminous and extensive.

185 Affiant therefore submits that the request to stay compliance with the subpoenas for a period of 90 days, during which time the government will be able to proceed with the completion of the prosecution in the William Giglio, et al. case, is not unreasonable. It is further requested that with the exception of the records which are not needed in the New York prosecution, that the defendants herein be ordered to desist from any attempt to examine any records which are located within the confines of the Southern District of New York and which are related to the William Giglio, et al. case in order that that prosecution may proceed unimpeded, until the completion of that case which it is estimated will be February 15, 1953.

186 And on the same day, to wit, the 26th day of December, 1952 came the Defendants by their attorneys and filed in the Clerk's office of said Court their certain Objections To The Relief Requested In The Affidavit Of Gerome J. Leone in words and figures following, to wit:

187

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

* * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

OBJECTIONS OF THE DEFENDANTS TO THE RELIEF REQUESTED IN THE AFFIDAVIT OF GEROME J. LEONE

The defendants, by Vincent O'Brien, their attorney, make the following objections to the granting of the relief requested in the affidavit of Gerome J. Leone:

1. There are two orders involved: One, pursuant to Rule 16, that the United States as therein directed make certain items available for inspection and copying; the other, pursuant to Rule 17, for the issuance of a subpoena to the United States of America for the production for examination etc. of the items therein mentioned "prior to the trial".

With the exception of certain documents and papers turned over to the United States Attorney for the Southern

District of New York by one William Giglio having to do with Eatsum Food Products Co., a co-partnership, all other items in said orders of October 31, 1952, referred to are in the possession of the Department of Justice at the office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, or in the possession of the Treasury Department at the office of the Intelligence Unit, 253
188 Broadway, New York City—and not in the possession of said affiant, Gerome J. Leone, or of any one in his office.

In addition to the said orders and subpoenas served for production for examination and copying of the items in question prior to the trial, and in addition to the subpoenas averred by said affidavit to have been served upon Myles J. Lane, returnable December 1st, 1952 (the then trial date), there were served, on the 26th day of November, 1952, returnable December 1, 1952, upon the United States of America and John Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and upon the United States of America and James P. McGranery, Attorney General of the United States, subpoenas duces tecum for the production of all of the items encompassed in the order made pursuant to Rule 16 and for the production of certain other items, all of which will more fully appear from the said subpoenas and the returns of service thereon ready to be produced in open Court, and similar subpoenas are in the course of being served upon the same parties for the same items to be produced at the trial as reset for December 9, 1952.

2. The said affidavit merely corroborates, in part, the claim already advanced of record by the defendants that the plaintiff has failed to comply with the court orders of October 31, 1952, entered pursuant to Rules 16 and 17, without good reason therefor and without the permission of the Court; and is, in effect, attempting to procure a continuance or to force a postponement without asking for it.

3. The affidavit in question and the motion therein continued does not expressly purport to be filed or made by or on behalf, or with the authority of the plaintiff, or of the Attorney General of the United States, or even of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of 189 New York—Myles J. Lane—, nor of John Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

Nevertheless, defendants' counsel was requested to appear before the trial court at Duluth, Minnesota, by Special Assistant Attorney General Arthur Cunningham, representing the plaintiff in this proceeding.

Assuming the validity of the procedure employed, defendants submit that the affiant lacks the capacity to request the relief asked for. In the alternative, they say that if affiant is acting under any color of authority from the plaintiff, then the plaintiff, in its failure to comply with the Court's orders, is attempting to hide behind departments or officials, and that the law recognizes "no such incommunicability between officials of the same government," and that since they cannot "administer the same law in accord," the plaintiff may not maintain this proceeding.

4. It is not stated when the indictments in said affidavit mentioned were returned, but defendants aver the fact to be that they were not returned until the month of September, 1952, and they reiterate that one of the defendants in said indictment, to-wit: William Giglio, is a material witness at the trial of the proceeding at bar in which the indictment was returned last March. Moreover, said affidavit does not show with any certainty that said New York proceedings will be reached for trial in January. It does show that that case is not even at issue, and, indeed, that the preliminary motions have been neither filed nor disposed of.

No reason beyond the mere expression of the desire of affiant is alleged to show why the right of these 190 defendants to a speedy trial and a prior jurisdiction of the Court in the above-entitled cause should be subordinated so as to prevent the trial of this cause until such time as the trial of the New York indictments is concluded.

5. Referring to the letter of November 10, 1952, the orders of October 31, 1952 required that such letter be provided the defendants within two days, or by November 2nd, 1952. The First Assistant United States Attorney Edward J. Ryan orally informed counsel for the defendants promptly upon entry of said orders that he had informed Special Agent James J. Twohig of the Intelligence Unit of the facts, and defendants aver that it is quite immaterial that Mr. Twohig was not in New York on November 12th insofar as the matter of notice of the entry and conditions of said orders is concerned.

6. The affidavit shows that at 11:30 A. M., Wednesday, November 19th, affiant after conference with his superiors stated that he was unable to comply with the orders. No reason whatsoever is averred for the failure of affiant to apply for instructions to the Attorney General's office until November 24, 1952, nor, in case of affiant's inability so to do, why his assistants, including Joseph T. Martin, Chief of the Criminal Division, did not do so, inasmuch as the Court's orders expressly referred to the United States.

7. It is clear from the affidavit that Deputy Attorney General of the United States Ross J. Malone, Jr. did, on Monday, November 24th, recommend or direct compliance with said orders, but it is plain from the context that only technical objections to compliance were discussed, and that, thereupon, affiant undertook to go to Washington to present the matter further on the question as to which case should first be tried. Following such conversation, on November 28th, Mr. Meyer Rothwacks, in person,
191 advised counsel for defendants that the orders would be complied with, and defendants had a representative in New York for that purpose on the same day and the orders were not complied with. If it was agreed between affiant and Mr. Rothwacks that a request would be made to the Court in this case for a stay, Mr. Rothwacks did not mention the matter to counsel for the defendants during his visit, or at any other time. Moreover, as above noted, such request would have to come from the plaintiff and on strong showing to interfere with the trial date heretofore set.

8. Plaintiff's actions have been such as necessarily to delay the trial of the Shotwell case, on the one hand, or, on the other hand, to force the defendants into trial at the appointed time without indispensable evidence that the Court ordered be made available to them and thus to maneuver the defendants into making a request for a continuance which would necessarily prevent a prompt trial in view of the condition of the Court's calendar, in which case, if made, it is apparent that the plaintiff would readily join.

9. The affidavit refers to the impracticability of having different and unrelated parties, with different and divergent interests, having access to the same records at the same time. It is respectfully submitted that the defendants could have completed their examination and copying by November 28, 1952, had access been granted according to the orders, leaving the affiant and others free to work unimpeded. Not only so, but said books, records, papers and documents could afterwards have been produced at the trial date set by this Court in the office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois as heretofore suggested by the defendants, 192 accessible to affiant, and returned to New York in ample time for the trial there, all under appropriate protective orders of this Court.

10. It is true that at one time the defendants' accountants stated that it would require six weeks additional time to complete their inspection, sorting and analyses of said items in such way as to be fully satisfactory to defendants and their counsel; but it is likewise true that the said accountants also stated that within three weeks they could provide for defendants and their counsel the minimum requirements for their purpose during defendants' case in chief, provided that the items in question had been separated, as was promised, and that they were made available to the said accountants in the order that they desired. Rather than seek a continuance, the defendants decided on November 14, 1952, to go to trial at the time then appointed on the basis of the reports which the accountants so undertook to have available by December 8, 1952. In this connection, defendants aver that they have never made any motion for a continuance, except their last request for a time equal to that during which they had been delayed due to the plaintiff's noncompliance with the Court's orders.

11. Finally, affiant asks that the defendants be ordered to desist from any attempt to examine any records located within the confines of the Southern District of New York, etc., as though the Southern District of New York was not in the United States, and as though affiant had some peculiar and exclusive jurisdiction of the items in the possession of the Treasury at 253 Broadway, New York City.

Defendants object to the filing of said affidavit, or, in the alternative, if filing is permitted, they ask that it 193 be stricken and that the relief therein requested, whether the request be deemed to be that of the affiant or of the plaintiff in this cause, be denied.

194 And afterwards on, to wit, the 28th day of December, 1953 there was filed in the Clerk's office of said Court a certain Transcript Of Proceedings Had On December 3, 1952, Before The Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, Judge at Duluth, Minnesota in words and figures following, to wit:

1 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

* * (Caption—52 Cr. 143) * *

The above entitled matter came on for hearing before the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, a Judge of the United States District Court, in the Federal Building, Duluth, Minnesota, at 9 o'clock A.M. on December 3, 1952.

Appearances:

Arthur B. Cunnington, Special Assistant Attorney General, Washington, D.C., Attorney for the Plaintiff.

Jerome J. Leone, Assistant United States Attorney, Southern District of New York, United States Court House, New York City.

Vincent O'Brien, Esq., and William T. Kirby, Esq., Chicago, Illinois, Attorneys for the Defendants.

The Court: Well, gentlemen, I assume you are here in response to a telephone conversation that the Court had with Mr. Cunningham. I stated to him that if the parties were to appear before me they could come
2 here to Duluth on Wednesday, December 3rd, and this morning I am in receipt of a motion that has been filed by Mr. O'Brien, the attorney for the defendants. I am not clear as to just what was to be taken up before the Court this morning, whether the Government has a motion or whether you are here on Mr. O'Brien's motion. Perhaps counsel could indicate to me what matters we are to take up this morning.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, as the Court well knows there has been certain conflicts that have arisen by reason of the motion filed by the defendants in this case in view of the fact that there are certain actions pending in New York, certain indictments pending there, and there have been certain complications and certain conflicts to obtain that evidence; and since both the New York cases are pending and this case, the Shotwell case is pending, and in that respect, Mr. Leone, who is in charge of the New York cases, has filed a certain affidavit. I believe Your Honor has a copy. We gave a copy to the Court yesterday.

The Court: Yes, I am in receipt of it.

Mr. Cunningham: And Mr. Leone desires the opportunity to be heard with regard to that affidavit, and at this time I would like to introduce Mr. Jerome Leone, the Assistant United States Attorney of New York.

Mr. O'Brien: May I ask whether the plaintiff in this action joins in the motion that is embraced in that affidavit?

Mr. Cunningham: May I state my position after Mr. Leone is heard, if the Court does not mind?

The Court: I haven't any objection to that procedure.

Mr. Cunningham: I will state my—the position of the plaintiff. I suppose the Court is aware that I have been assigned to try the Shotwell case.

Mr. Leone: May it please the Court, first of all I believe I should state to Your Honor that any request which is being made here is being made in an attempt to expedite the prosecution within the Southern District of New York. However, in view of certain motion papers which have been filed with this Court I feel I should apologize or perhaps indicate to the Court that any indications which have been suggested by defense counsel here concerning any records in New York is not an arbitrary thing, but rather, as I shall point out to this Court now, were due to circumstances which in effect were not entirely within my power to determine.

As Your Honor knows and as Your Honor apparently has seen from my affidavit and motion papers the defendants have requested that certain records which are within the Southern District of New York and which 4 are necessary to the prosecution of the action of William Giglio and others, be produced in Chicago, and as defense counsel has stated the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York was notified of a pending order in this court, which order to my knowledge was entered, I believe, on October 31st—rather the two orders, encompassing the production of certain books and records in the Shotwell case to make certain inspection and discovery.

As stated in my affidavit a letter was received on November 10, 1952 by the office, by the United States Attorney for the Southern District, which letter I have here and I offer to the Court and which letter bears a stamp of the United States Attorney's office acknowledging receipt as of November 10, 1952. As to what time that was received on November 10th, I can't tell Your Honor, except I first received it on the morning of November 12th, which was the day after. At that time, when I read the order, I was unaware of any order being entered and, further, I was unaware that the United States Attorney's office in the Southern District of New York was a party.

However, in view of the fact that the body of the letter referred to a special agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, I felt in due time, whenever he appeared,
5 he would explain them to me. I attempted to contact his office but Mr. Twohig was in Chicago I believe on a motion that was pending to suppress some evidence at that time. Mr. Twohig returned to New York and to the best of my recollection called me by telephone either late November 17th or the morning of November 18th. When he called me he advised me—I asked him what it was all about and he reiterated to me he would appear in my office in the company of Messrs. Sullivan & Lynch, who were of counsel in the Shotwell case. They appeared in my office and, as I relate in my affidavit, it was rather late in the day. To the best of my recollection it was approximately 5 P.M. I said, "Gentlemen, you come in and ask me to produce certain matters." "As a practical matter I have just been called, about five minutes ago by my sister-in-law, concerning my father-in-law who was in a state of coma and that my wife was alone at home with an infant and I was going to drive her to the home of my father-in-law." I explained that to the gentlemen in question and I said, "Gentlemen, I can appreciate your position." I said I can't consider this order at this time. I haven't had an opportunity to consider it." I said, "In the morning I will be more than happy to sit down and discuss the order with you." They agreed to do that. They left and I subsequently left and the 6 next morning I called Mr. Twohig the first opportunity I was able that my father-in-law had passed away in the night and I couldn't make it to my office until approximately 11:30.

At that time the gentlemen came to my office and I stated to them I had considered the demand but I was unable to comply with any order because under the directions of my superiors I was told that the order was not clear and, further, that it was not clear it applied to us; that we would ask the Attorney General of the United States for instructions and that at this time we would be unable to comply with it.

Mr. Sullivan, I believe, or Mr. Lynch at that time noted the reasons, which were three, as to why the order was not being complied with, and he said, may I put those down? I said you certainly may, and you may report back to Chicago accordingly.

During the time that they were there and following the time when he put down the reasons as to why the order was not being complied with, there was a discussion which took place concerning the Bowman Dairy case, and concerning the order entered in this court by Judge Perry, concerning the taking of certain depositions of Government witnesses, and in that discussion, which I am sure took some ten or fifteen minutes, it encom-7 passed both those matters, I stated that I did not agree with the Bowman Dairy case; that as the assistant United States Attorney, I felt in my own opinion it was bad law, but since the attorneys have stated I arbitrarily refused, I should point out to the Court that I was not considering it in the light that I could flaunt the law of the United States Supreme Court but rather I was speaking academically.

Going on from there, the first opportunity I had to speak to the Attorney General's office was on Monday, at which time Mr. Malone said that the order was to be complied with and followed. Following his directions I so advised my chief, who had heard part of the conversation, which conversation was between Chicago, Washington, and New York City on a conference phone. Mr. Malone said he would permit me to appear in Washington the following day with agents of the Internal Revenue Department. The following day I spoke to my office from Washington and they advised me that, I think, Mr. Sullivan or Mr. Ryan had appeared at the office and that they had been permitted to go into my office and search out records and examine records, and the same was true of another room. As I have read Mr. Sullivan's affidavit which has been offered to the Court this morning, it is indicated therein that many discussions took place on November 23rd and 24th with Mr. Martin in my office.

8 Mr. O'Brien: The 23rd?

Mr. Leone: I am sorry. I mean the 25th and 26th. And nowhere in that affidavit do I find any indication that Mr. Martin did not permit them to make an examination. There is couched, rather, within the confines of that affidavit, certain indications that those counsel were running back and forth and that they were explaining things to Mr. Martin and they were explaining the position of the Treasury to Mr. Martin; but nowhere in that affidavit does it indicate Mr. Martin opposed their examination of any records. As a matter of fact, he did attempt to assist them, but he stated he had no jurisdiction of the Treasury Department. I think Your Honor will agree with that. One agency is separate from the other and we could not advise the Treasury what to do.

Finally on Friday afternoon, at 5 P.M., I had returned to my office Friday morning—I returned to the City of New York on Wednesday evening. Friday I was in my office and at 5 P.M. last Friday, the 28th, Mr. Christoph, appeared at my office and he stated, "I am here to examine certain books and records." I asked him who he was. He told me. I said that first of all it seemed rather strange he wasn't given a letter of introduction; and I might indicate to Your Honor all kinds of people have appeared at our office and say we are here to examine records. It is somewhat unusual procedure that people can go into a Government agency and say we want to look, without any introduction or any authorization to examine records. I indicated to Mr. Christoph, I said at 5 o'clock in the afternoon this office closes. He said he wanted to work that evening and he wanted to work Saturday. I said there will be nobody here. I said, "I can't assist you. I don't know about the Internal Revenue." I said, "However, if you are here Monday morning with a proper letter," and he then interrupted me and said, "Yes, I will have another gentleman with me." I said, "You can bring ten if you wish." I said, "I will appear here Monday morning." I asked him to appear Monday morning at my office with a letter of authorization, and I then brought him into the office of the Chief of the Criminal Division and introduced him to the secretary and I said, "Mr. Christoph will be here Monday morning at approximately 10 o'clock. I have asked another agent who has worked on this case." I said, "He will be here, Miss Klein. As long as Mr. Christoph has a proper letter of authorization he is to be permitted to examine all books and records which are located at both 418 and 438." At the same time I told Mr. Twohig he was to indicate to his office what we had done and further he was to see that his office permitted examination of all books and records. Monday afternoon, from Chicago, I phoned my office at approximately 4:30, New York time, and Miss Klein related to me that Mr. Christoph had not appeared; that Mr. Krane had waited all day. Mr. Christoph, who has not made an affidavit before this Court, said to Mr. Sullivan, as stated in one of the affidavits—

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, he has made an affidavit.

Mr. Leone: If he has I have not seen it. Of the affidavits, I have only seen Mr. Sullivan's. Mr. Christoph has said he was told to come back December 3rd. I submit to the Court that is all in error.

With that as background, this is the position we find ourselves in:

There is a case pending in the Southern District of New York which includes six indictments. The substance of the indictment charges various violations of the Internal Revenue Code and a conspiracy to violate the Internal Revenue Code and charges in essence the sum of $990,000.00 is owed by the defendants in various sums to the Government because of tax liability for the fiscal years 1945 and 1946; and further that the defendants have only paid to the Government the sum of $16000 11 odd dollars as their liability for those particular years.

That case has been pending, in a sense, for four years. It is true that the indictments were returned in September. I personally was before the Grand Jury at various stages during February, March, April, May, July, August, September and October of 1952. That case has encompassed work by agents, work by the office of the United States Attorney. It has not been an easy case to prosecute in a sense that it has to go beyond the normal steps of investigation which are usually conducted by the office of the Internal Revenue; rather they had to call for assistance upon our office. Of such magnitude is that case that there are approximately 85 cartons of files, of records which are rather voluminous, to say the least. Further, the Government has had great difficulty in obtaining those books and records; such difficulty that I felt it was entirely within my rights to protect the interests which I represent, not in the category of arbitrary refusal to cooperate with this Court, but in first obtaining instructions from the Attorney General as to what course I was to pursue; and it is with the authority the Attorney General has given to me through his deputy Attorney General that I am here this morning to ask that this Court grant a stay of ninety days to a subpoena which was 12 served on our office in order that we may prosecute our case and not jeopardize that case. I might say this, on my trip to Washington on the 25th of November, that trip was only for the express purpose of acquainting the Department of Justice in Washington, the office of the Attorney General, with what was involved in New York. I think, as the Court can appreciate, that office, because, of its magnitude of work, knows that there is a case pending in a certain district in a certain United States Attorney's office, but what kind of case—what that case embraces, they do not know other than it might be a tax case, or fraud case, or other case. With that in mind I pointed out to the Attorney General what was involved and the Attorney General felt it was within his province to make this request to this Court. I don't feel it is an improper request or unreasonable one. It is not practical for one office to deliver a thousand miles to another office records which are needed in the prosecution in a different district. Without imputing anything to the defendants, that they would in any way attempt to destroy or lose any of the records—that is not in the mind of our office—and yet in traveling, it wouldn't be the first time, and I think Your Honor will appreciate, records were lost.

13 Certainly the defendants cannot be prejudiced by a continuance since they themselves have asked for it, and I have pointed out in my affidavit that counsel here, less than a week ago—rather two weeks ago asked a continuance of approximately six weeks, and I point out in my affidavit such is not unreasonable. And now counsel comes back with a motion and says, "Your Honor, we want to go to trial and we are willing to go to trial without examining the papers." I submit of course, counsel himself has pointed out he needs this time, and since the Government in no way wants to make the defendants go to trial without proper representation, without proper opportunity of examining all books and records, this is not an unreasonable request.

I therefore ask Your Honor a stay be granted concerning the subpoena for a period of ninety days.

Mr. Cunningham: If I may be heard just briefly.

I would like to call to the Court's attention certain events that transpired in Chicago prior to the time of the inspection of the books and records in New York. I believe that the order provided that the defendants in this case was to begin the examination of the books and records that were to be made available to them on November 5th. Mr. Krane, the special agent in this

14 case, has advised me that on October 30th, which was several days prior to November 5th, that he called Mr. O'Brien and told him that the records that were then in Chicago would be available and could be examined at that time. That advice was given, as I say, on October 30th. There was no appearance on behalf of the defendant, either on Thursday or Friday of that week, but on Monday, November 3rd, Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Sullivan called at Mr. Krane's office where there was a number of records and at that time they made a rather cursory examination of the records to see what records were there and what were to be examined. On the following day Mr. William Sullivan and Mr. George Sullivan called at Mr. Krane's office, that is on the 4th, prior to the date that they were to begin inspection, and did start examining, photostating or microfilming these records. That continued in the afternoon of November 4th and also continued on November 5th and the 6th, and I might say throughout this period Mr. Krane had offered his assistance to them in enabling them to decide and pick out what records were then available or what records would be of greatest benefit to them in order that it would expedite their consideration. As I understand it, the examination of the records that were then available at Chicago was completed on November 6th.

There appears to have been no appearance by any-15 body during the week of November 10th. Of course we did have the holiday that week and there was the hearing on the motion to suppress on the 12th and 13th, which was continued and concluded on November 21st. The first New York appearance, as I understand it, was on the evening of the 17th or the 18th of November. I understand there was an effort made by representatives of the defendants to appear in New York on the 17th but they had plane difficulties and could not get there until late that day. I know little about what happened in New York except as has been related by Mr. Leone.

As I stated to the Court heretofore, I am representing the Government in this case and assigned to try the case. Mr. Leone has, by his affidavit, requested a continuance in view of the pending cases in New York and the reasons for his request. Heretofore, and I believe it was just last week, Mr. O'Brien filed two motions, one motion was for a continuance commensurate with the time he said he lost in examination of the books and records in New York, and the other continuance was a continuance generally because he would not have time or did not have time to examine the records that were available. I might say to Your Honor I haven't seen them, but I understand they are voluminous and it comes as no 16 surprise that he states he needs adequate time to examine these records.

I want to state now that I have been authorized by the Attorney General to join in Mr. Leone's request that this matter be continued to such time as indicated in the affidavit of Mr. Leone, and that the defendants, at the conclusion of the New York cases, have at that time a time that they believe is commensurate with their necessities to examine those records. It presents a rather unusual situation. I have not had an opportunity to study the motion filed by Mr. O'Brien this morning. He did serve me with a rough draft.

Mr. O'Brien: The same as the printed one except for the last affidavit.

Mr. Cunningham: I have had no real opportunity to examine it and study it thoroughly, but I do want the Court to understand my authority here is to join in the request made by the Assistant United States Attorney for the District of New York.

The Court: In what way will an examination of these books impede the United States Attorney in New York from preparing for trial?

Mr. Cunningham: Do you desire me to answer that?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Cunningham: As I understand from Mr.
17 Leone, the books are of such type it will be necessary for him to be working on them in preparation of his case. I do not believe he stated it orally here today, but it is in his affidavit, that his case is set for trial for January 3rd. He advises me it is necessary for him, in view of the volume of the books and the extent thereof, that he have those books and examine them for preparation for his trial. I might say that it probably would be advisable if I also could examine those books for the purpose of trial, but I have not yet examined them, but I do have the benefit of the agents that have examined them and know of their contents, so I am not pleading that in my own behalf in that respect because I have been told what the books do contain. But as I understand it—have I stated your position correctly, Mr. Leone?

Mr. Leone: Not completely, but correctly, yes.

The Court: They are not going to remove them from your jurisdiction. All they are going to do is photostat or make such notations or take such other data that will enable them to obtain such evidence as they think is material from such books and records. Isn't that right?

Mr. Leone: In substance it may be, but may I point out the situation to Your Honor. First of all, there 18 are certain aspects of this case which are not public knowledge.

The Court: Of which case?

Mr. Leone: Of the case pending in New York. I only know of that case and I can only speak of that case. There was great difficulty in obtaining those books and records in this case. To give the background, first of all perhaps it might be necessary to tell who the defendants are in this case.

The Court: That difficulty will always be present, will it not?

Mr. Leone: It may and it may not. I think we will not find the difficulty in the Chicago case, because in the Chicago case, from what little I know of it, you have business men, responsible business men who are respected citizens in the community in the City of Chicago. I can't say the same for the members of the defendants in the New York case, and that is one of the things to which I am alluding. First of all there is involved a member who has been convicted for narcotics violation, of the Harrison Act. That same defendant has previously been arrested twenty times, including which, to the best of my knowledge, four or five of the arrests have been for homicide. However, there is still only that one conviction. The character and connections of that gentle-
19 man have been gone into rather thoroughly. I don't believe with his background I need to go into it to great extent to point out to the Court the whole of the examination.

Mr. O'Brien: Doesn't that appear in the Keafauver report?

Mr. Leone: Perhaps. I am only talking from what I know of the case pending before us in New York. Another gentleman has been indicted for making false statements to the R.F.C., causing the R.F.C. to disburse in excess of $600,000.00, and that—the means by which that was done was not by any corrupt officers in the Government, with their assisting him, but rather by using the means of preparing false statements showing the position of these companies to be other than it actually was, and going so far as to falsify previous years' income tax returns.

The Court: In what way is that going to be involved in the examination of these books by defendants' counsel?

Mr. Leone: In this way—I don't know that the defendants in the New York case are acquainted with the defendants in the Chicago case. I do know this, that as of this time the defendants in the New York case, who have been just as much in jeopardy as the defendants 20 in the Chicago case, have not made one move although the indictment has been pending against them for two months, to aid their defense. I don't impute anything to the defense counsel, but the defendants in the New York case are attempting to devise means of obtaining evidence which is in New York and which the Government intends to use in New York, and I have been told, without again imputing anything, that Mr. O'Brien, when he went to Puerto Rico to take depositions from Mr. Lubben was with Mr. Long at the airport. So without imputing anything, and I am not imputing anything, but I do say this, that I am attempting to protect a case that is of vital importance to the State of New York and to the Federal Government to have narcotic peddlers and people that are thieves attempting to use means to hurt the Government. That is why, Your Honor, I say I am attempting to protect. I did not wish to go this far in making my application. The Attorney General said if it had to be I could offer that to the Court.

I will say this, the defendants will stop at nothing because of the vital importance of the New York case, because of the characters involved. I say that case should be tried first and the Government so requests. These business men in Chicago, can wait their turn, and since counsel has himself pointed out that he wanted a 21 continuance I cannot see how he can object to any continuance in view of what I have said here in court this morning.

The Court: Mr. Cunningham, what assurance does this Court have there is going to be compliance of this Court's order if and when this Court does continue this matter?

Mr. Cunningham: May I add one thing before I answer Your Honor's question? I believe, although I have not talked to the Attorney General or the Deputy Attorney General personally about the matter—I get my directions secondhanded—but I believe that by reason of the persons involved in the New York case that the decision was made that I concur in the request of the United States Attorney's office in New York. I believe that has entered into their consideration.

Now, with respect to your question. I can only assure Your Honor that I will do everything within my power that as soon as those cases are ended, and Mr. Leone assures me that they will be heard in the very near future—that as soon as they are ended all these records will be made available forthwith as soon as the trial of those cases or the disposition of the cases otherwise than by trial is concluded, and I will assure you that I will give every power that I have with all the authority 22 that I can command to see that they have full and complete inspection of all the records. It has been called to my attention also by the Revenue Agent in this case and we certainly are not imputing anything to my honorable adversary, Mr. O'Brien or Mr. Kirby. I believe they are quite honorable and outstanding members of the legal profession of the City of Chicago, but there have been direct associations with counsel in this case with those involved in the New York case. I say it was called to my attention by the agents in this case, so I believe that Mr. Leone does have some apprehension about certain information being made available to the defendants in those cases as a result of the examination of the books and records in this case.

The Court: I suppose those defendants would have a right to obtain the books and records upon appropriate motion?

Mr. Cunningham: I am sure—I imagine they would. They have not see fit at this time to make such motion. I understand that they have up until December 9th to file appropriate motions and today is December 3rd and they have made no such motion.

The Court: They could obtain the same information that the defendants in the Shotwell case are now assuming to obtain.

23 Mr. Cunningham: That may be possible. They have not done so and if they sought to do so I cannot be sure what the Court of New York might do in that regard. I assume in view of Rules 16 and 17-C and the Bowman Dairy case that those matters would be made available, but it would be mere speculation on my part as to what the orders of that Court might be.

The Court: Let me hear from Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. O'Brien: May I ask first, Judge, whether the condition of your plans are the same now as they were in September. Some of the things I have to say I can drop, if I know.

The Court: I am not so sure as to just what you are now referring to.

Mr. O'Brien: At the time the case was first set Your Honor said that you were unavailable in January and that in February you had an anti-trust suit set.

The Court: That situation still prevails but I have given some thought to trying to work out a plan that if there was a continuance here that I would try to obtain some date in February; though I confess I haven't made any definite arrangements to have anybody else take up the anti-trust lawsuit that has been set for February 9th. But I think if there was to be continuance, I would continue it to sometime in the latter part 24 of February and that I would do everything I could to get through with this matter. I am very anxious to have this matter out of the way expeditiously and it disturbs me a great deal to have these continuances. It not only disrupts my plans but I don't think it is a proper way to handle a lawsuit.

Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, sir.

I want to ask for the record whether Mr. Leone had his authority through the deputy Attorney General Malone to appear and make this motion. You said the deputy Attorney General. I don't know which one.

Mr. Cunningham: There is only one, Ross J. Malone.

Mr. O'Brien: Now, just a little on the facts, because I think they have been scrambled up here.

In the first place, on the papers in New York which Mr. Leone referred to as 85 cartons, he omitted to say that there were subpoenaed late in September the books and records of some twelve corporations and partnerships going to make up those 85 cartons, in most of which I haven't the slightest interest. They pertain to sugar companies, jelly companies, other companies that we have nothing whatsoever to do with. We have nothing to do with them at all; except that one of those defendants,

Giglio was a partner with Lubben for a limited
25 period in Eatsum Food Products Company, a partnership, and it is only in respect of such records that were taken from that partnership and that are in New York in the United States Attorney's office that we are interested in at all. And we have seen, it is true, what is in his office, and he does not have books and records as such of that partnership, but merely a great volume of sales slips, invoices, and papers of that kind which we can never get anywhere with without first seeing the books. You start with the books, get the items in question, and trace them back to the supporting data. But over in the Treasury office on Broadway, wherever it is, the Intelligence office, over which he admits and we know the fact is he has no jurisdiction, are all of the records of the proprietorship General Confections, Incorporated, Reserve Trading Corporation, except for the few which were moved to Chicago long ago and which, as they say, we already in Chicago at that time.

Now, it is not just Mr. Leone's papers. When we go to the Treasury Mr. Twohig and all the other gentlemen mentioned in the affidavit, they say no, and the last time that we were there, last Friday, Mr. Christoph had to go over to Mr. Leone's office to see Mr. Twohig and when he got over there they said that they were working on the books and records in the Intelligence
26 Unit in New York and we would not be permitted to look at them until next Thursday. That is tomorrow. So that from the date of the entry of these orders, October 31st, we have seen nothing except the limited material in Chicago, and my affidavit says what that is. Lest you get any idea that the material in Chicago will suffice or is anything but a sketchy amount of the total which is required.

Assuredly I talked to Long. Long is an attorney who was in the United States Attorney's office in New Jersey. He is one of the people indicted. As I say in my papers, before we took the depositions and before we applied to you for the discovery orders we had to find out where the papers of these different companies were and when we went to Bercu, who was formerly an auditor for Lubben's company, he said Giglio had part of these papers. We got hold of him to see whether he did or not and it was then that we found out that some of the papers were taken from Giglio, I mean of the Eatsum Food Products partnership and delivered to the Grand Jury but that in September there were certain others which he had not turned over and which Judge Sylvester Ryan in the United States District Court, by order, recognized his privilege to continue to hold, and we have been very much interested not only in those few papers of that partnership but also the other companies with which Giglio 27 and some of these people ever had anything to do.

We have gone every place we could to find all of those records and we traced them right down to the end and everything that is available ends up on Broadway in the Intelligence Unit and Mr. Leone's office or in Chicago with Mr. Krane and Mr. Malone. Those we have, nothing else.

My affidavit shows how they are material.

Now, Judge, I heard of this. This is an independent thing. I wrote you a letter Saturday after I learned of the refusal when I got back from Washington Friday night. I had seen Mr. Rothwacks. I tried to get something. He said that they would turn over the papers, but right in New York. He said you have Thanksgiving, but be in New York on Friday. We couldn't get any papers. Saturday I wrote you because I am concerned about the trial December 9th, and I wasn't going to ask for any continuance to get ready. We have taken literally what you said about that trial. I never made a motion for a general continuance. I thought of it but when we got through November 13th with that part of the documents here, as my affidavit shows, I had a full conference with all of the defendants and they unanimously directed me not to appear for a continuance but to get along with whatever the auditors could give us within the three weeks' time. That was on the 14th of November, 28 from then until December 8th. We would not have the stuff for cross-examination, but we would have it for our case, such as it was, and we decided we would rather get along with that than ask for a continuance.

But when I couldn't get those papers I had to make a motion. I didn't make it on any broader basis, the time that I wanted in days, than I could, and only that, and surely that was fair and it was necessary. Then we don't get that. It was Monday. You said December 9th. I objected to the date. I didn't see how it was physically possible to do it the way we wanted, but everything that we can do has been done. We are ready in this case. We are just waiting for the books and we tried and tried and tried.

They knew that this matter was set for December 1st. They don't want to ask for a continuance. They never told us as late as Friday that Mr. Rothwacks, Mr. Kirby and I conferred with the prosecution, that they would do anything but turn over this stuff. He didn't say in New York he was authorized to come here and ask for a stay. Mr. Leone has no standing here. The plaintiff does not make this motion. Mr. Snyder doesn't make it. He is served with the subpoena. I have the original subpoena here with the return on it. Mr. Snyder is served.

Mr. McGranery is served, because I wanted those 29 papers here at the trial. I have to have them unless you make some pre-trial determination to the contrary, and even then I have to see what those papers look like—not all, but just this small part of the records that are not even in Mr. Leone's office, and I want the jury to see those sheets, I want to check them against our compilations. They would be under court custody in the United States Attorney's office, not with me. They would be under the protective orders of this Court while they are here, coming and going.

Now they come in here, not the plaintiff, not Mr. Snyder, not Mr. McGranery, but Mr. Leone—and he doesn't say so in the affidavit but he tells you orally that he is authorized, and Mr. Cunningham doesn't say in any affidavit that he is authorized, but this morning he goes along with that motion.

How about the priority in this thing? Your indictment was returned in March; theirs in September. Not only is their case not at issue but, as affirmatively appears in their affidavit, the preliminary motions have not yet been filed and are not due until December 15th or December 10th. You can't read that affidavit and decide their case is even set for trial January 3rd. They say Judge McGohey will be there January 3rd to dispose of criminal cases. He hasn't set it for trial. How could he do 30 any such thing when he hasn't even the papers—hasn't even passed on motions they are going to put in? Yet they say this Court should hold up the matter in this connection when the only point of contact we have is that one out of twelve companies, and that is the partnership. I say there isn't the slightest showing why they should take precedence over us. I do not and these defendants do not want to be relegated to a trial in March or at any great distance off. Neither do we want to be tried on the 9th without the time to look in the papers. I am urging an objection it would be an unfair trial. I have thought about it and thought about it and I was thinking Saturday and Sunday and I interposed because this affidavit only corroborates what I said there, that they deliberately have refrained from complying with the orders for their own purposes. I surmised the purpose and here Monday, yesterday morning, independently, without ever seeing my letter, Mr. Leone is in town, in Chicago, preparing this affidavit which says in effect just what I said.

Now, sure, you can put this case over until February or March. If I am right and my defendants are right in their judgment, that will hurt us. My reasons are my own. We are entitled to a reasonably quick trial, subject only to our right to have the papers. We have 31 been entitled to that. You set a time. Are we to go over there? Should this Court permit that kind of action on its orders? I know of cases, I have seen them in Chicago, where there has been for a lot less reason very summary action taken by the courts. I know of Rule 48(b). I don't know anything about criminal cases. This is the first one I was ever in, but Rule 48(b) entitles you, in your discretion, if you think that the action of the Government is delaying this trial, to dismiss this case, the authority, 163 Fed. 2nd, in the District of Columbia, and the cited cases show that you have the power to do that. It would not be error to do it. Your orders have to be vindicated. Either you have to do something like that, I respectfully submit, or you would have to say that they have no such precedence in their case; that you will not be relegated to a time like that, but will have a reasonable time between now and the end of January or the first of February, or something of that kind, but on condition not that there be a promise or assurance but on condition that the papers actually be made available so that we see them and have them and have them at the trial under your protective authority, or else it being plain that they are refusing, that they are holding up this case, then such a motion should be seriously entertained and granted. But there surely should be no continuance of this matter on any promise except on the actual production of the papers, opportunity to us to copy them and be prepared for trial whenever that date is set. I say that they are in this indefensible position and we feel it. It is not any individual. It is the Government. It is not Mr. Ryan. It is not Mr. Cunningham. I don't know who it is. But however the Government functions, somewhere up there is a balance and control and they decide what they are going to do. But there is nothing unclear about the order of this Court as to all of the papers in New York. In Chicago it covers as to the United States Attorney, but when it gets to New York your order says that the plaintiff, through the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, is within two days to notify us where the papers are, the remaining papers, by letter, and that the United States, not Mr. Leone; not Mr. Cunningham; but the United States shall forthwith produce those papers at the places indicated for our inspection and examination. They have not done it. There is no ambiguity. They say, as my prior motion sets up, that these papers were not taken by persons that Mr. Leone had. He come back with a certified copy of the petition and the order of the Judge, Judge Sylvester Ryan, which shows the picture clearly as to a partnership. I set up in my present affidavit that they got through process all of the books and records from the receivership in New Jersey of General Confections. I set up they got the properitorship records of Eatsum Food Products, the proprietorship, not the partnership, from the accountant of the company, through special agents Cordes and Twohig, that they came in and took them from the accountant, as I found out in my examination. They have got them. The United States was ordered to make them available forthwith. They push and push and push the thing around.

Now we know that we will get a fair trial before this Court but I don't think that the Government should be permitted to act in this way. There should be a decisive plan and fixed order as far as the dignity of the Court requires and whatever in its judgment is proper.

We ask for the dismissal of the case. There are some people who would dismiss the case. I don't know how Your Honor feels about it, but I know that if that motion is denied and we ask that this affidavit be stricken or that you not permit it to be filed, whichever way it is handled. But if our motion is denied I say, while I am on my feet here, that there should not be any long continuance nor should there be any continuance without the condition precedent of the actual production of the records and if they are not then produced the Court 34 should act accordingly.

Mr. Cunningham: May I be heard briefly in reply? I might state, Your Honor, in the matter of the affidavit. Mr. O'Brien says that there is nothing before the Court. I will at this time make an oral, such oral motion that the matter be continued in the manner which is stated in the affidavit; that in support of the motion the affidavit may also be considered.

I would like to state to the Court that it was not the intention of the Government to maneuver Mr. O'Brien into filing a motion for a continuance. Mr. O'Brien, I believe, stated that only one motion for a continuance was made and that was for a short period, commensurate with the time he lost. It was my understanding, Your Honor, that two motions were filed.

Mr. O'Brien: One supplanted the other.

Mr. Cunningham: I have copies of only two motions and in the one motion it is for a time comparable to what was lost and the other motion I have here is one for a general continuance.

Mr. O'Brien: That was expressly for the purpose of continuing generally to enable us to, on appropriate motion having to do with the non-compliance. That is this one, in the alternative.

Mr. Cunningham: I understood both motions had 35 been filed, and for any technical objection that Mr. O'Brien has stated I also would like the record to show that the plaintiff in this case moves—will move orally at this time that the case be continued generally.

The Court: What have you to say, Mr. Cunningham, about Mr. O'Brien's suggestion that if there is going to be a continuance it should be conditioned upon some specific provisions that the books and records mentioned should be made available to defendants within a certain period of time? What have you to say about that?

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, I think that has been one of the fears of Mr. Leone. He stated his position, that he fears that certain information that he has might be available to the defendants in his case and in that way imperil his case. He has asked me to let him be heard on your question.

The Court: May I call this to your attention? When this order was entered—I don't remember all the details, but if my memory serves me right, Mr. Ryan fully approved the order. It was not an order that the Court adopted without Mr. Ryan's approval and Mr. Ryan has at all times recognized that these books and records come within the scope of the Court's order. I signed an order agreeable to Mr. Ryan. There is a dispute about the books and records. Mr. Ryan recognizes they come 36 within the ambit of my order and consequently we have this situation. Now, New York is a very busy court as I well know because I sat there on two different occasions. This matter may not be tried down in New York for six months. Of course Mr. Leone knows far better than I the congested condition of the calendar in New York. If the Court continues this matter generally, where are we? How are we going to dispose of the matter on some general continuance without a specific date?

Mr. Leone: May I be heard?

The Court: I would like to have Mr. Cunningham answer that.

Mr. Cunningham: I have talked to Mr. Leone about it and he indicates he believes these defendants—his case would go to trial in January of 1953 and that the nature of this case it would last a matter of some three weeks. As I understand it the cases will be joined and be heard as one and it is anticipated that they will, because of the nature of the offenses, and the nature of the business engaged in, that that case would probably be completed in February. In view of that this affidavit sets a ninety-day period and that will give the defendants what they believe and which I do not object to, adequate time to examine the books and records after the conclusion of that case until this case is set for trial, and I think 37 these ninety days was determined in that way.

Mr. O'Brien: That will take us at least three weeks.

The Court: Mr. Leone, you wanted to say something?

Mr. Leone: The only thing I wish to state, Judge Knox assigned Judge McGohey to try this case. In other words, Judge Knox has deemed it of such importance he is going to see it is moved speedily to trial, as speedily as can be without prejudicing the defendants.

As to some of Mr. O'Brien's remarks, may I make one statement? Mr. O'Brien has stated, and perhaps rightfully so, I have no standing before this Court. If Mr. O'Brien feels that way now then how can he complain when I read that order and I felt I had no standing and I was not the plaintiff? I felt when I read that order, I said at that time that I had no standing and therefore the order did not apply.

One additional fact, Mr. O'Brien said he saw Mr. Long, and I don't doubt that for one moment. But I do say this, there are certain matters which have come to my attention previously concerning where the Government in the case in New York obtained the books and records they have been attempting to find that out and as to means which have been used to determine what wit-
38 nesses have been before the Grand Jury and I say Mr. O'Brien must have been in communication with those people.

The Court: Mr. Cunningham, is it your idea this case should be continued for a period of ninety days?

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct.

The Court: Then do you recognize if I continue it for a period of ninety days that the order should provide that within a certain period prior to the date of trial that these books should be made available to the defendants, regardless of the then situation in the New York trial?

Mr. Cunningham: I think perhaps Your Honor should—

The Court: Does Mr. Leone recognize that?

Mr. Leone: I recognize it and I will go one step further and I now state to this Court as to all records which are located within the confines of the Southern District of New York I will assist in permitting the defendants to examine those records, with the exception of any of the records which are vital to the prosecution in New York. The defendants will be permitted to examine as to the individual proprietorships, the research trading, if I am not mistaken, and General Confections, and this leaves only one item. As Mr. O'Brien stated a few minutes ago, if this Court would grant an adjournment until March 9th for the production—adjourn until March 9th I believe there would be production of these records prior to that date and they could examine all the records, and if they need—if they get some of them by February 25th or so, they can examine the rest and if we are not able to go to trial, then of course we will be put in the position where we will have to comply.

The Court: Did you make some limitation on the statement that you made?

Mr. Leone: Yes, the only limitation I made is that we turn over to them all the records except those which will be used in the prosecution in New York.

The Court: What about the documents that are vital to the prosecution in New York? They may also be vital—

Mr. Leone: May I say this: Defendants can go in and examine all the records in New York. That would be a small amount of records, as Mr. O'Brien put it. As to those so-called additional records that the Government relies on, they need certain additional time prior to the hearing, so that by, as I understand, the 1st of March, they should be given adequate time. The others they can examine in February.

Mr. O'Brien: Are those at the Treasury or at your office?

Mr. Leone: I believe they are in both places.

Mr. Kirby: The basic proposition that Mr. Leone puts forth is one that has been passed upon by a couple of cases. In the language of one of these courts they keep certain of the records in obscurity, is the language that is used, and we wish certain of these records not be looked at or seen until a prosecution in which they are vitally interested in in New York proceeds. In United States vs. Andolschek, 142 Fed. 2nd, 503, they say, "So far as they directly touch the criminal dealings, the prosecution necessarily ends any confidential character the documents may possess; it must be conducted in the open, and will lay bare their subject matter. The Government must choose; either it must leave the transactions in the obscurity from which a trial will draw them, or it must expose them fully. Nor does it seem to us possible to draw any line between documents whose contents bears directly upon the criminal transactions, and those which may be only indirectly relevant. Not only would such a distinction be extremely difficult to apply in practice but the same reasons which forbid suppression in one case forbid it in the other, though not, perhaps, quite so imperatively."

So the Courts have held that if the Government
41 refuses to produce its documents it is proper, and indeed required for a court to dismiss the prosecution.

Your Honor asked the question whether or not there should not be a condition, and indeed these cases all hold that if it is not complied with there should be a dismissal. So to go directly to Your Honor's question should there not be a condition, I think unquestionably, and Mr. O'Brien does to, and the cases all says so—there is a number of them—that it would certainly be proper to provide that if they did not turn over these documents the prosecution would be dismissed.

We have a series of cases.

The Court: I will be glad to go over that with more—

Mr. Kirby: The Government is put to that position. It either turns—it produces the documents or the prosecution must be dismissed.

Mr. Leone: We intend to produce them before trial and give the defendants adequate time to examine them.

The Court: I understand now it is the position of the Government that the documents that are not now imminent in the New York trial are going to be made available to you in such time as you may desire to examine them or photograph them. The documents that are 42 crucial in the New York trial will not be available to you now but will be made available to you a reasonable time before such continuance date as the Court now has in mind.

Mr. Leone: That is correct.

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct.

The Court: Well, gentlemen, not that I want to foreclose any further argument, but we have a jury here and we are in the middle of a trial and I can state now that Mr. O'Brien's motion for dismissal will be denied; that I will continue the matter to some date in the future and will file a formal order to that effect so that counsel will know that the matter will not go to trial on December 9th. It undoubtedly will not go to trial for some appreciable date after that date, but I am unable now to determine just what the date will be. It may be that I will continue it for a period of about ninety days. The exact date I will give you in a formal order and also will indicate such conditions as I think are proper in the order.

Mr. Leone: May I thank you for the courtesy of appearing before you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken and counsel again appeared before the Court at 12:30 o'clock P.M. the same day, and the following proceedings were had:)

Mr. Kirby: And not only is the question which 43 Your Honor will decide by your order as to when the material will be available, but there also are questions as to what material should be turned over and this seemed like an appropriate time to mention that so that when you write the order, as to what shall be turned over.

I call to Your Honor's attention, in your paragraph 4—first of all the order says that there shall be turned over to the defendants items which will be used as exhibits in the trial against them. Of course in the nature of a trial of this type there will be certain exhibits which will be presented which are computations of the amounts of money which the Government says were earned by these defendants. That we conceive not to be work product of the attorneys.

The Court: You can do that as well as the Government.

Mr. Kirby: I beg your pardon?

The Court: You can make such computations as well as the Government men.

Mr. Kirby: The order provides that if it is intended—if they intend to offer it in evidence against us that it shall be made available. Now they say that they do not need to turn over anything which is a computation or a recapitulation or summary bit of evidence.

The Court: The evidence, of course, is to be found
44 in the general records. The computations are merely to aid in the understanding of what the books and records disclose. There isn't any reason why you should expect to have the benefit of the work that may be done by Government auditors when you are equipped to obtain that same information and make the same computations from the books and records which will be made available to you.

Mr. Kirby: Well, let me say two things about that. In the first place, out of the welter and the letters, literally thousands of them, the Government has elected to charge certain transactions and they always, as I understand it and as I have often seen in court, they offer in evidence a sheet and that sheet is supposedly the result of their accountant's studies and conclusions and they offer that in evidence against us, and quite commonly it is admitted in evidence as a piece of paper, as an affirmative piece of evidence usable against us. It is true, as Your Honor says, that it is conditional upon—its validity is conditioned upon the true representations in the original books and they only can introduce such summary if we are allowed to cross-examine with respect to the original books. But in so enormously complicated case as this it is proper, we believe, that if they have already prepared a piece of evidence which they intend to 45 offer against us it be made available to us so that we can, in the course of our study of these books, make any checks. Your Honor will appreciate having such a big volume of documents as that to check against the books and records the minute that he gets finished with his direct examination, Your Honor can appreciate. I understand both by agent Krane and the United States Attorney in Chicago that there are other items in them, ascertained, which the Government would adduce in evidence at the trial and such items, whatever they may be, have not been made available. They, we think, should be told not only that they should produce the documents but that all the documents including those that they have now determined that they intend to offer in evidence shall be made available to us. Your order said it should be done November 5th, but it has not been done yet. We wanted to make it plain. We didn't come back this noon to consume your time or to reargue the things this morning. It is only these things being called to Your Honor's attention, in a manner, let us say, that you might have it clearly in mind, that that remained to be decided by you. Of course I may be in error in the argument I make, but it is not so easy for all of us to get together. We need these work papers. Let me say this, as far as the Eatsum Food partnership is concerned, that is important, and as far as that is concerned the records that we have 46 here and what they say they indicate, that is purely reconstruction by the Government accountants. That is the very essence of their evidence on that. We should be able to learn what the charges against us are based on.

The Court: What have you to say about that?

Mr. Cunningham: Such work sheets, such computations will be made but those things are the work product of the Government agency. I haven't yet decided in what manner I intend to introduce that, whether I intend merely to introduce it verbally or to introduce the summaries. I haven't yet reached that in the case, and that such work papers, whether or not produced in the course of the trial, I say they aren't, have not been prepared and will not be prepared, that is items we saw go to make up net income that was unreported in this case. We have not yet prepared those summaries, but I intend to have them prepared, but I still feel they are the work product of the agents.

The second matter Mr. Kirby referred to was the matter of—was also work product, the reconstruction of the books and records which will be made available to the defendants.

The Court: What do you mean by reconstruction?

Mr. Cunningham: We are going to attempt to determine from the books and records what took place.
47 Mr. O'Brien: That is not my understanding. I understand there is a portion of it, like ledger sheets and journal sheets and things like that, which are unavailable.

Mr. Cunningham: They are unavailable to us.

Mr. O'Brien: That is right. Therefore they have to recreate something out of the materials they have at hand that will stand in lieu of those and that is the reconstruction.

The Court: What do you mean unavailable to you?

Mr. Cunningham: They are records lost, destroyed or we have never seen all of those.

Mr. O'Brien: And we haven't either.

Mr. Cunningham: Certain records have disappeared. There are some original documents and other papers that are available. The agents are going to try to attempt to reconstruct the books and records that have disappeared from everybody. I believe that they will have the same source material to make that reconstruction, which has not yet been made, as we will attempt to make. We don't know now if we can make it, but we are going to attempt to do so from the fundamental records, from which the records were first produced but they are not now available to anybody.

The Court: These so-called reconstructed records,
48 do you assume that you will be able to lay sufficient foundation they will be received in evidence?

Mr. Cunningham: Based on all the miscellany of documents that are available to go into the reconstruction of the records, we hope to be able to do so.

The Court: What have you to say about counsel's position that he can't know all the sources you are going to rely on and the data you may assume to utilize; that they should be informed and have an opportunity to see the reconstruction you are going to offer as an exhibit a reasonable time prior to the trial.

Mr. Cunningham: We don't know if we can reconstruct it.

The Court: I am assuming now you do.

Mr. Cunningham: We are going to make an effort at reconstruction.

The Court: What have you to say as to the rights of the defendants to see such an exhibit a reasonable time prior to the trial.

Mr. Cunningham: I believe that that itself, the reconstruction, would be the work product from the same basic information that they have available to do the same thing, to see if our reconstruction is proper. They have the same basic material and information available to them, the same basic material we will use in such an effort.

49 The Court: I am not clear what your basic material is.

Mr. O'Brien: I want to say on the record here, as I did in my letter to you of November 17th, and as we do in the motion, that we were advised that such a reconstruction has already been made. We were advised by agent Sam Krane. I am telling you what we were—we understand that this already exists, and was made by the agents prior to the indictment and not under the direction of the United States Attorney and that therefore within the meaning of the Hickman case and within the meaning of Your Honor's order it is not work product.

The Court: I haven't made any order which defines work product.

Mr. Cunningham: It does not define but it says attorney's work product.

The Court: Have you a copy of that order?

Mr. Cunningham: Yes, sir.

The Court: I don't know whether I am in a position to make any ruling at this time unless I am informed what the Government has done in this regard.

Mr. Cunningham: Mr. Krane has advised me he has not made such reconstruction.

Mr. Krane: And I never so advised counsel. I said we were going to attempt to.

50 Mr. Cunningham: Whether such reconstruction will be admissible, we don't know that, but we are going to try to make an effort to try to so reconstruct.

Mr. O'Brien: You have a specific figure in the bill of particulars and I understood that that came from a reconstruction by Mr. Krane.

The Court: Counsel, I don't know that we are able to thrash out this matter now. Mr. Cunningham tells me that they haven't any such exhibit available, and when and if they will have it available and the nature of it and the circumstances of making up such exhibit is too indefinite to make any ruling on. I don't see how I can make any definitive ruling now on that. If and when the evidence obtained by the Government through their efforts in trying to reconstruct certain data is available, I assume that question will have to be presented, unless counsel have some other suggestion in that regard.

Mr. Cunningham: The only thing I know, once we make our effort I would be glad to advise defense counsel that we have or have not been able to so reconstruct, and then let him move at that time for consideration.

The Court: You see, you have two different situations. You have books and records of various types and character. Now they are made available to the defendants, we will say. You have made certain exhibits from 51 such books and records. Well, I say to the defendants, "You can do the same thing. Why capitalize on the work of the Government auditors?" That is one thing.

On the other hand, if you make up certain exhibits from certain unknown sources that you have access to and you are reconstructing data that are not available to the defendant, they don't know what you are utilizing. If we have ledgers and account books and checkbooks and what not and we make up certain data by way of clarification and simplification, sure I say to the defendant, "You do the same thing." But if you make up certain exhibits from certain intangibles that the defendants don't know what they are and you may be able to lay foundation when you get to court by reason of oral testimony or what not, but the defendants will have no opportunity of meeting that testimony without having the benefit of the reconstruction figures that you are going to introduce. Isn't there some merit to my observation as to the difference between these two situations?

Mr. Cunningham: And we intend to make all basic information available to them. As long as we are reconstructing those they will have the same opportunity to reconstruct from the basic evidence.

The Court: The so-called reconstruction that may be based on data other than books and records, re-
52 ferring to the Eatsum Company.

Mr. Cunningham: Eatsum partnership. That is my understanding. Isn't that true? Certain of the records have disappeared and we are going to attempt to reconstruct them based on the basic documents that are available and will be available to the defendants.

The Court: You say all of the basic documents are those which will be made available to the defendants?

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct.

The Court: Are you going to make or attempt to make reconstruction of other data which are not made available to defendants?

Mr. Cunningham: We are not.

The Court: Well, Mr. O'Brien has indicated part of those records have been destroyed.

Mr. Cunningham: We will use no data which will not be made available to the defendants. They can do the same job of reconstruction. I have always felt the Government should not supply them the results of their investigative information. They can go to the same source.

The Court: That has always been my view. No hardship is placed upon the defendant if they are afforded the same opportunity to make up exhibits and schedules and what not that is made available to the Government.

You may read Hickman versus Taylor many ways and 53 it will support many theories and I don't know that it lends much aid to us in this type of a situation.

I think all I can say to you now is this, Mr. Cunningham will make known to the defendants, if and when such reconstructed data has been accumulated either by counsel or by the Government auditors, and if and when that takes place I will afford counsel an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. Kirby: One reason why we are particularly anxious about it, Judge, is this. As these people have indicated, the transactions were very large and many of them are simply checks to cash. If all of the checks to cash were to be charged to these defendants, these were checks to cash that were cashed in New York. If all of those were charged to these, one looks just like another, but the total in this case would be enormous if none of them should be completely exculpated. Now, if one document looks like the other, each check being to cash and each check being cashed in New York; they are going to exercise power of selection which may or may not be sound. In order to be able to meet that type of a case—we will not be in a position to know what to meet. We need to know which ones do they say belong to us, and which ones belong to this case in New York. Where they are charging $900,- 54 000.00 to these hoodlums, these checks are going to be charged to one or the other, and we have to know which the Government is charging to us before we can take any defensive action.

The Court: To be entirely frank with you, I don't suppose I do comprehend your problem or the Government's problem.

Mr. Kirby: The man that makes decisions they are going to charge us with these things, we ought to be advised.

The Court: I have Mr. Cunningham's statement when and if such reconstructed data or exhibits have been devised or made up by the Government agents or the Government attorneys he will promptly notify you of that and you may make such motion in respect thereto as you desire and I then will come to Chicago and give counsel an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. Kirby: That relates to all the questions, is that right.

Mr. Cunningham: All the questions that are involved in this case.

Mr. Kirby: That is fine.

Mr. Cunningham: I might say this, although we use the basic material, there will be certain oral evidence of witnesses that will have to testify about the results of what we have determined.

55 The Court: I am afraid we will be doing nothing more than some shadow boxing now.

I certify the foregoing is a true and complete transcript of the shorthand notes taken by me at the above time and place.

MOTION

The defendants, by Vincent O'Brien, their attorney, move that the Court, pursuant to its inherent power and pursuant to Rule 48(b) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, dismiss the indictment herein on the ground that because of plaintiff's noncompliance with the orders of the Court entered October 31, 1952, there has been unnecessary delay in the trial of the above-entitled cause; and in support of their motion they submit the affidavits of Vincent O'Brien, George D. Sullivan, Jr., and John A. Lynch and John R. Christoph, Jr. hereto attached.

202 In further support hereof, they adopt and by reference make a part hereof the motion filed by the defendants November 24, 1952, and the affidavit attached in support of said latter motion.

AFFIDAVIT.

Vincent O'Brien, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the attorneys for the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of their foregoing motion for the dismissal of the indictment, and says:

1. That the subject matter of the orders entered by the Court on October 31, 1952, pursuant to defendants' mo' ons made under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, is indispensable to the conduct of the defense of this case, in that, as will more fully appear from the record of this cause, both the first and second counts of the indictment herein charge an attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the taxes due and owing by the defendant corporation by the filing of returns which allegedly understated the net income of the corpora-
204 tion for the years 1945 and 1946, and the plaintiff's bill of particulars avers that $177,146.23 of income for the year 1945 was unreported, and that such income resulted from the failure of the defendant corporation to record on its books and to report in its income tax returns for the calendar year 1945 the receipt of over invoice premium payments on sales of merchandise, which receipts allegedly were derived from Eatsum Food Products Co., a sole proprietorship, and its successor company, Eatsum Food Products Co., a partnership, both then located in New York City, New York. As to the year 1946, said bill of particulars avers unstated income of $323,573.29 in its entirety allegedly to have resulted from the failure of the defendant corporation to record on its books and to report on its income tax return for the year 1946, the sum of $212,315.56 in over invoice premium payments on sales of merchandise allegedly received in part from General Confections, Inc., a corporation, in New York City, New York, and from Reserve Trading Corporation, New York City, New York, together with the sum of $111,257.73, allegedly received from General Confections, Inc., from unrecorded sales. That all of the books, records, papers and documents of said proprietorship and of said General Confections, Inc., are, and at the time of the entry of said orders were, in the possession of the plaintiff and that some of the documents and papers of Eatsum Food Products Co., a partnership, were at said time in the possession of the plaintiff, and that affiant was informed by an agent of the plaintiff, Mr. Sam Krane, of the Intelligence Unit, that the books and records of said partnership had been reconstructed by the plaintiff in the course of investigation preceding the return of the indictment in this proceeding. The inventory made by defendants' auditors of the items submitted to them previously in New York City pursuant to the Court's orders of October 31, 1952, did not include the books and records of General Confections, Inc., but affiant avers the fact to be that said books and records were surrendered to the plaintiff by or through the receiver of General Confections, Inc. early in the year 1949 in proceedings in the case of Harry M. Simon, Inc., a corporation, complainant, and General Confections, Inc., a corporation, defendant, in the Chancery Courts of the State of New Jersey, numbered 158-522; and that affiant was informed by the accountants for said General Confections, Inc. that the books and records of Eatsum Food Products Co., a sole proprietorship, then in his custody, were taken from his office by representatives of the plaintiff in the month of September, 1948, by Agents Twohig and Cordes.

Affiant avers that the figures set forth in the bill of particulars are based upon the books and records, papers and documents of the companies mentioned in the Court's orders of October 31, 1952, and that the witnesses, David G. Lubben, Beatrice Feldman, and Bernard Bercu, as will more fully appear from the depositions now on file with the Clerk of this Court, show that the alleged premium payments are allegedly all carried into and made a part of said books and records of the respective companies, aforesaid, according to a set method and pattern by each of said witnesses described upon the said depositions. Defendants deny receipt of said payments as averred, and neither they nor affiant believe that said books, records, papers and documents reflect such payments, and that if they do, they were made long after the event, contrary to the facts and at the direction of the said David G. Lubben, for the purpose of avoiding payment of taxes for which he would be liable because of the large amount of cash charged to him upon the books and records of said companies. Although affiant in and about the preparation of this case for trial has procured, or has been furnished evidence tending to support the belief of him-

206 self and of the defendants, as aforesaid, it was and is essential that all of the items mentioned in said orders be made available as directed to enable the defendants to check them against such evidence and also to enable them otherwise to test the veracity and authenticity and accuracy of said records.

2. The data admittedly made available to the defendants through the United States Attorney and through Special Agent Sam Krane in Chicago early in the month of November, hereinafter mentioned, did not include any materials on Eatsum Foods Products Co., a partnership, and as to the remaining companies, consisted only of certain invoices, papers, documents, checks and partial ledger and journal sheets relating solely to Shotwell Manufacturing Company and to certain other persons or companies in Chicago, and did not include the books, records, documents and papers of the companies generally so as to enable the defendants to ascertain the amount of cash which was available to the said Lubben, the overall disposition of said cash, the supporting papers in reference thereto, nor the actual and original ledger and journal sheets for examination not only as to the overall picture, but as to their authenticity and validity. All of the items mentioned in said orders, with the exception of the narrow and limited portion made available in Chicago aforesaid, are in New York, primarily at the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and as to the residue, in the possession of Assistant United States Attorney

Leone in the United States Attorney's office for the Southern District of New York.

3. Affiant caused inquiry to be made of the United States Attorney at Chicago as to whether any of the papers in New York at the time of the entry of said orders were thereafter brought to Chicago, and was told that only eighteen or nineteen checks were so brought to 207 Chicago, of which copies were thereupon furnished to affiant's representative; but that no other items mentioned in said orders had been transferred from New York to Chicago since the date of the entry of said orders.

4. Affiant's letter of November 17, 1952 (Exhibit A to the defendants' motion filed November 24, 1952), as well as said motion itself, refers to certain items which plaintiff, under erroneous claim that they are work product within the meaning of the orders of October 31, 1952, was withholding from the defendants, and affiant avers that plaintiff continues to withhold said items; and also that although the orders of October 31, 1952, require that all evidence to be adduced by the plaintiff at the trial be furnished to the defendants by November 5, 1952, that that has not yet been done, because early in November of 1952, when Agent Sam Krane turned over the papers aforesaid, it was asserted, both by him and by the United States Attorney at Chicago, that there were other items, not then ascertained, which the Government would adduce in evidence at the trial; but affiant avers that since said time, such items, whatever they may be, have not been made available, but that only the said eighteen or nineteen checks, aforesaid, have been given to the defendants since.

5. That on Sunday, November 23, 1952, affiant mailed the motion of the defendants, aforesaid, filed November 24, 1952. On November 24, 1952, at 2:35 o'clock in the afternoon, Edward J. Ryan, First Assistant United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, advised affiant that the Deputy Attorney General informed him that he had directed that the records in New York be made available for inspection to the defendants; that they would not be moved to Chicago, but that the defendants might proceed immediately to continue to or resume their inspection in New York, both in the Special 208 Agent's office and at the United States Attorney's office. Accordingly, affiant wrote the Honorable Gun-nar H. Nordbye the letter attached hereto, marked Exhibit A, and made a part of this affidavit.

On the morning of November 25, 1952, affiant had George D. Sullivan, Jr. and certain of the accountants aforesaid in New York to inspect the items mentioned in said orders, but they were not made available and access was refused. Affiant, immediately on learning of such refusal, at 12:00 Noon, November 26, 1952, phoned the First Assistant United States Attorney and informed him, and was told by him that both Agent Twohig and Assistant United States Attorney Leone were in Washington in conference about the matter (notwithstanding the prior disposition by the Deputy Attorney General), and that the United States Attorney here was expecting a call from Mr. Rothwacks. Affiant informed the United States Attorney's office here that he had just received Judge Nordbye's order of November 25, 1952, and that, in view of the circumstances, he was considering writing the Judge or presenting a motion. Affiant avers that thereafter, at 4:15 P. M., Chicago time, he was informed by George D. Sullivan, Jr. that access according to the Court's order was still refused, except that Agent Twohig had phoned to say that it was all right to inspect the records in a certain room at the Special Agent's office, but none others—said records in said certain room being the same as those which they had seen briefly on their first visit on or about November 18, 1952, but there were no books and records contained amongst them or in that room. Thereupon, affiant wrote the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye the letter hereto attached as Exhibit B, and by reference made a part hereof.

6. On November 28, 1952, affiant personally conferred with Mr. Meyer Rothwacks, the Chief of the Criminal Tax Section of the Department of Justice, who in- 209 formed affiant that there had been conferences in Washington immediately prior to Thanksgiving day at which Mr Leone was present, and that, as a result thereof, compliance with the said orders had been directed. Affiant says that Mr. Rothwacks asked him if his representatives were in New York on Friday, the 28th of November, 1952, and affiant informed him that they were and that he had instructed them, notwithstanding the prior refusals, to go back and to endeavor to procure compliance.

On affiant's return to Chicago Friday night, he was informed by the said George D. Sullivan, Jr. and others of the matters set forth in their affidavits, also submitted in support of said motion and thereto attached; and he thereupon wrote the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye the letter of November 29, 1952, hereto attached as Exhibit C.

Affiant is advised by the defendants, and, therefore, represents the fact to be, that the expense incurred by them in and about the trips of the said lawyers and accountants to New York and Washington in an endeavor to proceed according to said orders of October 31, 1952, have necessarily exceeded the sum of $5,000., which is only a portion of the total expense which the defendants incurred in their preliminary investigations in respect of said books and records and in the taking of said depositions having to do primarily therewith and with their location and their general makeup as claimed by said witnesses, Lubben, Feldman ad Bercu—all of which expense has been completely without avail insofar as the ultimate end of the inspection and copying of said items is concerned.

7. That not withstanding the representations aforesaid of Mr. Rothwacks made on two different occasions, affiant has not been informed that the refusals and actions of the United States Attorney's office for the Southern District of New York have not been sanctioned by others in 210 the office of the Attorney General; nor has affiant been informed of any disciplinary action or effective action of any sort on the part of the United States of America to see that the Court's orders would in fact be complied with; and affiant avers that the said orders in respect of said papers are directed to the United States of America, and the said non-compliance exists not only through the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, but through the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which has refused to make items in its possession available. Affiant believes, and therefore states the fact to be, that the plaintiff desires to try the indictment returned against Giglio and others before any trial is had in this case, although said indictment was not returned until many months after the indictment in the case at bar, and although said case is not yet at issue, and that the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York and, as affiant believes and therefore avers the fact to be, some one or more of his superiors, and the Bureau of Internal Revenue, through its agents in New York, is wholly sympathetic to and cooperative with the plaintiff to that end. By its actions aforesaid, plaintiff is in effect endeavoring to procure or to force a postponement of trial in this case until the conclusion of the trial of the indictment which it returned against Giglio and others. In this connection, affiant avers that the said Giglio, formerly a partner of the said Lubben in Eatsum Food Products Co., a partnership, has been subpoenaed by the defendants in the case at bar as a material witness on their behalf, and that the defendants had also subpoenaed for physical production on the trial of this case all of the books, records, papers and documents of the companies aforesaid through subpoenas served upon the Attorney General of the United States, The United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

211 8. That when this cause was set for trial for December 1st, the trial Judge stated that he would be unavaliable in January, and that he had an anti-trust case set for hearing during February; that the production of the voluminous records, aforesaid, at the trial itself without prior and adequate opportunity to the defendants to inspect and to analyze them, would be unavailing and would leave the defendants defenseless insofar as objective evidence is concerned. That by reason of the premises hereinabove stated, the plaintiff has not only manifested an unwillingness to comply with the orders, but its actions have made it impossible to try this case at any time that would accord with the Court's engagements, and that at the same time would adequately protect the defendants and would vindicate the dignity of the Court and its orders. At the same time, the defendants, subject to reasonable opportunity to prepare, are entitled to a speedy trial, but, under the circumstances, would be relegated to a trial no earlier than March of 1953.

9. That in respect of the defendants' activities and those of their counsel in and about the defense of this case and their endeavor to prepare for the trial which the Court set for December 1, 1952, affiant says:

(a) The indictment in the above cause was returned on, to-wit: March 14, 1952, and the cause assigned to the Honorable John Peter Barnes, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for this District; that at that time Judge Barnes was absent from the jurisdiction and did not return until the middle of April, 1952. During this absence, no other Judge would hear motions in the case. There was a motion for a bill of particulars interposed March 24, 1952, before Judge J. Sam Perry, who entered and continued it to be heard before Judge Barnes. Judge Barnes, on his return to the City, through the United States Attorney, made an appointment with him and 212 with affiant, and informed them both that he had declared his unwillingness to sit in judgment in the case because of his long and favorable acquaintance with and his regard for the Honorable Philip L. Sullivan, brother of the defendant, Harold E. Sullivan, and that his colleagues felt the same way, and that he had, therefore, requested the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to assign a judge without the District, but that he had consented to hear certain motions which might be made. It was not until August 20, 1952, that affiant was informed of the appointment of a trial judge for the case, who, shortly thereafter, informed counsel for the parties that he would be in Chicago September 9, 1952, "to dispose of the matters which are set."

(b) Promptly, upon the return of Judge Barnes to the City, affiant presented, on April 16, 1952, a new motion for a bill of particulars which the Court set for disposition May 27, 1952, at which time said motion in all essential respects was granted. At the same time, affiant voluntarily represented to the Court that he would file by June 2nd a motion to dismiss the indictment which was and for some time had been in course of preparation. It was presented and filed June 2, and the plaintiff was ruled to answer by June 5th. Instead of answering, plaintiff demurred generally, and, thereupon, the defendants prepared their motion in writing for one hearing on their motion to dismiss, asking, on the basis of the suggestions supporting the same, that argument of the demurrer be deferred; that the Government join issue on such facts as might be controverted; and that a hearing be had thereon so that there would be an entire rather than a piecemeal record, and presented said motion, suggestions and supporting authorities June 13, 1952, on which day it was denied and the hearing on the demurrer set for June 19, 1952. An ex-

213 tensive brief was prepared and the matter was argued June 19 and 20, 1952, taken under advisement, and on June 23 it was decided,—the demurrer to the motion being sustained and the motion to dismiss overruled and denied, at which time, June 26, 1952, was set as the date for arraignment, and the defendants duly appeared and all pleaded not guilty. At the time of arraignment, the Judge announced (Transcript 143) that he was leaving for 10 weeks and would not be back until September. At the same time, he publicly stated in open court the request which he had previously made of the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, and continued the matter to September 9, 1952, then to be set for a future date for trial. At the time of the rendition of the opinion on the motion to dismiss, the United States Attorney had stated that he understood there were to be other motions. The Court asked what sort of motions, and affiant said: "It may well be, and undoubtedly will be, that at some time prior to the trial we will have a motion to suppress the evidence but that it is not in the chain of pleadings nor in the matters that are involved here." At the time of arraignment, the Court also said, speaking of the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals: "He asked me to dispose of the preliminary motions, and I feel that I have done that."

(c) On July 1, 1952, this Court was in adjournment until September by reason of the summer vacation except for emergency matters.

(d) At all times in question, affiant believed (and with all respect to the Court, still believes) that the motion to dismiss the indictment on ground 3 was well founded, and that, therefore, no trial to the court or jury should be required. Indeed, Judge Barnes in his opinion (Transcript 129) stated that that point was urged with sincerity. Nev-
214 ertheless, as will hereinafter more fully appear, affiant and those associated with him have at all times been diligent in their attempts to prepare for trial.

(e) Due to the nature of the case and due to the unique circumstances of the case, as a practical matter, with one exception, there was no Judge to whom motions could be presented with any hope of disposition until the time of the appointment of the trial judge. Illustratively, the Government's motion in respect of a subpoena duces tecum, presented during the summer vacation, was passed by two Judges and ultimately heard only when the trial judge was appointed. The one exception was defendants' motion for leave to take depositions—an emergent matter if any progress was to be made in the case. That motion was presented to the Honorable J. Sam Perry, and, as the record shows, decided August 11, 1952, after full argument, but disposed of finally only by order of the trial judge entered September 11, 1952, denying plaintiff's motion to vacate Judge Perry's order.

(f) Judge Perry's order required that notice for such depositions be given not later than September 10th. The reason for the allowance of thirty days beyond the date of his order was that the defendants were at the time of its entry, and had been since July 1, 1952, engaged in an investigation in the East in preparation for trial which was not yet concluded, although it had revealed many facts which they wished to preserve for the trial as against the unavailability of the witnesses in question. During the months of July, August and the early part of September, counsel working on such investigation resided in New York City for that purpose, and, among other things, endeavored to locate the books and records of Lubben and his companies, of primary materiality because of the averments contained in the bill of particulars in this cause. As far as such books and records are concerned, at the 215 end of each avenue of exploration they were always informed that they had been obtained by the Government through seizure or process. They also interviewed and took statements from many witnesses and potential witnesses. Affiant was thereby enabled to proceed with the said depositions and present the discovery motions filed on or about September 30, 1952. Since September 30, 1952, the said depositions have been concluded. In addition to the matters aforesaid, their conclusion required the establishment by agreement of an itinerary and a schedule, determination of the places at which said depositions could be held, the employment of counsel, and locating and subpoenaing of the witnesses as well as an outline of the subject matter for interrogation. Such depositions were noticed for New York, New Jersey, Florida, and Puerto Rico, and were taken in respect of witnesses at or from those places. The taking and travel time ran from October 5 through October 14, 1952.

Said depositions have all been returned and are now on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court, and notice of that fact was heretofore given the United States Attorney.

10. At the same time that the said discovery motions for orders under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure were presented, the defendants interposed their motion to suppress evidence, which was set for hearing November 12, 1952. Argument was had on the discovery motions October 17, 1952, and also on the motion for the production of certain items as requested in the motion to suppress evidence, which was taken under advisement, with the result that orders were entered October 31, 1952, pursuant to Rules 16 and 17, aforesaid, and also requiring the production at the said hearing of 216 November 12, 1952, of the items set forth in the motion to suppress evidence. The items to be produced at Chicago under the order made pursuant to Rule 17 were exhibited to the defendants and copied by them early in the month of November, 1952, on or about November 3rd, 4th and 5th.

In the meantime, affiant has caused auditors employed by the defendants to procure for him in his preparation for trial such data from the books and records of the defendant corporation as he desires, and he is assured by them that their work in that regard has been finished. From the time of the alleged disclosure in 1948 to some time late in the year 1951, the books and records of the corporate defendant have been under examination at the plant of the corporation by agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and said agents during said period have made extensive and prolonged examinations of the books, records and papers of the Lubben companies situate in New York. But with all of the facilities and manpower at the plaintiff's command, it has not been able to complete its investigation because affiant avers that since the entry of this Court's order on or about September 9, 1952, for the production of the voluminous papers directed in the subpoena referred to in said order, anywhere from five to ten auditors or agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue have been almost constantly at the plant of the corporate defendant engaged in further examination of said books, records and papers.

11. The inspection and copying of the papers mentioned in the orders of this Court is but one operation. When that is done, the copies must be separated into those which are relevant and those which are not, for it is not feasible to do that at the places appointed in the 217 orders; and then the accountants must study and analyze the same to arrive at a conclusion in respect of the averments of the bill of particulars and of the indictment as to moneys allegedly paid by or through said parties to the corporate defendant. Already, there are more than 5,000 items of microfilm copy and several hundred photostats so to be analyzed, and affiant is informed that the greater bulk of the material remains to be obtained in New York. Affiant is informed by defendants' auditors that it would require six to eight weeks of examination and analysis to do and t furnish such inspection and analysis in any way that w ald be complete and adequate for purposes of cross-examination of the Government witnesses and for defendants' defense, but that in three weeks they could provide affiant with a minimum study which would not be complete but which could be utilized to establish some, but not all, of the facts concerning said books, records, papers and documents required in the defense of the case, and affiant, with the approval of the defendants, rather than to request a continuance instructed said accountants to proceed on the latter basis.

12. Affiant has had the assistance of two lawyers in his firm and of four outside lawyers. During the months of April to October, inclusive, he himself has spent about 977 hours of time on matters to which he has given attention for all clients, of which 523 hours have been spent on this matter. No hours were spent on other matters at the expense of anything to be done in this case. His associates in his firm have spent during said months 455 hours in addition. Figures for the month of November are not yet available, but affiant avers that he has spent substantially all of his time during the month of November in and about this case, with the services on most days extending far beyond the usual business hours, and including Saturdays and Sundays as well. He does not know, since they 218 have kept no record, the precise number of hours spent by the four outside lawyers, but he does know and represents the fact to be that three of them have devoted their time almost exclusively to the requirements of this cause and have virtually abandoned any attempt to do any other work.

In re: United States of America v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Dear Judge Nordbye:

I just talked to Mr. Ryan, who advised me that the Deputy Attorney General has directed that the records in New York be made available for inspection according to your orders, but that they will not at this time be moved to Chicago.

Accordingly, I am sending my people back to New York to be there tomorrow morning to resume inspection. It is unfortunate that they would not consent that the records be sent here where we would have joint access and where the working conditions would be infinitely better and where all of the records would be in one place instead of three places to aid in the already difficult task of examining these voluminous papers. Also, the matter is complicated by the Thanksgiving Holiday.

This leaves pending the second part of the motion which I sent to you yesterday in which we ask a postponement equal to the time during which the records were not available to us under your order. Technically, your order provided that they be submitted November 5th. We were told it would actually take the Government agents until November 14th to sort and screen them and when our people got there on the 18th they were prevented from seeing them.

Everything considered, I should say that we are fairly entitled to a postponement of ten days, which would 220 still leave our accountants with a job that is physically impossible, in any way that we regard as adequate, to perform and which will not be of much help to us for use during the Government's case in chief.

We shall appreciate hearing from you at your earliest convenience so that we can correctly advise our witnesses.

Yours very truly,
Vincent O'Brien.

Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye,

In re: U. S. A. v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Dear Judge Nordbye:

In my last communication to you, I reported that we were then advised that the books and papers would be made available to us in New York. While we were all under that impression, you entered your order noting in the order that you were "notified by counsel for the defendants that the records which should have been made available to them under the orders of this court entered October 31, 1952, were now available for inspection at New York. • • •"

I regret to advise you that we have had a series of refusals of access to the items covered by the orders at the Treasury Department in New York, except that late this afternoon we were allowed into a room for a short time of perhaps two hours to inspect only what we had already seen, but with a prohibition against looking at any of the other items called for by the orders which were also there in other rooms in large volume. I have talked with Mr. Ryan and he has talked with Washington, but the results are, as I have indicated, wholly disappointing.

Recalling that you suggested on the hearing to Mr. Ryan that if telephone calls and letters did not work, a trip to Washington might get results, I made arrangements through the Attorney General for a conference in Washington Friday morning, November 28th.

If the situation is not worked out satisfactorily in Washington, it is my present intention to verbally advise 222 the Attorney General that I shall immediately return to Chicago, prepare a petition and travel to Minneapolis and appear with the petition before your Honor at your court there either on Monday or Tuesday for such relief as might be appropriate in the light of the facts by then developed.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Mr. Ryan.

Respectfully yours,
Vincent O'Brien.

In re: United States of America v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al.

Dear Judge Nordbye:

Supplementing my letter of November 26, 1952, when Mr. Kirby and I were in Washington yesterday, we specifically took up with Mr. Myer Rothwacks the matter of the noncompliance with your orders of October 31st. He told us that they had been in conference in Washington on the matter immediately prior to Thanksgiving, and that as a result of that there would be compliance. It is only fair to add that Mr. Rothwacks told me that Mr. Leone, the Assistant District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, had been told to ignore any technical objections. It is necessary to add also, however, that I told Mr. Rothwacks that I didn't think there were even any colorably good technical objections. I remind your Honor, that my last motion made that point clear and showed the order to be applicable notwithstanding anything which had been said.

I also told Mr. Rothwacks that we had our people back in New York yesterday with what result I had not had time to find out. When I got home last night, I was told that access to all of the books and records themselves was again denied. There was a proffer of cases of invoices and correspondence and like items that were of no use to us until we first see what the books and records say. Our people were told that Mr. Leone's people from his office were working on the books and records and that we couldn't have them.

In this connection, I direct your attention to the fact that Mr. Leone is handling a suit against Giglio, Livorsey, Roth and Lawn in which the indictment was not returned until last September, and in which the time 224 for the filing of preliminary motions does not expire until December 15th or 16th as I am told, so that there can be no doubt that whatever they are doing is no excuse for noncompliance with the orders of your Court.

This is the third refusal which we have had of matter previously pointed out to be indispensable to our defense. In my humble judgment, no private litigant would be permitted so to disregard the orders of the Court, and I know of no law which places the plaintiff in any different position. The primary effect is to delay the trial of our case by keeping from us material indispensable to our case and thus to procure a continuance without asking for it and without any attempt to justify noncompliance with the Court's orders. Secondly, we have been, as you can see, put to great expense in sending people back and forth to New York and in paying them for their time and in communicating with your Honor and with others. Moreover, we had to call off subpoenas that were served and reserve others. No litigant, except the Government, can stand expense of that sort.

I see no solution in any way adequate to the situation by way of continuance; nor will the problem be solved merely by the production of these extremely voluminous records at the trial itself; nor will it solve anything for the Government to say that the records will now be available, for what assurance will either we or the Court have in the light of the three prior refusals, unexplained to the Court; nor do I intend to ask that this case be continued until next March.

In this situation, I do not presently know just what motion would be appropriate. If I did, I would send it on today. I shall consider the matter and present whatever I determine to be appropriate I trust not later than Wednesday morning, with appropriate affidavits to support what I have said. In the meantime, I feel that you are entitled to be advised.

Respectfully yours,
Vincent O'Brien.

AFFIDAVIT.

George D. Sullivan, Jr., being first duly sworn on oath deposes and says that he is an attorney licensed to practice law in the State of Illinois, and is assisting in the preparation of the defense in the cause entitled "United States of America vs, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al."; and that pursuant to directions received from Mr. Vincent O'Brien, an attorney of record for the defendants, at about 5:00 P. M., on Monday, November 24, 1952 to immediately journey to New York City, together with the Chief Accountant employed for the defense, Mr. John A. Lynch, he procured airplane reservations for the evening of the same day, arriving in New York City at about the hour of 3:00 A.M., November 25, 1952; that at about 9:45 A. M., he telephoned James J. Twohig, Special Agent in Charge of such books, records and papers encompassed by the Court's order of October 31, 1952. Be-226 ing informed that Mr. Twohig was not in his office, he left a message for him, and thereupon telephoned Assistant United States District Attorney Leone immediately thereafter. Upon being informed that Mr. Leone was also not in his office, affiant also left a message, and immediately left his hotel and proceeded to the Office of the Special Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division, 253 Broadway, New York City, arriving at about the hour of 10:30 A. M. Presently Special Agent Paul Mann came into the ante-room and introduced himself, stating that Agent Twohig was in Washington, D. C., with Assistant United States Attorney Leone, having left just the night before; that since Agent Twohig was in personal charge of the books and records which affiant sought to inspect and examine, and since Agent Twohig was the only person who could properly identify and separate such records, and since Agent Twohig had left no instructions, Agent Mann told affiant, who was accompanied by Mr. John A. Lynch, to return the following day. Affiant protested that the delay involved would seriously jeopardize the preparation of the defense and, more so, since Agent Mann was unable to definitely say that Agent Twohig would be in his office the following day. Thereupon Agent Mann asked Assistant Group Chief Edelman to explain further to affiant and Mr. Lynch. Assistant Group Chief Edelman again stated to affiant that Agent Twohig was the only man in the Office of the Special Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division who knew exactly where to find the books and records which affiant sought, and that since Agent Twohig was in Washington, D. C., neither he, Edelman, nor Mann, wished to take the responsibility of delivering such books and records to affiant.

Affiant inquired if Agent Twohig was a member of the Group, of which he, Edelman, was the Assistant Group Chief. Edelman stated that he was, and that Agent Mann was working on "other aspects of the case" and, 227 therefore, could not properly segregate, separate and identify such records as affiant sought.

Affiant stated that he was seeking to inspect such books and records by virtue of the Order of Court entered October 31, 1952, as aforesaid. Assistant Group Chief Edelman stated that he was aware of this fact, and suggested that we confer with First Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Martin, in charge of the Criminal Division of the United States District Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, insomuch as Martin had exclusive jurisdiction of the subject matter because of another criminal cause then pending in the Southern District of New York having to do with the same books and records, or at least a great part of them.

Affiant offered to telephone Assistant Group Chief Edelman within a few hours, during which time Edelman would have an opportunity to identify such books and records above referred to. Edelman replied "I can't help you" unless he received specific instructions from Assistant United States District Attorney Joseph Martin.

Edelman stated to affiant that possibly Mr. Martin might telephone Washington, D. C., to talk with Agent Twohig.

Affiant stated to Agent Mann, after Assistant Group Chief Edelman had left the waiting room, that affiant arrived as soon as possible from Chicago, Illinois, after receiving directions the previous day, and that affiant had arrived at his hotel at about 4:00 A. M., November 25, 1952. Agent Mann replied "Yes, I understand, hours are now important".

Affiant immediately proceeded to the office of Assistant United States District Attorney Joseph Martin, arriving at the hour of 11:30 A. M., and was admitted to Mr. Martin's office at 11:55 A. M.

Affiant informed Mr. Martin of the purpose of his 228 visit and of what had transpired that morning at the Office of the Special Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Bureau. At 12:02 P. M., Mr. Martin, in affiant's presence, telephoned Assistant Group Chief Edelman and informed affiant that Edelman had gone to lunch, and that he had asked for Mr. Edelman's Group Chief, one O'Donnell, and had been informed that he also had gone to lunch. Leaving word for Edelman and O'Donnell to call him upon their return from lunch, Mr. Martin asked affiant to return to his office at 1:00 P.M.

Mr. Martin stated to affiant and to Mr. John A. Lynch that he was aware of a three-way telephone conversation which had taken place the previous day between Assistant United States Attorney General Malone in Washington, D. C., Assistant United States District Attorney Leone in New York City, and Assistant United States District Attorney Ryan in Chicago, Illinois, and that as a result of said telephone conference, it was decided by the three men that representatives of The Shotwell Mfg. Co., would be allowed to examine and inspect such papers pursuant to the order entered, as aforesaid. Mr. Martin further stated to affiant that the representatives were entitled to see the records and papers described by the order, as aforesaid, "without doubt". He further stated that he understood that the records involved were quite voluminous.

Affiant further stated to Mr. Martin that he had been informed by Agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau that the United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York had exclusive jurisdiction of the subject matter.

Affiant further stated that he, together with Mr. John A. Lynch, wished to be permitted to inspect records, both at the Office of the Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Bureau at 253 Broad-229 way, New York City, and also those records which he had been informed by Agents of the Treasury Department were in the possession of Assistant United States District Attorney Leone, who was a member of Mr. Martin's staff. Mr. Martin stated to affiant that he would instruct the Agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau to comply with the Court's order aforementioned, and that such books and records as were at that time in his office would be delivered to affiant for examination as soon as an Agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, familiar with the said records, could be made available to assist affiant.

Affiant returned at 1:15 P. M., together with Mr. John A. Lynch, to Mr. Martin's office and informed Mr. Martin's secretary of his presence. At 2:15 P. M., affiant was introduced to Special Agent James King, who accompanied affiant in an inspection of such papers as were made available to affiant at the United States District Attorney's Office.

Affiant, together with Mr Lynch, took an inventory of such papers, both in the Office of Assistant United States District Attorney Leone, and in another storage room in the suite of offices occupied by the Criminal Division of the United States District Attorney's Office. While affiant found no books of account of any of the companies' partnership or corporations mentioned in the Order of October 31, 1952, as aforesaid, he was shown approximately 75 transfer file cases containing approximately 300,000 documents such as sales slips, bank reconciliations, purchase orders, accounts receivable, slips and the like, which affiant inventoried. Affiant completed this work in about 5½ hours leaving the office of the United States District Attorney at about the hour of 7:45 P. M., and informing Special Agent King that he or his Chief Accountant Mr.

Lynch, would appear at the Office of the Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division, at the opening of office hours on the following day to continue with such inventory and examination.

230 On the following day, having been informed by John A. Lynch that he had been denied access to the books and records contained in the Office of the Agent in Charge upon his arrival at such office, affiant immediately journeyed to the Office of the Agent in Charge, and requested an interview with the Agent in Charge, a Mr. Latham. Being informed that Mr. Latham was out of town, affiant requested to see the next senior officer present, Mr. Francis Kennedy. Being informed that Mr. Kennedy had left the office for the day, affiant asked to see the next senior officer present, and was presently admitted and introduced to Mr. Charles Doberman. After affiant informed Mr. Doberman of the difficulties he had encountered in seeking compliance with the Court's order, as aforesaid, both upon his visit of the previous week and upon his present visit; Mr. Doberman, at 1:30 P. M., called a conference between Group Chief O'Donnell, Assistant Group Chief Edelman, himself and affiant. Affiant states that he further protested to the three officers of the Internal Revenue concerning the treatment he had received, and that because of such denials and refusals, the defendants had been unable to properly prepare their defense, and that such refusals were contumacious and unreasonable, but that, nevertheless, affiant, together with accountants designated by the defendants, stood ready to continue with the examination.

Assistant Group Chief Edelman stated that 20 minutes earlier he had received an order personally from Assistant Agent in Charge, Kennedy, not to allow representatives of the defendants to see any records or papers then in the custody of the Intelligence Division in New York City.

Mr. Edelman further stated to affiant that Mr. Kennedy had informed him that the order which he was transmitting to him had been received by him from Washington, D. C.

231 Mr. Edelman further stated to affiant that it was his general information, further, that the Attorney General of the United States intended that very afternoon to give his personal attention to the matter and that until this had been done, the Intelligence Division in New York City could not act or, as he put it, "our hands are tied".

Affiant stated to the three Agents that this information was contrary to that which he had received the previous day from Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Martin, and the further information which he had just received from Agent Doberman, who had stated to affiant that Mr. Martin, as head of the Criminal Division of the United States District Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, had exclusive jurisdiction of the subject matter, because of a "companioned case" entitled "United States vs. Giglio, et al." then pending in the Southern District of New York.

Affiant stated that he had been misled by Mr. Edelman the previous day when Edelman stated to him that the only reason such books and records at the Office of the Intelligence Division were not being made available to the defendants' representatives, was because Agent Twohig was not present and that he, alone, could properly designate and separate such papers and books.

Affiant requested of Mr. Doberman that he telephone Washington, D. C., to ascertain whether or not a practical solution could be had. This, Mr. Doberman declined to do, stating that he, however, could not prevent affiant from telephoning, if affiant thought it necessary. In concluding the conference, Mr. Doberman suggested that affiant again visit Mr. Joseph Martin to inform him of what had transpired.

Affiant arrived at Mr. Martin's office within 10 minutes, to-wit, at about 2:00 P. M., and was admitted to Mr.
232 Martin's private office at about 2:30 P. M. Affiant informed Assistant United States District Attorney Martin of what had transpired, particularly the refusals and of the reasons that had been assigned for the said refusals. Mr. Martin replied to affiant "that's not true". Mr. Martin telephoned Mr. Doberman in affiant's presence and stated to Doberman that he had just talked with United States Attorney Leone in Wasihngton, D. C., and that because of such telephone conversations defendants' representatives were to be allowed to examine the books and records without further delay.

Mr. Martin stated to Mr. Doberman, in his telephone conversation in the presence of affiant, that he, Martin, would take full responsibility which might be occasioned by the turning over of the records then in the Office of the Special Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division, and that he, Martin, would so inform any other person in that office, in addition to Mr. Doberman, of his intention so to do. Mr. Martin informed affiant that Mr. Doberman had requested a short time to confer with his superiors, and that he would telephone him within a few minutes.

Affiant then stated that the continuous refusals and vacillations which he had encountered were seriously jeopardizing the defendants' ability to properly prepare their defense, both for the purposes of their case in chief, but also in view of the trial date set by the Court, of their ability to properly cross-examine witnesses presented by the Government in their case in chief. While affiant was so speaking, Mr. Martin interrupted him and asked if he would wait in his outer office until he had received the return telephone call from Mr. Doberman, insomuch as Mr. Doberman "did not want to take the responsibility".

At about 3:15 P. M., affiant was again called in to Mr. Martin's private office and Mr. Martin stated that he 233 was then speaking to Mr. Doberman on the telephone. Mr. Martin stated that he had no jurisdiction over the Treasury Department and that he had no authority to order them to do anything. Affiant stated that this was contrary to information affiant had received directly from Assistant Group Chief Edelman, and also Assistant Agent in Charge, Doberman, on several occasions. Mr. Martin replied to affiant that such statements were incorrect, and that affiant could so inform the Agents of the Treasury Department. Affiant stated to Mr. Martin that he was immediately returning to the Office of the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

A short time later, at approximately 3:45 P.M., affiant again appeared at the Office of the Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division in the company of a Certified Shorthand Reporter, one Garfield Silverstein, and was admitted to the office of Mr. Doberman. Mr. Doberman stated to affiant that he would make no statement which could be taken down in shorthand by the Certified Shorthand Reporter, but that he had just received word from Agent Twohig by long distance telephone in Washington that defendants' representatives could be shown only such books and records as were located in one of the rooms occupied by the Intelligence Division, and that Agent Twohig would return to his office on Friday, November 28, 1952, at which time all books and records would be made available to affiant or other representatives of the defendants.

Thereupon, affiant was taken to a room which contained various records which affiant immediately recognized as those which he had seen on his visit the previous week prior to the time defendants' representatives were asked to leave the office of the Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division.

Affiant offered to work that night, to-wit, the evening
234 of November 26, 1952, and also the following day and evening, November 27, 1952. Mr. Doberman stated that he would not order any Agent in his office to work with affiant on Thanksgiving Day, but that if any Agent volunteered to, he would see to it that compensatory time off be given to said Agent. A short time later Mr. Doberman informed affiant that he had inquired for a volunteer but that no one in his office had done so.

Affiant stated to Mr. Doberman that the books and records presently in the room which he had been shown appeared to be the same records that affiant had seen the previous week, but that affiant would make an inventory of such records at that time and would return to continue his examination on Friday, November 28, 1952. Mr. Doberman replied to affiant that he would instruct Agent Twohig on Friday to assist the representatives of the defendants in sorting from the great number of documents then in his office as such representatives might request, and that further he would assign an Agent from his department to work with defendants' representatives on Saturday, November 29, 1952, in continuing their examination of the books and records. At about the close of office hours, namely at about 5:00 P. M., after affiant had confirmed his impression that the books and records then in the room assigned to him were the same records which he and his accountants had been shown the previous week prior to being requested to cease their examination, affiant left the Office of the Agent in Charge of the Intelligence Division.

On Friday, November 28, 1952 affiant was informed by one John Christoph, an accountant assigned to assist affiant in the preparation of the defense of the cause now before the Court, that he had journeyed to New York and had asked Group Chief O'Donnell, at the Office of the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Bureau, to permit him to examine such books of account of the vari-

235 ous companies, partnerships and corporations as are named in the Order of October 31, 1952, but that in reply he was directed to the Office of Assistant United States District Attorney Leone in the Federal Court House, Foley Square, New York City.

Affiant further states that Mr. Christoph informed him that Mr. Leone and Agent James Twohig, who was at that time in Mr. Leone's office, refused his request, stating that he would not be permitted to examine the said books of account until December 3 or December 4, 1952, because the Agents of the Intelligence Division were at that time working on them.

Affiant further states that he was informed by Mr. Christoph that at that time he, Mr. Christoph, offered to work the evening of Friday, November 28, 1952 and Saturday, November 29, 1952, on such books and records, but that Assistant United States District Attorney Leone refused such offer, stating that the Office of Intelligence Division was closed in the evenings and also on Saturdays and Sundays.

Further affiant saith not.

AFFIDAVIT.

John A. Lynch, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is a Certified Public Accountant with offices at 231 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois, and that he was heretofore engaged by Vincent O'Brien, one of the counsel for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and others in case pending in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, entitled United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al., No. 52 Cr. 143, to examine and analyze certain books, records, papers and documents required in the defense of said case, including those mentioned in the orders entered by the Court in the above-entitled cause October 31, 1952, pursuant to motions of the defendants under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and that he makes this 237 affidavit in support of the foregoing motion of the defendants to dismiss the indictment pursuant to Rule 48 (b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Affiant avers:

1. That at the request of said Vincent O'Brien, accompanied by George D. Sullivan, Jr., he went to New York City, New York on the night of November 24, 1952, and arrived there early in the morning of the 25th of November, 1952, and that the occurrences which transpired on the 25th day of November, 1952, are as set forth in the foregoing affidavit of George D. Sullivan, Jr.

2. That on Wednesday, the 26th day of November, 1952, at the hour of 9:30 in the forenoon, affiant contacted Group Chief O'Donnell of the Special Intelligence Unit of the Treasury Department, 253 Broadway, New York City, and asked permission to examine the books, records, papers and documents at said office mentioned in said orders; that Mr. O'Donnell advised him that all files in connection with the case were under lock and key and that James Twohig, Special Agent, had the key; that there were many cases, numerous books and records and that he did not know one from the other and further did not know what books and records were desired. Affiant then advised Mr. O'Donnell that he could identify the books and records, but Mr. O'Donnell still stated that he was unable to accommodate affiant, but stated that he would have to await the return of James Twohig from Washington, D. C. with Assistant United States Attorney Jerome Leone. Mr. O'Donnell stated to affiant that he could remain in the reception room and await Mr. Twohig's return in a couple of hours or his return in the evening of that day. As an alternative, Mr. O'Donnell suggested contacting Special Agent Lathem.

3. Affiant attempted to contact Special Agent in 238 Charge Lathem, but upon ascertaining that Mr. Lathem was out of town, the said affiant contacted Assistant Special Agent in Charge Francis Kennedy, who told him that he could not give anything to him unless Assistant United States Attorney Leone directed his office to do so.

4. On being advised that Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Martin, in charge of the Criminal Division, had personally contacted Group Chief Edelman on the previous day, Kennedy stated that order applied only to data in the United States Attorney's office. Mr. Kennedy then telephoned Group Chief O'Donnell in regard to Assistant United States Attorney Martin's conversation, following which he refused to authorize affiant's examination of the books and records and referred affiant back to Group Chief O'Donnell for the reasons for the refusal.

5. Affiant returned to Group Chief O'Donnell's office, where Mr. O'Donnell reiterated his previous conversation with affiant and suggested that affiant remain in contact with the office throughout the day to be appraised of Special Agent Twohig's return, at which time the matter would again be considered.

6. At 1:05 P. M. affiant contacted the Treasury Department and conversed with Assistant Group Chief Edelman, who forthrightly stated that Special Agent Twohig had called Assistant Special Agent in Charge Francis Kennedy from Washington, D. C., and they had discussed the matter, and as a result of that conversation, Edelman stated that he refused access to the records upon the advice of the said Kennedy.

7. That on Thanksgiving Day, affiant was in Chicago and received directions from George D. Sullivan, Jr. to have someone from his staff in New York at the opening of business on the morning of Friday, the 28th day of November, 1952. Accordingly, affiant directed Mr. John 239 R. Christoph, Jr. to go to New York for the purpose of renewing demands for access to and inspection of said books, papers, records and documents.

John R. Christoph, Jr., being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is a member of the staff of John A. Lynch & Co., Certified Public Accountants, with offices at 231 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, and that he makes this affidavit in support of the foregoing motion of the defendants to dismiss the indictment.

Affiant avers:

1. That at the hour of about 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, on Friday, the 28th day of November, 1952, at the direction of John A. Lynch, he called upon Special Agent James Twohig at the Intelligence Unit, 253 Broadway, New York City; that Twohig was out and he contacted his Group Chief O'Donnell, who got in touch with Mr. Twohig at the United States Court House by telephone in his presence, and that Mr. O'Donnell suggested that 241 affiant see Mr. Twohig who was then at the office of the Assistant United States Attorney Leone at the United States Court House.

2. That affiant thereupon went over to the United States Court House to see Mr. Twohig; that he went into the Assistant United States Attorney's office where Mr. Twohig was present; that he said he wanted to examine the books and records of the companies mentioned in the orders of the court entered in the above cause on October 31, 1952, and that Mr. Leone advised affiant that the Special Agents in the Intelligence Unit were working on the books and records and would not be through with them until Thursday, December 4, 1952, but Mr. Leone said that affiant could examine certain documents and papers in the United States Attorney's office but not any books and records or any other papers which were over at the Intelligence Unit. Affiant avers that the documents and papers so proffered for examination at the United States Attorney's office were the same a those which Mr. John

A. Lynch had already seen and did not contain any books or records of any of the companies mentioned in said order.

3. Affiant further avers that as to the books, records, papers and documents at the office of the Intelligence Unit, although he was then denied access to all of them, both he and the said John A. Lynch were and at all times had been desirous of examining first the books and records themselves to determine the entries in which they might be interested before looking at the supporting invoices and other documents and papers.

4. Affiant further avers that before such final refusal affiant requested that he be permitted to work on the books and records at the Intelligence Unit Friday night and Saturday and Sunday, and told said Special Agent Twohig and Assistant United States Attorney Leone that 242 he was prepared to do so, but the said Leone would not permit any examination until their own examination should be completed.

ORDER

This cause came on to be heard on December 3, 1952, on the motion of the defendants for an order dismissing the indictment herein upon the grounds that because of plain-tiff's non-compliance with the orders of this Court entered October 31, 1952, there has been unnecessary delay in the trial of the cause. There also was presented at that time the oral motion of the plaintiff for the continuance of the trial of this action from December 9, 1952, to a date to be fixed by the Court not less than 90 days from the date of this hearing. The Court at the conclusion of the hearing announced that the motion for dismissal would be denied and that the motion for continuance would be granted, but that a formal order herein would be entered as soon as a transcript of the proceedings was available.

Mr. Arthur B. Cunningham, Special Assistant Attorney General, Washington, D. C., appeared in behalf of plaintiff;

Mr. Gerome J. Leone, Assistant United States Attorney, Southern District of New York, New York City, with the consent of Court filed an affidavit herein and was heard orally;

Mr. Vincent O'Brien and Mr. William T. Kirby, of Chicago, Illinois, appeared in behalf of the defendants.

245 The defendants in their motion set forth in considerable detail the difficulties which they have encountered in obtaining for inspection certain records in the possession of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York and in possession of the office of the Treasury Department in the City of New York. The records consist of various items of books, papers and documents allegedly obtained by the United States by seizure or by process from David C. Lubben, Eatsum Food Products Company, a sole proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products Company, a partnership, General Confections, Inc., Reserve Trading Company, and perhaps others, and which are now in possession of the plaintiff and are subject to the orders of this Court, entered on October 31, 1952, pursuant to Rules 16 and 17, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. No doubt some of the confusion and delay which has resulted in complying with the orders of this Court has been due to the fact that so many of the records subject to the Court's order are not located in the Northern District of Illinois, and hence the United States Attorney in charge of this case, as well as the Special Assistant Attorney General assigned to try the matter, have had to depend upon other agencies of the Government for expeditious and helpful cooperation. And then there is an apparent reluctance upon the part of some of the government officials and agencies to recognize that when the Government is involved in litigation, criminal and civil, it is subject to all valid orders of the Court in the same manner and to the same extent as a private litigant. But, in addition to these circumstances, there does appear a substantial reason why the inspection by the defendants of some of the books and records subject to this Court's orders and located in New York City should be deferred. There is pending in the Southern 246 District of New York certain criminal proceedings, consisting of six indictments charging various violations of the Internal Revenue Code and a conspiracy in violation of Section 371, Title 18, U. S. Code, against William Giglio, Louis J. Loth, Frank Livorsi, Howard Lawn, and American Brands Corporation. Some of the books and records located in New York City now subject to this Court's order under Rules 16 and 17 and subject to subpoena duces tecum, issued by the defendants in pursuance of such orders, are vital to the Government in the trial of these matters pending in the Southern District of New York.

By reason of the pendency of the New York proceedings and the unsavory character and reputation of some of the defendants involved therein, it seems not only impractical but of doubtful wisdom to permit defendants in the Shotwell case and their agents access to these particular records at this time when the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York is utilizing and safeguarding such records in connection with the prosecution of the New York defendants. The circumstances surrounding the New York proceedings would suggest the propriety of deferring any examination of such records by the defendants herein until after the New York trial has been completed, if that trial can be held and terminated within a reasonable time. It was made to appear to the Court that the proceedings in the Southern District of New York will be called for trial in January, 1953, and would last some three weeks.

The trial of the Shotwell case was first set for December 1, 1952, and then, by reason of the delay that the defendants encountered in obtaining access to the records in

New York, the matter was, at the defendants' request, continued until December 9, 1952. The Government now moves that, on account of the practical difficulties in making available to the defendants certain of the records
247 in New York City by reason of the imminence of the trial in the New York proceedings, the trial of the Shotwell case should be continued for some 90 days. Defendants object to a continuance although they recognize that they are not ready to proceed to trial until they have been accorded an opportunity to examine the records located in New York. They contend, and they urge, that this matter should be dismissed under Rule 48(b), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, by reason of the fact that, due to the delay of the Government in responding to the Court's order of October 31, 1952, they have been denied a speedy trial. But the exigencies and complications confronting the Government seem to justify the granting of its request that it be accorded a reasonable time to complete the New York proceedings before access to certain of the books and records located in New York City be granted to the defendants. It does not appear that the requested delay will deprive the defendants herein of any evidence in meeting the charges contained in the indictment against them, nor does it appear that any of their rights in that regard will be impaired by a reasonable continuance. It is to be regretted that there is this conflict between the pendency of these two proceedings, and although the indictment in the Shotwell case was returned before the indictment in the New York proceedings, it is the Court's opinion that, in view of the unusual circumstances surrounding the New York proceedings, that trial should be given precedence at this time. Obviously, if there is a protracted delay in the trial of the New York case, the defendants in this proceeding should not be deprived of access to evidence necessary to enable them to prepare for a reasonably early trial.

It follows, therefore, from the premises that the motion of the defendants to dismiss the indictment against 248 them pursuant to Rule 48(b), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, must be denied. It is so ordered. An exception is allowed.

The motion of the Government for a continuance is granted, and the trial of the above matter is continued from December 9, 1952, to April 6, 1953, at ten o'clock A. M. It is so ordered.

At the hearing of these motions, it was stated to this Court by counsel for the plaintiff that only a part of the books and records located in New York City are vital to the trial of the New York case and that the balance of the records, documents, etc., subject to the Court's order of October 31, 1952, are available for inspection by defendants' attorneys and agents at any reasonable time. Moreover, it was represented to the Court by counsel for the plaintiff that the books and records which will be used in the New York case or in preparing for that trial will likewise be made available to the defendants' attorneys and agents for inspection a reasonable time before the continued trial date herein regardless of whether the New York case is concluded. In accordance with that understanding and stipulation, it is ordered: That as to the books, records, etc., subject to the Court's order of October 31, 1952, and which are now in possession of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York or of the Treasury Department located in the City of New York or in possession of other agencies of the Government, and which are to be used in the trial or in preparing for the trial of the New York case, examination of such records by the defendants, their attorneys and agents, by subpoena or otherwise, be deferred until March 9, 1953, or until such earlier date which may be agreed upon between counsel for the parties herein. Except as 249 stated herein, the orders of this Court of October 31, 1952 are unmodified.

ORDER

This matter having come on to be heard upon the motion of the defendants for the entry of an order pursuant to Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure directing the United States of America and the attorneys for the Government to permit the defendant, their agents and attorneys, to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents or tangible objects obtained by the Government by seizure or by process from General Commercial Acceptance Company, New York City, New York, and it appearing to the Court that such items may be material to the preparation of the defense;

It Is Ordered, that the United States of America and the attorney for the Government, permit the defendants, their attorneys and agents to inspect and to copy, photograph or photostat the books, papers, documents or tangible objects obtained from or belonging to General Commercial Acceptance Company, New York City, New York, pertaining to Eatsum Food Products Co. and General Confections, Inc., including, without limitation of the generality of the foregoing, four drawers of card index 252 records summarizing information in regard to accounts receivable of said Eatsum Food Products Co. and General Confections, Inc., which at some undisclosed time prior to January 19, 1953, were taken by Government agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue from General Commercial Acceptance Company, New York City, New York.

It Is Further Ordered that all of the said books, papers, documents, records and tangible objects, including said four drawers of card index records, shall be made so available at the office of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New York City, New York (or at such other place as they may be located), beginning on the 9th day of February, 1953, and from day to day thereafter (except Saturdays, Sundays and Federal holidays), during the usual hours of business on each day, until said inspection and copying shall have been completed. The plaintiff and the attorney for the Government shall permit the removal of such of said books, papers, documents, or tangible objects as the defendants, their agents or attorneys, shall desire to be copied in the form of photographs, photostats or microfilm; and to that end, shall appoint a custodian to accompany the defendants, their agents or attorneys, who shall see that the items to be photographed, photostated or microfilmed are kept intact and returned to said office.

And this matter further coming on to be heard upon the motion of the defendants for the entry of an order amending the order entered by this Court on October 31, 1952, pursuant to the prior motion of the defendants under Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure; and it appearing to the Court that said order of October 31, 1952, remains in full force and effect by virtue of the Court's order of December 26, 1952;

It Is Ordered, that the United States of America
253 and the attorneys for the Government, on or before the 10th day of February, 1953, produce for inspection and copying by the defendants, their agents and attorneys, the books, papers, documents or tangible objects in its possession obtained by seizure or by process from David G. Lubben, Eatsum Food Products Co., a sole proprietorship, General Confections, Inc. and Reserve Trading Company, not including such books, papers, documents, or tangible objects which are to be used in connection with the criminal cases referred to in the Court's order of December 26, 1952, and which are now pending in the Southern District of New York, at the office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, in the United States Court House, Chicago, Illinois; and that when said items are so produced, the parties to the above-entitled cause, their agents and attorneys, be permitted to joint access thereto.

254 MEMORANDUM

Defendants have no unqualified right to have books, records, etc., subject to examination under Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, transported for their convenience for the purpose of inspection or copying. However, in view of the delays in affording the defendants an opportunity to inspect the documents in question, and the expense to which defendants have already been subjected in connection therewith, it seems that the requested order of the defendants for the transportation of the documents from New York to Chicago to the office of the United States Attorney there is reasonable and should be granted. It should be clearly understood, however, that the books, papers, documents, etc., referred to in the above order and which are to be transported to the United States Attorney's office at Chicago for such inspection do not include the books, records, etc., which are to be used in connection with the trial of the New York cases. Hence, the modification requested by the United States Attorney of the Northern District of Illinois in this regard, and as noted in the above order, seems desirable and necessary in order to avoid confusion. I see no necessity, in view of the order of this Court of December 26, 1952, of requiring the plaintiff to make a further showing as to the items which are vital in the prosecution of the proceedings in New York. The representative of the United States Attorney's office of the Southern District of New York, as well as Mr. Cunningham, Special Assistant Attorney General, assured this Court at the Duluth hearing that all books, records, etc., covered by the order of this Court of October 31, 1952, and which are not vital to the trial of the New York cases, would be available for defendants' inspection at any reasonable time. It is 255 this portion of the books, records, etc., which are to be transported to Chicago on or before February 10, 1953. The Court has no reason to assume that plaintiff, through its representatives, will not in good faith comply with the spirit as well as the terms of the order of this Court which reflects the understanding between the Court and Government counsel.

This memorandum is made a part of the foregoing order.

Gunnar H. Nordbye
Judge.

256 And afterwards on, to wit, the 6th day of April, 1953 came the Plaintiff by its attorneys and filed in the Clerk's office of said Court its certain Motion in words and figures following, to wit:

MOTION

The plaintiff, by its attorney, moves that the trial of the above entitled cause, which is now set for Monday, April 6, 1953, be continued and be reset for trial for Monday, April 20, 1953.

In support of this Motion the plaintiff submits the attached affidavit of Arthur B. Cunningham.

258 And on the same day, to wit, the 6th day of April, 1953 there was filed in the Clerk's office of said Court a certain Affidavit Of Arthur B. Cunningham, Special Assistant To The Attorney General At Washington, D. C., in words and figures following, to wit:

AFFIDAVIT.

Arthur B. Cunningham, being first duly sworn, says that he is a Special Assistant to the Attorney General at Washington, D. C., and as such Special Assistant and as a part of his official duties he has been assigned the trial of the above named cause.

That Charles J. Mammel, CPA, age 63, is employed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue as a revenue agent and as such was assigned as chief revenue agent in the investigation of this cause.

That on Sunday, March 29, 1953, at approximately 9:00 o'clock P.M., while in the presence of the affiant and while engaged in the preparation of the trial of this cause, Mr. Mammel suffered a complete physical and mental breakdown.

That since that date until the date hereof Mr. Mammel has been confined to his home, in bed, and has been receiving care and treatment from a Practitioner.

That on the date hereof, contrary to instructions but in view of the imminence of this case, Mr. Mammel attempted to return to his office but suffered a relapse, and is again confined to his home.

It is further averred that Mr. Mammel, in view of his investigative information obtained in the past four 260 years, is an indispensable witness and his presence is necessary for the conduct of the trial of this case.

The affiant further avers that David G. Lubben of San Juan, Puerto Rico, is a necessary witness of the plaintiff in the trial of this case.

That the affiant has been advised and therefore avers that David Lubben has been the chief prosecuting witness at the trial of Charles Welock, a former county official of Bergen County New Jersey, at Hackensack, New Jersey, and has been in attendance there since March 15th, and was not released as a witness in said criminal trial until April 1, 1953.

That as such chief prosecuting witness Mr. Lubben was harassed, vilified, slandered and defamed to such an extent that as a result thereof he is presently in such mental and physical condition that he will be unable to properly testify until he is given a reasonable opportunity to recover from the ordeal that he has been subjected to.

The affiant further avers that on March 30th at approximately 5:00 o'clock P.M. he was served with a motion relative to the taking of a deposition of Sidney Kurtz at Miami Beach, Florida, on April 8, 1953.

The affiant avers that in order that the plaintiff's interest be properly protected at the taking of such deposition it would be necessary for the affiant to be personally present which would necessitate the granting of a recess in the event the trial of this cause began on April 6, 1953.

The above entitled matter came on for hearing before the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, a Judge of the above court, in the United States Court House, Minneapolis, Minnesota, at 9 o'clock A. M., on April 3, 1953.

Appearances:

Arthur B. Cunningham, Assistant United States Attorney, Chicago, Illinois, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Vincent O'Brien, Esq., 105 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois, Attorney for Defendants.

---

2 The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Cunningham. I assume you have given Mr. O'Brien a copy of the affidavit and notice that was left with me this morning.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, yesterday I delivered to Mr. O'Brien's office, both a copy of the motion and a copy of the affidavit.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cunningham: Now, the motion of course I will state briefly is a motion that this cause be continued from the 6th day of April until the 20th day of April, 1953, and the reasons I have requested this motion, Your Honor, are set out in the affidavit, but I would like to amplify the matters contained in the affidavit.

My motion for continuance in this matter is based on three grounds. The first ground being the matter of the illness of one Charles Mammel. Charles Mammel is the revenue agent that has been working on this case for approximately four years. He is age 63, a certified public accountant and is an employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. We have been engaged for the past two weeks preparing for this trial and last Sunday night in the office of the United States Attorney in Chicago, after we had worked all that day, at about 9 o'clock, to the best of 3 my recollection, Mr. Mammel just utterly collapsed.

Mr. Mammel started to make some remarks that weren't too coherent. He was rational, but he was not responsive to questions that we put to him and certain remarks that he made indicated that he just wasn't himself. He had been—we had been working in a conference room. We moved to one of the offices. He called his wife and sat down in a chair and we couldn't move him. We couldn't get him up. We tried, we wanted to help him and he refused us our assistance. He wouldn't let us touch him, and we questioned him about matters. He said, "All I want to be is left alone. Leave me alone," insisted we go away from him and said a few things that indicated to me that, for instance, one remark about something he had to do that I knew he had already done, and at his insistence that he be left alone, and practically urged us away from him; we left; but left him in the care of one of the Assistant United States Attorneys. After this, I think he stayed there some three-quarters of an hour and finally made his way home. Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday he was confined to his home, and to his bed, and the first two days why we couldn't even talk to him, could get no response out of him. Yesterday, after I had talked to Your Honor on the telephone I called his home and found that he had left. He got to town, one of the special 4 agents talked to him, saw him in town, and he was just in no shape. He felt so terrible that he felt he must return to his home. I made inquiry relative to what medical attention he had and found he was administered to by what is known as a practitioner, by reason of his religious beliefs, he does not call doctors, but was administered to by what is known in the Christian Science belief as a practitioner, and it is my opinion in view of the investigative information that he has, that he is an indispensable witness in the conduct of this case. He has worked on the case, as I said, a great many years and he is the technician in the case. We do have the special agent or investigators of facts, but the technical matters, all those of revenue agents, it is he that has made widespread investigation, both of the various ventures that one of our principal witnesses was engaged in and he is also the one man that can testify and be of technical assistance to the Government insofar as the records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company are concerned; and in view of his illness, it is my feeling that his absence will affect the case materially, and I feel that the Government should not go forward at this time in his absence.

Now, with respect to the grounds No. 2, is a matter of one David Lubben who will be the chief witness, one 5 of the chief witnesses for the Government. Mr. Lubben has been engaged in the trial of the case in New Jersey as a principal prosecuting witness. The case at Hackensack, New Jersey involved misconduct in office by a man by the name of Charles Wells, a former county official there. David Lubben was harassed during the course of the trial by reason of his testimony there, he was defamed, he was villified, he was slandered, and his conversations with the special agent, he indicated that he is in such shape he didn't think he could possibly at this time go ahead in another case where he feels possibly the same situation might prevail.

I have with me a newspaper clipping of that case I would like to submit to the Court as some indication of the matters that he was subjected to during the course of that trial, and I know nothing about his physical condition except his statements that he is so wrought up, he doesn't feel like he could go forward without some time in this case, and he also is one of the principal witnesses in the case.

The third ground was the matter of the taking of a deposition on next Wednesday requested by the defendant.

The Court: I think I should tell you in that regard,
6 and I regret now I didn't send a copy of the letter to you, I wrote to Mr. O'Brien when Mr. O'Brien sent me that petition with reference to that deposition, I, of course, noted the date of April 8th, and knowing that it might be in the middle of the trial I suggested in my letter to Mr. O'Brien we defer the taking of that deposition until I had an opportunity to confer with both of you on April 6th, and then some date could be set that would be convenient to both counsel, but I neglected to send you a copy of that letter.

Mr. Cunningham: I mention that in my motion as the third possible ground of reasons, not knowing that, of course, Your Honor.

That is, in my statements now are the position of the Government in this instance, and I regret that I have to take this position, regret the short notice to counsel for the defendant, but I feel for the best interests of the Government in view of the circumstances, I would like and request this matter be continued for some fourteen days.

The Court: Well, what assurance do you have Mr. Mammel is going to be in condition to go forward on the 20th?

Mr. Cunningham: I have no particular assurance. I do know these things have happened to him before 7 and they don't last too long. This Mr. Mammel is a hard worker. He works long hours, and in view of his age these things do happen occasionally, but they do not extend over a long period of time, and he recoups himself, and he indicates that he feels that he will be able to go forward at that time.

The Court: All right.

Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I regret the illness of Mr. Mammel, and I understand personally why counsel would want to make this motion, but I believe that the question which he has presented here is what is in the general interest of the parties on the showing made and not what the Government thinks in its best interests in presenting the case. My people now, as before, are interested in obtaining a speedy trial of the case, and for the record I would like to assemble a few of the things at this point which seems to me bear on that subject.

First, I ask that the Court take judicial notice of the affidavit which Mr. Leone, the United States Attorney filed in the cause here December 3rd, and also that the Court take judicial notice of the official transcript of that proceeding of December 3rd of which I have here my copy, and I am not sure as a practical matter whether 8 the original is here or at Chicago. If it is not here and if it should be of any pertinency to the Court, my copy is available.

Second, I ask the Court to take judicial notice of the defendants' motion to dismiss this action because of the Government's delay of the trial which motion was filed by us December 3rd at Duluth, and for the Court's convenience I do have an extra copy of that, since it was printed. I ask that there be read and copied into the record and returned to me by the reporter, my copy of a letter of March 31, 1953 from Myles J. Lane, United States

Attorney for the Seventh District of New York, as the original of which is said to have been sent as is directed, to your Honor. This is Mr. Leone's letter concerning the unavailability of the partnership records.

Re: United States v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al
Northern District of Illinois

Honorable Sir:

"Reference is made to your Honor's orders dated December 26, 1952, and January 29, 1953, in the above
9 entitled matter, and a subpoena duces tecum served upon me by the defendants on March 11, 1953 pursuant to said orders.

"On March 27, 1953 the Honorable Henry W. Goddard filed an opinion in this district in the case of United States vs. William Giglio et al, C 139-206 et seq. His Honor granted certain motions made by the defendants to dismiss the indictments pending against them on the grounds that they were deprived of rights guaranteed to them under the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Judge Goddard further ordered that '• • • The Government is directed to return to the respective defendants the partnership and personal records produced by them in response to the subpoenaes.' In view of said order I shall be unable to comply with that portion of the subpoena which demands the production of records '• • • (including partnership books, papers, documents or objects, however obtained from William Giglio, one of the partners thereof,) • • •'.

"I have apprised Judge Goddard in the presence of respective counsels for the various defendants in the Giglio case of your Honor's order. The defendants have assumed the position that they do not wish to permit the production by me of any of those records, but rather they desire compliance with Judge Goddard's order. As to the balance of the material demanded in the subpoena, I shall produce them on the return date of the subpoena, April 6, 1953.

"I am submitting the above information so that your Honor may apprise me of any thoughts as to how I might better cooperate with the conflicting orders.

Respectfully,

Myles J. Lane,
United States Attorney.

C/o United States Attorney,

I am not sure Mr. Cunningham saw that but there is a copy to Mr. Holland.

Mr. Cunningham: I received a copy of it.

Mr. O'Brien: And I call the Court's attention to the order in this case entered over the defendants' objections denying their motion to dismiss the cause because of the delay and continuing the trial from December 9, 1952 to April 6, 1953. I have a photostatic copy of Judge Goddard's opinion dismissing the Eastern case and ordering return of the papers as stated in Mr. Leone's letter, but in—

The Court: Not Mr. Leone's letter?

Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry, Mr. Myles J. Lane's, yes, sir, but in view of that letter, since it was my only photostat, I am keeping that, Your Honor. I don't think the reasons are important, it is both the Judge's opinion and his order.

Now, as to the third ground of the motion, it is somewhat out of order, but I would like to say for the record that my motion to take the deposition of the witness Kurtz, because of his inability, due to illness, to appear in response to the subpoena which we served on him is withdrawn as against any continuance, and since the order is entered or subject to date, as I understand it, if that is the case, then I would abandon that deposition as against a continuance, although I do say to Your Honor that we arranged without any fanfare to send that matter to a firm at the place in Florida, whatever it is, Miami, perhaps I said that in the motion to you, and it wouldn't require the presence of any of the lawyers here of record or in our office. It is simply the lawyers down there who could take that testimony, and I should think that the 12 Attorney General's office could have managed to make provision to cover that. The time is short. I originally drafted the motion for April 3rd, but I couldn't see how we would get it back and get it down there by then. It is material and of some importance, but not of any controlling importance.

Now, the next thing I would like to view, briefly, is to discuss what seems clear to me to be the legal insufficiency of the showing made. First, of course, we do not assent to taking a matter of this importance either on affidavits or on the statements of counsel. By that, I mean nothing more than the legal point, that under the Supreme Court decisions, the Glasser case, I do not have it now in mind, it has been cited to Your Honor before in this cause, and under the practice in our Circuit, such affidavits are not the equivalent of evidence in the absencec of assent.

Second, the affidavit of averment that Mr. Mammel suffered a complete physical and mental breakdown is a conclusion unsupported by any sufficient averment of facts and unsupported by the certificate of a licensed doctor of medicine. The same is true of the averment of relapse, only more so because that is a weaker averment and Mr. Mammel's present confinement to his home. The af-
13 fidavit, and I think this is of substance too, both the affidavit and counsel's statement fails to show to the Court that there were not other agents who worked with Mr. Mammel in all of the essential and pertinent parts of this case of the Government's case who would be qualified to testify on the trial of the cause in his place, assuming that he should continue to be unavailable. There is no showing to the Court, and I don't think that Mr. Cunningham is in a position to make a factual or a legal showing that Mr. Mammel would not be available before the time in which he expects to close the Government's case. Mr. Cunningham would have to admit that, as we know, and we know only part, that he would have to admit that they have many witnesses under subpoena and personally I just don't see in view of the cross-examination and the like, how the main Government case can be closed before somewhere between the 16th and 20th of April, of that I am morally certain, and at that rate there is no showing of that point. Now, insofar as Mr. Mammel may have interrogated or interviewed prospective witnesses in the case, any testimony on his part concerning that would manifestly be hearsay, and all those witnesses are available to the processes of the Court, and it is their evidence which would be the best evidence, and the only admissible evidence.

14 Next, I should like to say that the allegation that Mr. Mammel is an indispensable witness in that his presence is necessary for the conduct of the trial is a mere conclusion and unjustified on the basis of any facts disclosed either by the affidavit or by what counsel himself has said.

Now, are there any facts stated to show why Lubben is a necessary witness except as the Court may take notice of that from the prior discussions which have been had on one phase or another, but it is not averred that, it isn't even averred by way of conclusion that he is an indispensable witness and a direct averment that Lubben was harassed, etcetera. I don't know what the newspaper article says, but I have no, nor have I any knowledge of details of the harassment, vilification and the other terms that counsel uses, and I don't see how Mr. Cunningham could have that direct knowledge.

The Court: I don't think I would be particularly concerned with the phase of the motion with reference to Lubben.

Mr. O'Brien: Very well, sir. I would like, it's short, I will finish it, Judge, because I do want to make the record too.

Now, going to the factual side of it, more directly in a more substantive way, Your Honor will recall, not 15 from affidavits or statements, but from undisputed testimony adduced before you in open court on another motion that the Bureau had agents at the Shotwell plant for some four years preceding the indictments, not only out of the office of the agent in charge, that is Mr. Wright's office, but also out of the office of the special agent, that is the Intelligence Unit.

Your Honor also knows, and I remind you that the evidence further showed that since September 1952 when you first came to Chicago on the case, and when you ordered the production of the Shotwell records which in the interim we have refused to let them continue to examine, that since that time from, except and right down to the time of hearing, right down to date, as a matter of fact, those agents are there at times as many as ten and fifteen, not just Mr. Mammel.

Now, I think that both of us would agree, and it perhaps remains for the Court to find out, that this is a complex case, it is not a simple thing. It really extends counsel and lots of counsel, and lots of help, and when you get a thing that complex you can't have everything your way, you can't have every point lined up and every person lined up just at the time you want. Illustratively, back when the matter was set for December 1st, we had from about the 18th of November, the 15th at the earliest actually, to inspect all that stuff down East. We knew we couldn't do it. We knew we couldn't do it in an adequate way and said so in our papers, but we were ready to go to trial, and when we couldn't get them at all, or were delayed for some nine days in doing it, on a proper showing to Your Honor, and a very careful and complete showing without any such loose showing as this, we got nine days more, exactly equal, I think, to the time we had been deprived or kept away from the books. Now, I think a fair way to look at, or to apprise the sufficiency of the plaintiff's motion would be to assume that the Government,—I know Your Honor has said in his last order there are very few parties, but nevertheless, assume at this stage of this case the defendants were presenting this motion rather than the plaintiff, if he were, I would have to say that on the showing made, I am sure that we could not reasonably expect the Court to grant a continuance. When you consider also the prior record in the case, as I have tried to assemble it for your recollection, I am sure that you will have to say that on the face of the record as on the face of the motion itself, it ought to be denied.

Now, finally the matter of possible or probable inconvenience to the Court, it is not for me to discuss in point of fact. I don't know anything about that except that 17 we have been advised as Your Honor said, that you expect to be in Chicago on Monday, from which we are entitled to conclude that as far as the Court is concerned, it is ready to proceed with the trial, and that is of some importance since our right to a speedy trial under the cases is always subject to the condition of the Court's call. I think the Court was similarly right to go forward with this trial last December when, on December 3rd the other motion was made.

Now, I want to say again, more to the substance, that continuances have been and will be materially detrimental to defendants, and some of the reasons, those I have been able to think of between the time Mr. Cunningham told me about this and the time I saw his motion at quarter to five yesterday are these:

First, when the Government, let me jump over here, when that last continuance occurred, Judge, we had to notify all of our witnesses, and we had to do the work over again, not only of locating and serving them, but getting ourselves back to the case in the way that we then were. Since that time, and because of something that intervened which I will mention, there have been a good many people added to that list, and we have had the job of serving those additional people too, whose names 18 were revealed when we went or when we reviewed the papers which were made available for inspection, some of which were the partnership papers, having been held until March 9th.

Now, I represent to the Court as a fact in my own knowledge, that we now have more than fifteen witnesses —I mean not all material witnesses, located and served, their fees paid, transportation and arrangements made in Chicago and all of that. We have them from New York, New Jersey, Florida, Puerto Rico, Nevada, California, Texas, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana and Ohio, with the greatest number of the witnesses out of Chicago. It was a staggering job to find those people and to get them served and to do it. We don't have the slightest assurance that we will be able to do it again or that they will be available because many of these witnesses, Your Honor, they have no connection with us, they don't know us, they are subpoenaed and in this type of case they are reluctant and we can't just order them back or call them back on a subpoena. We have to reserve them, and I say we do not know, and we have no way of knowing whether many of the material witnesses who are now under process will be available at that time.

The lawyers, there are three of them of record, and 19 the others who are not of record, have put aside all matters for this trial. They can't continue to earn a living if they have to do that over and over. They can't take care of their clients, and I think to go through this work again at a later date, whether it be one week or two weeks, the letdown and interruptions are an unfair burden to put upon them and also manifestly only engulfs an additional expense to their clients.

Now, I want to mention the special thing I stated and that is this. When the Government asked for the last continuance, I say that it knew or must have known that it couldn't possibly get to trial in the New York case by April 6th in the then state of the record in that case. That transcript shows, Your Honor pointed out, it was a busy district. Mr. Leone was here from that district, the case—they hadn't even filed preliminary motions in the case, and the indictment was returned only last September. I say, as based on the facts that I have served, and I am entitled to my opinion and so is the Court, that the real objective in that motion is to get the Chicago agents into New York to make exhaustive examinations and audits of records there, including the partnership records which Judge Goddard finds were wrongfully taken from Giglio so that they could attempt to use those records in our 20 case which they were not then ready to do. The records had only been turned in and great cases of them in September. Now, what did that mean to us aside from the matter of tactics? First, and this is part of the detriment, they were given a long head start on us, as soon as that was entered, and before they were free to look at those cases of records. We couldn't look at them until March 9th. They said they didn't want us to look at them because if I got them maybe I would give them to the defendants in that case, but after they told you that, Myles Lane tendered all of the records to the defendants in that case and let them come in and start to look, and not to us, but the defendant in that case, and why did he tender them after Mr. Leone's statement? Because he wanted to be in a position to tell Judge Goddard, or whoever else was sitting, that they didn't need to have so much time to prepare for trial, because he had kindly made the records available to them. Well, regardless of all that, we didn't get them until March 9, 1953, and between that time and the present time we had to, at great expense, send auditors in there, speed up the work to be ready at large cost, which would never have been the case if we could have looked at them when we wanted to, and which we should have been permitted to do, not as far as Your Honor 21 then knew, but on the facts as they were, that is the fact.

Now, we have a situation here at hand which I think, and I express only my opinion, in view of Judge Goddard's order, I may say too that after Judge Goddard entered that order March 27th, that was last Saturday, the parties went into court, the defendants are represented by Lloyd Paul Strieker and others, Mr. Strieker objected to having those partnership records sent on to Chicago because I think that he took the position that his clients might be re-indicted inasmuch as the indictments, the six indictments, all the indictments were dismissed on the ground that defendants had been deprived of their Constitutional rights before the Judge handling the Grand Jury and before the Grand Jury, and under your rules, although the statute has run, there may be an indictment at the next succeeding term of court if there be a grand jury then sitting and if it is not brought in then there can't be, if the statute is run, as I understand it, Your Honor will know,—at any rate Mr. Strieker told Judge Goddard that he doe not want those records in Chicago and he wanted them turned back to Mr. Giglio. Mr. Leone made a different request and Judge Goddard told him that that order meant exactly what it said and that it was quite clear and that the original is, and any copies of 22 those records the Government had would be turned back to those defendants or else.

Now, the difficulty is, the tactical difficulty as Mr. Leone points out, they may not have for proper use in the Chicago case or anywhere else those partnership records on which they got that running start, and without which they would have great difficulty in proving that part of their bill of particulars which says that we got overages from that partnership. That's what it is.

The Court: Well, will they gain anything by the delay if that is the situation?

Mr. O'Brien: I think they hope to; I think they hope to find substantive evidence in lieu of that evidence, that is my opinion; indeed, my precise note is, I think that the real purpose of the motion is, that the Government is embarrassed by Judge Goddard's order, the forthwith return to Giglio of the partnership papers and wants time to find some possible substitute for those records.

The Court: What about your situation with reference to your inability to examine those papers?

Mr. O'Brien: Well, we have examined those papers starting March 9th, we examined them, and I said to Your Honor that we sent our accountants, we speeded up 23 the work and we examined them and took off such notes as we thought were material and as we could get in that short time.

The Court: Well—

Mr. O'Brien: Many, many cases we couldn't read.

The Court: That wasn't entirely clear whether or not those particular records Judge Goddard ordered to be returned to the defendants had been made available to you?

Mr. O'Brien: No.

The Court: Had they?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, they had, because Judge, his order was not entered to March 27th.

The Court: Well, I appreciate that but I didn't know whether or not for some reason—

Mr. O'Brien: We were there promptly March 9th or 10th and spent until last weekend.

The Court: Well, in any event then, Judge Goddard's order didn't affect your right to copy and photostat all of the documents covered by my order?

Mr. O'Brien: It did from that time on, yes.

The Court: Well, I mean, I take it that up to that time you completed your examination?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, we had completed everything
24 that there was time to look at, that is true, we were far from completing the inspection of all the records.

The Court: Well, you had the time you thought would be sufficient when we discussed that matter in Duluth.

Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't remember what was said about it in Duluth.

The Court: In any event, you did have access of the documents from March 9th to March 27th?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

The Court: But your contention is—

Mr. O'Brien: I may say too, Your Honor, that the partnership—I may say two other things. When all the people got there, while they had, I don't know, maybe thirty or forty cases of detailed papers of the partnership, they had two sets of general ledger sheets, one for one year and one for another year, and outside of those two sets there were no book records of that partnership and then last Tuesday in Chicago after following Judge Goddard's orders, Mr. Krane, you know, tendered to me at Chicago for inspection the original of some eighteen bundles of checks, five or six sets of worksheets, longhand sheets, some memorandum and material which I have a record at home that he did not think that we had seen with the possible exception of some three sheets.

The Court: Well, but regardless of that, you would be ready to go to trial on April 6th?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, certainly. We are ready to go to trial, that is true. I think that covers everything, Your Honor.

The Court: When are your witnesses subpoenaed?

Mr. O'Brien: They are subpoenaed, for the most part, for the 6th and the 8th. Some of them are subpoenaed for the 13th and a few of them for the 15th. I have a schedule, I didn't think to bring it, but I think most of them are subpoenaed for the 6th, the division was made two ways, Your Honor, first, wherever we subpoenaed records, we returned the subpoena for the 6th with the thought that perhaps we could see the records sometime in advance of the commencement of the trial where it was a straight subpoena and not a duces tecum subpoena, we tried to stagger it in anticipating the Government's case would take maybe into Wednesday or Thursday or some of the next week, and the more recent subpoenas, the two I saw yesterday were for the 20th.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, I would like to say this in reply. The inference drawn by Mr. O'Brien as to bad faith on the part of the Government both at the Duluth hearing and now, I would like to deny. I don't believe that there was any bad faith on Mr. Leone's part, and I know there was no bad faith on my part insofar as the continuance at Duluth was concerned. He expressed, at least I know I did, I expressed to the Court truthfully and honestly what the reasons for our concurring in Mr. Leone's request for a continuance, and it was for none of the purposes indicated by counsel.

Now, at this hearing there is an implication, maybe a little more than an implication, that there is bad faith on my part or now at this time insofar as those records are concerned, that Judge Goddard returned to the defendant in that case, I say to Your Honor now, there is no bad faith and there is no such intention in my mind, not even thought of, Your Honor. My reasons are the reasons I have set forth in the affidavit and the reasons I have stated to Your Honor. It is because of the illness of a man I think is absolutely indispensable to the trial of this case. I will agree there were a number of revenue agents that worked on this case, but all those revenue agents so far as I know, every one, and I am almost positive of this, every one of those revenue agents worked at the directions of Mr. Mammel. They were under his supersion, and the results of their efforts were directed to him.

I believe as a matter of evidence, and I apologize for 27 making this suggestion, that Mr. Mammel is the only person who could testify as to the results of all their efforts which stem from all these places to him, that he alone, that perhaps this agent might testify as to one circumstance or another but the over-all, only he can testify and interpret what I believe to be necessary interpretation, and then in this case, so I respectfully ask the Court, that this brief time be allowed in order that he may have an opportunity to fully recover and be in court; and I might say not only do I feel that he must be a witness, but I also feel that he must be present in the court room throughout the conduct of the case. I feel more so now than before this hearing started in view of the statements made by Mr. O'Brien relative to the extent of the testimony they desire to introduce and the number of people and the accounts, I feel more than ever that he is indispensable to us, and he is indispensable in a good mental frame and physical frame of mind.

Now, the Government has had a great number of people work on this case for an extended period of time at a great expense to the Government in preparation. I would hate to see that lost by reason of the failure of Mr.

Mammel at this time who, I feel must be present during, and testify, but also very important that he be present during the conduct of this case.

28 The Court: What have you to say about Mr. O'Brien's position with reference to the prejudice as the result of having already subpoenaed the witnesses and staggering their appearance to coincide with the original plan of the trial starting on April 6th?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, if the Court please, the witnesses could be notified, as the Government must necessarily notify the witnesses, by telegram, it may be a witness or two from a distant point that would have to start earlier, but in view of the fact that the Government's case starts on the 6th, I don't know how in any event the defense witnesses would be necessary on the 6th. I have advised Mr. O'Brien in the past that I felt the Government's case would take at a minimum five days, trial days. I feel although it is possible it may be shorter, but I don't see how it could be.

Mr. O'Brien: That was without cross, I gathered?

Mr. Cunningham: That is direct, but cross-examination would still extend that time further I think. I regret the inconvenience, but I hate to feel that the structure that has been built by many hours of labor, by many people, would be impaired, and I feel that these two weeks' delay, and I again say to Your Honor there is 29 no bad faith on my part, it is not for the purposes of examining any records. I have no such thought in mind. The only thought I have in mind was the necessity of this man at trial and what I have said in that affidavit is true, Your Honor, and there is no ulterior motive on my part.

The Court: Well, you have asked for a two weeks' continuance, supposing Mr. Mammel isn't ready on the 20th?

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, I will just have to take that chance, and Mr. O'Brien further suggested we had no assurance he would be there throughout the trial, that is another chance that the Government would have to bear.

The Court: Well, what do you mean when you say you will have to take that chance?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, I feel that he will be available.

The Court: Well, suppose he isn't, what then?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, I would rather not answer that question, what I might have to do or think about the case at that time, Your Honor, if you don't object to my not saying.

The Court: Well, you see, you have come in here without any medical foundation for Mr. Mammel's health, and you say that's not done because he belongs to the Christian Science faith and is not attended by a doctor, but on the other hand I suppose even a Christian Scientist wouldn't object to having a doctor to examine him if it wasn't for the purpose of treatment, isn't that right?

Mr. Cunningham: I can't answer that question as to their faith. I understand their treatment and care that they receive, and I just learned this, is from persons known as practitioners and who, as I understand the matter, have a discussion and thought, and that is the type of treatment that is carried on. It is I guess, I don't know of any further, I am not too sure of the usual treatment in that type of thing, but as I understand it it is a thought proposition and these individuals counsel with you and discuss with you your feelings and in that way hope to aid you in your recovery. I am neither condemning or accepting, but I am just relating the best information I have concerning that condition.

The Court: Well, if Mr. Mammel continues to be ill, have you anyone to step in his place and take over this so-called technical testimony that you intend to have him offer?

Mr. Cunningham: The only thing I could do in that instance, Your Honor, would be to have somebody train in the meanwhile to take over that position.

The Court: Is it fair to ask you what you intend to produce, is it fair to ask you as to what you intend to have Mr. Mammel testify, is he going to attempt to express some opinion from the assembled evidence insofar as it may be in the province of a certified public accountant to express an opinion?

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct, Your Honor, as an expert, I expect to have to be able to use him as an expert and as a person who is familiar with the facts, also to the whole examination of books and records that only he at this moment is fully cognizant of the whole, everything funneled into him as an individual.

Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me, I shouldn't intrude, but the statute that you have here is based on the old Shop Book Rule, is applicable both to criminal and civil cases so that anybody who looked at books, records kept and adduced subject to verification items based on that, those would be admissible without signature by the man who examined them and if not, then your statutes—I mean, you have statute records regularly kept in the Court's business.

The Court: I don't believe that that was what Mr. Mammel was going to cover, as I understand it.

Mr. O'Brien: Once those are in, any competent 32 accountant—

The Court: I see what you mean. I suppose that Mr. Cunningham's problem is to have a competent accountant trained between now and the time of trial?

Mr. Cunningham: Mr. Mammel, if Your Honor please, is in that position now. No other person is and that would take time in view of the complexities of this matter, for somebody else to get in the same equal position.

The Court: Well, I don't think that there is any bad faith on the part of the Government in making this motion. I might say to Mr. O'Brien, I don't know whether he knows it or not, but Mr. Leone called me up on March 7th or 8th and wanted to came out here and make a motion for an extension of time in the order which I have made, and which required the production of these documents on March 9th.

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, I did know that.

The Court: He told me over the phone there might be some conflict between my order and some order made by a New York Judge, and I asked him whether or not the order had been made by a New York Judge and he said no. Well, I said then as far as that is concerned, I don't know of any reason why you shouldn't obey the subpoena. I am not interested in having you come out 33 and make a motion for any further time in view of the specific understanding that was reflected in the record when the argument was made in Duluth.

Mr. O'Brien: Now, Judge, excuse me, I have a message from Mr. Kirby which says this, that Mr. Mammel worked all day yesterday and was observed by Lynch's brother, both of whom are working on the books. I don't know what it means.

Mr. Cunningham: That is incorrect, Your Honor. He did come to the office and did find he couldn't go forward. In view of the eminence of this case, he felt that he had to be present. He is a man ordinarily of great vigor and desire to go ahead, and he is so concerned, but he did come down to the office and had to go home and was home. I think he left, I think he got to town by 9 o'clock and had to leave by 10. He couldn't take it. He is just in such a state he couldn't, and it was contrary, as I stated in my affidavit, contrary to instructions that he had received about leaving, but there is certainly Government witnesses present for interview yesterday, that he felt he just had to be there and he just,—he just couldn't make it and couldn't go on.

The Court: Well, Mr. Cunningham, it seems to me that if I am going to grant a continuance, that we should 34 have an understanding that regardless of Mr. Mammel's health that this trial should go forward to the date that I continue it to.

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct, Your Honor. It will go forward.

The Court: Obviously we just can't carry on with these continuances. The defendant is entitled to a speedy trial and while I don't believe that the continuance from December to April prejudiced the defendant, because I don't believe that the defendant was in the position, in view of the tremendous amount of work that had to be done, to be ready for trial on December 9th, and I don't believe that I did the defendant any wrong, so to speak, when I continued the matter until April. There may be a difference of opinion about it, I am merely expressing my opinion.

Mr. O'Brien: Let me correct you on the record, please, there aren't any records we got as a result of your order with relation to the proprietorship or general conventions and that's all we do get until March 9th. There weren't any of those which we didn't already have.

The Court: You never told me that.

Mr. O'Brien: I am stating prejudice in it—

The Court: You never let me believe—you let me believe that the examination of the documents in New 35 York were a matter of such utmost importance to your defense that you couldn't safely go to trial.

Mr. O'Brien: No. I--

The Court: Oh, yes.

Mr. O'Brien: I said that I needed to check the original records for cross-examination, that we wouldn't have them ready until that time, until the close of their case.

The Court: Well, I had a very clear impression and a very firm undertsanding.

Mr. O'Brien: The partnership records are the things that we should have had.

The Court: I don't know you differentiated between various records, but certainly you have indicated to me that there would be a manifest injustice if I didn't permit you to examine the New York records.

Mr. O'Brien: That is true.

The Court: Well, I am going to continue this matter until April 20th, and in accordance with the Government's request, but I think that the understanding must be, Mr. Cunningham, that the Government must be prepared to go forward on that date regardless of Mr. Mammel's health.

Mr. Cunningham: The Government will.

The Court: And an order of continuance will be 36 made with that understanding.

Mr. Cunningham: Very well, Your Honor.

The Court: Of course, the defendant is entitled to an exception to the Court's ruling and the record will so reflect.

I might say in passing that while that doesn't particularly concern the parties, but personally I am needed in my own District by reason of the tremendous amount of work that there is, notwithstanding that I would have been ready on the 6th if the parties were ready, but in view of the application for continuance, I will have enough work so that I am not entirely too unhappy about the motion, but be that as it may, that doesn't pertain to the defendants' rights.

Mr. O'Brien: No, I certainly am sure it does not, Your Honor.

The Court: As I stated before, I appreciate very much Mr. O'Brien's willingness to come here on such short notice and to avoid a trip on my part to Chicago for this purpose.

Mr. O'Brien: The only way I can rationalize it now is we are glad we don't have to work right into Easter. I feel a little guilty, I haven't had a chance to be home.

Mr. Cunningham: I apologize for the short notice,
37 I was hopeful that we could go forward, and I waited until the time I couldn't wait any further.

The Court: Thank you, gentlemen.

I hereby certify the foregoing is a true and complete transcript of the proceedings in the above matter.

AFFIDAVIT

Arthur B. Cunningham, being first duly sworn, says that he is a Special Assistant to the Attorney General at Washington, D. C.; and as such Special Assistant, and as a part of his official duties, he has been assigned the trial of the above named case.

That the defendant, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, was during the calendar years 1945 and 1946 engaged in the manufacture and sale of candy, and in 1946 engaged in the sale of corn syrup.

That during the calendar years 1945 and 1946 David G. Lubben was a principal of the Eatsum Food Product Company, a sole proprietorship and a partnership, and also was a principal of General Confections, Inc. and Reserve Trading Company, and as such principal purchased large quantities of candy and certain amounts of corn syrup from the defendant corporation.

That in order to effect the aforementioned purchases the said David G. Lubben, as such principal, in accordance with an oral agreement entered into by him with the 267 defendants, was required and did pay to the defendants large sums of money in excess of the invoice price of these purchases.

It is further averred that David G. Lubben, as such principal, in accordance with an oral agreement entered into by him with the defendants, made purchases of candy for which purchases he received no invoices from the defendant corporation and that for said purchases he was required to and did make currency payments to the defendants based on regular invoice amounts plus over-invoice premium amounts.

It is further averred that substantially all of the over-invoice premium payments together with payments for uninvoiced purchases were personally made by David G. Lubben to the defendants in currency and such payments were made by him at the request of the defendants in a manner so as to conceal the true nature of these transactions; that in 1945 all of the over-invoice premium currency payments, totalling approximately $177,000.00, were paid to the defendants personally by David G. Lubben; that in 1946 the over-invoice currency premium payments and the currency payments on uninvoiced purchases totalled approximately $300,000.00 and of this sum David G. Lubben personally paid to the defendants approximately 83 per cent thereof.

The affiant further says that during the calendar years 1945 and 1946 and subsequent thereto the defendants had conversations with and made statements to David G. Lubben and to no other person relative to said currency-premium payments which are material to the issues in this case.

The affiant further says that none of the over-invoice payments or the payments for the uninvoiced sales received by the defendants from David G. Lubben were recorded on the books or records of the defendant corporation nor reported in its income tax returns for the calendar years 1945 and 1946.

268 The affiant further says that on April 8, 1953 he was telegraphically advised (Exhibit A) that said David G. Lubben was confined to a hospital in Puerto Rico; that subsequent thereto, the affiant was advised by Dr. Edwardo Montilla, Santurce, Puerto Rico, by letter dated April 8, 1952 (Exhibit B) which letter was received by the affiant on April 13, 1953, that David G. Lubben was hospitalized at the Presbyterian Hospital, San Juan, Puerto Rico; that he was suffering from asthmatic bronchitis and pneumonitis and was running a high temperature; that David Lubben would not be physically able to travel for a period of six to eight weeks if he makes a complete recovery from his pneumonitis and asthma.

The affiant further says that on April 13, 1953 he was telephonically advised from San Juan, Puerto Rico, by Samuel Davidson, attorney for David G. Lubben, that Mr. Lubben was still hospitalized and had suffered a relapse.

The affiant further says that the testimony of David G. Lubben is vital to the plaintiff in the trial of this case.

In view of the above, the plaintiff has filed its motion for a continuance of this cause.

In view of the above, the plaintiff has filed its motion for a continuance of this cause.

Arrived San Juan 7:00 A.M. April 14th. Visited Lubben several times during day Presbyterian Hospital wherein he has been confined for week. Condition not critical but serious according to Dr. Eduardo Montilla a leading physician in San Juan whose diagnosis and prognosis is expected to be completed on April 16th after X-ray and consultation. Lubbens condition reported further aggravated by method of service of defendants duces tecum subpoena on April 13th by U. S. Deputy Marshal Nepomuce Mas who was accompanied by an individual who refused to identify himself to Lubben Individual questioned by undersigned and his statements were contradictory with those of deputy Mas concerning purpose of the Lubben visit Indication possible attempted witness tampering. Individual when requested to appear before Assistant Usda Pascual Rivera, San Juan, identified himself as Dale Tanner, former F. B. I. Agent in the employ of the defense but not making it known to us Deputy Marshal Mas to whom Tanner stated he had /mat/ business with Lubben now admittedly a hoax. Assistant Usda Rivera asked Tanner the nature of his business with Lubben and Tanner replied that he would prefer not to state purpose but that he would admit it was being conducted on behalf 272 of the defense. After Tanner left conference the following West Indian telegram was presented to the undersigned by Asst. Usda Rivera. Telegram dated April 10th to Thomas I. Nado, Fiddler /Deposition Lawyers/, San Juan our information is Bookman is and has been in Puerto Rico. Please quietly contact Dale H. Tanner Phone One Five Sir Also Sole Motor Corporation Rio Piedras who can assist in locating him—O'Brien. Tanner denied having any business with either Lubben or Bookman whom he admittedly did not know. Please advise undersigned care of Assistant Usda Rivera Post Office Building San Juan what further action, if any, should be taken. Mr. Arthur Cunningham

Dep. Attorney General U.S.A.
U. S. District Attorney's Office
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Cunningham:

Mr. David Lubben of 50 Paseo Covandonga, San Juan, Puerto Rico, is one of my patients, and he has been requested to appear before Court on April 20, 1953.

I wish to report that Mr. Lubben has been suffering from a very severe attack of asthmatic bronchitis and pneumonitis for the past 3 days, his condition having become worse so that today I have hospitalized him at Presbyterian Hospital, San Juan, P. R. with a high temperature.

At Mr. Lubben's request, I am respectfully requesting that he be excused from appearing before Court on April 20th as he will not be physically able to travel for the next 6 to 8 weeks, if he makes a complete recovery from his pneumonitis and asthma.

If you require any additional information I will be glad to fu.. ish it, or you may request it directly from the Medical Director, Presbyterian Hospital, San Juan, P. R., where Mr. Lubben is hospitalized at present.

Sincerely yours,
Eduardo Montilla, M. D.

275 And afterwards on, to wit, the 1st day of June, 1953, there was filed in the Clerk's office of said Court a certain Transcript Of Proceedings Had On April 17, 1953, at Minneapolis, Minnesota, Before The Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, Judge in words and figures following, to wit:

1

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
For the Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

• • (Caption—No. 52 Cr. 143) • •

The above entitled matter came on for hearing before the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, a Judge of the above court, in the United States Court House, Minneapolis, Minnesota, at 9:00 A. M. until 10:00 A. M. and resumed again at 2:45 P. M. on April 17, 1953. The following is the 9:00 A. M. session.

Appearances:

Arthur B. Cunningham, Assistant United States Attorney, Chicago, Illinois, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Vincent O'Brien, Esq., and
William T. Kirby, Esq.,
Chicago, Illinois, Attorneys for Defendants.

2 The Court: Well, gentlemen, I assume you are here with reference to the United States vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al., and I am in receipt of a certain motion made by the United States for a resetting of the above matter, and an affidavit by Mr. Cunningham, a copy of a telegram and Doctor's certificate by Mr. Cunningham, mailed to me; and I assume a copy of that has been made available to Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cunningham: That is correct, Your Honor.

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, with reference to this motion for a continuance, I would like to state first of all that the wire attached to my motion was received by the office a week ago Wednesday, that is Exhibit A attached to the motion. As indicated by the wire, there was not much information contained therein, and their wire stated that it would be followed by a letter from this doctor. Now, that letter setting forth the condition of Mr. Lubben is dated April 8th. I did not receive that letter, Your Honor, until Monday, April 13th. The reason I didn't receive it until that time is because of the deposition that was taken in Miami on Friday, the deposition of Sidney Kurtz, and I wasn't able to get back to the office until on Monday. As soon as I had an opportunity
3 to find out about the contents of the letter and the letter stating what Mr. Lubben's physical condition was, I started immediately to make arrangements to have a special agent of the Treasury Department proceed to Puerto Rica for special supplemental investigation. It took all of the day of April 13th to get those negotiations under way and get the authority for him to proceed to determine, assist in determining the condition of Mr. Lubben. The agent that was designated to proceed to Puerto Rico is special agent James Touey of the Intelligence Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He did not leave until almost midnight on Monday.

Now, with respect to the motion, I don't desire to read it in its entirety, I would like to point to certain paragraphs in the motion.

The third paragraph, that during the calendar years

1945 and 1946, David G. Lubben was a principal of the Eatsome Food Products Company, a sole proprietorship and a partnership, and also a principal of General Confections, Incorporated, and Reserve Trading Company; and as such principal purchased large quantities of candy and certain amounts of corn syrup from the defendant corporation. During the period 1945 up until June 1st, the operation of the Eatsome Food Products Company was that of a sole proprietorship in which David Lubben was the owner. Thereafter, through the year 1945 up until March 8, 1946, the Eatsome Food Products Company was a partnership, the partnership consisting of two general partners, one David Lubben and the other William Giglio. There were some limited partners, but they were the two general partners. That partnership although maybe not dissolved, but at least it was in part dissolved by Lubben's withdrawal from that organization. The partnership then continued with William Giglio as the principal owner until its liquidation sometime in the fall of 1946. At the time of the withdrawal of Lubben from that partnership, he organized a corporation known as the General Confections Corporation. He was a principal, or perhaps the sole stockholder in that venture. The Reserve Trading Company was a wholly owned subsidiary, as I understand it, of the General Confections, Incorporated. I might state to the Court at this time, I should advise the court, that yesterday an attorney of William Giglio called at the office in Chicago and stated that he intended to file a motion to quash the service of the summons of one William Giglio and asked that that matter be heard today. I advised him that I would be present here in this Court and that I would not be available for hearing of that motion today. He stated in advance that the purpose of that motion was to quash a subpoena based on William Giglio's constitutional rights and not to testify to incriminate himself.

Now, I am giving the Court this background in order to show the essential necessity of David Lubben's presence in the trial of this case. He was the sole owner, sole proprietorship, of course, apparently, and will be the only witness available so far as the partnership venture is concerned. He is the sole owner of the General Confections, Incorporated, and he has full knowledge of transactions with respect to the Reserve Trading Corporation.

Now, the evidence in this case, and I might state to the Court, and I am going to be quite frank in what the evidence in this case is going to be to the extent of advising defense counsel, because I feel the necessity of this witness is such that I must go that far in explaining to the Court the absolute essential necessity of the presence of the witness Lubben.

Lubben, during the calendar years of 1945 and 1946, Lubben, through his companies and his various entities, purchased large quantities of candy from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. In addition to these purchases, 6 Lubben entered into an agreement with the defendants, an oral agreement with the defendants in this case, that in addition to paying the invoice price of the candy he purchased, he would and did pay an additional over-invoice price. Now, Lubben, nobody, no one can testify other than Lubben to that oral agreement that was entered into by him with the defendants in this case. In the event it was necessary for us to proceed with the trial, there would be no person available to the Government to testify as to what that contractual arrangement was between Mr. Lubben and these defendants, it would be absolutely lost to the Government.

In addition to the invoiced amounts which Lubben was required or did agree and did pay this over invoice premium amount, a further agreement was entered into by Lubben, an oral agreement, if the Court please, by which agreement certain materials would be shipped and sold to these various ventures of Lubben whereby the entire amount of the regular invoice prices, and the overages was paid for by Lubben in cash. These are what we have termed as unbilled shipments. Now, only Lubben, Lubben alone can testify relative to the payment of the amount of those unbilled shipments.

Now, in 1945, all of the over invoice amounts were paid in currency by Lubben alone, no one else handled any of 7 the funds. He actually, physically, delivered the funds, the evidence will disclose in this case.

In 1946, substantially all of the $300,000.00 that the Government says was paid over to the defendants in this case was physically handled by Lubben and nobody else, only 17 per cent, approximately 17 per cent of the amount of money that was delivered on over invoice amounts on unbilled shipments were delivered by other persons and those other persons, Your Honor, who delivered that currency, delivered it at the direction of Lubben and were funds supplied by Lubben. So, even insofar as those items are concerned, it was necessary, his testimony is necessary, to make a complete picture of these transactions.

Now, certain records were maintained by Lubben of his payments. Those records can be in most part, not entirely, but most part testified to by others, but that testimony standing alone without Lubben's testimony will practically be meaningless to the Court and to the jury. So, even with those records, and the testimony of those other persons, his testimony is essential and is required to the Government in this case.

In addition to the matter of the records, I believe it was subsequent to the years involved, certain documentary evidence of Lubben was delivered over under an 8 agreement, delivered over to the defendants, documentary evidence of these payments. No one except Lubben, so far as I know, can testify as to the delivery of these documents to these defendants. It may be possible that one other person has some knowledge, and I am trying to find that out now, but at this moment I have no information that anyone else has knowledge of the delivery of these documents that were evidentiary of payments, only Lubben can testify as to that delivery so far as I know.

Furthermore, during the years involved and subsequent to the years involved, certain admissions were made by these defendants to Lubben and to Lubben alone, that no one else can testify to. In addition to that, it is my opinion that certain extra-judicial admissions made by these defendants may perhaps not be admissible if standing alone, and in order to corroborate those extra judicial admissions, Lubben's testimony is again necessary.

Now, with respect to these payments, I don't like to state where the payments were made. I don't like to go into too much detail about them, but I will, if the Court desires to hear, but these payments made by Lubben were made at strange and unusual places and under strange and unusual circumstances. They were made in a 9 manner and at a place designed to conceal the true nature of the transactions. Nobody was present during those times except Lubben and these defendants, so the very nature of that proof, and the manner and the circumstances surrounding the delivery of this currency, is only known and can be testified to by Lubben. There was some small amounts of money, roughly around, or maybe in approximation of $40,000.00, was delivered in the presence of some of the employees of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, but that amount is extremely small in comparison with the total amount of money that the Government says was delivered to these defendants. The amount in 1945 being approximately $177,000.00, and the amount in 1946 being approximately $300,000.00. So, it was a very infinitesimal or very small amount of the total delivered in the presence of any other persons, but the great portion of the funds were delivered by Lubben to these defendants under these unusual circumstances, and I might say, in the meeting, no other persons were present, and designedly done in that matter.

Furthermore, it will be necessary for the Government in this case to produce and introduce evidence, certain secondary evidence, and without Lubben to testify as to what happened to the primary evidence, it is doubtful if this secondary evidence will be available to the Government.

During our last hearing, I regret, Your Honor, that I must come to you in such a short space of time for this continuance, but I feel that it is imperative that I do, imperative that I appear here for and on behalf of the Government for this continuance in view of the very nature of Lubben's testimony. At the last hearing here, we prayed to Your Honor for a two-weeks' continuance. Defense counsel mentioned the matter of expense, expense to the defendants with respect to these continuances. It is expensive. I admit that there is an expense, but I likewise realize that there has been a terrific expense to the Government in the preparation of this case, there has been thousands and thousands of man hours put into the preparation of this case, and it has meant thousands and thousands of dollars being expended by the Government in preparation. It is my opinion, Your Honor, that Mr. Lubben is vitally, essentially necessary for the Government to sustain this case, and if we proceed to trial Monday in his absence, I believe that we would be placed in extreme jeopardy, extreme jeopardy for the Government's case, and I might say this, Your Honor, and I don't suppose I am telling defendants a thing, facts that they don't know, but without Lubben's testimony, the evidence insofar as one of these defendants is concerned, is practically non-existent. So, I feel that in the interests of justice, that we employ and request this Court to grant this continuance.

Now, last Wednesday afternoon I had a conference with Mr. O'Brien and discussed this matter of the continuance, and at that time I said to him that I had been seriously considering this case to proceed in the absence of Lubben, because that is a possible eventuality at some time, to consider that possibility, and I told him it was necessary for me to plan that possibility. At that time I did not know what Lubben's condition was. I did not at that time tell Mr. O'Brien the extreme seriousness of our position if it was necessary for us to proceed. I have this in mind, also, I have the Court's interest. I have stated to the Court that under normal circumstances, with a reasonable amount of cross-examination, this case, it would take the Government at least five days to present its case, and discussions with Mr. O'Brien, he advises me that this case would take from six to eight weeks to try. Now, it seems to me that it would be an extreme waste of both, I am quite sure it would be an extreme waste of the Court's time and the jury's time and everybody's time if we 12 would be required to proceed to trial on Monday.

Now, I did receive a communication after the filing of this motion from agent Touey who is still in Puerto Rico and I would like to read the telegram. The telegram is dated 1 A. M., April 16th, and was received yesterday morning by me about 9:15. It is directed to me, Special Assistant Attorney General Arthur Cunningham.

(Mr. Cunningham reads the telegram to the Court.)

Mr. Cunningham: Now, I have not received the telegram. The examination, the X-ray examinations were to be made yesterday. I advised the Chicago office of the United States Attorney to forward to me immediately here and reports that they received, but the X-ray examinations were to be made at that time, or, that is yesterday, and I haven't received any report.

(Telegram handed to the Court.)

Mr. Cunningham: So I ask the Court, I have pointed out, I believe, all of the legal necessity of this man Lubben's testimony. I feel that the Government's case will practically be for naught in the absence of his testi-
13 mony and therefore, I implore the Court, I request the Court, I pray the Court to grant this continuance.

The Court: I wonder if we might recess for just a minute. I think counsel are here to present some formal findings and possibly there are no objections for the proceedings that are to be heard.

(Recess taken.)

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, during this brief interlude here, I received a call from Chicago and they have received there a telegram from the doctor, and as I recall the telegram, it is to the effect that Lubben is showing signs of improvement and it may be possible for him to travel within a week or ten days, but he has shown signs of improvement. I might also say to the Court, and I do have the approval of Mr. O'Brien to mention this, that last Wednesday at the conference that we held, in addition to discussing this matter, we also discussed other negotiations with respect to this case and I believe Mr. O'Brien will mention those facts in his statement to the Court.

Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, we would like to get certain factual material in the record and to be as accurate about it as possible, we think that Mr. Cunningham knows more about it than anybody else, and we would like to have him put in the record under oath some of these matters, it will just take a few minutes, that we want to ask him about; and so if we could call him now—

Mr. Cunningham: You want me to testify?

Mr. Kirby: Just for a few things, Mr. Cunningham.

Whereupon,

ARTHUR B. CUNNINGHAM, a witness, being the Special Assistant United States Attorney, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Your name is?

A. Arthur B. Cunningham.

Q. And Mr. Cunningham, when did Mr. Lubben come to the United States from Puerto Rico in March of this year, do you know about?

A. To the best of my information, and I have been advised of this fact, it was shortly before the New Jersey trial, and to my best recollection that was within, some place between, his arrival here, some place between, oh, I would guess—it was before the trial. I am not too sure of the trial dates.

15 Q. It was nearly March?

A. Early March I think. I would say some place between the 5th and the 12th, although I am not too sure.

Q. And when he came to New York, he then went and was in attendance on a trial at Hackensack, New Jersey?

A. I have been so informed.

Q. And this agent Touey that we have talked about this morning was in attendance upon that trial, too?

A. That's right; yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. However, it was a State Court proceeding?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the trial continued to be on April 1, isn't that true?

A. I believe that is true, a day or two beyond April 1 that trial continued.

Q. And the prior continuance here was granted at a hearing held on April 3rd, a Friday?

A. Well, I suppose that's correct.

Q. It is, Friday the 3rd was the date.

A. It was just two weeks ago today I believe.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And now, agent Touey being with Mr. Lubben during the course of that trial was where that Mr. Lubben went back to Puerto Rico on April 1st?

16 A. Mr. Lubben went back the night of April 1st.

Q. Yes, and—

A. Back to Puerto Rico the night of April 1st.

Q. In your remarks to the Court the last time, you said with respect to Mr. Lubben, he doesn't feel like he could go forward without some time in this case, you recall that, that you said that?

A. I think that's true.

Q. Am I correct in believing that in the corridor in rather an angry scene, Mr. Lubben told Mr. Touey that he would not come to Chicago until he had been given more time to prepare for the Chicago case, and that's substantially what you were told?

A. I have been advised that he was in such a nervous state.

Q. Yes.

A. And such a—he had been so attacked and vilified during the course of that trial, that he had been informed that when he first came to New Jersey—

Q. I am really limiting my question.

A. I would like to give you the whole story though.

Q. Of course, the whole story about Lubben if you want to open it up is quite a gory one, really—

A. Can I move that be stricken, Your Honor?

Q. All right, all right.

17 A. As counsel for myself.

Q. Yes, indeed, I agree, you are perfectly right.

The Court: Go forward.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes. I would like to. But, were you advised on or about April 1st that he had gone back to Puerto Rico and that he refused to come to Chicago?

A. Now, what I was advised, that's what I started to tell you before you stopped me. I tell you what I was advised was this. When he was first summoned to appear and asked to appear at that trial in New Jersey he was advised he would be there a matter of a few days at the most, whereas, the trial and his attendance there lasted a portion of the several—almost three weeks; that on the day that he left, he was in this nervous condition because of his experiences throughout that trial, especially on cross-examination, and he had been away from his business, and there was nobody to take care of it except this man, I believe his name is Bookman or, again, I don't know which it is, but that he was—no one was there except him, it was necessary for him to go back, and that he was going back, and I can't recall whether he told me or he told agent Kain that he was going back.

Q. And he did go back?

A. And he did go back.

Q. And he went back under his own power?

18 A. As far as I know, yes.

Q. And he has been in Puerto Rico ever since?

A. As far as I know, yes.

Q. Now, this day when you said he was going back and he did go back, that was on a Wednesday night?

A. April 1st.

Q. April 1st was a Wednesday?

A. April 1st was on Wednesday, yes.

Q. The next day you served upon the defense your motion for a continuance in this case?

A. He was what?

Q. And the next day, Thursday, you served upon the attorneys for the defendants your motion for continuance in this case?

A. That is correct.

Q. That was on Thursday?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, he went back to Puerto Rico, and am I correct in understanding you this morning, that the first time that agent Touey went to Puerto Rico was on the 13th?

A. On Monday, midnight Monday of this week he took a plane out of New York.

Q. Yes?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, prior to Touey going there, you had had a wire on the 8th that Mr. Lubben had gone to a hospital?

A. That is correct.

Q. And this Dr. Montiela had sent a letter on the 8th which you have attached as an exhibit to your motion?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then on the 8th, was the first date that you had this advice about Lubben's illness?

A. That's correct.

Q. And the letter?

A. Except his statements with respect to his condition at the conclusion of the trial in New Jersey, I had no information as to the extent of his condition or that he was hospitalized until the 8th.

Q. No, up until then, he had said he was going back and he did go back?

A. He said all those other things, not only that he was going back and did go back, but he mentioned his condition and also mentioned what he had been through in the course of that trial in New Jersey.

Q. And had he in the intervening week before he went into the hospital communicated with any of your people?

A. Yes, I wish I had all my notes with me, but I don't have. I have about everything except the pencilled notations I make of telephone calls.

Q. Yes, sir?

20 A. I did talk to him on the telephone and told him that the date of trial was the 20th and he explained to me what had happened to him and what had happened to his business with respect to attachments having been issued and levied on his automobile, his stock in his corporation was attached, his business—

Q. Well, he had many difficulties?

A. Many difficulties, and when he talked on the telephone, I would like to tell this fully, he sounded like a fellow who was extremely shocked by all that had happened to him in his absence and was happening to him, and I told him then that he would have to be here on the 20th. I further told him and elicited a promise from him that he would be here on the 17th of April, and he told me then that he would make every possible effort to be here on the 17th, and my purpose in having him here, of course, was to discuss this case with him. I have seen the man once for a few hours, and I haven't had an opportunity to discuss in minute detail all of the testimony that I expect this man to testify to, and he promised me then that he would try to be here by the 17th of April.

Q. On the 13th—

A. Now, I don't recall, Mr. Kirby, the date of that call, but it was before he was hospitalized.

Q. Yes. Now, on the 13th of April, a lawyer by 21 the name of Davidson phoned from Puerto Rico?

A. That is correct.

Q. Samuel Davidson?

A. That is correct.

Q. Samuel Davidson has been for some years an attorney for Lubben?

A. That is correct.

Q. Lives in New Jersey?

A. That is correct.

Q. He had gone down to Puerto Rico and was there with Lubben?

A. I would like to tell that whole story if I might.

Mr. Kirby: Well, if the Court please—

The Witness: I will withdraw.

Mr. Kirby: I dont' know how long we should go into this.

The Court: I can't give you any longer than 10 o'clock. I have a jury going to report at 10 and then we will have to adjourn until sometime this afternoon.

Mr. Kirby: I am about through with the questioning. Should I continue for a couple of minutes to finish them?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Judge.

22 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, with respect to this wire, I notice here that this man Tanner that is mentioned, it is your understanding of course that Tanner was in the company of the United States Marshal when he visited Lubben, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is your understanding further that the process that was in the possession of the Marshal related to his production of a copy of his income tax reports?

A. I have been advised of that by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Yes. We have had some discussion even with the Court on that subject, so this fellow Tanner went there in the company of the United States Marshal?

A. That is my understanding. Now, who was—

Q. Now, this wire that the District Attorney had which was to Thomas I. Nado, you know Mr. Nado was a lawyer, do you?

A. Mr. O'Brien advised me of that during this interlude here.

Q. Have we also advised you he is a lawyer in the biggest and one of the most outstanding law firms?

A. That's correct.

Q. As far as your use of the wire was concerned, none of these people are guilty of any impropriety that you know of?

23 A. Nothing but this suspicion as is indicated, as I stated.

Q. You know the matter was discussed by the United States District Attorney down there with these people?

A. All I know about the discussion is what is contained in the wire.

Q. Yes. So that you have no personal objection to that subpoena, do you?

A. Oh, no, not at all.

Q. This fellow Bookman, that's involved in the wire, you know that he has been served with a subpoena by the defense to appear?

A. I have been advised that he has been.

Q. And you know that he was at least a participant in some of the business ventures with Lubben?

A. Insofar as related to this case I know of none.

Q. You know he was a fellow that brought in General Confections?

A. Yes, that has no materiality in this case, that's my opinion.

Q. Is it conceivable that we had a reason for serving a subpoena on a material witness is one reason for serving the subpoena?

A. I question the materiality of your subpoena on Mr. Bookman, the question of the necessity of it.

24 Q. The man, however, has been an associate of Mr. Lubben's for some years?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Yes. Now, you have had reports on Mr. Lubben and the condition of his health, have you, at other times than just now?

A. Yes, and that was the same, Davidson, going back to that call.

Q. Yes?

A. Samuel Davidson told me at that time that he was hospitalized, and still hospitalized on that date, I mentioned in my motion.

Q. Had he had a relapse?

A. And that by reason of the service of this that he had had a relapse, service of this subpoena, I told Samuel Davidson at that time that if Mr. Lubben did not appear I had no choice but to have or request the Court to issue a capias for his appearance here.

Q. You are satisfied that he could be made to travel by a capias?

A. I think it would be inhuman to, knowing what I do know to request the capias.

A. I think it would be inhuman to, knowing what I do know to request the capias.

Q. Just two final questions about Mr. Mammel, for the record. Is it correct that Mr. Mammel worked on the Thursday prior to the Friday that you were up 25 here for the continuance last time?

A. Yes, he—

Q. And is it—

A. Let me answer. He came in, he came into the office for an hour or so but had to go home and return to his home, and he did not return as far as I know until the Wednesday of the following week, and at that time he came in for a half day, and I think he came in for a couple of half days and has been coming in full days since that time.

Q. One of the counsel in the case observed him working up until as late as 4 o'clock on the Monday following the continuance, is that contrary to the information you have?

A. That's contrary to my knowledge, on what date?

Q. Working from the Wednesday following the continuance?

A. No, no. Let me get the dates straight. He appeared on the Thursday prior, which will be April 2nd, for an hour or so, but couldn't go on and returned to his home, and I think it was a half day or part of a day of the following Wednesday, whatever date that would be that he first appeared and then for several days he put in a few hours and then after those several days, I am not too sure of the dates, Your Honor, why he has been working a full day.

Q. I don't mean to foreclose you from any other answers you would like to put in the record. I have no further questions.

26 A. Thank you.

The Court: Gentlemen, I suppose it will take some time more than the eight or nine minutes we have, and I think I will ask you gentlemen to come back at 2:30 this afternoon. I might say 2 o'clock, but I am afraid I will not be through, so unless you have some specific reservations for going back—

Mr. O'Brien: I think we better come back, Judge, it is very difficult to get out of here today and we have found that we have nothing definite.

The Court: Well, I think we better come back at 2:30.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
For the Northern District of Illinois
Eastern Division

• • (Caption—No. 52 Cr. 143) • •

The above entitled matter came on for hearing before the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, a Judge of the above court, in the United States Court House, Minneapolis, Minnesota, at 9:00 A. M. until 10 A. M. and resumed again at 2:45 P. M. on April 17, 1953. The following is the 2:45 P. M. session.

Appearances:

Arthur B. Cunningham, Assistant United States Attorney, Chicago Illinois, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Vincent O'Brien, Esq., and William T. Kirby, Esq., Chicago, Illinois, Attorneys for Defendants.

2 Mr. Kirby: This will be a short summary of the facts as we understand them relating to why, or what the record shows as to why Mr. Lubben is not available, according to the facts, as a witness; and I am going to take it chronologically.

From March 10, approximately, to April 1, Lubben was in New York and Hackensack, New Jersey as a witness in a state trial. Agent Touey was in attendance with him throughout. And, now then, we come to the days April 1 and 2. Lubben said on Wednesday April 1 he was not coming out to Chicago and he was going back to Puerto Rico, and that is precisely what he did that night, to attend to his business affairs. The next day, April 2, which was a Thursday, a motion for a continuance was filed. Mammel, the second man mentioned in that motion worked at least part of that day. A continuance was granted on Friday April 3. Mammel went back to work, we say Monday, Mr. Cunningham believes on Wednesday.

Now, we come to April 5 which is a Sunday. According to Dr. Montiela's letter, Lubben became sick. Now, Mr. Cunningham, on a date which I believe must have been between April 5 and April 8, Mr. Cunningham talked to Lubben on the phone and Lubben told Mr. Cunningham of how his business had been neglected while he was away and Eddy Dane was taking care of it; and he said his car had been attached and other diffi-
3 culties had inured to his business, but there was no mention of illness, no mention of sickness, and Lubben promised that he would be in Chicago on the 17th ready for trial, which would be today.

Now, by Wednesday April, on Wednesday, Lubben went into a hospital and had this Eddy Dane send a wire to Mr. Cunningham. On that same day, April 8, Dr. Montiela wrote a letter saying it would be six to eight weeks before Lubben could travel. Then, we come to April 13, which is this Monday. Lubben's lawyer, Davidson, from New Jersey, called from Puerto Rico and said to Mr. Cunningham that the United States Marshal and a man named Tanner had served subpoena's on behalf of the defense in this case, and those subpoena's, we have advised Your Honor, called for certain income tax reports of Mr. Lubben; and Lubben's lawyer, Davidson, told Cunningham that Mr. Lubben, because of the service of that subpoena had had a relapse. Mr. Tanner, a former F.B.I. man, as Mr. Touey states in his wire, has advised us he was in the hospital with the Marshal so he might observe his condition, and did, and advised us that at that time Lubben said he was never going to come to Chicago.

The Court: Where does that appear? Where does that appear by way of any showing here?

Mr. Kirby: It does not. No, sir. Mr. Cunningham, that very night, that Monday night of this week, sent Touey down to Puerto Rico to see what the condition was, or, as Mr. Cunningham expressed it, to see whether Mr. Lubben was malingering.

April 15, which is this Wednesday, the motion for continuance was given to Mr. O'Brien. On April 15, as I understand it, there had been no new word with respect to Mr. Lubben's condition other than the Dr. Montiela letter, because the Touey wire didn't arrive until yesterday morning.

That brings us to yesterday, which was the 16th, and the Touey wire you have which indicates that Touey's opinion is that Lubben's condition had been aggravated by the service of the subpoena which I have already mentioned.

Mr. Touey talks of this Tanner, the former F.B.I. man, and he talks of a lawyer that Mr. O'Brien had wired, and a wire which Mr. Touey had apparently intercepted. It wasn't addressed to him, but in any event it is there, but that wire, incidentally, we knew nothing of until this morning when it was read.

That brings us to today, and we have another word from Mr. Cunningham that he has heard from his people and that there is further word from Puerto Rico which is that Mr. Lubben is better and that he can travel up here within six, within a week or ten days, as I understand it. That causes me to refer back to the Dr.

5 Montiela letter which says he is so sick he cannot travel for six to eight weeks, and I make the observation that that prognosis is so completely wrong based on the word that we have this morning that it does justify an inference that the prognosis was wrong in order to assist Mr. Lubben in a design to avoid coming to Chicago to testify. We do not have an affidavit from Mr. Tanner as to what took place and Mr. Lubben's remarks about refusing to come to Chicago, and that is not before Your Honor, but like in the rush of these, the events we have each had to report such matters as have been reported to us, confessing the informality of them.

Now, I reviewed that simply to make a quick summary of the dates from March 10 to April 1 or 2. Then he said he was going to go and he would not come out here, and he did, and he has stuck there since.

We do not believe that the medical showing would be adequate to justify a finding that this witness is unavailable for the trial, and there is much that makes us highly critical of this witness' attitude in himself determining when he will come, and the day after he made his declaration. Once before we faced a motion for a continuance, and now that his lawyer is calling up again, we are faced again with it. And I summarized those facts because they are of grievous moment to us in making us think that if the trial were to go ahead, that this 6 witness would appear.

Mr. O'Brien: May it please the Court. I don't think I want to take any time to speak on the fact part which you have heard and know as well as I. I do want to express, in addition what has been said, a belief, after reading the doctor's letter, that the maladies described are patently not of a serious nature, but are trifling and are such as are known to respond readily to available treatment, that is to say, an asthmatic condition or a so-called pneumonitus, either or both will respond either to sulfa, penicillin or crysticillin administrations and respond quickly.

In any event, on the last report which I heard this morning, the witness would be available within a week, a week or ten days.

Now, I want to call these additional points to the Court's attention. First, the government has had literally years to confer with this witness, and on the record already before you, without having reached the point of trial, I think you, yourself, must have seen that he is in or his name does occur in nearly every motion and paper that there has been in the case, and it's been there ever since 1948 and particularly since March of 1952 when the Indictment was returned in this case. Even Mr. Cunningham, let alone the other government representatives, but even Mr. Cunningham has had 7 more than a year since the return of the Indictment to talk with this man; but on his own statement, he has never spent more than an hour or two with him.

Some reference is made, and I may be a little out of order at this point, that is in the continuity that I wish to present this in, but I recall some statement being made of the expense to which the government has been put, or the expense which it has incurred in the case. That undoubtedly is true, but I do think that there never has been a time in the case on the record before you in so far as mere money is concerned at which the government, had it presented a bill, could not have had the tax, and I have always personally felt that this never was a case for a criminal prosecution, a face which I will come to later, but more on the subject of the past opportunities to preserve Mr. Lubben's testimony.

Early in the case, as Your Honor knows, I filed a motion supported by affidavit to take depositions of various witnesses including Mr. Lubben, any of whom, I thought, due to the peculiar nature of the case, might be unavailable at the trial. I said so. I got the order. I took the depositions on Notice, and while the depositions of other witnesses of importance were returned to the clerk from New York, notably, certainly, the most important deposition, was the deposition of Mr. Lubben taken at Puerto Rico, San Juan, where Mr. Ryan,
8 or rather Mr. Gorman from Mr. Ryan's office, Messrs. Crane and Touey also attended; I went into the matter very thoroughly. I brought out, in perhaps more detail than you would ever normally do or see it at a trial, what the books and records of these companies consisted of, how they were kept, what the pattern was, what memoranda were made, and how and when, about the alleged overceiling receipts or payments; all of that is in the deposition. It was full opportunity to the government to bring out whatever it wanted from the same witness, and it did exercise its right and bring out facts in which it was interested. It did not chose, although it had known the facts for years, to illicit evidence on any of the things which Mr. Cunningham talked about today, and those depositions are returned in the file.

I believe that it's apparent that the situation in this case in that respect is precisely that which is contemplated by the provisions ofr a de bene esse deposition, which is the only kind, as your Honor knows, which may be taken under the criminal, as distinguished from the civil rules of porcedure, one which may be used if the witness is absent and which may not be used say for impeachment if the witness is present. Now, that is something not to be lightly passed over, because we both know of cases even of a criminal nature in which a contention was made that there was no opportunity to be confronted with the witness, or to cross examine a witness whose deposition, by reason of his unavailability at the trial, was sought to be used, and yet the upper courts have said that the opportunity afforded at that time, the confrontation of the witness at that time satisfied all of the constitutional requirements.

Next, and as an independent point, I wish to suggest that Mr. Cunningham does not now contend, and that it wasn't his contention at the time of the last continuance, as shown by the papers and the transcript, that Mr. Lubben is an indispensable witness, namely, that the trial cannot go forward without his testimony, as distinguished, if you please, in those papers, the moving papers and the transcript, as well, at the last hearing from Mr. Mammel who was represented to the Court for the reasons then assigned, as being an indispensable witness. At that time, I think it is fair to say that for no reason then shown, moved the court to have me devote any of my remarks to that part which then concerned Mr. Lubben. Mr. Mammel was the indispensable witness. Now, admitted, concededly the case here can go forward without Mr. Lubben, whereas it was represented that it could not go forward iwthout Mr. Mammel, it is today stated to you that the government's case could not be so completely presented without Mr. Lubben. I think, Your Honor, on the basis of the information before you, to give the most favorable interpretation on behalf of the plaintiff, that there is nothing that would reasonably justify the factual conclusion that Mr. Lubben cannot be here within a week or within the 10 days, ready to testify in this case if it goes forward Monday and during the government's case in chief. If it be that his appearance on the stand is somewhat out of the order which Mr. Cunningham would prefer, then that is unfortunate, but it is not a consideration of importance to justify the granting of this motion.

Now, there are other things, some of which, other than those which Mr. Cunningham alluded to, available to him in the proof of his case, in the establishment of his case as he sees it, without the presence of Mr. Lubben. Miss Feldman, who was the bookkeeper of the company, and whose deposition was also taken, is a witness subpoenaed by the government and has far more familiarity with the books and records than Mr. Lubben, according to what Mr. Lubben professed, expressly professed upon the deposition, and according to what her deposition as returned shows. I believe again that it is fair to say that her familiarity in that respect is so extensive in, that Mr. Cunningham will undoubtedly have her on 11 the stand in his case in chief for at least a day on the books of those companies, and her activities extended over the whole area.

I interrupt myself, Your Honor, I feel guilty of talking at this length. I know you have charged that Jury, you must be tired. What I have to say is limited. I will try to move on with it.

In addition to Miss Feldman, there is the outside accountant who kept the books of Lubben's companies. He is a subpoenaed witness, both will be available. And I have no doubt that the Court will recall that all of the papers and records and communications which the defendants turned over at and following he time of their alleged disclosure were not suppressed but are available for use, for whatever use, they continued to be so available to the company.

Now, what I have said covers considerations which would seem peculiarly pertinent if this were a matter of only first impression, but the motion here is not quite that and can't be that on the record which was made. I wish to refer briefly to four parts of that record, and I am speaking of the transcript which the Reporter handed me this morning having to do with the hearing of April 3. At page 14 of this transcript, Your Honor stated:

"I don't think I would be particularly concerned
12 with the phase of the motion with reference to Lubben."

That's when I started to address myself to that in the situation as it then was.

Going to page 29, your Honor said:

"Well, you have asked for a two weeks' continuance, supposing Mr. Mammel isn't ready on the 20th?

"Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, I will just have to take that chance, and Mr. O'Brien further suggested we had no assurance he would be there throughout the trial, that is another chance that the Government would have to bear.

"The Court: Well, what do you mean when you say you will have to take that chance?

"Mr. Cunningham: Well, I feel that he will be available.

"The Court: Well, suppose he isn't, what then?

"Mr. Cunningham: Well, I would rather not answer that question, what I might have to do or think about the case at that time, Your Honor, if you don't object to my not saying."

And then at page 33:

"The Court: Well, Mr. Cunningham, it seems to me that if I am going to grant a continuance, that we should have an understanding that regardless of Mr. Mammel's health that this trial should go forward to the date that I continue it to.

13 "Mr. Cunningham: That is correct, Your Honor, it will go forward.

"The Court. Obviously we just can't carry on with these continuances. The defendant is entitled to a speedy trial and while I don't believe that the continuance from December to April prejudiced the defendant, because I don't believe that the defendant was in the position, in view of the tremendous amount of work that had to be done, to be ready for trial on December 9th, and I don't believe that I did the defendant any wrong, so to speak, when I continued the matter until April. There may be a difference of opinion about it, I am merely expressing my opinion."

And finally, on page 35:

"The Court: Well, I am going to continue this matter until April 20th, and in accordance with the Government's request, but I think that the understanding must be, Mr. Cunningham, that the Government must be prepared to go forward on that date regardless of Mr. Mammel's health.

"Mr. Cunningham: The Government will."

Now, I think with me, Your Honor, on that record, it is as simple as this. If the showing here today had to do with some relapse on Mr. Mammel's part, on the part of a witness described as indispensable, I don't think on the record made, there would be justification for the 14 motion, and surely, the absence or temporary absence for a week, of a witness who is not described as indispensable, who is merely described as important, could not have any more, and shouldn't have as great effect.

Finally, we have attempted to preserve our record and to insist before the court on a right to a speedy trial. There is truth in what the Court said about the tremendous job on the records, but we have done the best we can with it. We have not sought a continuance on anything had to do with our fault. The most we ever got was the one from the 1st until the 9th for reasons then assigned in December. The government has had, or by its treatment of the Court's orders, has so far had three continuances, the first two of which were for that reason and the last was the one which occurred on April 3, and now they are here with a request for a fourth, and I don't know of any reason, if the past record is not to have anything to do with it, why those requests couldn't be resumed at infinitum for whatever reasons might seem in themselves to be sound.

Now, finally, Mr. Cunningham spoke of his conversation with me the night before last when I was in his office, and of the possibility that I would acquiesce in the motion or was considering acquiescing in the motion. I am unable to state at this time, I am precluded by considerations of fact which we though about, from stating in detail
15 the nature or precise nature of our discussions, but this much I can say to Your Honor. First, that late last year and early this year, Mr. Kirby and I did have discussions in Washington with heads of the Department of Justice, and on one occasion with them and Mr. Cunningham as well, looking to the disposition of the case, all of those discussions were in the open and solely on the merits, and then, they were in not, in no way resumed until shortly after Mr. Cunningham had come to Chicago to prepare for the trial of this case which I suppose was approximately a month ago; and I then alone talked to Mr. Cunningham. There was nothing that ensued from that discussion and the matter was dropped, and we proceeded with the preparation for trial.

On April 8, the day that Mr. Lubben's illness was, or the fact of that was communicated and made known, there was some reopening of those discussions, and on Wednesday, or, I may say I didn't know anything at that time about Lubben's situation in the hospital, but I went to Mr. Cunningham on Wednesday and asked him if what I heard was correct about the further discussion, and we talked about it, and we were conferring with this motion was handed to me along at four 4:30 in the afternoon.

Now, as far as the motion for continuance is con-
16 cerned, Your Honor, I think you will realize that I would have rejected it out of hand, but in view of the possible effect on the discussion, I felt a duty to discuss the matter with the other counsel and with the defendants in the case which I did that very night, and the next day, or yesterday morning, with their unanimous consent, I advised Mr. Cunningham that we would oppose this motion for continuance.

I don't have any more to say on the motion at hand. There were two or three collateral questions in the past that are unanswered which I would like to ask Your Honor about, but, if you have time when we finish with this. Thank you.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, very briefly, with respect to the matter of sending Mr. Touey to Puerto Rico, I did, after receiving the information that I received, the wire and the letter, immediately took all steps necessary to have Mr. Touey go to Puerto Rico to find out the facts. I didn't have and representative there that I could inquire or check into the facts, and I acted with all the despatch that was at my hand. Thereafter, I stated, Mr. Touey did not leave until Monday night. I heard nothing from him all day Tuesday. I heard nothing from him thru noon on Wednesday. I realized that I had to take some action promptly. It's my under-17 standing of the cases with respect to the matter of continuances, when the information is called to your attention, you must act promptly I thought I waited a reasonable time before I talked this matter over with Mr. O'Brien, and then I called Your Honor relative to it, and I felt perhaps that I would hear any moment that he would be available, but I felt in view of the timely necessity, and that I should act with despatch, that I should file the motion, and that was on Wednesday that I talked to Mr. O'Brien and also called your Honor.

Now, I knew nothing about asthmatic bronchitis or pneumonitus, I don't know what they are. I know if it's bronchitis, it can be rather severe. I don't know if pneumonitus means pneumonia or what it means, but we did find out from Touey yesterday morning that he was hospitalized, still hospitalized. I think defense counsel realized that he was hospitalized. Their own representative advised them, or visited him in the hospital and talked to him there with the deputy marshal.

I stated previously that I talked to this man for two hours. My only contact with him was that of the contact before the Grand Jury. I never talked to him privately. He appeared, I presented this case to the Grand Jury and that's the only time I have ever talked to him. I 18 never talked to him before the Grand Jury session, or I haven't talked to him since. Other agents and representatives of the government have talked to him, but I have had no opportunity to see him or talk to him.

Now, relative to those depositions, Mr. Gorman of the United States Attorney's office was assigned those depositions. During the time that those depositions were being taken, I was in the midst of a trial of a case and had no opportunity to attend those depositions, but I want to tell Your Honor that at no time has Mr. Lubben indicated that he would not be present for the trial of this case, but at all times, up until the time I talked to him on the telephone, indicated that he would be in Chicago on the 17th.

Now, with reference to the matter of my allegation as to his indispensability, I don't believe under the cases that such an allegation is necessary. I think, frankly, the only thing necessary that I present to the Court is a factual situation, and if the witness' testimony is material and not cumulative, the Court has a discretion to continue the case, and I humbly ask the Court to extend that discretion in this instance until we do have an opportunity to present this case so that full justice may be done; and in his absence, if he does not appear, full justice will not be done.

Now, with respect to Miss Feldman, it is true, as 19 Mr. O'Brien stated, she is more familiar with the books and records of that concern, of those various ventures than Mr. Lubben, but her information relative to that is limited to the books. All she knows is what the records show. The matter of delivery of currency is solely that of Lubben, as I expressed before, all in 1945 and all but 17 percent of it in 1946, and of that 17 percent, as I stated before, the funds were supplied to the messengers that carried the money, were supplied by Lubben.

Now, I did state to Your Honor that we would be prepared to go forward on Monday whether or not Mr. Mammel recovered or not. I felt in that instance that perhaps some other agent could prepare himself in the event Mr. Mammel was not available. The statements I made, those were relative to Mammel's condition. At that time, Mr. Lubben was not hospitalized nor did I have any such information as to his illness or the extent of his illness. So the things I stated then could not have been conditioned upon a situation that I had no knowledge about.

So I urgently request this Court, in the interests of Justice, that a continuance be granted.

One thing more, Your Honor, whereas Mammel could have been replaced, there is no replacement for the information, for the testimony of Lubben, nobody can replace him. He alone has that knowledge. That was not true as to Mammel.

20 Mr. O'Brien: May I ask one question?

Mr. Cunningham: Surely.

Mr. O'Brien: Isn't it a fact that before the Grand Jury and otherwise, people from the Shotwell Company who are not defendants here, testified to the receipts of money?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, Mr. O'Brien is asking me to state a thing I am not permitted to state. I would like to state it.

Mr. O'Brien: Let's leave the Grand Jury out of it. The statements on your interview with your agents, I am quite sure, so that those people had to do with the handing of money received from Mr. Lubben, and in addition, the Court must understand that that the books which we are talking about are not books that are devoid of these things, but Lubben's books have numerous memoranda and papers referring to those alleged payments.

Mr. Cunningham: May I—Excuse me, if the Court please.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cunningham: May I, in answer to that question, not with reference to any Grand Jury proceedings, I believe I stated when I was first—my first talks on the matter of this motion this morning, that there were employees of Shotwell who had knowledge of the re-21 ceipts of funds, but that was in the, my best recollection, in an amount not in excess of around $40,000 of a total here of $177,000 in one year and $300,000 in another year.

The Court: Well, what suggestions are you now making to the Court, Mr. Cunningham, with reference to the continuance; to any certain date, or for any certain time, or what is the position of the government?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, at the time, Your Honor, that I filed the motion, the only thing that I had to go on was a communication from the doctor. As I said, I waited as long as I thought I should for Mr. Touey. So in my motion, I left that matter up to the Court as a time to be fixed. I didn't know what to say about the date. I didn't know much about the condition of Lubben except what I heard by this wire and this letter, so I felt at that time I could not state anything as to a date.

Now, I have been advised that he can move, per if his condition shows improvement as it has shown improvement in the last 36 hours, that he can possibly be in a position to travel within a week or ten days, and my advice further, I forgot to mention it to the Court this morning, was that if he would have somebody assist him in moving, so he must not be, he will not, apparently, according to that, all I can go on, Your Honor, is what I have been advised, he apparently needs some assist-
22 ance in moving in a week or 10 days because he will need someone to travel with him, according to information I have received.

So, I am somewhat at a loss to mention a date.

Mr. O'Brien: Well, Judge, may I say that the records in the Clerk's office show that the government has more than 40 witnesses subpoenaed and that it scarcely is conceivable that their cases in chief could be put in in less than two weeks, including the time for cross-examination.

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court is interested, I can tell the Court how many witnesses are anticipated being called in chief. The government is planning to call in chief 19 witnesses. All the other witnesses, and I think there is a lot more than that, Mr. O'Brien that we have subpoenaed, are rebuttal witnesses; and all of these are rather brief with the exception of Lubben and Miss Feldman, and perhaps another bookkeeper. With the exception of Lubben, Miss Feldman, another bookkeeper and Mr. Mammel, all other witnesses will be rather brief.

The Court: Well, if I am going to consider a continuance, what is going to guide the Court as to a date of continuance? What suggestions do you have?

Mr. Cunningham: Would it be possible to discuss that matter, if Mr. O'Brien consents, off the record right here with you rather than with respect to this motion?

23 The Court: Well, I haven't any objection if Mr. O'Brien hasn't any objection. I don't know to what extent he thinks everything should be included in the record.

Mr. O'Brien: Why, I don't know what Mr. Cunningham has in mind. If he thinks it should go off, that's all right.

The Court: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

(A recess was taken.)

Mr. Cunningham: If the Court please, in answer to the Court's question, it would be my suggestion that the day be fixed either the 18th or the 25th of May, that's to suit the convenience of the Court.

Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, of course, the only position that I can see under the circumstances, we in good faith and all sincerity oppose the motion for a continuance. We don't know what the Court's ruling is in spite of the questions. The questions mean nothing to us. In that connection, we would like to have the Court's ruling on the question of whether there is or is not to be any continuance.

The Court: Well, I will answer that, indeed. My view is that I should grant a continuance. Now, that's why I asked Mr. Cunningham as to what suggestion he 24 had as to the date to which the matter should be continued. I didn't know whether he had in mind a few days or a week or ten days or what, and I hadn't given the matter sufficient thought to indicate in my own mind just what I would do in light of his suggestion.

Mr. O'Brien: Then may I make a suggestion?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. O'Brien: As I say, the mere fact that a Court asks a question does not necessarily indicate to me what the ruling would be, and so I wanted Your Honor to rule before I presented my suggestion.

We have been with the case a long time off and on to the virtual abandonment of all other matters. I suppose that on the basis of the showing made here, if the Court complied with that, regarded that alone, there would be no basis for a longer continuance than 10 days, but 10 days brings us into the early part of May and into a new jury at Chicago. Mr. Cunningham says that it does not permit time for the preparation of some extraneous things that he wants to do and things in which we may or may not have an interest. Now, since that is true, if you took it on for a further time or that could be done or considered, it would bring us into the middle of May with a jury that already has been there for sometime and is tired and which would be held for the length of this trial. I don't think that the trial itself when 25 it is streamlined down should take more than four to five weeks, but I do really think that it will take that time. Now, I suggest that rather than come up at too early a date in May or too late a date in May, considering the way of the jury service there, that it would be better to have it the first Monday of June, whatever that date may be. It would be the 1st of June. It might take the matter a week or so into what is our summer adjournment period, but that isn't too bad, if the Court can stand it.

The Court: I think I would rather go to September.

Mr. O'Brien: Well, Your Honor, if you would, I can only say this, that I don't want my personal situation to effect it at all, but I have been hoping that we would get through and that I could get some rest in the latter part of May or June which I need. I haven't been, or I have been away for about a year and a half, and I have been working hard. It it would go, if it's early in June and into the summer as against September, there is very little choice on our part, I suppose September would be just as good.

The Court: What do you think, Mr. Cunningham:

Mr. Cunningham: Well, if your Honor please,
26 June 1 would suit as far as I am concerned.

The Court: What do you mean by that?

Mr. Cunningham: Well, I have no commitments at all for the summer or September and nothing set down that I know of.

The Court: You see, the difficulty is, if we run into June, we run into the heat of the summer, and I am rather loath to take it upon myself an assignment at the time in view of my other commitments, and unless it was going to be so prejudicial to the government or defendants by reason of a longer delay, I think I would rather start in the early part of September.

Mr. Cunningham: Certainly satisfactory with the government.

The Court: What do you think, Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. O'Brien: I think I have already said that that is equally satisfactory to us.

The Court: Well, supposing we leave it this way, that I will give it some further thought. I don't suppose you now have in mind, if we go in to a long continuance if you are going to keep these subpoenaes in effect?

Mr. Cunningham: I was thinking of that.

Mr. O'Brien: We would almost have to or we would surely be prejudiced, I am afraid of it, seriously so,
27 and that is why I was going to ask you if you could fix a date now and we could go back and telephone and we have to send out wires, those people will be on the way to Chicago, a great many of them for Monday, and they would be at their offices, it's late now, but be some at home and some at their offices, that's the best we can do. It doesn't mean, if I am correct, that they can't go where they will so long as they are available.

The Court: What time does the jury report in September, what will be the situation?

Mr. O'Brien: There will be one the first Monday in September, Judge, or Labor Day, well, it would undoubtedly be after.

The Court: Tuesday, the 8th of September.

Mr. Cunningham: Yes.

TThe Court: What do you think about that date?

Mr. Cunningham: That day is satisfactory with the government?

The Court: How about that day, if we got to go over? I understand you are not contending this, objections have already been noted, we are merely trying to arrange a date that will be at least as convenient as some other date, and whatever statements you make now, doesn't in any way constitute a waiver of your objections.

28 Mr. O'Brien: So I understand, Judge. September 8 is all right.

The Court: Well, I think I prefer the 8th of September, gentlemen, and it may be in light of Mr. Lubben's situation down there that if we continue it for two or three weeks you may have the same thing by reason of some claim of disability.

Mr. Cunningham: It's possible, I don't anticipate it. I hope note.

The Court: The only other suggestion I might have would be if we could continue it until the early part of May. I don't know how that would work out.

Mr. Cunningham: Mr. O'Brien stated certain other considerations that take time that I don't believe—

The Court: Well, then, I think—This isn't for the record.

(Discussion off the record and the hearing came to a close.)

ADDITIONAL MOTION OF THE DEFENDANTS IN THE NATURE OF A SPECIAL PLEA IN BAR TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT

The defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, Byron A. Cain, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner, by their respective attorneys, leave of Court having first been had and obtained, file this their additional motion in the nature of a special plea in bar to dismiss the indictment herein and each count thereof for the following reasons:

1. That Section 3761 of the Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C., grants to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the United States the power and authority to grant immunity from prosecution to those guilty of violations of the said Internal Revenue Code.

2. That pursuant to the authority so vested in them by the said Section 3761, the said Secretary and the said Commissioner made, or caused to be made, between the 28th day of May, 1945, and the 14th day of May, 1947, various public statements and announcements in which they promised immunity from prosecution under the Internal Revenue Code to any taxpayer who came forward and made a voluntary disclosure of omissions or mis-

284 statements in his (or its) income tax returns, provided that such disclosure be made prior to the initiation of an investigation of such returns by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

3. In the month of January, 1948, the defendants, pursuant to and in reliance on the aforementioned statements and announcements of the said Secretary and the said Commissioner came forward and made a voluntary disclosure of omissions or misstatements in respect of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years 1945 and 1946 to a responsible official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and that, thereafter, they gave the Bureau of Internal Revenue all of the information required by said statements and announcements in order to permit the assessment of an additional tax in accordance with the then existing rulings of the said Commissioner.

4. That the said disclosure by the defendants herein was made prior to the initiation of any investigation by the said Bureau of the returns of the corporate defendant for the years 1945 and 1946.

5. That subsequent to the aforementioned disclosure the defendants herein cooperated with agents and officials of the said Bureau to the end that the amount of the tax, penalties and interest, if any, due from the corporate defendant for the years 1945 and 1946 might be determined, and that they frequently expressed a willingness and ability, and were at all times willing and able, to pay promptly any and all taxes, penalties and interest which might be assessed by the said Commissioner against the said corporate defendant in respect of its income for the years 1945 and 1946 in accordance with the said rulings of the said Commissioner.

6. That by virtue of the foregoing the defendants nerein and each of them have been granted a full pardon
285 and amnesty for any and all offenses under, and are therefore immune from prosecution under, the Internal Revenue Code of the United States for any offense connected with, or arising out of, the tax returns of the corporate defendant for the years 1945 and 1946, and therefore plaintiff is barred from maintaining its alleged action against them and the indictment in this case must be dismissed.

In re: United States of America v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Co., et al.
52 CR 143

Dear Judge Nordbye:

As you would know, we still have some loose ends for the trial, and I am endeavoring to cover them by this letter:

1. We should like to take the depositions of a witness Kurtz, who is at Miami Beach and is incapacitated by illness from appearing in response to subpoena. I am enclosing an appropriate motion and order showing the facts as I understand them and showing the materiality of his testimony.

2. As to the matter of computations and the separate category of reconstructions which you discussed with us at the conclusion of the proceedings in Duluth, a recent talk with Mr. Cunningham indicated to us that nothing specific is available at this time that Mr. Cunningham plans to offer in evidence in documentary form, so that he has not had occasion to notify me as was directed at the Duluth hearing.

3. At the conclusion of the hearing on the motion to suppress you indicated that we might have findings and conclusions of law if we wished. I don't think of any that we desire at this time except your legal conclusions as to what constitutes a sufficient and timely disclosure.

4. We are not informed as to your practice under Rule 24 (a) and (b), having to do with the examination of jurors and with the number of peremptory challenges.
288 There is no universal practice in our District. All methods permitted by the Rule are employed. It would be middle ground practice to permit us to supplement your questioning with oral questions propounded directly to the jurors. On the other hand, if all of the questions were to proceed from the Court, then we would have the burden of supplying you with written questions to enable you to supplement, within your discretion, anything that had not been covered. This is a mechanical chore we would like to avoid if possible.

On peremptory challenges where there are multiple defendants there is some liberality of individual judges on increasing the ten provided for in the Rule. I think that in a case of this character it would be reasonable to afford the defendants twenty, the additional ones to be used jointly or individually as they see fit.

5. As you know, we presented to Judge Barnes a motion to dismiss, part of which consisted of a plea in bar predicated on immunity as a defense growing out of the disclosure on the theory of compromise and estoppel. As you also know, the Government's demurrer was sustained pursuant to an oral opinion rendered by Judge Barnes. Although Judge Barnes' order is, of course, interlocutory, we are not asking you to pass upon it again, although you have the power to and can do so if you wish.

We do, however, now ask leave to file the enclosed motion to dismiss, predicated on pardon and amnesty, which is in the nature of a special plea in bar. That you may grant leave at this time is established by Rule 12; that you should grant leave at this time is shown by United States v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 150, 161-162 (U.S. 1833). If the Government traverses, the proper procedure would be to have the plea tried to the jury prior to the introduction of any evidence on the general issue. Heike v. United States, 217 U. S. 423 (1910); Commonwealth v. Merrill, 90 Mass. 545, 546-547 (1864); 4 Blackstone, Commentaries, 335. If such issue is determined adversely to the defendants, the judgment would be respondeas ouster. 4

289 Blackstone, Commentaries, 335; Chitty, Criminal Law, 470; 3 Holdsworth, History of English Law, 614; Heike v. United States, 217 U. S. 423 (1910).

If the Government chooses to demur, we are prepared to argue the question of law at your convenience.

Respectfully yours,
(Sgd) Vincent O'Brien

ORDER

The defendants presented a motion to this Court on March 31, 1953, in which they asked leave to file instanter their additional motion in the nature of a special plea in bar to dismiss the indictment. The alleged bar is predicated upon the contention that the defendants, and each of them, have been granted a full pardon and amnesty arising out of any offense connected with the tax returns of the corporate defendants for the years 1945 and 1946.

The same grounds set forth in this additional motion as the basis for the special plea in bar were presented to Judge Barnes on a motion to dismiss the indictment, which motion he denied on June 23, 1952. On June 24, 1952, defendants were arraigned and each defendant entered a plea of not guilty. Thereafter, defendants presented to this Court a motion to suppress certain evidence, and the basis for that motion was substantially the same grounds as those urged upon Judge Barnes on the motion to dismiss the indictment. After a full presentation of evidence by both parties, this Court denied the motion to suppress on November 21, 1952.

292 The cause was first set down for trial on December 1, 1952, and then, on the defendants' request, was continued until December 8, 1952. The trial date was continued at the Government's request from December 8, 1952, to April 6, 1953, and later, at the Government's request, from April 6, 1953, to April 20, 1953, and again, at the Government's request, from April 20, 1953, to September 8, 1953.

This additional motion to dismiss may be filed, but it must be denied. In that the parties have set forth their views in their correspondence to the Court, I see no necessity for any further hearing. First, it may be observed that the filing of this motion is not timely, and secondly the issues which defendants now desire to present in support of their motion have already been presented to the Court on two separate motions as indicated above and ruled upon adversely to the contentions of the defendants. The fact that the defendants now style their special plea in bar as one of pardon and amnesty does not enable them to present for rehearing the same issues as were presented to Judge Barnes. And in passing it may be noted that the defendants have taken the position before the Court that the issues presented on their motion to dismiss before Judge Barnes and the undersigned were for the Court alone without a jury. Rule 12, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, does not recognize any special plea in bar such as defendants now seek to present. It is the Court's view that the defendants have exhausted their rights on the grounds presented before the trial court, first, in moving to dismiss the indictment on the grounds urged before Judge Barnes, and secondly, on the motion to suppress the evidence before this Court. In any event, it would seem that the plea of pardon and amnesty is a matter for the executive or legislative department to consider and is not granted to any 293 officials of the Internal Revenue Department by Title 26, U.S.C.A., § 3671, as defendants contend. The authority to compromise as granted in that statute is not a grant of amnesty.

It follows, therefore, that defendants' motion to dismiss the indictment must be, and the same hereby is, in all things denied. It is so ordered.

An exception is allowed.

MOTION OF THE DEFENDANTS TO AMEND AND SUPPLEMENT PARAGRAPH 4 OF THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT HERETOFORE FILED.

The defendants by their attorneys ask leave of Court to amend and supplement their motion to dismiss the indictment heretofore filed herein as follows:

1. After paragraph numbered 4 of said motion, insert the following:

> "Since the filing of the motion to dismiss in the above-entitled cause, there was filed in another cause thereafter instituted in the same Court, entitled "United States of America vs. Sam Achilli", and there numbered 53 CR 154, a motion to dismiss supported by two affidavits of Joseph A. Struett, certified copies of which said motion and affidavits are hereto attached as Exhibits D and E, respectively, and by reference made a part hereof. As will more fully appear from said affidavits, the said Joseph A. Struett was Regional Counsel for Region 11 of the Penal Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue from June, 1946 until November 27, 1951. Said Regior 11 includes the Northern District of Illinois. The said affidavits for the most part have to do with the procedures and standards or lack of standards obtaining from time to time in the Bureau of Internal Revenue in respect of the determination as to which tax cases should be referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution, and said Exhibits D and E are submitted in partial support of paragraph 4 of said original motion to dismiss the indictment, but without prejudice to the right of the defendants to a hearing upon said motion on oral evidence to be adduced in open court.

296 "In further support of paragraph 4 of said motion to dismiss as amended and supplemented, the defendants submit the affidavit of Vincent O'Brien, attached hereto."

Defendants also move that the trial judge reconsider the interlocutory order heretofore entered herein sustaining the demurrer of the plaintiff in so far as said order applies to paagraph 4 of said motion to dismiss, and that in so doing, the Court pass upon the legal sufficiency of said paragraph 4 as so amended and supplemented.

AFFIDAVIT

Vincent O'Brien, being first duly sworn on oath deposes and says that he is attorney of record for certain of said defendants, and that he makes this affidavit on behalf of all of the defendants in support of their foregoing motion.

Affiant further avers that at the time the original motion to dismiss the indictment was interposed, there was unavailable to them, or to their counsel, for the purpose of the supporting affidavit, information such as is contained in Exhibits D and E to the foregoing motion, but that prior to the filing of said motion to dismiss, affiant, without avail, requested the said Joseph A. Struett to make an affidavit in support of the defendants' motion as to the subject matter of part 4 thereof. Mr. Struett said that he was unwilling to make an affidavit, but that if he were subpoenaed at any hearing which might be had, he would testify in open court. As more fully appears from the record in this cause, the said motion never reached the hearing therein requested and there was, therefore, no evidence adduced in open court because the plaintiff's 298 demurrer to said motion was sustained.

Affiant further avers that there are now and were at all times in question in this suit, many companies engaged in the manufacture and sale of candies in and about Chicago, Illinois and within the Northern District of Illinois, and also many other companies which manufactured for sale and consumption commodities in which corn products are indispensable. Affiant is informed and believes, and therefore represents the fact to be, that substantially all of said companies were compelled to, and did during all or part of the times in question in this suit, procure materials in short supply, including corn products, through the Black Market, and to that end, were required to procure premium receipts for their goods over and above the ceiling prices then in effect, which were not reflected upon the books of most of said companies—all of which affiant avers was at all times in question in this suit well known to the plaintiff. Affiant is further informed and believes, and therefore represents the fact to be, that notwithstanding the premises, and notwithstanding the failure of such companies to make sufficient and timely disclosures, such cases were withheld from criminal prosecution and civil settlements were effected, and that with the exception of one small company which also dealt with the said Lubben and his companies, no candy company in the Northern District of Illinois has been indicted for alleged evasion of income taxes for the years 1945 or 1946 other than the defendant corporation in this case.

MOTIONS OF DEFENDANT TO DISMISS INDICTMENT, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE, TO ORDER A BILL OF PARTICULARS, SUPPRESS EVIDENCE AND FURNISH CERTAIN INFORMATION AS TO INTERVIEWS OF CUSTOMERS OF HIGHLAND MOTOR SALES.

Now comes Sam Achilli, the defendant herein, by his attorney, Joseph A. Struett, and makes the following motions:

1. Moves that the indictment and each count thereof be dismissed, on the grounds (a) that the statute on which said indictment and each of said counts is founded, namely, Section 145(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, when read together with Section 3761(a) of the Internal Revenue Code and other statutes which are in pari materia therewith, amounts to an unconstitutional delegation of 301 authority to the executive branch, in violation of Article I, Section 1 of the Constitution of the United States manifesting the doctrine of separation of powers, and in violation of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment of said Constitution; and (b) that the executive branch has employed unconstitutional practices and procedures in the enforcement of said Section 145(b), as applied to the defendant herein, resulting in his indictment herein, in violation of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment of said Constitution.

In the alternative,

2. Moves, pursuant to Rule 7(f) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, that the Court direct the United States Attorney to file a bill of particulars as to each separate count of the indictment herein to make full and specific the charge therein, such bill of particulars to identify, list, explain and make clear the following matters with at least as much information and details as are commonly found in a Revenue Agent's report accompanying a notice to a taxpayer of a proposed deficiency assessment of federal income taxes viz:

a. The extent, if any, that any alleged understatement of net income of the defendant was caused by items of alleged unreported gross income of the defendant, listing each such item by date and amount, describing the transaction out of which each such item arose, and furnishing the name and address of the person, firm or corporation who or which was the source of such item of unreported gross income of the defendant;

b. The extent, if any, that any alleged understatement of net income of the defendant was caused by items of alleged unallowable deductions of the defendant, listing each such item by date and amount and describing the nature of each such item;

302 c. The adjustments of defendant's reported income and deductions, and the computations of federal income taxes, by means of which the figures set forth in each count of the indictment were arrived at, purporting to show the true and correct amount of federal income taxes due from defendant with respect to each taxable period covered in the indictment; and

d. The sources of the government's data as to the matters set forth in subparagraphs a to c, inclusive, above, both documentary and oral, to the extent not privileged by law, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, a detailed specification of the information, both documentary and oral, concerning defendant's transactions and affairs involved directly or indirectly in the indictment herein, obtained by the government from Earl H. Gromer, defendant's attorney.

e. That the government file the net worth statement and compilations thereof on which it intends to rely at the trial—and further that it also file a detailed statement of its evaluations, and how they were arrived at of all properties of the defendant Sam Achilli which may be included in said net worth statement.

3. Moves that this Court suppress all evidence, whether documentary, oral or otherwise, obtained by the government directly or indirectly from Earl H. Gromer concerning defendant's transactions and affairs involved directly or indirectly in the indictment herein, on the ground that such evidence stemmed and was derived from confidential information obtained by Earl H. Gromer in his capacity at attorney for the defendant herein and that defendant did not and does not waive the privilege of confidential communication inherent in and surrounding said attorney-client relationship.

4. Moves that this Court direct the United States Attorney to furnish a list of the names and addresses of all 303 customers of Highland Motor Sales who were interviewed by Revenue Agents or Special Agents in connection with the investigation of the instant case, and a copy of each written statement made by any such customer at the behest of said Agents and a copy of each memorandum of any such interview made by said Agents, pertaining to transactions involved in the instant case, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, any such statement or memorandum relating that a customer paid or may have paid money to Earl H. Gromer or that said Earl H. Gromer was present when money was allegedly paid by a customer to defendant or anyone else in connection with the business of Highland Motor Sales, or relating to any fact that said Earl H. Gromer participated in any manner in any transactions of Highland Motor Sales which were not fully and accurately reflected on the books of account thereof for each and all of the prosecution years.

In support of the above motions there is hereto attached and made a part hereof by reference the affidavit of Joseph A. Struett and a Brief of the Law.

304 AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH A. STRUETT

AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH A. STRUETT.

MOTION TO DISMISS.

Introduction.

Joseph A. Struett, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

He is the attorney for the defendant, Sam Achilli. He has knowledge of the facts, other than facts furnished him by others and as to those facts he believes them to be true. This affidavit is made in support of the defendant's Motion to Dismiss the above indictment and for alternative relief. Deponent's experience and knowledge of the facts herein are amply sufficient to qualify him as an expert on the subject matter hereof and to express the opinions contained herein as such.

For five years, from June, 1946 until November 27, 1951, when he resigned, Deponent was Regional Counsel for Region II of the Penal Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (hereinafter sometimes referred to as the "Bureau"). As such Regional Counsel, he was required to make the quasi judicial determination as to which of those cases recommended for prosecution by a Special Agent should be, or not be, referred by the Bureau to Justice. He at no time, while so employed by the Bureau, had any official connection with this case since it was then under investigation. Under Bureau regulations, his right and authority to represent Mr. Achilli had to be cleared through and approved by the Bureau, which has been done.

306 Deponent dealt with the Bureau over a period of years, prior to assuming his position within the Bureau in 1946, and knew the Bureau's general policies and its general method of operation. His discussion of the problems which confronted him in his official capacity as Regional Counsel are confined to facts known to persons dealing with the Bureau; facts now a matter of public knowledge; facts supported by public documents issued by the Bureau; and facts which appear in the public documents in which are recorded the many investigations of the Bureau conducted during the last several years by various committees of the Congress.

A number of his statements made by Deponent are supported by testimony of Treasury and Bureau officials and others in hearings conducted by the Sub-committee of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives (hereinafter referred to as the "Sub-committee") beginning on January 22, 1952 when this Sub-committee had under consideration the proposed Plan of Reorganization of the Bureau. These proceedings are bound together under a heading entitled, "Proposals for Strengthening Tax Administration." Reference to this public document will be made as follows: (Sub-committee .....)

Upon the recommendation of the Bureau, the defendant, Sam Achilli, of Elgin, Illinois, an automobile dealer in the Chicago area, operating the Highland Motor Sales of Elgin, Illinois, was indicted for attempting to defeat and evade his Income Tax for the years 1946, 1947 and 1948 (I. R. C. Sec. 145(b)). At a conference held in the office of the Bureau's Enforcement Counsel on July 23, 1952, Deponent was advised that the alleged fraudulent unreported income was due solely to alleged side payments received by Mr. Achilli in connection with the sale of automobiles by this agency. His lawyer, Mr. Earl H. Gromer, was 307 a full and active partner in this agency during the years 1945 to 1950, inclusive. Mr. Gromer was not recommended for prosecution by the Bureau!

BASIS OF MOTION TO DISMISS.

The Motion to Dismiss the indictment is based legally upon an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to the executive branch of the government and a denial of Due Process of Law, as the term is used in the Fifth Amendment of our Federal Constitution. It is based factually on:

(1) The chaotic conditions which have existed in the Bureau for the past several years, and the Bureau's irresponsible, unfair and illegal edicts and directives during that period as to the handling of all criminal Income Tax cases, as a result of which prosecution was recommended by the Bureau and all these cases, including the case of Mr. Achilli, were promiscuously loaded into Justice, cleared for prosecution and indicted, without any semblance of fairness, uniformity, consistency or equality in the treatment of taxpayers, and without any definite, ascertainable standards, tests or guide posts from which the Bureau could legally determine what taxpayers should, or should not, be properly and legally recommended for prosecution; all despite the fact that the Bureau was every day settling equally or even more flagrant cases of other taxpayers without recommending prosecution;

(2) the arbitrary, capricious and illegal classification by the Bureau of certain citizens and taxpayers, including Mr. Achilli, as "Racketeers", and of their Income Tax cases as Racketeer cases, and the arbitrary, capricious and illegal directives of the Bureau that cases so classified should be given "Special Treatment" in determining whether or not they should be cleared for prosecution by the Bureau, as a consequence of which cases so classified as did not receive the equal consideration or treatment from prosecu-

308 tion standpoint as did the cases of other taxpayers, and were cleared more readily into Justice. As a matter of fact, once the case of any taxpayer was classified as a Racketeer case, and a Special Agent recommended prosecution, its clearance to Justice for prosecution was practically automatic;

(3) the indefensible, discriminatory, unfair, unreasonable, arbitrary, capricious and utter lack of uniformity and equality of treatment by the Bureau in the singling out and recommending for prosecution, and the subsequent indictments fathered by such recommendations, of the cases of a negligible few automobile dealers of the Chicago area, and particularly the defendant, Mr. Achilli, after and despite the fact that the Bureau had civilly settled, without recommending prosecution, the cases of innumerable (approximately two hundred or even many more) other automobile dealers of the Chicago area, in similar circumstances, whose cases involved identical or similar facts and were equally or more flagrant.

The term "settled" is used in its broadest sense in this Affidavit; namely, the closing out by the Bureau, without recommending prosecution, cases of taxpayers upon the payment of the taxes, negligence penalties, and/or fraud penalties, although the Bureau had evidence of fraudulent unreported taxable income. Taxpayers falling within this category are referred to and described herein as "Tax Evaders."

SANCTIONS AVAILABLE TO BUREAU DEALING WITH TAX EVADERS.

To aid the Bureau in its administration, enforcement and collection of taxes, and particularly Income Taxes, the Congress has enacted many alternative and cumulative prerogatives, sanctions and remedies, including civil and criminal penalties, available to and to be used by the Bureau in dealing with taxpayers against whom the 309 Bureau has uncovered sufficient evidence to establish that they have willfully evaded their taxes. The use of one or more of these sanctions does not exclude or require the use or non-use of another. The Bureau may settle the case of a tax evader or it may recommend that case for prosecution. Prosecution does not bar the collection of the civil penalties. The Bureau may, but is not required to, recommend prosecution of a tax evader. The use or non-use of all or some of these sanctions is closely tied-up, interwoven with, and a part of the proper disposition of a particular case in the interest of the Revenue.

(a) Civil Penalties.

Among the civil penalties are the five percent negligence penalty, twenty-five percent delinquency penalty, and the fifty percent fraud penalty. In addition, there is a provision for six percent interest on any deficiency. It is not uncommon for the civil penalties and interest, when applied to cases of tax evaders, to far exceed the additional taxes due. These civil penalties are most severe; at times they are overwhelming. Under the present high tax rates they may well not only constitute sufficient punishment, but excessive punishment for the offense committed. They can greatly exceed the amount of the fraudulent unreported income; and they may well take away every dollar the tax evader has. They survive the tax evader's discharge in bankruptcy; in truth, they even follow his heirs after he is in his grave.*

---

* The overwhelming severity of these civil penalties, plus interest, when applied to cases of tax evaders, is lucidly summarized by Mr. Balter in his recent book, Fraud Under Federal Tax Law (Second Edition), at page 256 as follows:

"The fact that the normal reaction is to fear the criminal charge more than the civil penalty, should not lull the taxpayer who has successfully warded off a possible criminal action against him into a false sense of security. Whether there is a criminal charge or not, if fraud is an issue, the civil penalties may be overwhelming."

"We have already pointed out the inexorable effectiveness of applying the fraud penalty to the entire deficiency, even if only a small portion of it is tainted with fraud.

"The addition of interest may by itself be an extremely burdensome item. For example, if the fraud is asserted in 1950 for the tax year 1944, the interest at 6 per cent for six years on the deficiency alone would total 36 per cent, no mean item.

310 From the standpoint of legal theory, these civil penalties are not construed as punishment, but as remedial in nature to reimburse the heavy expenses of the investigation and the loss resulting from the tax evader's fraud Helvering v. Mitchell (1938), 303 U. S. 391, 82 L. ed. 917. Practically and realistically, however, these civil penalties, at our present high tax rates, in cases of most tax evaders certainly constitute ample, or even excessive punshment and far exceed the cost of the investigation. They should be considered by the Bureau before prosecution is recommended (Sub-committee 203, 242).

(b) Criminal Penalties. Power of Bureau to Compromise Criminal Penalties.

Among the ten criminal penalties is Section 145b. Every taxpayer fraudulently omitting income obviously commits a Federal crime. There is a broad general rule, laid down by Statute Title 28 U. S. C. Section 507, that every Federal official charged with the duty of the enforcement of our Federal laws must prosecute "all offenses against the United States." He cannot compromise criminal liability without compounding a felony. A striking exception to this rule is the particular crime of attempted evasion of Income Taxes and/or other penal provision under the 311 Revenue Laws (Sub-committee 175) Thus, we have the unique Statute, Section 3761 of the Internal Revenue Code, giving the Secretary of the Treasury the authority to settle and compromise not only the civil aspects of a case, but likewise the criminal aspects. Once a case is referred to Justice by the Bureau with a recommendation of prosecution, Justice assumes jurisdiction of that case. The Attorney General then has plenary power to compromise and settle both the civil and criminal aspects of the case under the same Statute. This Statute of itself indicates that the Congress intended that many

(Footnote Continued)

"And as we have seen, the civil penalties may be cumulated with the not uncommon result that if there is fraud and also a failure to file for the same year, a 75 per cent penalty would be added to the deficiency.

"If we add to these factors already discussed these further objects for concern, namely, that there is no statute of limitations operating against the Treasury, that the tax deficiency as well as the fraud penalties will survive a discharge in bankruptcy; and that even the death of the taxpayer would not stay the Treasury from proceeding against the estate to collect the taxes and penalties, then we can clearly understand how severely the civil penalties operate." * * *

cases of tax evaders should be settled and compromised without criminal prosecution—that not all tax evaders should be prosecuted (Sub-committee 263). This Statute is seldom used by the Bureau at the present time, since the executive branch has surrounded its use with technicalities resulting in much delay. From a practical standpoint, however, when the Bureau closes out, as it does every day, most of the cases of tax evaders upon the payment of taxes and certain civil penalties without recommending prosecution, it amounts to an informal use of the statutory license not to prosecute.

THE CASES OF MOST TAX EVADERS ARE SETTLED BY THE BUREAU WITHOUT RECOMMENDING PROSECUTION IN THE INTEREST OF THE REVENUE.

The then Secretary of the Treasury, in a press release dated May 25, 1947, openly admitted that "most fraud cases are settled upon payment of the tax plus interest and civil penalties." He urged all tax evaders to take advantage of the Bureau's then Voluntary Disclosure Policy. That is, to come in, disclose and pay. As a matter of persuasion, he stated "the number of prosecutions also has been rising" (Sub-committee 151). This statement of the then Secretary of the Treasury reflects the real 312 purpose of criminal prosecutions, namely to help collect the money, not to punish.

The function of the Bureau is to collect the Revenue and not prosecute tax evaders except for that very purpose. Prosecution of tax evaders costs all taxpayers money, besides delaying and often endangering the collection of the civil liabilities.* As a matter of fact, sometimes such prosecutions so delay civil settlements as to cause a loss of the civil liability. "The time and effort spent in sending a crook to jail often costs more than the revenue we obtain from him." (Statement of New Commissioner, May 8, 1953 issue U. S. News). Settlement with tax evaders and collection of their taxes, interest and penalties, not only save all taxpayers the costs of prosecution, but also results in the prompt collection of the Revenue. As everyone knows, the disposition of all tax cases, including the cases of tax evaders, is a matter of negotiation between the Bureau and its officials and the taxpayer and his representatives. The interests of the Revenue are paramount from the standpoint of the Bureau.

* Under Bureau procedure, once prosecution is contemplated, the civil aspects of a case cannot be considered until the criminal aspects of the case are disposed of. This may mean a delay of from 2 to 5 years and even longer before the government collects the taxes and penalties in cases recommended for prosecution or prosecuted.

Many reasons for settling without prosecution were developed before the Sub-committee by representatives of the American Bar Association, members of the Sub-committee, representatives of Justice, and representatives of the Treasury Department as appears in part by the following:

> "Our systems of law enforcement and judicial process could not stand the strain (of prosecuting all tax evaders) so there must be some effort to distinguish among various graduations of tax falsifications." (Sub-committee 227); "It (criminal prosecutions re-> 313 commended in every possible case) would have worse effects upon our fiscal system than would your meeting the problem squarely and adopting the policy that all taxpayers know will be applied with uniform force." (Sub-committee 97); "The object of the law is to collect taxes, I think you can have too many prosecutions." (Sub-committee 203); "We all know what happened in the old prohibition days; it got so that juries wouldn't convict," (Sub committee 213) and "If every case were to go through this whole process, to go to the Department of Justice, would be a terrific delay in the determination of civil penalties and the collection of civil penalties * * ," " * * I think (this) would result to a detriment of the tax system" (Sub-committee 166).

These same reasons emphasize that a Bureau employee who settles the case of a tax evader is not dishonest or failing in his duty. This same employee may well be conscientiously, courageously, competently and honestly performing his duty to a greater degree in the interest of the Revenue than some other Bureau employee who might be inclined to or does recommend prosecution of that very case or a similar case.

The new Commissioner of Internal Revenue recognized the true situation, namely, that cases had to be settled and settled promptly, as manifested by his interview in the U. S. News & World Report of May 8, 1953:

> • • • A. • • • I think we have considerably restored or started morale on the way back. • • • (Emphasis supplied.)
> • • • A. • • • "What we're after is to get the cases settled. We want to stop this pile-up along the line."
>
> "Q. Is there much of a jam now?"
>
> "A. It is pretty bad. It is so bad, in fact, that I am told that Tax Court cases may not get tried for two or three years.
>
> "But we are making headway on this. I've given 314 instructions that there must be more concentrated effort to settle."
>
> "Q. Wouldn't you get more revenue that way?"
>
> "A. We get the revenue and get the case out of our way and simplify the thing all along the line. I haven't said that we have to settle a case just to settle it, but I said to these fellows:
>
> "Here, forget about all this business of being scared to death of investigations. Go on and make your decisions. You have the authority to make them. Make every decision you can make within the scope of your authority, and be satisfied that if it is an honest decision you will be defended in it." • • •

HOW AND WHERE MOST CASES OF TAX EVADERS ARE SETTLED.

The investigation of a tax evader is usually commenced by the Revenue Agent. The old Revenue Agent in Charge had the real responsibility for bringing in the revenue. A Revenue Agent has to examine returns and reach decisions quickly and collect the money even from tax evaders. He is hesitant to call in the Intelligence Unit because of the delay which inevitably ensues. There were certain Revenue Agents in Charge who rarely called in the Intelligence Unit and others called them in sparingly. Revenue Agents are not interested in prosecutions except where particular cases have genuine moral turpitude and real enforcement value. They are interested in the rare cases where prosecution rightfully attracts publicity, thereby inducing other taxpayers to comply with the revenue laws and voluntarily come in and pay their taxes and penalties and do it quickly. The present jam throughout the Bureau is in no small way due to a practice in existence during the last several years that a Revenue Agent as such cannot assert a fraud penalty without calling in the Intelligence Unit. This has cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

315 The Revenue Agent may, and in some instances should, call in the Intelligence Unit (Special Agents). Once the Intelligence Unit is called in, it assumes jurisdiction of the case, and a Special Agent proceeds with the investigation, working with the Revenue Agent. The Special Agent, having concluded his investigation, has two alternatives: (1) He can settle, if possible, the case of the tax evader for the taxes determined by the Revenue Agent and the fraud penalties, or, if unsuccessful in settling the case, he can attach the fraud penalties and move the case forward for civil disposition; and (2) he can recommend criminal prosecution of the taxpayer. The Intelligence Unit referred but 24% of their cases to the Penal Division for prosecution for the period from July 1, 1946 to June 30, 1951 (Sub-committee 114). But 60% of these were cleared by the Penal Division to Justice. If a Special Agent recommends prosecution, he, of course, also attaches the fraud penalties to the additional civil taxes. Thus, under Bureau regulations, the quasi judicial recommendation of prosecution of a particular tax evader is made by the Special Agent, the very person who conducted the investigation. If the Special Agent as such recommends prosecution, and it is approved by his superiors, the case goes to the Enforcement Counsel of the Bureau for legal review. He, in turn, has two alternatives: (1) To refer the case to Justice for prosecution; and (2) to send the case back to the Revenue Agent for disposition of the civil liability. Once he determines to refer the case to Justice, he, on behalf of the Bureau, sends the case to Justice with the recommendation of the Special Agent that the tax evader be prosecuted.

316 THE BUREAU ALONE DETERMINES WHAT TAX EVADERS SHALL BE RECOMMENDED FOR PROSECUTION AND ONLY THOSE SO RECOMMENDED MAY BE PROSECUTED.

Unless the Bureau recommends prosecution, the Department of Justice obtains no jurisdiction over a tax evasion case. Thus, the Bureau is in a position to stifle a prosecution in the inception, merely by settling the case.

Justice assumes jurisdiction of the case only after referral for prosecution (Sub-committee 171).

The Revenue Agent can and does settle a great number of such cases without calling in the Special Agent. If he does, there is no chance for the Special Agent to recommend prosecution (Sub-committee 107). The Special Agent can and does settle many of such cases without recommending prosecution, and if he does, there is no recommended prosecution. If either the Revenue Agent or the Special Agent settles these cases, they never reach the Enforcement Counsel's office (Sub-committee 104-105). It goes without saying that the Enforcement Counsel cannot refer to Justice cases which never reach his office, nor can Justice prosecute cases it never receives.

The end result of this multi-level sieve for settling fraud cases is to work a gross inequity upon those singled out for prosecution.

To illustrate: Suppose there are ten tax evader automobile dealers in a city whose cases are all equally flagrant. All are under investigation by Revenue Agents. The Revenue Agents may settle five of these cases without even calling in the Special Agent. The Special Agent having been called in settles four of the remaining five and forwards one to the Enforcement Counsel who refers that case to Justice. Justice gets and can get only the one case, though there were nine other cases settled by the Bureau which were equally flagrant. Thus, the lack of 317 equality of treatment and the denial of due process is involved only in the one case which is singled out and recommended for prosecution, and that lack of equality of treatment and lack of due process occurs administratively in the Bureau.

THE PROBLEM IS WHAT CASES AND WHAT TAX EVADERS SHALL BE RECOMMENDED FOR PROSECUTION BY THE BUREAU AND WHY?

Bearing in mind the facts heretofore developed, and particularly the fact that every day in the Bureau someone administratively, rightfully and properly settles most cases of tax evaders without recommending prosecution, and that some one else in the Bureau administratively determines that some cases of other tax evaders under like or similar facts shall be recommended for prosecution, we reach the crux of this Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Due Process. What cases of what tax evaders are to be recommended by the Bureau for prosecution and why? Are there determining factors, tests, guide posts or discernible standards which the Bureau and its officials are duty bound to apply before they can legally recommend to Justice that the case of a particular taxpayer, with equality to all like taxpayers, involving fraudulent unreported income, be prosecuted? If so, what are they? Or is the Bureau and its officials, without stated and known standards, free to administratively recommend the prosecution of any such taxpayer? If the Bureau and its administrative officials have this latter virtually unregulated power to make such determination, then such administrative officials are obviously making the law. If such administrative officials have such a power, and if they have evidence establishing fraudulent unreported income of any taxpayer, they can single out and seize upon the case of any such taxpayer whom they desire to recommend for prosecution, or they can refuse to prose-318 cute a taxpayer whose case is similar, without a semblance of fairness, equity, uniformity or equality of treatment of all taxpayers. Such administrative officials have it within their unregulated power to administratively settle the case of one tax evader (thereby for such tax evader avoiding prosecution), and then simultaneously recommending for prosecution the case of another tax evader (thereby for such tax evader burdening him with the ignominy of such prosecution), whose case is no more flagrant than that of the tax evader whose case is settled. That some Bureau officials believe that they have this unbridled, unshackled power is best emphasized by a conference this Deponent had with one of the top Bureau officials of the Chicago office, who was charged with the solemn duty of determining whether or not the case of a certain automobile dealer should be settled or recommended for prosecution. He advised this Deponent that the Bureau had determined to recommend prosecution. When this Deponent called his attention to the fact that the Chicago office of the Bureau had settled (hence failed to prosecute) far more flagrant cases of many other violating automobile dealers, this official's reply in substance was that while there was no question about this latter fact, "We have determined that this case should go forward for prosecution, we call them as we see them." If such lack of uniformity of consideration and action, irrational and unfair attitude, and display of arbitrary power of such officials having such virtually unregulated power is to be tolerated and receive legal sanction, then we have a government of men and not of law, whereunder all citizens and taxpayers in like situations can be and are subject to the arbitrary abuse and misuse of bureaucratic administrative power without remedy of law. What is the correct answer? The Bureau has struggled with this question for years in an attempt to arrive at a fair solution.

319 Deponent, as Regional Counsel, received the recommendations for prosecution of innumerable Special Agents, approved by their superiors, Special Agents in Charge, covering an area of sixteen states. As stated, it was the duty of this Deponent to make the quasi judicial determination as to what cases, so received, should be forwarded to Justice for prosecution, and what cases should be returned to the Revenue Agent's office for civil settlement. Hundreds of such cases of every conceivable nature, involving fraudulent unreported income, were presented to and passed upon by this Deponent. Most of such cases were given the personal attention of this Deponent to a greater or lesser degree. He, too, was faced with the problem raised in the last paragraph. The manner in which and how and under what circumstances the problem was solved is most pertinent here.

THE BUREAU'S PRACTICES AND PROCEDURES IN EFFECT IN 1946.

Deponent on assuming his duties as Regional Counsel in June of 1946, believed that the Bureau's then overall problems, the history and purpose of these income tax prosecutions and the basic conceptions applicable to all of Federal prosecutions, as fully developed in Appendix A, were to be a part and parcel of his evaluation of a criminal income tax fraud case, and in making his determination of which cases should be forwarded to Justice for prosecution. On this objective basis, these cases had to be most carefully reviewed and screened before they were cleared for prosecution so that: they would be representative substantial cases of willful, flagrant, defiant violators; they could and would be absorbed and processed promptly by Justice and the courts; when they reached the courts they could and would be promptly tried with well-merited publicity; and if their prosecution was 320 successful, substantial penitentiary sentences could be rightfully imposed, not probations. On this same basis, other cases, lacking these essential elements, were to be closed out upon payment of tax and penalties, since these cases merely clogged all dockets everywhere, in the Bureau, Justice and the courts, thereby delaying (delay is often the best defense) and preventing the processing of substantial cases as aforesaid and likewise delaying the collection of the revenue. To illustrate, the clearing for prosecution and the prompt prosecution in the State of Illinois of two clear-cut substantially flagrant cases of defiant tax evaders with much publicity followed by substantial penitentiary sentences has far more benefit from an enforcement standpoint, and from cost to taxpayers, than does the clearing for and prosecution of 10 cases of 10 tax evaders and saves all taxpayers much money. If all 10 cases are cleared they just tend to clog the dockets in Justice and in the courts. They cannot be promptly tried. If disposed of promptly they are usually followed by probation. Lawyers ordinarily do not plead clients guilty if they believe they will be incarcerated. If they are not disposed of promptly they just lay pending, further clogging the dockets of the courts and steadily losing all enforcement and prosecution value. While cases are in this state, the collection of the revenue is inordinately delayed at the expense of all taxpayers.

Deponent discovered that there were no Bureau regulations nor any explicit standards of the Bureau for selecting income tax cases for penal treatment. There was, in effect, only a Bureau policy which had been conceived in 1919 by confidential memorandum and restated by confidential memorandum in 1934. This policy had been held within the archives of the Bureau for a period of 26 years, until it was publicly released in 1945. This policy was that the Bureau would recommend the prosecution of a case "solely on the basis of whether the evidence is sufficient to afford reasonable grounds for the belief 321 that a conviction can be secured" (Sub-committee 139). This was actually only a directive to analyze the evidence (gathered by the Special Agent) to see whether or not he had correctly determined that this evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction. If it was, the approval of the Special Agent's recommendation would be, for all practical purposes, automatic, and the case of that taxpayer would be forwarded to Justice for prosecution in accordance with the Bureau's "Policy." If sufficient, it was at first assumed that the Special Agent had properly and legally recommended prosecution, and that it was proper and legal for Deponent to refer that case to Justice. Under the then Bureau policy, Deponent furnished taxpayers and their representatives as little information as possible. He did not dare disclose the Government's evidence. If the taxpayer could not establish that he had not cheated on his taxes, the case was on its way to Justice. The operation was on a mass production basis. The tests, guide posts and standards in determining whether or not a particular case should be referred to Justice were one and the same, "the sufficiency of the evidence to convict." The basic concepts of all Federal criminal prosecutions were ignored. Thus, operating under this policy, Deponent at the outset loaded into Justice, without the semblance of uniformity, consistency or equality of treatment, practically most cases recommended for prosecution by a Special Agent where there was sufficient evidence of fraudulent unreported income. Deponent's legal treatment of these cases, as Deponent gradually comprehended, was nothing more nor less that the rubber stamping of the Special Agent's recommendation.

PROBLEMS WHICH AROSE IN 1946 TO 1949 AS A RESULT OF THE BUREAU'S 1919 POLICY.

Problems arose and continued to arise in the Bureau concerning the handling of these cases by the Bureau under its "Policy", and the character of the cases the 322 Bureau had forwarded to Justice for prosecution pursuant to that "Policy." They could not be and were not solved by that "Policy", since that "Policy" was directly responsible. Some of them arose almost immediately. Others did not arise until much later. They were all interwoven and overlapped.

Deponent and the Bureau rather quickly and progressively began to appreciate that they were clearing for prosecution small, inconsequential cases of no enforcement value, despite the fact that similar cases of other taxpayers were being settled every day by the Bureau. Cases were being cleared for prosecution where the recommended prosecution might well have been the result of antagonism between the taxpayer and the investigator, and/or the failure of the taxpayer to agree to pay the taxes and penalties demanded. Just a year ago one of the Judges of this court was confronted with this very problem and dismissed the case. Co-operation cases were being cleared for prosecution.* Voluntary Disclosure cases were forwarded for prosecution.

323 Justice was hesitant to prosecute cases involving only one year of unreported income since there was no pattern of fraud. There was no uniformity of treatment of taxpayers. More cases were forwarded for prosecution from the little State of Maryland than from the entire State of New York. Deponent on information

---

* Co-operation cases, as the term is used here, are cases where the Agents, after the investigation has commenced, seek the co-operation of the taxpayer, his accountant or his lawyer, and they furnish evidence, which evidence so furnished is the basis of the recommended prosecution. These cases and their prosecution present a real problem from the standpoint of the Bureau and, of course, from the standpoint of the taxpayer. Because of the lack of personnel to work cases, investigating agents must request and seek the co-operation of taxpayers in the early stages of the investigation and the taxpayer cooperates and furnishes evidence. Often the recommended prosecution against a particular taxpayer is based solely upon the evidence so furnished. If this matter became generally known, this co-operation would not and should not be forthcoming. Hence, the entire administrative collection procedure of the Bureau would be disrupted. From a prosecution standpoint, these cases present a legal question of whether or not this evidence was "voluntarily furnished." If not, it may well be subject to a Motion to Suppress. In addition, they present the question of fairness as to the taxpayer and the question of overreaching by the Bureau. The Bureau, without recommending prosecution, settled many of these cases on an individual basis (Sub-committee 163). This meant that one tax evader who co-operated was prosecuted, while another tax evader who co-operated settled his case. It is Deponent's understanding that the Bureau officials in 1950 assured the Subcommittee that these co-operation cases were not being prosecuted.

 Criticisms of the Bureau's handling of these Voluntary Disclosure cases became so widespread that the Congress in 1950 threatened to legislate on this subject.

 The Bureau even had different prosecution policies in different states (Sub-committee 169-170).

and belief states that there were some States where there had never been an Income Tax prosecution. Were or are the taxpayers in those states more or less honest than taxpayers in states where prosecutions occurred? The Bureau was recommending for prosecution the case of one tax evader and closing out the case of another tax evader, which cases were equally flagrant, even if they were neighbors or lived in the same community or in another state. As cases prosecuted reached the Courts, there was a vastly increasing number of probations granted. Courts which had previously imposed substantial penitentiary sentences in Income Tax cases were granting probation. This is emphasized by the records of these cases in this District. Grand Juries refused to indict. These probations emphasized that something was wrong with the type of cases the Bureau was clearing for prosecution. Many such cases had no enforcement value since probations did not benefit enforcement, and the Bureau, at the expense of all taxpayers, was merely delaying the collection of the Revenue. Justice, with a more liberal conference procedure, thereupon began making an overall evaluation of these cases and returning a number of them to the Bureau. The Bureau, as a result of its 1919 "Policy", was right back where the Government was when it was attempting to enforce the prohibition law. This analogy was made before the Sub-committee (Sub-committee 213, 242). "We cannot * * * run the risk of having income tax enforcement cheapened in the way prohibition enforcement ultimately was" (Sub-committee 242).

324 The facts and problems above related are not state secrets. They are known to everyone in and out of the Bureau familiar with the general situation, and particularly to tax practitioners. They appeared in one form or another in the many Congressional investigations of the Bureau. As stated, these problems were closely related, overlapped and did not occur all at one time. Some would be solved, then others more serious would arise. They became progressively worse. They were given consideration by everyone in the Bureau having any responsibility in dealing with them, and they were given consideration by those who dealt with the Bureau. They were also, in some instances, given consideration by the Congress through its Sub-committees. As a result of the Bureau's "Policy", the Bureau was in trouble with Justice, the public, the American Bar Association, lawyers, accountants, taxpayers, and the Congress. Repercussions began early and became increasingly more serious. As early as September, 1947, the Committee on Bureau Practice and Procedure of the Tax Section of the American Bar Association filed a report in which it complained of the way these tax cases were handled by the Penal Division. This report not only dealt with certain problems which had already arisen, but, in addition, correctly forewarned against certain problems to arise in the future. In this report, the Penal Division was accused of rubber stamping the recommendations of Special Agents, its conference procedure was condemned, and it was warned against flooding the courts with these tax fraud cases.

This report of the Bar committee went much further and commented on many of the very matters which this Deponent has heretofore discussed, and emphasized some of the basic conceptions which Deponent regarded as essential to a proper administration of the office of Regional Counsel. This report stated that "the threat of fraud 325 should not be used as a club to collect tax which was not due." This report referred to the "tremendously high rates of recent years", and that citizens who had previously been honest "should be given an opportunity of discussing their case with decision making officials of the Penal Division." This obviously meant a weighing of the overall equities before forwarding a case for prosecution. Merely because some Special Agent had correctly determined fraudulent unreported income did not necessarily warrant criminal prosecution. This report mentioned the unjustifiable practice of indicting citizens as their "character (was) ruined" and then the dropping of the case without trial. This report stated further in part:

> • • • "The purpose of the Bureau is to collect Revenue and not to fill jails. Of course, properly publicised convictions for tax fraud have a healthful and immediate effect by (1) encouraging voluntary disclosure of tax frauds which otherwise would not be discovered, and (2) keeping taxpayers in line who otherwise might file fraudulent returns.

"If such a system is not followed, the elaborate decentralization of the Penal Division may bring an almost overwhelming flood of tax fraud cases on the courts." • • •

THE EVOLUTION OF A SOUND PROSECUTION POLICY.

The Bureau and all the parties heretofore mentioned, at least by the Fall of 1949, recognized that the Bureau's prosecution "Policy" was no policy at all; that the Bureau had to have a sound prosecution policy, or at least it had to do something about these problems. It had to liberalize its conference procedure; sharpen and up-grade its cases so that the cases forwarded to Justice would have real enforcement value; evaluate the cases on an overall equitable basis, keeping in mind the substantial civil penalties; eliminate certain types of cases; and 326 treat taxpayers on a basis of fairness, consistency and equality. Once everyone recognized this situation, the Bureau's 1919 "Policy" was dead; the basic conceptions of all Federal prosecutions emerged and triumphed; the Special Agent's recommendation meant nothing; and a sound prosecution policy for the Bureau was apparent which policy was substantially as follows:

The Bureau, of necessity, had to confine its recommended prosecutions to substantial, flagrant, clear cut, key cases against defiant taxpayers so that if convictions were obtained, they would be followed by incarcerations, thus giving these cases real enforcement value. Others were to be settled.

There are plenty of cases with real enforcement value which can and should be made and recommended for prosecution under and within the sound prosecution policy above mentioned if the Special Agents will only go out and make them. This latter fact is emphasized by the innumerable cases coming well within the above sound prosecution policy which have been successfully prosecuted in the courts of this District. These sound prosecution cases were not made by Special Agents running to taxpayers and seeking their co-operation and having them furnish evidence or seizing upon the evidence furnished by taxpayers to Revenue Agents and using that evidence, even if voluntarily furnished, as a basis for recommending prosecution.

Deponent, as Regional Counsel, finally, with full knowledge of his superiors and the Bureau, put this sound prosecution policy into effect. It was not done at one certain time, but it was achieved over a period of years, in part before the year 1949, and in part after. It certainly was rather well crystallized before the end of 1949. It was accomplished only as a result of much co-operation from his superiors, Special Agents in Charge, and members of his staff, after struggling with the difficult 327 problems above mentioned, and many more. It was only when this sound prosecution policy was recognized and applied that the Bureau and Deponent, as Regional Counsel, had some discernible standards, guide posts and tests, which enabled the Bureau to, at least, have some semblance of a legal basis to determine what cases of what tax evaders should be forwarded for prosecution and why. It was only thus that the Bureau at least made an effort to establish consistency, fairness and equality of treatment in the handling of these cases, the basis of Due Process.

THE INVESTIGATIONS.

In 1950 the Congress designated a special committee to investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce (hereinafter for convenience called the Crime Committee). Once organized, this Crime Committee demanded and received from the Bureau the returns of certain citizens and taxpayers whom they or someone else designated as racketeers or hoodlums. Under date of February 28, 1951, this Crime Committee issued its Interim Report in which it questioned whether the Bureau had been making "a real effort"* to check on the income tax returns of known gamblers and racketeers.

* The Bureau had always devoted part of its time and manpower to this very task. In fact, during the period from 1947 to 1951 approximately 10% of the cases investigated by the Intelligence Unit were cases of gamblers and racketeers. The Bureau did not have the manpower, nor did the Bureau squander the taxpayers' money, to engage on witch hunts against panderers, prostitutes, bookies, race horse touts, etc. In addition, 278 of such cases had been recommended for prosecution (Statement of the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue to the Sub-committee on March 20, 1951, Taxes—The Tax magazine May 1951, page 350).

This was only the first of an increasing number of exposés and investigations, by Congress, grand juries and newspapers, bringing the Bureau and its employees under attack.

Seemingly there was no one at top administrative 328 levels able to deal with these unfortunate situations which had developed and who could present the true case of the Bureau and its many complicated problems to the people and the Congress—no one who could forthrightly go before the Congress and explain in detail why most fraud cases of tax evaders were settled in the interest of the Bureau. No top Bureau official came forward to stand up and protect the thousands of honest employees who were doing their job and doing it well. More words of praise were given these honest employees for their accomplishments by representatives of the American Bar Association than were given them by their superiors.

The Purification Program-Chaos.

There were demands from the public, and demands from part of the press, and demands from certain members of the Congress that more racketeers be prosecuted, that more tax evaders be prosecuted, and that the developing unfortunate situations within the Bureau be rectified. To meet these demands the Bureau, already burdened with its own difficult problems, had to undertake a program to satisfy these demands. This program is herein described as a "Purification Program". It was under way by March and has continued up until the present time. In the Summer of 1951, Mr. Dunlap, a new Commissioner of the Bureau, was appointed and among his many duties was the additional burden of this purification program. It consisted of the prosecution of more tax evaders, a drive against racketeers, and a general inquisition against all Bureau employees, honest and dishonest. The net result of this purification program was that tax evaders were promiscuously recommended for prosecution; the entire administrative and collection machinery of the Bureau was disrupted; the money was 329 not coming in; the morale of the Bureau employees as a whole was wrecked and there was chaos and confusion throughout the Bureau—a real mess—all at the expense of the Bureau and all taxpayers.

(a) The Prosecution of More Tax Evaders.

By April or May, 1951, it was apparent that the Bureau intended to load into Justice for prosecution, practically every case of every taxpayer recommended for prosecution by a Special Agent if there was sufficient evidence to convict. The heat was on, the Bureau's previous prosecution policy was at an end—it was cast to the four winds—and the Bureau's 1919 policy was resurrected. These cases were pushed through the Bureau and Justice like a streak of lightning, and those marked with a big red "R" like a streak of greased lightning. Deponent states, without equivocation, that that has been the continuous situation in the Bureau from at least May of 1951 up to and including the present time. The basic concepts of all Federal prosecutions have been continuously ignored and there has not been, and is not, the semblance of consistency, fairness and equality of treatment by the Bureau in the loading of these cases into Justice and their clearance by Justice for prosecution. No one, whether it be a Grand Jury, a Congressional Committee, a newspaper, or the man on the street was again going to have any opportunity to accuse any one in the Bureau, and for that matter in Justice, of closing out any case of any taxpayer where the Special Agent had recommended prosecution and had developed sufficient evidence to support that recommendation.

(b) The Drive Against Racketeers.

In April or May of 1951, the Bureau started a drive against racketeers. The Bureau had joined the National crusade against organized crime—it was going to in-330 vestigate all racketeers. As Deponent understands, the term "Racketeer" was generally used to designate some individual who may have sometime violated some state law (extortion, abortion, prostitution, racing, liquor, gambling, etc.). The Bureau first had to accumulate these racketeers. As early as March of 1951, a racketeer list was in the process of preparation. Every investigative agency of the Bureau, which was supposed to be out examining returns and bringing in the money, was working on the preparation of this list. Names were secured from every source possible and a master list of 30,000 racketeers was prepared. If the agents had no definite legal evidence, and they seldom did, to establish that a citizen or taxpayer was a racketeer, they placed him on that list on the basis of rumors. If a citizen and taxpayer had been arrested for gambling, even though he was discharged, he found his way on that list. If a citizen and taxpayer had been associated with a racketeer, or a person whom an investigating agent believed was a racketeer, no matter how legitimate that association was, he, too, found himself on that list. Even if a citizen and taxpayer had been associated with a racketeer years before and the racketeer had died, that citizen and taxpayer found his way on this racketeer list. Special squads, known as "Racket Squads" were set up in various parts of the Bureau under so-called "Specialists" in the handling of the investigations of racketeers. From this list as aforesaid, the agents began their investigations, which of necessity were most cursory, and the cases were loaded into the office of the various Regional Counsel with a recommendation for prosecution. They were to be referred to Justice —and promptly.

All these so-called racketeer cases had a big red "R" stamped on their files and they were to be expedited. While the responsibility was ostensibly placed on the Regional Counsel to determine whether or not the rack-331 eteer classification was justified, if he removed an "R" stamping, someone in Washington would put it right back on.

Mr. Schwartz, assistant head of the Penal Division of the Bureau, in the Fall of 1951, fully developed the consideration given and to be given by the Bureau to these cases with a big red "R", after pointing out that any such citizen or taxpayer was, of course, affected by how his case was handled in the Bureau, Mr. Schwartz testified in some detail that the Bureau had outlined by various directives a "Special" procedure for the handling of these so-called racketeer cases. The Bureau had adopted a "rule of thumb" to be applied so that a case of a racketeer should be forwarded for prosecution if there was evidence of a "prima facie" case,—hence the Bureau just listened to matters of defense and moved the case on,—whereas other cases (honest tax evaders) would be forwarded for prosecution by the Bureau to Justice only if the Bureau was convinced of the taxpayers' guilt and that a conviction was reasonably certain. To avoid any confusion on the part of the committee, Mr. Schwartz emphasized that the cases of racketeers—those marked with a big red "R" —could be forwarded more readily since "Special Tests" were applied to these cases. If there was any evidence, no matter how flimsy, they were on their way to Justice.

So that there could be no question concerning the Bureau's two separate and distinct standards used as aforesaid, Mr. Schwartz again covered the situation when he appeared before this same Sub-committee on January 23, 1952. Here he stated:

> "In our recent drive on racketeers, I think it has become generally known through testimony before this committee and elsewhere that a case of a criminal racketeer is moving forward on the basis of a prima facie case. In that case, if we put them in court, the jury knows what to do with them." (Sub-committee 117.)

332 By this action the Bureau classified its thinking on the subject. Having determined, even if it be by rumors only, that a certain citizen and taxpayer was a "racketeer", it now determined that this citizen was a "criminal racketeer". Mr. Schwartz might just as well have said that the Bureau, to aid the State Government, under the guise of income tax prosecutions, intended to prosecute a man for being in the policy racket. They were sure that they could convict him on his past record even if it had nothing to do with income taxes.

Mr. Achilli's case received this special "R" treatment, meaning little or no consideration, from the Bureau. His case had a large red "R" on it. When Deponent first inquired as to why this case had been classified as a racketeer case there was some mention of a poker game. Later it was mentioned that Mr. Achilli had been arrested on a gambling charge—from which he was discharged. At the conference, if it could be called a conference, which Deponent had at the office of the Enforcement Counsel, he was advised, in substance, that the case against Mr. Achilli was a net worth case corroborated by specific items of omitted income, the source of which was his automobile agency—namely, side payments on cars, and that source only. Having been given this information as aforesaid, Deponent requested and demanded of the Enforcement Counsel, the Chief Counsel of the Bureau, and the then Commissioner of the Bureau, Mr. Dunlap, that this racketeer classification be removed from the case of Mr. Achilli but his requests and demands were ignored. Since then Deponent understands that the Bureau is contending that they have some evidence which it has refused to disclose, to the effect that Mr. Achilli had unreported income from gambling.

Mr. Achilli's case was forwarded for prosecution because the Bureau applied the prima facie standard against 333 him. His partner, Mr. Gromer, was not subjected to prosecution, apparently because the Bureau did not apply the "R" stamping procedure to him. Yet, they were both partners in the same automobile agency over a period of five years including the prosecution years and governed by the same set of facts.

(c) The General Inquisition Against All Bureau Employees—Honest and Dishonest.

The Bureau, by the Fall of 1951, pursuant to popular demand began its own inquisition of all its employees. There were now two classes of citizens and taxpayers who were given "special treatment" under the purification program: (1) The racketeers and (2) the honest employees of the Bureau. It commenced with some directives that the tax returns of all Bureau employees should be singled out and subjected to "special audit". Instead of collecting money from all tax evaders and all tax avoiders in the interest of the Revenue, the Bureau directed its investigations against the tax returns of honest Bureau employees. Think of the money this cost all taxpayers!

Then came the questionnaire. "All supervisory employees and all other employees dealing with the public or handling government funds—some 31,000 in all—have been required to execute and file with the Bureau a statement which would reflect their income and net worth. This will be a continuing program." (Sub-committee 8.) This statement was made by the then Secretary of the Treasury and applied only to Bureau employees. They, of all Government employees, were singled out for "special treatment", being required to file these questionnaires. Honest government employees are not required to prove their innocence and dishonest employees should not be required to furnish evidence of their guilt even if they work 334 for the Bureau. This is America and not Russia. Deponent refused to sign and submit this questionnaire. The racketeers weren't even required to do this. These investigations, the widespread unfavorable publicity, and the general inquisition as aforesaid, all taken together wrecked the morale of the Bureau employees.

It did much more, it wrecked the administrative procedures of the Bureau, all geared to bring in the money. Everyone in the Bureau was afraid to close out a case, civil or criminal, for fear that he would be criticized and no one above him would stand up and protect his action. No one wanted to assume the responsibilities which he was required to assume. Everyone in and out of the Bureau knew this fact. They further knew that everybody was checking everybody else, and everybody was reviewing the work of everybody else. The whole situation is summed up in a statement which Mr. Arent, the former Chairman of the Committee on Procedure in Fraud ases of the Section of Taxation of the American Bar Association, made to the Sub-committee in February of 1952, as follows:

> "Because of the mistakes and transgressions of a small minority of our public officials, we find an increasing timidity among honest and able public officials with respect to assuming responsibility for difficult decisions. This could lead to a bureaucratic paraly is which would seriously harm the effectiveness of our Government and grossly injure all of us who have to deal with our Government—whether as taxpayers, as businessmen, or as servicemen. The abandonment by the Treasury of its voluntary disclosure policy, and perhaps, too, of its recognition of health as an element of decision in the processing of a tax-fraud case, is not the constructive or courageous way out. The Bureau should be encouraged to grapple with its difficult 335 problems and not to run from them." (Sub-committee 243.)

The increasing timidity of Bureau employees to assume their responsibilities and this bureaucratic paralysis had been accomplished before Mr. Arent's statement. It still exists in the Bureau. The existence of the low morale of the Bureau employees and their hesitancy to promptly and properly discharge their duties and make decisions required, even at the present time, is emphasized by the statement of the new Commissioner which appeared in U. S. News of May 8, 1953, part of which has heretofore been quoted.

The Bureau in 1951 quickly "solved" most of these problems by the following means: Once a Special Agent recommended prosecution—and those above him agreed, (on what basis does not appear, but they always agreed)—"they then shot it right straight into the Department of Justice" (Sub-committee 51). This entire failure and refusal of Bureau employees to assume their responsibilities vitally affects the question of Due Process in this case, since once a Special Agent has recommended prosecution and there is evidence to sustain that recommendation, everyone in the Bureau above him will not apply the basic conceptions applicable to all Federal prosecutions but will rubber stamp that recommendation. For practical purposes, there is no review whatsoever in the Bureau of that recommendation. Considering what the honest, competent Bureau employees went through in the last several years one cannot blame them too much for not assuming and doing their duty.

336 DEPONENT'S RESIGNATION AS REGIONAL COUNSEL.

Deponent, as Regional Counsel, strenuously opposed, each and all parts of this purification program as it was developed and conducted. When unsuccessful in his efforts, Deponent resigned as Regional Counsel on November 27, 1951. Portions of his letter of resignation dealing with each of these situations are pertinent here and attached hereto as Appendix B.

THE PLAN OF REORGANIZATION.

The Bureau, faced with all the difficulties above mentioned, brought forth in January of 1952, its plan of reorganization which contemplated sweeping changes in the entire Bureau procedure for the handling of all matters in the Bureau including the handling of income tax fraud cases. This plan may well be "structurally and functionally" sound. However, when it was brought forth and applied to the chaotic conditions which then existed in the Bureau, it only created more chaos and more confusion. Nobody under the plan knew who did what, many thoroughly competent individuals were given high titles with mere ministerial duties. Questions of policy were often left to inexperienced or incompetent employees, or subordinates. It was in this atmosphere of chaos and confusion that the case of Mr. Achilli was "expeditiously processed" as an "R" case by the Enforcement Counsel and "shot" right straight to Justice.

THE RESULTS OF THIS NEW POLICY OF FEAR IS APPARENT FROM THE STATISTICS.

Prior to 1930, there were few income tax cases prosecuted. The report of the Commissioner for the year 1931 stated, in part, "the Penal provisions of the law, of 337 course are incidental to the general purpose of raising revenue * * *" (page 50). Deponent has examined all of the Commissioner's reports for the years 1930 to 1940, attempting to determine the number of cases forwarded by the Bureau to Justice with a recommendation of prosecution with little success. Seemingly the number referred was between 50 and 75, but as reflected by these reports, this number included not only income tax cases but miscellaneous tax cases. During the period from 1941 to 1946, the Bureau forwarded to Justice between 80 and 100 cases, approximately 60% of which were forwarded for prosecution. In 1942 there were 75 cases referred, in 1943 there were 94 cases referred, and in 1944 there were 77 cases referred. Of this number approximately 60% were prosecuted (Sub-committee 175, 203). The last figures are the figures of Justice and they do not conform with the figures of the Bureau since, most generally, the Bureau counts their cases by the number of individuals involved and even related cases, whereas Justice counts their cases on the basis of the case itself. As emphasized, a Tax Drive was started in the fiscal year of 1945 to procure prosecutions in order to have tax evaders come in and make Voluntary Disclosures. The Commissioner's report for the year 1947 emphasized that in the year 1945, the Bureau referred 165 cases and convictions were had in 58, whereas in 1947, the Bureau referred 556 cases and convictions were had in 94 cases. The figures for Justice for the fiscal year 1947 show that they received 393 cases (Sub-committee 203). This indicates the different way in which the statistics on these cases were kept by the Bureau and Justice.

The number of cases and defendants referred to Justice and the number closed out without referral by the Penal Division of the Bureau appear in the Annual Fiscal Reports of the Commissioner for the fiscal years 1947 to 338 1951, inclusive, the fiscal year 1947 being from July 1, 1946, to June 30, 1947, etc. This tabulation follows:

Fiscal Year	Number of Cases	Number of Defendants	Cases Closed Out
1947	556	655
1948	867	1043	266
1949	819	907	467
1950	503	559	530
1951	515	623	526
1952	1414	1529	269

The Commissioner's Annual Report for the fiscal year 1952 also indicates that the recommendations for prosecution by Special Agents for the fiscal year 1951 (July 1, 1951 to June 30, 1952) increased 100% over the previous year. The tabulation above emphasizes that as early as the fiscal year 1949 (July 1, 1948 to June 30, 1949), the Bureau was having problems with the cases referred. Hence, there was at first a gradual tapering off. Then in the fiscal year of 1950, beginning July 1, 1949, there was a substantial reduction of the cases referred to Justice. This was when the sound prosecution policy was put into effect. In both years, the years 1950 and '51, the Bureau closed out more cases than it referred to Justice.

For the fiscal year 1951, the Bureau referred but 515 cases and closed out 526 cases. For the fiscal year 1952, beginning July 1, 1951, the Bureau, under its Purification Program, forwarded 1,414 cases and closed out but 269 cases. Of the 1,414 cases so referred by the Penal Division to Justice, 130 were so bad that the Bureau did not even recommend prosecution. It just passed the buck to Justice. There was no more manpower available to the Bureau in 1952 than there was in preceding years insofar as the review of these cases was concerned. The figures show the lack of review. These cases were not given the semblance of any careful legal review or considera-339 tion. This was most necessary since the Special Agents had little opportunity, under the pressure of the drive, to make a thorough examination of these cases in the first instance. Yet their recommendations were rubber-stamped right straight up the line. How bad the situation was is again reflected by the fact that in December of 1951, the Penal Division forwarded 263 cases to the Justice Department and closed out but eight. (Internal Revenue Service Monthly Activity Report, January 1952, app. page 2.)

The same situation existed in Justice. On March 29, 1952, the Justice Department revealed that 450 tax evasion cases had been approved for prosecution between November 1, 1951 and March 15, 1952, and that this was twice the number in any comparable period during the last ten years (New York Times, March 30, 1952). The reason for all this appears in the testimony of the then Attorney General before a House Judiciary Committee. In this testimony, he stated, in substance, that because of the current "investigative atmosphere, Justice has been less objective whether or not prosecution should be undertaken." He further stated, "fewer and fewer men are willing to take the responsibility for decisions on these matters with the result that more cases are going to the Grand Juries" (as quoted by Associated Press, Milwaukee Journal, March 30, 1952, page 23). All of these statistics and all of these facts emphasize but one thing—namely, that everyone in Justice, and in the Bureau, was to say the least, most hesitant to close out a case of any tax evader once a Special Agent, as such, had recommended prosecution. This situation has existed both in the Bureau and Justice since 1951. These cases have been rushed through the Bureau and Justice without any consideration of the rights of citizens and taxpayers, even if they are tax evaders, without the semblance of fairness, consistency or equality of treatment. All that is required is a belief that there is sufficient evidence to convict. If the big red "R" is on the file, then practically nothing.

340

Just how vicious, irresponsible and unfair this entire matter is and how afraid everyone in the Bureau and Justice is to overrule a recommendation of a Special Agent appears from the following facts relating to one case, which was not an "R" case. A Special Agent unfairly and wrongfully recommended the prosecution of this particular taxpayer for evading his taxes for one year. The motives behind such recommendation create much speculation. This recommendation, of course, was approved by his superiors and the Enforcement Counsel. The attorney representing this particular taxpayer demonstrated, as far as humanly possible, to Justice, both orally and in writing, that this particular recommendation was, for all practical purposes, baseless in fact and in law. The attorney in Justice should have closed out the case; as seemingly any fair minded competent attorney would have done. However, in order to avoid the March 15, 1953 deadline, and unduly afraid to close out a case where the Special Agent had recommended prosecution, Justice, without even communicating with the attorney, forwarded the case to the United States Attorney for prosecution. This taxpayer was indicted on two counts. One count was under a provision of the Criminal Code where the Statute of Limitations had already run. The other count was based upon one of the catch-all criminal provisions of the Revenue Code, which count was, to say the least, most technical and of questionable, factual and legal, validity. The Special Agent and the Bureau accomplished their purpose—they got the citizen and taxpayer indicted—even if they didn't know what they were doing when they recommended prosecution. Thus, Special Agents determine the prosecution policy of the Bureau and Justice. Thus, does the Bureau and Justice persecute citizens and taxpayers.

341 THE FUNCTIONS, POWERS AND PREROGATIVES OF THE ENFORCEMENT COUNSEL UNDER THE PLAN, AND HOW THEY WERE EXERCISED IN THE CASE OF MR. ACHILLI.

Deponent first undertook the case of Mr. Achilli after it had reached the office of the Enforcement Counsel with the big red "R" on it. The office of the Enforcement Counsel was set up under the plan of reorganization and as emphasized, the "conclusion of the Enforcement Counsel will be the final determination of the Bureau on the prosecution question" (Sub-committee 77). The Enforcement Counsel was the trained, experienced legal talent who was to make the solemn final determination of the Bureau whether or not the recommendation of the Special Agent, as such, that a particular tax evader should be prosecuted should be approved and forwarded to Justice. Before the Enforcement Counsel was given this duty the Bureau had re-established its 1919 policy, had embarked on its racketeer drive and had embarked on a policy of loading into Justice practically every case where the Special Agent had recommended prosecution and had gathered sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. The Bureau by January of 1952, at top levels wanted vigorous enforcement. The Bureau wanted to send forward every case where "we think the man is guilty" and "when we think we have a chance to convict him" (Sub-committee 122). Under this same plan of reorganization, one of the functions of those in Washington was to review the actions of the Enforcement Counsel as to cases he closed out. If he closed one out, they sent the case forward anyway. Thus the Enforcement Counsel had little if any discretion in passing on these cases other than a review of the sufficiency of the evidence. The plan of reorganization went into effect on May 1, 1952. Mr. Balter, in his book "Fraud Under Federal Tax Law," second edition 1953, released on May 25, 1953, com-

342 mented on the prerogatives of these Enforcement Counsel as follows:

> "The apparent tendency of Enforcement Attorneys in some district counsel's offices is 'to go along' with the recommendation of criminal action where there is clear evidence of a substantial under-statement of income, giving little weight to the presence of other factors in the case which may bear on the absence of criminal intent or 'willfulness'." (p. 188.)

In other words, in less than a year it has become apparent to the American Bar and Tax Practitioners that the Enforcement Counsel, as such, could not even consider questions of "intent" or "willfulness," much less the basic conceptions applicable to all Federal prosecutions, nor matters concerning consistency, fairness and equality of treatment in these prosecutions.

THE "LEGAL CONSIDERATION" GIVEN THE CASE OF MR. ACHILLI BY THE BUREAU.

Deponent knew all of the above facts before he even had a conference—if it could be called a conference—in the office of the Enforcement Counsel on the case of Mr. Achilli. Deponent as a representative of a citizen and taxpayer had been "afforded" the opportunity of a conference with a top official of the Bureau who had the final responsibility of approving the Special Agent's recommendation and sending the case to Justice, and who, holding such top position, had no discretion whatsoever. Deponent also knew that there was a great big red "R" involved. With all these facts in mind, Deponent had the conference on July 23, 1952. For all practical purposes Deponent just wasted his own time and the money of his client in attending this "conference." Deponent then sought relief from those responsible for this situation.

343 On August 27, 1952, he wrote the then Chief of Counsel of the Bureau a letter in which he reviewed the over-all facts of Mr. Achilli's case, the unfairness of the proposed recommendation, the situation as to Mr. Gromer, what had occurred in the conference with the Enforcement Counsel, the Deponent's subsequent demand to the Enforcement Counsel that he remove the racketeer classification, the request for a full fair complete conference on the merits, and equality of treatment for his client in view of the settlement of the other 200 automobile dealer cases. A part of his letter reads:

> "I respectfully request and of necessity must demand that you forthwith remove, or cause to be removed, or recommend to be removed, this racketeer classification from the above case so that I can have a full, fair and competent conference in this case on its merits and so that the taxpayer will receive the same treatment accorded to other taxpayers by the Bureau, and particularly those 200 automobile dealers around here that have settled their cases without criminal prosecution. Further, if the Enforcement Attorney is nothing but a rubber stamp for the recommendation of a Special Agent, then I respectfully request an opportunity to discuss this case fully, frankly, and openly, once and for all, with some competent lawyer in your Department on a fair, practical, realistic basis; pre-supposing that that lawyer has sufficient knowledge, experience, authority and intestinal fortitude to close out the criminal aspects of this case, if it should be closed out consistent with directives and policies of the Bureau and precedents of both the Justice Department and the Bureau—and consistent with the treatment of other automobile dealers."
> • • •
>
> "All I am asking for in this case is to discuss this case with some competent lawyer in the Bureau who knows what it is all about, who has the authority to act, who has the discretion to act and who is not 344 afraid to act. I propose to lay my cards on the table and I think the Government should do likewise before this case is 'processed to justice'."

Deponent got nowhere and was finally advised by said Chief Counsel on October 2, 1952, "Conferences on such matters are not held here." Deponent asked no favors. All Deponent requested or demanded was a legal consideration of his client's case by some lawyer in the Bureal, a removal of the "R" and equality of treatment for his client before the case was shot to Justice. Under the purification program as aforesaid he and his client received none of these.

MR. ACHILLI ALSO WAS ONE OF THE NEGLIGIBLE FEW AUTOMOBILE DEALERS OF THE CHICAGO AREA THAT RECEIVED "SPECIAL TREATMENT" FROM THE BUREAU.

The situation in the automobile industry after World War II and the method of operation of most of these automobile dealer agencies from an income tax standpoint followed a general pattern which was so widespread that it was known to everyone in and out of the Government. The one person who did not know, according to the Agents in this case, was one Earl H. Gromer, who was a full partner for a period of five years with Mr. Achilli in the Highland Motor Sales. He, Mr. Gromer, only heard rumors. Only recently, one of the representatives of the Department of Justice, in generally discussing these automobile dealer cases with this Deponent, stated, in substance, "they are all the same." This pattern is substantially as follows: It cost the dealers money to engage in the automobile business and the money had to be obtained somewhere and somehow; in substance, you had side payments in cash or by the medium of checks, usually two. If checks, one was payable to the agency covering the ceiling or list-price for the books of the 345 agency, and the other was usually payable to cash, cashed and not recorded on the books. Sometimes you had used cars taken in trade which were not reflected on the books, or only partly reflected. Money so irregularly obtained was usually, in whole or in part, passed on by the agency or dealer to someone to get cars so that the dealer could remain in business. This money, and to whom it went, was not ordinarily reflected on the books. If it had been, the agency would have been out of business. Deponent is not saying that all automobile dealers in the Chicago area followed this pattern in their method of operations, but numbers of them did. Some of these dealers not only gouged the public in every conceivable way, but in addition a large part of these side payments went into their own pockets. Other dealers confined their irregular activities primarily to get sufficient money to get cars so as to stay in business, and smaller amounts of these side payments, if any, went into their pockets. Of necessity many of them, to some extent or degree violated OPS regulations and the Income Tax Laws. If there was a degree of flagrancy, it was how badly they gouged the public and how much money went into their own pockets. Deplorable as the situation was, it was no different than in other industries where critical shortages existed. Many Tax Court cases reflect the general character of these operations and the general pattern of operation became apparent. In fact, this Deponent has been informed and states the fact to be, that certain automobile manufacturers had to discharge certain employees who exacted these tributes from dealers.

The Bureau in Chicago, as did the Bureau everywhere else, recognized this deplorable situation. In Chicago, a special group of Revenue Agents and Special Agents was set up to investigate and process these automobile dealer cases. Deponent does not know the exact number of 346 such cases worked by, processed and settled by this automobile squad. After Deponent resigned as Regional Counsel, he was informed from many sources in and out of the Bureau that the number of these cases so processed and settled was in excess of one thousand. Other figures approximating one thousand he heard from other lawyers, accountants and other people. A majority of these 1,000 cases, of necessity, involved alleged fraudulent unreported income in one way or another or at least a failure to correctly report gross income. In the interest of conservatism, Deponent has contended and stated and states that the Bureau in Chicago has settled approximately two hundred cases of these automobile dealers in the Chicago area without recommending prosecution, despite the fact that they were as flagrant or more flagrant than the case of Mr. Achilli.* The records of this Court indicate that only recently only a negligible few of these automobile dealers have been indicted, after their cases no longer had any enforcement value. The alleged irregular practices have long since ceased and the Bureau has settled most of the cases of these automobile dealers in the Chicago area without recommending prosecution. Deponent believes the number of automobile dealers so indicted is five including Mr. Achilli. They were recommended for prosecution, rushed through and indicted when the "heat" was on.

That these automobile dealer cases were being settled as aforesaid without recommending prosecution appears from an affidavit in Deponent's possession, part of which reads as follows:

"That together with one William Parrillo, since 347 deceased, this deponent represented Mr. Sam Achilli of Elgin, Illinois, in connection with his income tax troubles with the Government for the years 1946, 1947 and 1948.

"That this deponent and Mr. Parrillo also represented another automobile dealer in the Chicago area on or about the same time, and the investigations were going on at or about the same time.

"That both of these cases followed the same general pattern usually followed in auto dealer cases from the income tax standpoint, and there was little if any difference as to the over-all facts in the two cases or the character of the alleged omitted income.

"That this deponent and Mr. Parrillo settled the case of the other auto dealer with the Special Agent who handled that case, and the Special Agent in the case of Mr. Achilli recommended prosecution."

That the Agents who investigated the case of Mr. Achilli had full knowledge of the general pattern prevail-

* A mass of correspondence has passed between this Deponent and various Bureau officials, at low and top levels, concerning the impropriety of recommending for prosecution the cases of these few negligible automobile dealers including Mr. Achilli in view of the fact that over 200 other automobile dealer cases in the Chicago area were settled without prosecution, despite the fact that these cases were as flagrant or more flagrant. Never once has this conservative figure of 200 been questioned or challenged. Some correspondence to the same effect has passed between this Deponent and Justice.

ing in these automobile dealer cases appears in an affidavit in Deponent's possession, obtained under the following circumstances. Mr. Achilli complained to this Deponent about the conduct of these investigating Agents, claiming that they had not only indicated to his customers an animosity toward him, Mr. Achilli, but in addition had threatened these customers. Deponent advised Mr. Achilli that he, Deponent, would not consider such matters unless they were supported by signed letters from customers. Mr. Achilli then advised Deponent that he would get the Deponent all of the letters Deponent wanted. Mr. Achilli was not too successful. The reasons were apparent from the letters Mr. Achilli did obtain. When the customers denied having made any side payments to Mr. Achilli, the Agents threatened them with investigation of their own Returns. One of the affidavits in Deponent's possession reads in part as follows:

"I was called to the office of the Internal Revenue 348 in Elgin Tower regarding my purchase of a Plymouth from Sam Achilli. I told the agents I bought the car at dealer's cost, and they both started smiling. They said, 'Don't kid us now. You couldn't get a car at cost when all the dealers in the country are getting money under the table for them.' I told them the actual figures, and that they could believe me or not, that I was telling the truth. They called me a liar, and said. 'We don't care if you tell us the truth or not, we've got enough on Sam to "put him away."' Then I was asked, 'Did you pay your income Tax? Maybe we should check yours?'"*

These Agents acted as if they had the rights, powers, privileges and prerogatives of the courts. They should not even be permitted to recommend prosecution. If permitted, their recommendations should receive "full legal consideration" by their superiors to determine whether a particular recommendation was made, even in part, because the Special Agent did not like the taxpayer.

* There are at least 100,000 automobile dealers in this country. If the statement of the Agents in this case is correct; namely, that all these dealers "are getting money under the table", then at least 50,000 of them, of necessity, failed to at least correctly report their gross income, and they could be indicted under one of the catch-all penal provisions of the Revenue Code. As far as Deponent knows, there is but one automobile dealer in the entire United States who was so indicted and indicted for that very offense alone. One automobile dealer out of 50,000 automobile dealers was seized upon for the purposes as aforesaid. It is difficult to comprehend how this constitutes "impartial" treatment. There may be more than one that received this "impartial" treatment, but Deponent knows of only one. If there are more than one, Deponent assumes the Bureau will furnish this Court with the correct number at the time of the hearing on this motion.

EQUAL JUSTICE UNDER LAW.

From the inception of our Country, it has been recognized that the basic principle of our system of American Jurisprudence was equality under the law. All people, citizens and taxpayers—and yes, even tax evaders and other criminals—are to be treated on a basis of equality under definite discernible standards of our law. Citizens, taxpayers, tax evaders, and even racketeers are not to 349 be arbitrarily or capriciously dealt with or discriminated against by those charged with the solemn duty of fairly and equally administering and enforcing our laws. Nor are these persons to be subjected to the whim or caprices of enforcing officials. This solemn command is inscribed on the front of the building in Washington which is the home of our Supreme Court—the highest court of this land—in four solemn words, "Equal Justice Under Law". That the present Attorney General was fully aware of this solemn command appears from his testimony before the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate prior to his confirmation. In testifying he assured this committee in substance that the basic philosophy for the future administration of his office was that all persons should be dealt with equally because this is a Government of laws and not men. On March 14, 1953, Justice and the Bureau issued a joint statement to the effect that they were going to conduct a vigorous and impartial drive against Tax Evaders. Thus the heads of these two Government Agencies were fully aware that even Tax Evaders had to be treated on an impartial basis—a basis of equality.

This Deponent has read the greatest part of the various proceedings before the various committees of Congress pertaining to the investigation of the Bureau. Prompting all of these investigations was the solemn command that all taxpayers—even tax evaders—be treated on a basis of equality. The committee explored the question whether or not some of these tax evader cases were closed out because of political or personal reasons. Was there a peddling of these cases to favored lawyers? Did these favored lawyers receive considerations which some other attorney did not receive? Did some tax evaders receive special consideration while other tax evaders were discriminated against? Why were 350 200 automobile dealers permitted to settle their cases without prosecution being recommended by the Bureau while 5 automobile dealers were singled out, recommended for prosecution and indicted?

That the Congress was fully aware of this solemn command again appears from their interrogation of Mr. Dunlap before the Sub-committee. Representative Curtis had in mind the very problem presented in this case. Two taxpayers residing in the same community and "both guilty of under payments," one case handled by one employee, the other handled by another employee. "Actually, the two cases are very much alike, but the two employees approach them a little differently," "one taxpayer is quite diplomatic and he does a pretty good job, and his case is not referred to the fraud section for investigation, while the other man's case is." Representative Curtis thought "it was quite a thing from the standpoint of public confidence and morale" (Sub-committee 62). Mr. Dunlap advised the Sub-committee that that was exactly one of the problems "we are trying to solve; that is, the equal treatment and fair treatment of every taxpayer in the country." Mr. Dunlap then emphasized the merits of the Plan of Reorganization and stated, "But under this Plan, it is in the final analysis one man who reviews all of that, and he will have to insure equal treatment of the people within that district" (Sub-committee was given solemn assurances as aforesaid that all taxpayers would receive equal treatment and fair treatment.

DEPONENT'S EFFORTS TO OBTAIN FAIR AND EQUAL TREATMENT FOR THE CASE OF MR. ACHILLI WERE UNSUCCESSFUL IN THE BUREAU AND IN JUSTICE.

Deponent was employed by Mr. Achilli around May of 1952. From that time up to and including the present time he has raised this question of inequality of treatment with every one at high and low levels in the 351 Bureau or in Justice who had anything to do with the expediting of this case for prosecution. He first raised it with the Enforcement Counsel. He then raised it with the then Chief of Counsel of the Bureau. He then raised it with Mr. Dunlap the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue. When this case was referred by the Enforcement Counsel to Justice Deponent demanded of the then Bureau officials that they recall this case. He then wrote the new Attorney General as to this general overall unholy situation. He raised the question with the attorney in Justice handling Mr. Achilli's case and his immediate superior. These officials advised Deponent that they didn't blame him for screaming concerning the lack of equality of treatment received by Mr. Achilli, but that that was not their concern and Deponent should do his screaming in the Bureau. When he was advised by them that they would not consider the matter of equality of treatment he again attempted to take the matter up in the Bureau. He then wrote the new Commissioner of the Bureau requesting that the case be withdrawn from Justice. He then took the matter up with the new Head of the Tax Division of the Attorney General's office. The new Head of the Tax Division advised Deponent that he realized how strongly Deponent felt on this question of lack of equality of treatment, but that Deponent was raising top policy questions which might take months to decide.

The question of inequality of treatment and the lack of Due Process in this case has been taken up by this Deponent with everyone in the Bureau or Justice having any responsibility in connection with the case of Mr. Achilli whether it was under the old administration or whether under the new and they all failed to act. The purification program was in full force and effect. The great big red "R" was on the case. The solemn command and the solemn assurances made to the com-
352 mittees and the Congress as aforesaid would seem conclusive as to the lack of fair treatment and equal treatment accorded Mr. Achilli in this case.

Deponent having generally developed the facts in the case of Mr. Achilli will now develop in more detail; the arbitrary power of a Special Agent and his lack of qualifications to make a recommendation of prosecution; the requirement for legal review of his recommendations for prosecution and the lack of said legal review; the lack of any policy or discernible standards upon which a legal review could be based; a general analysis of the above as applied to cooperation cases; the Bureau's recommendation of persons who had not paid their taxes and how all tax evaders are at the mercy of a Special Agent. All pertinent here. Bundled together, these facts, considered with the facts heretofore developed conclusively establish chaos and not due process in the handling of all these cases, including the case of Mr. Achilli by the Bureau since 1951. They establish a lack of "impartial" treatment—the lack of "equality of treatment" and a government of men and not of law.

THE SPECIAL AGENTS, AS SUCH, THEIR POWERS AND THEIR PREROGATIVES.

Who is this Special Agent? He is nothing more nor less than an investigator. Special Agents, as such, were continuously being referred to, before the Sub-committee, as highly specialized and trained investigators. Some are and some are not. Many Revenue Agents are far more competent and fair minded than many Special Agents. Most former Special Agents in Charge and 353 some Special Agents are also most fair-minded and competent. Deponent recognizes their ability in ferreting out the facts and presenting those facts on a fair basis to the tax evader but not their legal ability or right to recommend prosecution. It is not too easy for Revenue Agents and/or Special Agents to make some of these fraud cases. Many tax evaders are antagonistic, deceitful and just want to escape their obligation to their government. These tax evaders should be prosecuted. Other Special Agents haven't the semblance of a conception of what a criminal income tax case is, or what the constitutional rights of a defendant are (Sub-committee 242). They seem to believe that they are free to deal with the tax evader in any way they see fit without a semblance of fairness or regard for the tax evader's constitutional rights. All they are interested in is to obtain the evidence, an admission from the taxpayer of his guilt and recommend prosecution. They are content to get this evidence by contact with the taxpayer, by subterfuge and a concealment of their object (U. S. v. Guerrina, U. S. District Court, Pennsylvania, Criminal #17078, May 5, 1953, CCH 53, Volume 5, Paragraph 9369). Some of their tactics have been condemned by the American Bar Asociation (Sub-committee 239). When the American Bar Association sought relief from the Bureau it got nowhere. The Bureau did not desire to alarm innocent taxpayers. Certain of these Special Agents haven't the slightest hesitancy in recommending prosecution because the taxpayer refuses to cooperate, refuses to pay the taxes and penalties they demand, or even because they don't like the taxpayer or his lawyer. The recommendations of these Special Agents are amongst those being rubber stamped and cleared through to prosecution as aforesaid.

Mr. Schwartz, assistant head of the Penal Division, admitted that these Special Agents were rarely 354 lawyers—at least while many of them had law degrees they had never practiced the profession (Sub-committee 106). He was most hesistant to admit that their antagonism ever entered into a recommendation for prosecution (Sub-committee 106) yet he had previously testified that he had attempted to reach his conclusion regardless of the recommendation of the Special Agent (Sub-committee 104). Mr. Dunlop had been far more frank and stated that the years of experience had demonstrated that personal antagonisms between agents and taxpayers often resulted in a failure to obtain settlement agreements (Sub-committee 60).

The then Secretary of the Treasury advised the Sub-committee that the Bureau was "fully aware of its responsibility in recommending prosecution of tax-evaders" (Sub-committee 77). Yet this solemn responsibility is lodged in the Special Agents, as such, and their recommendation as aforesaid is approved under the circumstances heretofore developed. A Special Agent, as such, is the Czar of the Bureau in determining what tax evader should be prosecuted or not prosecuted. He can recommend the prosecution of a tax evader who throws him out of his office or a tax evader who refuses to sign an agreement to pay the taxes and penalties he demands, he can recommend the prosecution of a tax evader because he fails to cooperate, he can recommend the prosecution of a tax evader who fully cooperates and furnishes evidence on the very evidence so furnished, he can recommend for prosecution an automobile dealer tax evader on one side of the street and settle the case of another automobile dealer tax evader across the street. One Special Agent can recommend the prosecution of one automobile dealer tax evader on one side of the street and another Special Agent, as such, can investigate the case of another automobile dealer tax evader three blocks 355 down the street and settle that case, although the cases are substantially similar. All this is being done today in one form or another, and no one above that Special Agent will consider these matters. Once he makes his recommendation against the particular tax evader, no matter what prompted the recommendation, the case of that tax evader is on its way to the Grand Jury room.

Mr. Balter in his book "Fraud under Federal Tax Law," second edition 1953, stated at page 74,

> "If it was true in the past that the Special Agent held in his hands the fate of the taxpayer being investigated; it is even more true since the reorganization of the Bureau. Formerly, a recommendation of the Special Agent that criminal charges be brought was subject to a long series of reviews, which, if this involved inordinate delay, at least guaranteed that no taxpayer would be proceeded against criminally because of the whim, caprice, recklessness or ill-will of any one special agent or official, but only after the most careful weighing of his case in every light by a virtual phalanx of men trained to be fair to the Government and to the taxpayer as well."

Everyone but Mr. Schwartz knew the real basis of some of the prosecutions recommended by some of these Special Agents. When the Bureau forwarded 1414 cases in 1952 and closed out only 269 cases, it is quite apparent that it gave little consideration to this problem.

Only recently, a citizen and taxpayer had assessed against him approximately a $200,000.00 deficiency, and a 50%, $100,000.00, fraud penalty. The Special Agents wanted $300,000.00 from this taxpayer. When the case reached the Tax Court sitting in Chicago, the case was settled by stipulation for approximately $20,000.00 with a 5% negligence penalty. Something is wrong somewhere. The Tax Court today is loaded with cases 356 involving the propriety of fraud penalties asserted by some of the Special Agents (Taxes. The Tax Magazine, February 1953, pages 110-118). Yet certain of these Special Agents are given the right to recommend the prosecution of a tax evader under the circumstances above indicated.

Appreciating the above situation and being fully aware of it, the Sub-committee of the Congress clearly, from time to time, and again and again, indicated that the members of this Committee were determined that these recommendations of these Special Agents, as such, should not be the recommendation of the Bureau. Bureau representatives circumvented this attitude of the Committee by advising the Committee that they would carefully consider the question whether or not a Special Agent, as such, should even be permitted to make such a recommendation but rather should merely make a report of the facts. In addition, the members of this Sub-committee were assured by the representatives of the Bureau that all of these cases were carefully reviewed by trained, experienced, competent legal talent.

LEGAL REVIEW OF THE PROSECUTION RECOMMENDATION OF THE SPECIAL AGENT, AS SUCH, IS REQUIRED BY BUREAU PROCEDURE.

The then Secretary of the Treasury appearing before this Sub-committee on January 22, 1952 presented a formal statement, part of which is as follows:

> "There need be no concern that the prosecution case will not receive full legal consideration. The field offices of the Penal Division are staffed with competent personnel, and the regional and district counsel in charge are especially trained in the field of criminal tax law. Through experience gained over years they are fully qualified to give the final Bureau legal review of the investigator's prosecution recommendation." (Sub-committee 77.)

357 "Final legal review for what"? The only permissible legal review under the Bureau's 1919 Policy is a review as to the sufficiency of the evidence. The Bureau having given the Special Agent, as such, the grave responsibility of quasi judicially determining that a particular taxpayer should be recommended for prosecution, of necessity must have recognized that this same Special Agent had at least sufficient qualifications to develop sufficient evidence to justify that recommendation. If the Special Agent, as such, lacked this latter qualification, then he certainly should not be given the right to recommend prosecution, a far more solemn responsibility. On these logical assumptions, if innumerable Bureau employees above this Special Agent, whether they be administrative or legal employees, confine their review of this recommendation only to the sufficiency of the evidence, then the Bureau should have no need for these extra and additional employees. They are then doing nothing but rubber stamping that recommendation. Their elimination might help balance the budget.

As emphasized by the then Secretary of the Treasury, and as provided for in the Plan, before these cases are forwarded to Justice a legal review is required in the office of the Enforcement Counsel. This legal review should be made by experienced, competent attorneys pursuant to a sound prosecution policy founded on the basic conceptions of all Federal Prosecutions and upon definite discernible standards, guide posts and tests, so as to have consistency, fairness and equality of treatment of all tax evaders in connection with the referral of these cases. This has not been done since 1951, since there is no policy nor any discernible standards.

358 THE BUREAU HAVING NO PROSECUTION POLICY, HAS NO DISCERNIBLE STANDARDS FOR A POLICY.

Deponent has fully developed that the Bureau Policy of 1919 is no prosecution of policy at all, but merely a mandate to rubber stamp the recommendation of a Special Agent, as such, that a particular tax evader should be prosecuted. The Bureau thus has no discernible standards to determine what tax evaders should be prosecuted.

The Bureau has been in constant trouble with the American Bar Association, particularly the Committee on Procedure in Fraud Cases as a result of its lack of discernible standards for legally determining what cases shall be forwarded to Justice. In February of 1950, this Committee adopted the following resolution:

> • • • "Resolved, That in the opinion of the Council of the Section of Taxation the publication of a statement by the Bureau of Internal Revenue of its basic procedures and policies in fraud cases would serve to remove widespread misunderstanding of such procedures and policies and to help the Bureau maintain uniform standards of fair treatment for taxpayers throughout its many field offices; the Council therefore recommends the publication of such a statement." • • • (Section of Taxation, 1950 report, American Bar Association, Page 96.)

In 1952, the former Chairman of the Bar Committee, appearing before the same Sub-committee of the Congress, stated:

> "• • • Our main complaint has been the unwillingness of the Bureau to state publicly the policies and procedures which govern its handling of fraud cases. Tax lawyers have wanted to know what the rules were so that they might honestly and ably represent their clients within the orbit of those rules. • • •" (Subcommittee 242.)

359 For a lawyer today to properly represent a client he must be sure that some special agents like him, or if not, turn the case over to some lawyer or accountant they do like.

This same committee of the American Bar Asociation on January 13, 1953, forwarded to the Chief Counsel of the Bureau a detailed letter severely criticizing the Bureau for its abandonment of its Voluntary Disclosure Policy. It, the abandonment, was all a question of the Bureau's inability, or refusal, to establish discernible standards, tests, and guide posts for the application of this policy. A portion of this letter is as follows:

> "• • • For the same reason, it is submitted that the tax administrators might be subject to less criticism and pressure under a voluntary disclosure policy than > under the present rather vague one, which has so few discernible standards for determining which cases are to be prosecuted and which are not. * * *" (American Bar Association, Section of Taxation, Bulletin, March, 1953; page 25.)

The above quoted statement is most charitable to the Bureau. When they refer to the Bureau's present policy as a "rather vague one," they should have said that it has no policy. It has no policy for legal review. When they refer to the "so few discernible standards" for determining what cases should or should not be prosecuted, they should have said that the Bureau had no discernible standards. It has no discernible standards for legal review.

The utter lack of any policy and any discernible standards is again emphasized by the recent experiences of this Deponent. This Deponent represented one automobile dealer and was associate counsel representing another automobile dealer, both in the Chicago area, and both of whom have now been indicted. Each of these present defendants repeatedly asked this Deponent this question:

"Why are they going to indict me when they settled
360 with so and so (naming the party), another automobile dealer? He did so and so, which I didn't do."

There was only one answer this Deponent could and did give them. Either they didn't hire the right lawyer and/or they didn't pay the unwarranted taxes the Agents demanded of them—they didn't cooperate. Deponent after practising law in Chicago for 30 years has never before been confronted with such a vicious situation. Such situations invite charges of irresponsibility in the handling of these tax fraud cases by the Bureau, incompetency of Bureau employees, favoritism, unfairness, and yes, corruption. They destroy public confidence in the administration of the Bureau.

Citizens and taxpayers, the American Bar Association, competent lawyers and accountants all have a right to request that the Bureau should formulate and announce now, without equivocation, a sound prosecution policy founded on the basic conceptions applicable to all Federal prosecutions with definite discernible standards, guide posts and tests, so that everyone in the Bureau and everyone dealing with the Bureau will know what cases of what tax evaders are to be recommended for prosecution and what cases of what tax evaders are to be settled and why. It is only thus that competent lawyers and accountants can deal with the Bureau relative to these cases, adequately represent their clients, properly advise their clients as to their rights, and the legal reasons for a determined action by the Bureau in a particular case. No lawyer and/or accountant should be forced to advise his client that his client may well have been recommended for prosecution because his client had hired the wrong lawyer or accountant or because he had failed to pay the taxes and penalties demanded by the Bureau.

There being no policy or discernible standards some of these cases may well be disposed of on a personal 361 basis. The Sub-committee explored the question of how certain lawyers obtained these cases and whether or not there was favoritism shown in connection with the handling of these cases. Deponent has been amazed how certain former Special Agents and Revenue Agents, once they have resigned from the Bureau, can set up an office, "Tax Consultant," and attract these income tax fraud cases to them. If there is any peddling of these income tax fraud cases from within the Bureau, it is the duty of the Bureau to stop this matter and speedily. These former Bureau employees should get their tax business just like honest, competent lawyers and accountants do. There should be no favoritism in the handling of these cases, in or out of the Bureau, and those who deal with the Bureau should deal with the Bureau on the basis of what they know and not who they know, and the Bureau should do likewise.

A special agent can settle a case because the taxpayer or his accountant co-operates if he likes the taxpayer or accountant—or, if he desires, he can forward a case where a taxpayer co-operates. Either decision is proper under present Bureau procedures since the Bureau has no policies or discernible standards as emphasized by the testimony on this subject before the Sub-committee.

CO-OPERATION CASES.

The Bureau deals fast and loose with taxpayers, their attorneys and accountants who cooperate during the course of the investigation. The Bureau announced the abandonment of its Voluntary Disclosure Policy on December 11, 1951. The Sub-committee desired to know whether or not the Bureau, in the future, was going to recommend for prosecution these Voluntary Disclosure cases and Co-operation cases. Generally, Voluntary Disclosure cases are cases where the taxpayer comes in voluntarily before the investigation has commenced, discloses his culpability, cooperates, furnishes evidence, and pays. Co-operation 362 cases are cases where the taxpayer, after the investigation has commenced, cooperates, discloses, furnishes evidence, and pays, or is willing to pay. There was much confusion before the Committee as to how these types of cases were to be treated by the Bureau in the future. Mr. Schwartz, the Assistant Head of the Penal Division, conceded that many Co-operation cases had been closed out in the past on an "individual basis", but he qualified his answer by bringing in the question of voluntary disclosure and the fact that the Government could not get its evidence except from the tax evaders (Sub-committee 163). The Government had no occasion to attempt to obtain its evidence from any other source. It obtained it through the co-operation of the tax evader. Mr. Dunlap believed that all these facts (Voluntary Disclosure or Co-operation) should be given to Justice and should be considered by it in determining whether or not Justice should prosecute; and, seemingly, if Justice so determined, the Bureau was satisfied (Sub-committee 90-92). Thus, under Mr. Dunlap's interpretation of Bureau procedure, the Bureau had no responsibility in the matter whatsoever, other than to give Justice all the facts. Yet, Mr. Dunlap, after testifying that the Bureau would give Justice all the facts, that the taxpayer had "co-operated with us 100%," was not definite whether that case would even be recommended (Sub-committee 92). Mr. Lynch, General Counsel of the Treasury Department, took a somewhat different view. He thought there was some "responsibility as an administrative agency we should assume and must assume," "the necessity of a decision as to whether or not a case will be treated on a basis of civil liability or criminal liability," and that there could be "no advance promise of immunity." (Sub-committee 166.) The following occurred before the Sub-committee:

"Mr. DeWind: Then, very clearly, it would still be 363 a factor to be taken into account by the Bureau, in deciding whether or not to send the case forward, that the taxpayer came forward voluntarily or cooperated fully and so forth.

"Mr. Lynch: Yes. It certainly is easy to conceive of a case where it would be a waste of time to send it forward with a recommendation for prosecution." (Sub-committee 95.)

Deponent, of necessity, has taken some of these quotations out of the context and from various parts of the proceedings in an attempt to determine whether the Bureau, as of January, 1952, had any policy as to the handling of these Co-operation or even Voluntary Disclosure cases in the future, and whether they were to be forwarded for prosecution or closed out pursuant to discernible standards.

Unless Deponent knew, he as a lawyer, could not properly or conscientiously advise a client to make a voluntary disclosure or to co-operate, and he, of course, could not adequately protect the interest of his client. Deponent was unsuccessful. The Bureau did not want to say yes and the Bureau did not want to say no.

"I would not want to say that automatically there never would be a prosecution, nor would I want to say that there is any commitment outstanding • • • of immunity." (Sub-committee 93.)

After analyzing all this testimony on this subject, Deponent was confused and still is confused. Representative Keogh was also confused.

"Mr. Keogh: If you have no policy with respect to declining prosecutions, why do you have a policy with respect to recommending prosecution in such cases as we were discussing?" (Sub-committee 97.)

All Bureau officials testified that the fact that a taxpayer disclosed, co-operated and furnished evidence would be given consideration by the Bureau. Many Special 364 Agents always tell this to taxpayers to obtain their co-operation. What consideration? The Bureau built up its case against the citizen and taxpayer on the basis of his co-operation and evidence furnished. The Bureau slapped on the fraud penalties on the same basis. And then the Bureau recommended prosecution on the basis of that very co-operation and that very evidence so furnished. Why didn't the Bureau just seize the taxpayer's property and take the taxpayer out and hang him? Seemingly, the citizen and taxpayer and not the Bureau furnished the consideration. All the consideration the taxpayer received was a recommendation for prosecution! Now let us see what happens to a taxpayer when he co-operates or what happens to a lawyer or accountant who, in good faith in an effort to accommodate the Bureau, co-operates.

Recently this Deponent was called into one of these co-operation cases, which had cleared the Bureau into Justice and out to the United States Attorney. The taxpayer had paid the additional taxes, and has since paid the fraud penalties. The accountant for the taxpayer had furnished the Agent with a net worth statement. He and the Agent then computed the correct taxes, 90 day letters were issued, and arrangements made to pay the taxes. Then a Special Agent seized upon the net worth statement so furnished and recommended prosecution. Deponent asked the accountant why he had furnished this net worth statement. He advised Deponent in substance that he had always followed this procedure and he had settled his cases and that only recently he had settled a case, which he regarded as more flagrant, by following the same procedure that he did in the case where his client was recommended for prosecution. The co-operation furnished by this particular accountant in all of these cases was, of necessity, based on the belief that he could settle the case by co-operating, and he did settle all except the one mentioned. Certainly, he was induced to furnish the net 365 worth statement in the latter case by his experience with the Bureau in the past. Then the Bureau seized upon this latter case for prosecution. Even tax evaders should not be dealt with by the Government on such a catch-as-catch-can basis. Such a maladministration of our Criminal Income Tax Law is a disgrace. Deponent has discussed and attempted to discuss this particular case with top Bureau and Justice officials, and has gotten just nowhere.

Mr. Balter, in both editions* of his book, Fraud Under

* First Edition, pp. 245-249; Second Edition, Chap. VII, pp. 181-191.

Federal Tax Law, dealt with the advisability of taxpayers, lawyers and accountants co-operating with investigating agents during the course of the investigation. In his first edition he seemed inclined to favor co-operation. He emphasized the danger of not co-operating as follows:

> "There is no question but that the first effect of claiming his Constitutional privileges would be to prejudice the Government Agent against the taxpayer." (First Edition 248.)

If a taxpayer stands on his Constitutional rights and fails to co-operate, the antagonism of the Special Agent at once appears and the taxpayer may well be prosecuted. If the taxpayer does co-operate and furnish evidence, then the Special Agent is free to use that evidence as a basis for recommending prosecution. The taxpayer is damned if he does not co-operate; and may well be damned if he does.

Mr. Balter in his first edition developed that the proponents of co-operation do not believe that the antagonism engendered by a refusal to co-operate would be too serious, or the dangers of co-operation as such would be too serious since the Special Agent's recommendation would be reviewed at several higher echelons divorced from the antagonism of the Special Agent. Mr. Balter in the second edition of his book develops at some length 366 that seemingly no one at higher echelons will now review the recommendation of the Special Agent and that it may well be accepted as prima facie sound. Everyone at higher levels is hesitant to do their duty and make decisions as emphasized by the former Attorney General and the present Commissioner. The lack of competent and fair review may well endanger the rights of any taxpayer who co-operates with a Special Agent or a Revenue Agent who has the case before the Special Agent gets it. Taxpayers, lawyers and accountants who today co-operate and furnish evidence are at the mercy of a Special Agent and the Bureau.

THE BUREAU EVEN RECOMMENDS PROSECUTION BECAUSE A TAXPAYER HAS NOT PAID HIS TAXES.

Unfortunately the Bureau, like some Special Agents, believes that a tax evader should be prosecuted just because he failed to pay the taxes and penalties demanded by the Bureau. On December 11, 1951, the Bureau abandoned its Health Policy. This Policy in substance was that if a Government doctor concluded that prosecution would endanger a taxpayer's life, the criminal aspects of the case were to be closed out. Deponent has been informed and states that once having abandoned this Policy, as aforesaid, various directives were issued by the Bureau to reexamine these Health cases so closed out. Not to determine whether or not they had been properly closed out, but whether or not the taxes and penalties had been paid. If the taxes and penalties had been paid, the cases remained closed out. If they had not been paid, then prosecution was to be considered and some of these cases were recommended for prosecution, cleared for prosecution and indictments returned. This is imprisonment for debt. The Colonists threw the Tax Collectors into the sea for less.

367 TAXPAYERS RECOMMENDED FOR PROSECUTION ARE AT THE MERCY OF SPECIAL AGENTS, AS SUCH, SINCE TAXPAYERS USUALLY HAVE NO DEFENSE ON THE MERITS BEFORE A COURT OF LAW.

Certain persons before the Sub-committee expressed the opinions that since certain taxpayers had pleaded guilty they should have been and were properly recommended for prosecution. This does not follow. This fact may well, and does, magnify the lack of equality of treatment in these cases. Every Report of the Commissioner emphasized the number of successful convictions obtained. The percentage of convictions, and this percentage is the figure always used, is approximately 96 per cent. (Sub-committee 114-115.) Ninety per cent of these convictions, however, are the result of pleas of guilty or pleas of nolle contendere. (Taxes, the Tax Magazine, May 1952, 354.) Anyone having the slightest knowledge of prosecution, as such, knows that when the percentage of convictions is so high, and pleas of guilty are so high, something is wrong somewhere and the answer can be readily found. The prosecuting agencies are either seizing upon the wrong type of case, or they may be seizing upon a particular type of case where the defendant has no defense. They are shooting ducks on a pond or catching fish in a barrel, or kicking a man that is down. These reasons are all apparent in these income tax prosecutions. The tax evader whose case is forwarded for prosecution and subsequently indicted usually must and does plead guilty, as appears from the Bureau's own figures. The indictment itself reflects on the tax evader's personal and professional standing, and may well destroy his business. His plea of guilty brands him a felon; in addition he may be incarcerated. The other tax evader whose case is similar and just as flagrant, settles his case and suffers none of these ignominies. Considering the dire consequence cast upon the one tax evader under the above circumstances, and bal-368 ancing it against the settling of the case of the other tax evader, whose case is equally as flagrant, the lack of equality in treatment, and the lack of Due Process in the handling of these cases by the Bureau and Justice, is again emphasized and magnified by the very figures above developed. One thousand automobile dealer cases in the Chicago area were investigated by the Agents. They all follow practically the same pattern. They are all in similar circumstances. If even only 500 involved fraud, 495 were settled and five recommended for prosecution. These unfortunate five have their personal and professional standing endangered and their reputation ruined. The other 495 go free. This unfairness and lack of equality of treatment in the administration of our Revenue laws is not answered by the superficial argument that the negligible five were properly indicted since they were guilty or that they are crooks and should be in jail anyway.

ALTERNATIVE MOTIONS.

Motion for Bill of Particulars.

The right of a defendant to a Bill of Particulars, and under what circumstances, is fully developed in a brief filed in this Court in the case of U. S. v. Lawrenz, 52 Cr. 132. A further discussion of these rights would only prolong this unduly long affidavit; hence, this Court's attention is respectfully invited to the brief mentioned.

Both the Bureau and Justice have advised Deponent that the alleged case against Mr. Achilli is a net worth case. In such a net worth case the Government, of necessity, started with what it believed to be Mr. Achilli's net worth, viz.: his assets less his liabilities as of December 31, 1945, starting point. It then determined his net worth as of December 31st for each of the succeeding prosecution years. That is, December 31, 1946, 1947 and 1948.

369 The increases in net worth so computed by the Government for each of these years over the previous year, according to the Government, exceeded the amount of reported income for that particular year. The difference between the increases in net worth for each of these years as computed by the Government and the amount of income reported by Mr. Achilli for each of these years, according to the Government, represented fraudulent unreported income by Mr. Achilli. As will hereafter be developed, the Government has used and given Deponent so many different figures concerning its computations, that no one can have any conception of how the Government arrived at its figures.

The facts in this case are most peculiar. Mr. Achilli and Mr. Gromer, as partners, operated the Highland Motor Sales for a period of approximately five years from 1945 to 1950. In addition, Mr. Gromer was Mr. Achilli's personal attorney. As such attorney, Mr. Gromer handled the legal details of many of Mr. Achilli's personal transactions involving certain of the assets which form the basis of the Government's alleged Net Worth case against Mr. Achilli. Mr. Gromer at times kept the books of this partnership; and at times supervised their keeping.

The income tax returns of the partnership, Highland Motor Sales, were prepared by Mr. Gromer and signed by him. The income tax returns of Mr. Achilli were prepared in Mr. Gromer's office. Mr. Gromer undertook to represent, and did represent, the Highland Motor Sales, Mr. Achilli and himself in the early stages of this investigation. In 1950 difficulties arose between these partners. Mr. Gromer filed a complaint to dissolve the partnership and Mr. Achilli purchased Mr. Gromer's interest for approximately One Hundred Thirty Thousand Dollars. To do so, Mr. Achilli pledged practically all his assets, in-
370 cluding his home. All of these facts were known to the Agents, and in fact were given by Deponent to the Bureau. In addition, Deponent has been advised by Mr. Achilli: that the investigating Agents requested to examine the contents of his safety deposit box; that the Agents represented to him that if he did not permit such examination they would obtain a court order; that they did examine his safety deposit box, going through all his papers, saying they were looking for thousand dollar bills; that they even insisted that he, Mr. Achilli, break the seal on his Last Will and Testament. Thus, as of 1950, Mr. Achilli had certain definite known assets and liabilities which of necessity were known to the Government.

As of December 31, 1945 (starting point) aside from certain assets Mr. Achilli had which the Agents may not have known, and certain claimed assets of Mr. Achilli, he, Mr. Achilli, had certain other definite known assets. Deponent had his accountant take the known assets and liabilities of Mr. Achilli as of December 31, 1950 and work these known assets back to the known assets as of December 31, 1945, on a yearly basis to determine a true and correct Net Worth increase for Mr. Achilli for each of these years, 1946 to 1950, which, of course, included the prosecution years. Some of these assets were in existence at all times, some came in and out of the Net Worth determination. Deponent furnished the Enforcement Counsel's office with the known assets at the beginning of the period and the known assets at the end of the period.

At a conference held in the Enforcement Counsel's office, Deponent was advised that the Agent's computations of Net Worth increases over the prosecution years which was taxable as additional income was $36,000 for 1946, $60,000 for 1947, and $20,000 for 1948 or a total of One Hundred Sixteen Thousand Dollars ($116,000). The figures arrived at by Mr. Achilli's accountant did not 371 even approach that amount and Deponent so advised the Enforcement Counsel. It was obvious that both the Government Agents and the accountant for Mr. Achilli were both dealing with known assets and liabilities of which they both had knowledge. This large discrepancy, between the figures of the Government and defendant's figures, of necessity had to be based upon an erroneous evaluation of those known assets by one or the other. Accordingly, this Deponent suggested to the Enforcement Counsel that the Agents and Mr. Achilli's attorney sit down together, go over these assets and liabilities and arrive at a correct Net Worth statement. This request was refused. In addition, at the conference in the Enforcement Counsel's office, this Deponent was advised that these Net Worth increases were supported by specific items of unreported income—namely, side payments and that the amount of these side payments, over the period of the prosecution years, was approximately Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars ($75,000).

Despite the fact that the Enforcement Counsel would not discuss with Deponent the basis of his figure of One Hundred Sixteen Thousand Dollars ($116,000), alleged Net Worth increases, when Deponent had his conference in Justice, Deponent was advised that the government's case was based on increases of Net Worth of only Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars ($65,000). Thus, seemingly, the Enforcement Counsel must have concluded that these Agents had made mistakes, or errors, or what not of approximately 50% of Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000). Deponent then explained to the representatives in Justice the above situation, and the opening and closing assets as to character and kind were checked and they were substantially similar. Deponent then asked the representatives of Justice if they could please give him the evaluation of these items. All Deponent was interested in 372 was to get at the truth. Finally, the evaluation of one asset was given. The Agent had an evaluation of approximately Ninety Thousand Dollars ($90,000) for this asset at the close of the period, and Mr. Achilli's accountants had an evaluation of Seventy Thousand Dollars ($70,000). If Mr. Achilli's accountant was right, obviously the Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars ($65,000) should have been Forty-Five Thousand Dollars ($45,000). There were several other items involved which might well have further substantially reduced this Forty-Five Thousand Dollars ($45,000). In addition, in Justice it developed that there were included in the Net Worth statements prepared by the Agents, certain alleged loans owing to Mr. Achilli. These had not been taken into consideration by Mr. Achilli's accountant. Deponent then called Mr. Achilli and was advised that Mr. Gromer had handled these particular matters and that the Agents must have gotten the information from Mr. Gromer. Deponent then went back to Justice, got the details of these loans and had them checked. Some of them, according to Mr. Achilli's accountant, should never have been in the Net Worth figures, and some of them were erroneous if they were computed on the basis that Deponent understood from Justice they were computed. Deponent then offered to sit down with Justice and go over these figures and his request was denied. Then on this record, when the indictment was returned, it alleged unreported income of One Hundred Six Thousand Dollars ($106,000) over the 3 years in question.

The Enforcement Counsel advised Deponent that the Government was unable to make a case against Mr. Gromer. Perhaps the investigating Agents could only make a prima facie case against Mr. Achilli. Or perhaps the investigating Agents didn't want to make a case against Mr. Gromer. When Deponent had his conference in Justice, he brought up the question of these spe-373 cific items—namely, the Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars ($75,000) of side payments. Justice informed him that the Enforcement Counsel had not charged Mr. Achilli with Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars ($75,000) of specific items. He had charged Mr. Achilli with Thirty-Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($37,500) of side payments and he had charged Mr. Gromer with Thirty-Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($37,500) of these side payments. Thus were these "R" cases legally treated by the Bureau and Justice.

The Bureau issued Ninety-Day letters in Mr. Achilli's case and that case is now in the Tax Court. Here too Mr. Achilli received "special treatment". In these Ninety Day letters he is alleged to have fraudulently failed to report additional income of $100,000 for 1946; $95,000 in 1947 and $37,000 in 1948; a grand total of $232,000. He was given no detailed information on what facts these astronomical figures were based. He was charged with failing to report income on other transactions which were handled exclusively by Mr. Gromer. The amount of additional income allegedly due from Mr. Achilli to the Government far exceeds any figures given to Deponent by either the Enforcement Counsel's office or Justice. The Bureau claims that Mr. Achilli owes approximately Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000) in taxes for the three prosecution years to which they have added the Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000) fraud penalty. We here again have a Three Hundred Thousand Dollar ($300,000) tax liability asserted by Special Agents. Something again is wrong somewhere.

Deponent requested the Bureau on behalf of Mr. Achilli that he be permitted to sit down and discuss the civil liability involved in this case with any competent, fair-minded Bureau official and if there was any tax due, Mr. Achilli would make every effort to straighten out the obligation, if any, with his Government. This request was ignored. Deponent has been informed that once Mr. Achilli was indicted, Mr. Gromer stated that he never had any income tax troubles, that he always paid his taxes.

374

Under the above circumstances, the Government should be required to file as part of its Bill of Particulars, the Net Worth statement upon which it relies. The Government should be required to file and produce the basis of each of its evaluation of each and all of the assets set forth in that Net Worth statement. The Government should be required to set forth in detail, from what source these Agents obtained this information as to the evaluation of all of these assets. This should not be limited to the last source of information but to the first, which might well be Mr. Gromer. The Government should also furnish the additional evidence requested in the motion for the Bill of Particulars.

Motion to Suppress the Evidence.

It is Deponent's understanding that under the Rules of Criminal Procedure Deponent can make this Motion at any reasonable time prior to trial. As a result of Deponent's investigation of this case, and from conferences he had with Mr. Achilli, his accountant, the Enforcement Counsel, employees of the Bureau, and Justice, Deponent believes and so states the fact to be that much of the evidence which the Government now intends to use against Mr. Achilli, in support of its Net Worth case, was either obtained from Mr. Gromer or information as to its source was obtained from Mr. Gromer. In discussing the propriety of the use of this evidence, one of the Bureau officials took the position that the impropriety, if there was any impropriety, was that of Mr. Gromer in furnishing the evidence and the Agents were perfectly justified in obtaining evidence from any sources they could. When this matter was discussed in Justice, Justice took a slightly different view. The attorney who examined the case in Justice stated, in the presence of his superior, that much of this evidence received from Mr. Gromer was not received by the Agents from Mr. Gromer until after Mr. Gromer no longer represented Mr. Achilli, and after Mr. Achilli had hired a new lawyer. The relation of attorney and client had ceased, but the privilege still remained. The impropriety of the conduct of these Agents in this connection, and the right of this defendant to suppress all of this evidence was only recently emphasized in the Guerrina case, supra. Because of the length of this affidavit and since this is an Alternative Motion, this Deponent respectfully requests that if necessary he be permitted to later develop this matter in detail.

Motion That the Government Furnish the Defendant Mr. Achilli With a List of All Customers Interviewed By Investigating Agents, Together With All Statements Furnished By These Customers to These Investigating Agents.

As appears from the contents of the affidavit heretofore set forth, these investigating Agents went out and threatened these customers with the investigation of their own returns. Deponent has additional letters and affidavits from other customers to the same effect. Hence, it is most important, in the interests of Justice, to find out just why and under what circumstances each and all customers stated to the Agents that they made these side payments to Mr. Achilli. Their interrogation might well develop that these side payments were made to other people. Certainly this Deponent should not be required to wait until the trial to find out, by cross-examination, the above circumstances.

376 CONCLUSION.

Deponent has attempted to fairly, forthrightly and honestly present all the pertinent facts pertaining to this unfortunate complex situation and its far-reaching effects. It has been a difficult task and certainly not a pleasant one. Deponent has wandered far and wide in doing this, but the broad issues upon which this motion is based required just that.

As a matter of fact, the issues are so broad and their effect so far reaching, that it may well be that Deponent has overlooked certain facts which may be pertinent. If so, Deponent, of necessity, must reserve the right to supplement this affidavit by furnishing these facts in a supplemental affidavit or by proof at the time of the hearing of this motion.

All of this is preliminary. The people in November of 1952 voted overwhelmingly for a change. They want a change. They want it now and they do not want a continuance of the old order. In a speech before the House of Representatives on January 9, 1953, Hon. Chauncey W. Reed said, in part:

> "Mr. Speaker, there is no more important problem facing the American people today than that of taxation. For the past 20 years taxes have been increasing at an alarming rate, until they have reached a point where they constitute a well-nigh unbearable burden on our people and a serious threat to our economy. There is imperative need of a reduction all along the line."

The American people voted for and demand a balancing of the budget and a reduction of the present confiscatory high income taxes. They also voted for and demand a complete rehabilitation and revitalization of the Justice Department and the Bureau. These agencies belong 377 to all the American people and their management, operation and control should be far above partisan politics. The responsibility for accomplishing this rehabilitation and revitalization rests upon those now in charge. This is to be accomplished, not by the errors in the past, if they were errors, but by the realization that these errors are beacons to guide the proper course for the future. The present problems of these agencies must be squarely faced now. True, employees of these agencies are hesitant to make decisions, to act and to perform their duties. They will never do this until those at top levels make prompt, sound decisions. These latter officials must determine top policy matters—not people in the field.

Only recently, the American public were told that the budget could not be balanced and taxes could not be reduced. As Deponent recalls, the reason was that the estimated collections of the government were approximately Eight Billion Dollars short. The reason for this unfortunate situation, if it exists, is largely due to the chaotic conditions existing in the Bureau. The Bureau is chasing petty gamblers and squandering taxpayers' money in doing so, instead of collecting the revenue. This racketeer drive has disrupted the entire Bureau organization geared to collect the revenue. Deponent on information and belief states that this racketeer drive is costing the American people, at least, Five Billion Dollars. Abandonment of the Bureau's Voluntary Disclosure policy has cost the American people millions of dollars. There are many people who cheat on their taxes who would be only too happy to come in and disclose and pay up, providing they were not prosecuted. Under the Bureau's present illusory cooperation policy, no taxpayer, lawyer or accountant can safely cooperate with government agents and furnish evidence for fear that this evidence may be seized upon as a basis for prosecution by a Special Agent. If this irresponsible 378 policy continues, the Bureau will not and should not receive such cooperation. This means or should mean that every case of every tax evader must be investigated by the Bureau, independent of the taxpayer and his representative. All this, despite the fact that the Bureau has not sufficient personnel to do the job and must settle cases quickly.

The present problems of those in charge of our fiscal policies and the administration of Justice and the Bureau are just as stupendous, or more stupendous, than they have been in the past. To solve them requires men of great vision, wide experience, unquestioned ability and integrity, great stamina and real courage. They must grapple with these problems and meet them squarely. They must act and act now. The proper handling of these tax fraud cases is but one of their very many problems. In determining top policies relative to these tax fraud cases they must be both realistic and practical. They must realize that with the present high taxes, people are likely to cheat and that some people just cannot operate their business and comply with all phases of our Revenue Laws. They must be practical enough to appreciate that you cannot fill jails with tax evaders and that the primary function of the Bureau is to collect the Revenue. They must be practical enough to realize that this revenue cannot be collected without the cooperation of taxpayers, lawyers and accountants and that this cooperation will not be forthcoming if taxpayers who cooperate are to be indicted. Those burdened with these duties and responsibilities, as aforesaid, deserve the sympathy and the full support of all the American people in the tasks they face, not their criticism. If criticism is directed against them or any of them it should be by way of constructive criticism, not destructive criticism. People should not criticize unless they are prepared to present a better solution.

Deponent has been asked, by one of the top officials
379 mentioned herein, what he would do about the handling of these income tax fraud cases. He would do what the American people voted for. He would have a change. He would act quickly and drastically now, tomorrow, not months hence. He would wipe the slate clean. More specifically he would: (1) Tomorrow, and not next week, end the nonsensical, irresponsible, illegal and costly racketeer drive and everything connected with it and get rid of the irresponsible box car assessments that have been made in these cases which only clog up the Bureau. (2) He would as quickly as possible, dismiss each and every income tax indictment which has been cleared since 1951 since most of these cases, if not all, were just shoved through to prosecution under the circumstances above related. If at all possible, he would get the revenue from these cases. It may well be that some of these cases were carefully reviewed and that a particular taxpayer should stand trial; however, when you wipe the slate clean the overall object controls the exception. Years are not to be spent, at great cost to all taxpayers, to determine which of these cases should go to trial and which should be dismissed. (3) He would dimiss all indictments against all tax evaders for prior years if they are still pending. These indictments of necessity have to be pending 2, 3, 4 and even 5 years. Most taxpayers have been punished sufficiently by having these indictments hanging over their heads, to say nothing of their cost. In addition if fraud can be established they have to meet the overwhelming civil liability. These indictments have lost all enforcement and prosecution value. They just clog the courts and they further delay the collection of the revenue which is necessary to balance the budget. (4) He would formulate a sound prosecution policy for the Bureau, eliminating 380 any recommendations by Special Agents, with definite discernible standards as repeatedly urged by the American Bar Association over the last 4 years. Honest lawyers and competent accountants would know what cases are to be prosecuted and why so that they can adequately protect the rights of their clients and they wouldn't be at the mercy of Special Agents. It may well be that before this sound prosecution policy can be legally put into effect, action of the Congress is required for the reasons set forth in the brief attached hereto. (5) He would tomorrow restore the Voluntary Disclosure policy as recommended by the American Bar Asociation. (6) He would tomorrow have a Cooperation policy. Lawyers and accountants would know that when Agents come to them and seek their cooperation and ask them to furnish evidence of their client's culpability that their client will not be prosecuted on the evidence so furnished, but that the government will be satisfied with the tax and penalties. The Bureau will give consideration for that cooperation. It will build up good will, not ill will. (7) He would call in the old Revenue Agents in Charge and the old Special Agents in Charge, whatever their new positions are under the Plan, and other top officials under the Plan, advise them to get their organizations in order, to clean up their own organizations, and to collect the Revenue. They know how to do it and they can do the job if they are only permitted to do it. He would advise all employees of the Bureau at all levels that it was their duty to act and make decisions promptly and to clean up their dockets and settle cases. This was done in 1931 and it should be done again. The Tax Court would not be three years behind very long. (8) He would, within 24 hours, abolish the un-American questionnaire and really start restoring the Bureau morale. (9) He 381 would discharge his duties and make decisions promptly and give the American people the true overall facts of this entire problem. He would then expect those under him to likewise discharge their duties and make decisions promptly and honestly. This would not require any "gold fish bowl" policy of making public every act of every employee of Justice and the Bureau. Such a policy merely means that every employee will be hesitant to do his duty: no one will close out a case where a Special Agent has recommended prosecution and these cases will not be disposed of "objectively" nor in the interests of the Revenue, viz. in the interest of all taxpayers who pay the bills. He would thus break the jam: it is not to be broken by a "gold fish bowl" policy. Such a policy will only make the present intolerable situation worse. The American people assume that those now in power will do an honest and competent job; that is why they voted as they did. They are not concerned with the details of how that job is done; they have enough troubles of their own attempting to pay the present high income taxes. They want the job done. (10) He would wipe the slate clean and his rehabilitation and revitalization program would not be based on the errors of the past.

Prosecutions of tax evaders would be conducted on a high basis consistent with the dignity and power of the Federal government, or they would not be conducted at all. The American people want no more of the prohibition era. Deponent would give the American people a change, and it would be a real change in the interest of Revenue. It would be the change the American people voted for. It is only thus that the budget can be 382 balanced and the present high taxes reduced, and it would be started now, tomorrow—not six months hence, or two years hence.

Further, this deponent sayeth not.

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS

384 BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT.

Defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment is based upon two grounds, each of which by itself requires the dismissal of the indictment:

First, Congress has made an unconstitutional delegation of authority to the executive department with reference to crimes created under the revenue laws, in violation of the doctrine of separation of powers, and in violation of the due process clause.

Second, the executive department has adopted and employed unconstitutional procedures in the enforcement of criminal laws created in the revenue Act, in violation of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment.

I.

CONGRESS HAS MADE AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY TO THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT WITH REFERENCE TO CRIMES CREATED UNDER THE REVENUE LAWS, IN VIOLATION OF THE DOCTRINE OF SEPARATION OF POWERS, AND IN VIOLATION OF THE DUE PROCESS CLAUSE.

Defendant was indicted for an alleged violation of Section 145(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, which reads in pertinent part as follows:

> "* * * any person who wilfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat any tax imposed by this chapter or the payment thereof, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution."

385 Congress has laid upon the United States attorney the duty, within his district, to prosecute for all offenses against the United States, under the direction of the Attorney General. Thus, the statute provides, insofar as material (28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 507):

> "(a) Except as otherwise provided by law, it shall be the duty of each United States attorney, within his district, to:
> (1) Prosecute for all offenses against the United States;
>
> * * *
>
> (4) Institute and prosecute proceedings for the collection of fines, penalties and forfeitures incurred for violation of any revenue law unless satisfied upon investigation that justice does not require such proceedings;
>
> * * *
> (b) The Attorney General * * * shall direct all United States attorneys * * * in the discharge of their respective duties."

From the foregoing, it may be seen that when Congress creates a law defining a crime, it is the general duty of the United States attorney, unless otherwise provided by law, to prosecute all offenses against that law. Failure to prosecute would be a dereliction of duty, amounting not only to nonfeasance in office but also to the compounding of such crime, justifying removal from office at the least. U. S. v. Brokaw (D.C., S. D. Ill., 1945), 60 F. Supp. 100, at 103.

However, with respect to offenses against the revenue laws, the law has provided otherwise. Section 3761(a) of the Revenue Code states:

> "(a) Authorization—The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, or of the Under Secretary of the Treasury, or of an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, may compromise any civil or criminal case > 386 arising under the internal revenue laws prior to reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense; and the Attorney General may compromise any such case after reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense."

No standard of any kind, manner or description whatsoever is set forth in that statute as a circumscription of the power to compromise—not even a general standard governing suits to collect fines, penalties and forfeitures under the revenue laws, as found in 28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 507(a), quoted above. Under 28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 507(a), the United States is required to institute and prosecute such suit for collection "unless satisfied upon investigation that justice does not require such proceedings." But under Section 3761(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, Congress laid down no standard at all. Thus, for aught that appears, the executive branch is given a completely free hand, with no statutory guideposts of any kind.

Sections 145(b) and 3761(a) of the Internal Revenue Code being in pari materia, they must be read together. In combination, they spell out a statutory scheme to permit the executive department to determine for itself which wilful tax evader is to be treated as a criminal and which is not, without any standard prescribed by Congress by which to pick and choose. In short, so far as the statutory scheme is concerned, one tax evader may be treated and branded as a criminal and another not—not because of any material difference in the facts, circumstances or effects of their offenses, but merely because one has a name beginning with "A" and the other has a name beginning with "B".

It is no answer to say, as some might contend, that the executive department might adopt standards of its own.

It never did. Any standards it might impose upon 387 itself could be changed at will, and in any event, would amount to mere voluntary forbearance.

The Bureau's "Policies" or "Standards" "vary sometimes from year to year" (Sub-committee 117). Determined efforts were made in 1948 to 1950 by the Bureau to have a sound prosecution policy with discernible standards to treat even tax evaders fairly, consistently and equally. This policy in 1951, as a result of investigations and whatnot, was thrown to the four winds. Since that time the Bureau has grabbed whomever it could lay its hands on for prosecution or whom it desired to prosecute, without rhyme or reason, much less any sound legal basis.

In truth, the executive branch never has imposed upon itself a policy in this field worthy of the name. The Treasury Department has never promulgated a Regulation representing a formal and definitive policy in this regard. Indeed, the only policy it has ever professed is an informal, internal one, created in 1919, to the effect that whenever there is evidence sufficient to convict, prosecution shall occur. Yet this so-called policy has been honored in its breach, rather than by its observance, as everybody knows. Until the early 1930's, there were only a handful of tax prosecutions altogether. Since then, until recent times, the number was most small, in sharp contrast to the very large number of cases disposed of upon payment of 50% fraud penalties and therefore presumably involving sufficient evidence of fraud to convict.

Moreover, it was a matter of common knowledge that until recent times, the 1919 policy was tempered by two qualifications, i. e., the so-called health policy and the so-called voluntary disclosure policy, under which, despite evidence sufficient to convict, no prosecution would occur if the tax evader was in bad health or if he cooperated with the Treasury Department and made voluntary 388 disclosure of his liability before an investigation was commenced or even thereafter.

In view of the lack of any standard imposed by Congress by which to circumscribe the actions of the executive branch in this field, it was not surprising that the executive branch came under Congressional investigation and attack in recent years. Under the lash of investigations, the Treasury Department has abandoned its deviations from its so-called 1919 policy and, as a practical matter, no one in a superior position will now interfere with the recommendation of the Special Agent, whatever his recommendation may be. In effect, therefore, there has been concentrated in the hands of the Special Agent alone virtually unlimited power to determine which tax evaders are to be treated and branded as criminals and which are not. This has been followed by a misuse and abuse of power.

Needless to say, these self-imposed, purported policies of the Treasury Department have been a far cry and a most unworthy substitute for a Congressional standard which should have been laid down in the statute itself. As might be expected, since the executive branch has been relieved of the general duty to prosecute, except as it saw fit, it has made a shambles of the law. Whim, caprice, arbitrariness, favoritism, political and personal considerations and even corruption have ruled the day, rather than the uniform, fair and impartial standards imposed by a legislative body or even by the executive branch itself.

It is clear that these unwholesome effects have stemmed entirely from the Congressional attempt to relieve the executive branch of its duty to prosecute without laying down any uniform and impartial standards for its guidance. The situation today is as though Congress had written Section 145(b) of the Internal Revenue Code in the following language:

"When the executive branch decides that wilful 389 tax evasion is a crime or to be treated as a crime, so be it; otherwise, not."

A statute so drawn amounts to nothing less than an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to the executive branch, in violation of the doctrine of separation of powers upon which our government was founded. As succinctly stated in

Welton v. Hamilton, 344 Ill. 82, at 87:

"Any law which vests in the discretion of administrative officers the power to determine whether the law shall or shall not be enforced with reference to individuals in the same situation, without any rules or limitations for the exercise of such discretion, is unconstitutional."

To the same effect, see:

Wichita R. & Light Co. v. Public Utilities Comm., 260 U. S. 48, at 59, 67 L. ed. 124, at 130:

"In creating such an administrative agency, the legislature, to prevent its being a pure delegation of legislative power, must enjoin upon it a certain course of procedure and certain rules of decision in the performance of its function."

And see, generally, annotation in 79 L. ed. at page 474, et seq.

Not only is such a statute void as amounting to an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority; it is also void as being in violation of the due process clause. In an eloquent opinion written in the case of the Supreme Court cited with approval the following excerpts from Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217 (see 30 L. ed., at 227):

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220,

"But it (the ordinance) commits to the unre-
390 strained will of a single public officer the power to notify every person who now employs a steam engine * * * to cease to do so. * * * But if he should not choose to do this, but only to act in particular cases, there is nothing in the ordinance to guide or control his action. It lays down no rules by which its impartial execution can be secured or partiality and oppression prevented. * * * In fact, an ordinance which clothes a single individual with such power hardly falls within the domain of law, and we are constrained to pronounce it inoperative and void."

The only case found after extensive research, which touched upon the point here involved, is Heitsch v. Kavanagh, (C. A. 6) 200 F. (2) 179. In that case, in which an executor was suing to recover federal estate taxes, the contention was made that the power of the executive branch to compromise civil liability, as granted in Sections 3760(a) and 3761(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, amounted to an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to the executive branch. However, it was stipulated and found in that case that no compromise of civil liability had been made or attempted under said statute, in view of which it was ruled the executor failed to establish that he was injured by the alleged unconstitutional features and thereby within the class of persons entitled to complain thereof. This being so, the Court of Appeals refused to rule on the constitutional question, in line with the principle that such questions are not to be decided hypothetically. (200 F. (2d) at p. 180). In the instant case, as seen, there is nothing hypothetical with respect to the constitutional questions raised. Mr. Achilli has already been seriously injured, by being indicted. Thus, he has already experienced the direct and immediate impact of this grossly deficient statute; and its grossly irresponsible and illegal application. He even got the "R" treatment!

II.

THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT HAS ADOPTED AND EMPLOYED UNCONSTITUTIONAL PRACTICES AND PROCEDURES IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF CRIMINAL LAWS CREATED IN THE REVENUE ACT, IN VIOLATION OF THE DUE PROCESS CLAUSE OF THE FIFTH AMENDMENT.

Taking full advantage of the wide-open door to administrative abuse left by Congress, the Treasury Department, in the last few years, has instituted a practice and procedure which is wholly arbitrary and discriminatory in its operation and effect—one which was employed against the defendant in this case, and of which he has every right to complain. The practice and procedure referred to may be called, for want of a better name, the "R" stamping practice and procedure, and operates as follows:

Whenever a Treasury agent may believe, for whatever reason, even on the basis of rank unsubstantiated hearsay, that a taxpayer may have engaged in activities contrary to state law, the agent causes that taxpayer's file to be stamped in red with he letter "R" denoting "racketeer". This is done regardless of whether the alleged activities of the taxpayer were remote or current, and regardless of whether such activities had or would have any significance under the internal revenue laws.

Once a file is stamped with an "R", the taxpayer gets short shrift, indeed. Having been thus singled out, he is on his way to indictment under one or more of the catch-all revenue laws, even on the flimsiest of evidence. All customary hearings and reviews on the merits by superiors of the Treasury agent are either dispensed with or rendered sterile and empty in the face of that red stamping. Insofar as such a taxpayer is concerned, even 392 though the hearsay as to his supposed activities was not true, and even though such activities were not germane in any way to the revenue laws; nevertheless, on the basis of rumor as to his character, he has become a vulnerable target for arbitrary action, no longer to be treated like any other taxpayer.

The irony in this evil practice and procedure is that, by way of contrast, a different taxpayer, whose misdeeds may have been actual, far more flagrant and directed four-square against the revenue laws themselves has his case treated according to another and different so-called standard, will be accorded full hearings on the merits, at every level, and probably will escape with civil fraud penalties. Even an associate or partner of the "R" taxpayer, whose tax deficiencies arise out of precisely the same set of facts, will be permitted to escape prosecution, as happened in this very case. Here, Mr. Achilli had as his partner and associate an attorney at law, who is presumed to know the law. The attorney prepared and signed the partnership returns. Yet the attorney was let off, but not Mr. Achilli, the only apparent difference being that Mr. Achilli's file was stamped with the red "R".

Manifestly, any practice or procedure of enforcement which depends, not on legal considerations, but merely upon supposed difference in the personal character of one taxpayer as compared to another, is so abhorrent to our system of government as to be in violation of fundamental law. In the language of Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, quoted above, and cited with approval by the Supreme Court in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 30 L. ed. 320, such a practice and procedure

"hardly falls within the domain of law • • •."

It is the same evil, the mere suspicion of which, in a particular instance, led to sweeping condemnation by four of the Justices of the Supreme Court in the recent case

393 of Rutkin v. United States, 343 U. S. 130, at 141 et seq., 96 L. ed. 833, at 841 et seq. In that case, no point was raised nor facts shown as to whether a practice or procedure was applied to Rutkin comparable to that complained of here; yet, merely viewing the case as an isolated instance, and solely from what could be deduced from the record, almost half of the court were ready to reverse the case

When the heat was on and the Bureau was subjected to the pressure of investigation, the Bureau singled out and recommended for prosecution the cases of a negligible few automobile dealers in the Chicago area (five in number), including Mr. Achilli, despite the fact that it had settled without recommending prosecution, the cases of innumerable other automobile dealers (200) of the same area, whose cases were as flagrant or more flagrant. This simple statement emphasizes the lack of fairness, consistency and equality of treatment and the lack of due process under the Fifth Amendment of our Constitution. It is just a simple matter of right or wrong. In Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, at page 227, the Court said:

> "* * * Though the law itself be fair on its face and impartial in appearance, yet, if it is applied and administered by public authority with an evil eye and an unequal hand, so as practically to make unjust and illegal discriminations between persons in similar circumstances, material to their rights, the denial of equal justice is still within the prohibition of the Constitution." * * *

Even Special Agents in times of peace do not have the privileges, rights, prerogatives and powers given the Commander-In-Chief during times of National Emergency. Harabayshi v. U. S., 320 U. S. 111, 87 L. ed. 1792. Controlling all facts and questions submitted is the basic philosophy that these prosecutions must be conducted consistent with the power and dignity of the Federal 394 Government. This basic philosophy, equally applicable to any sovereign government, was simply stated in the case of People v. Claveu, 355 Ill. 358 (189 N. E. 364). The Court said (189 N. E. 367):

> "The state is sovereign and it neither needs nor can it accept the benefit of any questionable or undue advantage over one of its citizens. Its procedure against an accused must be kept on such an ethical plane as will be consistent with its dignity and with its power."

The "general processing" during the last several years of all of these so-called criminal Income Tax cases by the Bureau and Justice—there may be exceptions, but they are few and far between—and the subsequent promiscuous indictments of the victims capriciously seized upon, including Mr. Achilli, is repulsive to our entire system of American jurisprudence, our Constitution and its Amendments, and our American way of life. It is a flaunting of arbitrary, irresponsible, and uncontrolled power. It is a defiance of the solemn command, "Equal Justice Under Law." The indictment against Mr. Achilli should be dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph A. Struett,
Attorney for Sam Achilli.

395 APPENDIX A.

INCOME TAX PROSECUTIONS 1946-1950 AND THEIR UNDERLYING PROBLEMS, WHEN CONSIDERED (a) IN RELATION TO THE OVERALL PROBLEMS OF THE BUREAU IN 1946 AS SUCH; (b) THE HISTORY AND PURPOSE OF THESE PROSECUTIONS PRIOR TO 1946, AND (c) THE BASIC CONCEPTIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL FEDERAL PROSECUTIONS.

(a) The Problems of the Bureau As Such—1946.

As the activities of Government expanded, and taxes of every sort arose, these taxes became the problem of the Bureau. All problems of the Bureau at all times mentioned herein were centered around a man power shortage and an ever increasing work load. The problems of the Bureau became the problems of the Congress. In a report in January of 1948, the Congress emphasized the need of sweeping improvements in the management of the Bureau in that "unnecessary, cumbersome, outmoded and wasteful practices have continued unchanged in the Bureau for decades" (Sub-committee 79). The actual fact was that as a result of the lack of personnel and the ever increasing work load, the Bureau was never able to improve its management and method of operation. Most everyone in the Bureau was doing the best they could under practically insuperable difficulties. Prior to the War, returns had been filed by not more than five million taxpayers. By the time the War had ended, this number had been increased to at least fifty million. There were also innumerable other kinds of taxes which had to receive the consideration of the Bureau. The Bureau not only had to collect these large and various taxes, but had to make a substantial effort to collect the Income Taxes from tax evaders who had made large profits during the War and had failed to report them. From a 396 man power standpoint, with all this additional burden, the Bureau after the War had practically the same number of employees available as it did before the War. A large number of these employees were new people without experience in the problems of the Bureau. Prosecutions were necessary. Special Agents had to send in cases with their recommendation of prosecution. They had to be cleared for prosecution by the Regional Counsel, and they had to get to the Courts promptly.

(b) History of Income Tax Prosecutions.

Deponent first learned of Income Tax prosecution as such as far back as 1930. Deponent was an attorney in the United States Attorney's office in Chicago for a period from 1928 to 1934. It was then and there that Income Tax prosecutions as such were pioneered. While he personally handled none of these cases, Deponent knew all the people who worked on these cases, their problems, difficulties and the time and cost required to make a substantial case against a defiant taxpayer. He was familiar with some of these cases at their inception; he knew how these cases were prepared; and he followed their prosecutions in this very Court. The records of this Court indicate that they were made by skilled, competent investigators, both Revenue Agents and Special Agents, that they were substantial key cases against flagrant and defiant taxpayers, and that once convictions were obtained, substantial penitentiary sentences were given. These cases had enforcement value because they were conducted on a highly selected basis. Deponent contrasted this situation with the then Prohibition prosecutions which were being conducted on a wholesale basis where they descended to the prosecution of the bartender. He thus learned as far back as 1930 that a Federal Statute, particularly an unpopular one, could not be enforced by wholesale prosecutions. The Congress appreciated this fact and in an effort to enforce the Prohibition 397 Law, it enacted the Jones Law. This ended the Prohibition prosecutions.

As stated, these Income Tax prosecutions were really pioneered in this District back in 1930, and were confined to substantial flagrant cases of real enforcement value. There is another aspect to these cases. They were not confined to the prosecution of a particular tax evader as such, but were obviously intended to reach out against certain particular persons or certain particular situations which required law enforcement. A representative of the American Bar Association stated to the Sub-committee:

> "The crime of income-tax evasion is a unique one in a number of respects. For the first 20 years after the offense of filing a fraudulent income-tax return was redefined to make it a felony, the law was not so enforced generally by the Government against tax evaders, but only as a supplemental criminal sanction against persons who had committed other crimes." * * * (Sub-committee 226.)

Only recently in a case before the Supreme Court, four of the Justices were of the opinion that a particular tax evader was being prosecuted not for Income Tax evasion, but for extortion, Rutkin v. U. S., 343 U. S. 130, 96 L. ed. 833, and would have reversed.

While these prosecutions had been directed against substantial flagrant violators and particular situations requiring law enforcement, they had another far more important and real purpose. Namely, to bring in the money from other tax evaders, enforcement value. The threat of and fear of prosecution were inducements to pay the money due from tax evaders. One has but to examine the press releases of the Bureau from 1945 to 1947 relative to Voluntary Disclosure to see the real purpose behind all of these prosecutions or threatened prosecutions (Sub-committee 140-150). They were not to prosecute tax evaders as such. They were to bring in the money. In 1945, the Treasury Department 398 announced "Treasury policy even permits the willful evader to escape prosecutions if he repents in time" (Sub-committee 143); the man who makes such a disclosure "protects himself and his family from the stigma of a felony conviction" (Sub-committee 144). Deponent has heretofore referred to the press releases of the then Secretary of the Treasury on May 25, 1947. The present Commissioner of Internal Revenue emphasizes this same purpose in his interview printed in the U. S. News of May 8, 1953. To illustrate what is meant by enforcement value: The Bureau while Deponent was Regional Counsel cleared for prosecution several cases over a period of several years in a State where there had never been an Income Tax prosecution. As each of these cases were prosecuted, they received wide publicity and their successful prosecution were followed by substantial penitentiary sentences. As a result, innumerable tax evaders from that State and surrounding area came in, filed amended returns, disclosed and paid their taxes and penalties. This history both before and after 1946 emphasizes that the purposes of prosecution or threatened prosecution of these Income Tax cases is primarily to induce other tax evaders to come in and pay up and not to indict and prosecute the particular crime of tax evasion or tax evaders as such.

(c) Basic Conceptions Applicable to all Federal Prosecutions.

Deponent knew the basic conceptions applicable to all Federal prosecutions (hereinafter sometimes for convenience referred to as "basic conceptions"), which had to be weighed and considered, as the situation demanded, before any Federal prosecution was undertaken or recommended. Some of these basic conceptions are: The character of a particular Statute and the object sought to be obtained by a prosecution under that Statute;

399 a fair equitable evaluation of the overall facts of a particular case, not only of themselves, but in relation to similar cases of other citizens; an appreciation of the many Government enforcement problems: all law evaders cannot be prosecuted, wholesale prosecutions are not successful, the cost of prosecutions, the limitation of Government personnel, the clogged dockets everywhere and the shortage of Judges; the need of prompt prosecutions, once an indictment is obtained; the punishment which may be inflicted; the requirement that as far as humanly possible there should be fairness, consistency and equality of treatment of all citizens; and that Federal prosecutions were to be originated and conducted consistent with the dignity and power of the Federal Government. These same basic conceptions in part were developed only recently with much supporting authority by Mr. Justice Black in his dissenting opinion in the Rutkin case. They also appeared in part in the O. P. A. Manual governing O. P. A. prosecutions.*

* The standards determining such O. P. A. prosecutions and reasons therefore, basic conceptions, were set forth in an article by Mr. L. B. Schwartz entitled "Federal Criminal Jurisdiction and Prosecutors' Discretion" appearing in 13 Law and Contemporary Problems, (p. 65), as follows (p. 84):

> * * *"Administrative agencies which investigate and refer cases to the Department of Justice for prosecution have developed quite explicit standards for selecting cases for penal treatment. These standards naturally reflect those of the Justice officials who have to be persuaded to proceed with the cases. Thus the Enforcement Manual of the Office of Price Administration stated the 'general considerations' bearing on the selection of cases for criminal prosecution as follows:
>
> > OPA cannot use the criminal remedy for wide coverage of offenders, as is done in England, because it would unduly flood the Federal Courts. Instead, OPA must develop techniques and criteria for choosing a relatively small number of key cases to prosecute criminally. OPA cannot in this way punish all violators who deserve criminal penalties. No prosecution should be recommended unless the case has clear significance for enforcement beyond the administering of deserved punishment.
> The Manual then reminded enforcement officers of alternative non-criminal sanctions, e.g., injunctions, penalty suits—to be weighed against criminal proceedings in the light of relative possibilities of success, speed of disposition, and other considerations. Prosecution was to be limited to intentional or wanton violations, a stricter standard than required by the statutory 'willfulness.' Among wanton and intentional violators, moreover, only 'strategic,' or 'key' cases would be prosecuted. A case might be strategic because the violator was a leader in his industry or in a key position economically so that his price violations tended to cause similar violations by others."
> * * *

A FAIR AND SOUND PROSECUTION POLICY.

"The primary function of the Bureau is to collect the revenue. Prosecution under our revenue laws, and particularly our income tax law, is but an arm of enforcement. Our revenue laws are unique in that the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, can settle both the civil and criminal aspects of an income tax violation. This is proper. We do not have sufficient personnel to prosecute all persons who cheated on their taxes. The civil penalties are substantial and ofttimes constitutes sufficient punishment, and prosecutions delay disposition of civil settlements to the detriment of the revenue. I have always felt that our income tax prosecutions should be primarily confined to substantial, flagrant, defiant tax evaders, both racketeers and honest "businessmen"; that such cases should be given wide publicity; and if convictions are obtained, the punishment should be substantial penitentiary sentences—not probations. I have always felt that we were receiving from the Special Agents in Charge many cases which should have been settled in the field by the imposition of the fraud penalties. I have also felt that, as a result, we were prosecuting a particular taxpayer despite the fact that a more flagrant taxpayer has been permitted to settle his tax case. In other words, I have always felt that we were getting too many of the little men and too few of the big men. That there must be some basis for my thoughts is emphasized by the increasing large number of probations that are granted by the courts in our income tax prosecutions. There should be few, if any, probations in our income tax case prosecutions. There must be consistency, uniformity, and equality in our tax prosecution policy. We cannot recommend the prosecution of one taxpayer whose case is no more flagrant than that of another taxpayer whose case is settled. We should have fewer and better cases. We should have quality 401 rather than quantity. In my judgment, during the last four years, we were all working toward accomplishing a prosecution policy consistent with the above views. In my judgment, because of "investigations" and our Racketeer Drive, the prosecution policy which we have been attempting to put into effect, and which I have always advocated, has been thrown to the winds. These remarks again emphasize what I think of our racketeer drive. We get the bartender!"

THE RACKETEER DRIVE.

"Some well-meaning persons evidently think that the Federal Government is under a duty to enforce our state criminal laws, do the work of incompetent and dishonest state law officials and put all violators of our state laws in jail. For what? For violating our Federal income tax laws; hence, our racketeer drive. The whole administrative functions of the Bureau has been disrupted as a result. A master racketeer list has been prepared. Some people are on there who should never be on there. Any petty racketeer and state law violator somehow finds his name on this racketeer list or is classified as a racketeer. He is investigated and investigated promptly. Unreported income is found, or we think we found unreported income, and his case is promptly cleared for prosecution. It is given high priority and is rushed to Justice without recommendation for prosecution. We roll them along. What we, in effect, do is rubber-stamp the recommendation of some investigating agent whose investigation, of necessity, under the pressure of our drive is, in most instances, most incomplete and superficial. I have been told that we can expect three thousand, five thousand, and even nine thousand of such cases. How can our own organization handle these cases and do a lawyer-like job in handling them? What is Justice going to do with these cases? Who is going to prosecute them, and how? What are our Federal courts going to say? We will reduce our Federal judiciary to the levels of police magistrates and we will reduce our revenue laws to the low levels of the old prohibition laws. While we are investigating the racketeers and our honest employees, the real tax cheats prosper. If we are to be 402 required to enforce the state laws through the weapon of our income tax prosecution, let us do it on a high level—fewer and better cases, quality rather than quantity. Let us take time and effort to do a real job. Let us work on the big racketeer and the dishonest state officials.

—not the little fellow. Let us follow the pattern set by the late George E. Q. Johnson. Are dishonest state officials classified as racketeers? If not, why?"

THE GENERAL INQUISITION AGAINST ALL EMPLOYEES.

"The present difficulties of the Bureau, in my opinion, are the results of certain situations and the activities of certain persons. Some of these situations have been rectified. Some of the persons who have resigned or have been discharged. Some of these matters should have been taken care of long before they were. All of these matters should be cleaned up and promptly cleaned up. Unfortunately, in my opinion, these matters have been handled and are being handled in such a way as to reflect on the integrity of the Bureau as a whole and upon the many thousands of honest, competent employees, one of whom I consider myself, who were in no way responsible. The effect has been disastrous. The confidence of the public in the Bureau has been destroyed, and the morale of its honest employees is, likewise, being destroyed. Seemingly, some think the Bureau can be cleaned up only by a general inquisition directed against every employee, honest and dishonest, by way of questionnaire. An investigation of all to clean up usually results in an investigation of no one and a cover-up rather than a clean-up. There are others who think the Bureau can be cleaned up on the basis of resignations. Everytime some dishonest employee resigns this is given wide publicity as an accomplishment toward a clean-up. As a matter of fact, this sort of publicity just reflects on the Bureau as a whole and particularly its many honest, competent employees."

403 DEPONENT'S CONCEPTION OF HIS DUTIES.

"I closed out more cases than did any other Regional Counsel * * * I assume the full and complete responsibility for all cases closed out by my office. As I testified before the St. Louis Grand Jury, after signing an immunity waiver, I am willing to justify their closing out before a dozen Committees of the Congress. They were all closed out on a realistic, sound, factual, and legal basis, consistent not only with many memoranda furnished me by my superiors, but primarily with my own personal views on what cases should be forwarded for prosecution. I run my office the way I think it should be run. That was what I was hired for. If I cannot do that, I get out!"

• • • • •

"The position I hold is trying enough in ordinary times. Under the present circumstances, I want out. I am a lawyer, I have always tried to run a law office, giving each case a lawyer-like consideration, afford every taxpayer a full and complete conference, and dispose of the case on a sound, legal, realistic, and fair basis. In my opinion, I just cannot run such an office now. I cannot be a rubber-stamp for a program which I do not believe in and which I condemn. This leaves me no alternative but to resign."

SUPPLEMENTAL AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH A. STRUETT

IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS

Joseph A. Struett, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

That subsequent to the preparation and filing of his Affidavit in Support of the Motion to Dismiss the Indictment against Mr. Achilli, 53 C 154, there was brought to deponent's attention an article appearing in the Columbia Law Review for April, 1953 (pp. 476-503).

That this article was written by Charles S. Lyon, who from 1951 to January, 1953, was successively Assistant Counsel and Chief Counsel of the King Sub-committee (in the original Affidavit of deponent referred to as Subcommittee), and Assistant Attorney General of the United States in Charge of the Tax Division. That said Tax 405 Division is the division of the Attorney General's office that processes the recommendations submitted by the Bureau for prosecution of tax evaders. It is most significant that a lawyer and former high Government official who obviously had an intimate knowledge of this entire situation should, in this article, develop facts practically identical to the basic facts upon which this Motion to Dismiss the Indictment is predicated.

My. Lyon developes at length in the article above mentioned the complexities of this entire matter, its many problems and the pitiful, nebulous and chaotic situation which has existed in the Bureau in connection with the handling of these Income Tax Fraud cases, both criminal and civil, for the last several years, from the standpoint of administrative and legal procedure and theory. In this same article, Mr. Lyon concludes that "the whole complex of existing procedures for determining what taxpayers to subject to fraud examinations is ripe for re-examination," including the fundamental question whether Special Agents should be permitted to recommend prosecution. (p. 487).

Mr. Lyon does not discuss the legal or Constitutional questions upon which the Motion of Mr. Achilli is based, but the facts he developes corroborate and supplement the general basic facts set forth in deponent's original Affidavit in Support of said Motion to Dismiss, as appears from the following.

406 1. Mr. Lyon, in substance, recognizes and states that these prosecutions are not and never have been intended to prosecute and punish tax evaders as such, but to deter others. He even assumes—a fact known to everyone—"That the primary purpose of the criminal provisions is not to visit retribution upon tax sinners, but to encourage by way of threats the greatest possible degree of compliance with the substantive provisions of the Income Tax Laws. In short, the purpose of the criminal provisions is to be found in terms of what is commonly called "deterrence" of other potential law violators." (p. 488).

2. Mr. Lyon developes that in 1951, in response to the Kefauver Committee, the Bureau deployed a large part of its personnel into the nationwide drive against racketeers, thus giving tax administration "an ultimate purpose other than revenue." (p. 477). He seeks authority for such action on a basis of administration discretion, supported by the desirability of "policing racketeers in any available fashion", and the satisfying of Congressional and public clamor, all despite "the probable loss of greater revenues collectible on audit of other taxpayers." (p. 485).

3. Mr. Lyon states that by and large the Bureau has had "comparatively little system or program for determining what matters and what persons should be made the subject of fraud investigations" after reviewing the fact that the Revenue Agent and Special Agent can 407 close out these cases. (p. 487). He should have stated, and correctly stated, that the Bureau has no system and no program. He recognizes that the Bureau, operating as aforesaid, has "exclusive jurisdiction" to investigate these cases, and "normally only those cases which it recommends for prosecution reach the Justice Department." (p. 477). Later he refers to the "self imposed" limitations of Justice as to what cases it will prosecute. (p. 490).

4. Mr. Lyon developes at some length the problem of these prosecutions from the standpoint of sentences and questions whether probations benefit tax enforcement. He states that substantial sentences are exceptional, and fifty-six percent of the tax evader criminal cases disposed of resulted in no jail sentences. (p. 479).

5. Mr. Lyon recognizes the hesitancy of public officials, because of public clamor, to close out these cases or to do their duty. He states: "The upshot of all this pressure has been to surround tax fraud cases with a blanket of sensitivity and to make tax fraud administrators much more reluctant to decline a prosecution except on the sort of clearly defined authority which seldom obtains in tax fraud cases." (p. 477). In fact, it never obtains. Having no policy with respect to declining prosecutions, it is difficult to perceive how the Bureau can have a policy with respect to recommending prosecutions. (see 408 question of Congressman Keogh original Motion p. 63).

6. Mr. Lyon also refers to the character of the legal review by the Bureau during the last several years. The Bureau, when the heat was on, to expedite these cases, at times forwarded them so rapidly to the Tax Division that in some instances there was a skimping of the Bureau's review procedures, no conferences were afforded by the Enforcement Counsel, and some cases were forwarded without "any definite recommendation that prosecution be undertaken." (p. 500).

7. Mr. Lyon, of course, refers to Cooperation cases, emphasizing the Constitutional questions involved, and the seemingly over-reaching by the Bureau of the taxpayer to obtain evidence, which over-reaching might not be sufficient to constitute a promise of immunity. He states: "This typically takes the form of vague references to the advantages which will flow from 'cooperation'." (p. 496).

8. Mr. Lyon, throughout his article, refers to various basic conceptions applicable to all Federal prosecutions, and emphasizes that just so many of these cases can be promptly cleared for prosecution because of limited man power, court dockets, and so forth. He, of course, recognizes that if substantial sentences were given in these cases, there would be fewer pleas of guilty. (p. 488).

From the above facts, considered together with the other facts developed by Mr. Lyon, there exists an administration or mal-administration (which term is proper) 409 by the Bureau in connection with the handling of these criminal Income Tax cases, which requires administrative, Congressional and/or Judicial attention, depending upon the facts and problems presented. Mr. Lyon does not consider the legal or Constitutional questions involved, nor does he consider the question of consistency, fairness or equality of treatment of tax evaders, the basis of Due Process. All activities of the Bureau which he discusses, attempts to justify, or criticizes, are not considered from the standpoint of basic legality, but from the standpoint of what he terms Bureau administrative discretion at all levels. He states:

"It is, however, very difficult to lay down standards with any definiteness or precision for distinguishing between cases which are appropriate only for the assertion of civil fraud penalties. At the moment, in short, there is broad undefined discretion." (p. 482).

Mr. Lyon thus recognizes that the Bureau, and in turn Justice, have no legal discernible standards for penal treatment. He further states:

"It is implicit in much of the foregoing that there are substantial areas of discretion in the administration of Federal Tax Fraud Law. This is underscored by the Generality of the language of the tax evasion statute and by the blanket power given the Treasury and Justice Departments to compromise any tax matter." (p. 481).

Paraphrasing these statements, Treasury and Jus-
410 tice Department officials have a broad undefined discretion, underscored by the generality of the tax evasion statute, to prosecute one automobile dealer tax evader and the blanket power under another and different statute to compromise the case of another automobile dealer tax evader, despite the equal flagrancy of their cases, and despite the fact that these two statutes relate to the same subject matter, are in pari materia, and must be read and considered together.

There is no such broad, blanket undefined discretion known to the law. Discretion does not denote arbitrary power, whims or caprices. Lord Camden considered discretion to be the law of tyrants, being casual and depending upon temper and passion. "In the best it is often times caprices; in its worst, it is every vice, folly and passion to which human nature is liable." Delano v. Market Street R.Y. Co., 124 F 2d 965, 967. The term discretion "while implying the absence of a hard-and-fast rule, should not be a word for arbitrary will or inconsiderate action." The Suria v. Morgan, 186 U.S. 1, 9 L. ed. 1027. "When envoked as a guide to judicial action, it means a sound discretion, that is to say, a discretion exercised not arbitrarily or willfully, but with regard to what is right and equitable under the circumstances and the law, and directed to the reason and conscience of a Judge to a just result." Langnes v. Green, 282 U.S. 531, 541, 75 L. ed. 520. Chief Justice Marshall said, "Courts are mere instruments of the law and can will nothing when they are said to exercise a discretion, it is a mere legal discretion; 411 a discretion to be exercised in discerning the course prescribed by law and when that is discerned, it is the duty of the Court to follow it." Osborn v. U.S. Bank, 22 U.S. (9 Wheaton) 738, 866; 6 L. ed. 204. Discretion implies fairness, soundness and equitable disposition, consistent with sound principles of law in the interest of justice and prudence. In re: Bond's Guardianship, 295 NYS 493, 496, 251 App. Div. 651; Fessendon v. Fessendon, 165 N.E. 746, 747; 320 Ohio App. 161; U.S. v. National City Lions D.C. Cal. 7 F.D.R. 383, 397. Arbitrary discretion is nothing more or less than a government of men rather than of law. Application of Peacock, 78 NYS 2d, 416, 417.

The results which may and do emanate from this so-called broad and undefined discretion are aptly set forth by Mr. Lyon as follows:

"Probably such an occurrence as the recent conviction of the former owner of the St. Louis Cardinals Baseball Club, has done more to frighten potential tax evaders than several hundred other cases not substantially different from his." (p. 481).

Was the case of this unfortunate tax evader under this broad undefined discretion seized upon for prosecution so that the Bureau could have at least one prominent citizen indicted for tax evasion as a result of the activities of the St. Louis Grand Jury? Was this unfortunate individual, under the same broad undefined discretion, seized upon to frighten other potential tax evaders? What happened to the "several hundred other cases not substantially different than his"? Certainly they were not prosecuted. No one has ever heard of them. Were they settled like 412 the two hundred automobile dealer cases in the Chicago area, which cases were "not substantially different" than the case of Mr. Achilli? This unfortunate individual was a lawyer, and, as a result of this prosecution, his license and means of livelihood were jeopardized. In effect, he was driven out of baseball. Press releases at the time of the indictment and the plea of nolo contendere indicate that the alleged fraudulent unreported income upon which this particular prosecution was based was negligible in comparison to the alleged civil deficiency. The "unnecessary harsh" fraud penalties attached to this entire deficiency. This tax evader, once he entered his plea, was given a rather substantial penitentiary sentence. "For example, heavier sentences by and large have been given so-called racketeer and grafting officials." (p. 479). Is it any wonder that this particular taxpayer, before he went to the penitentiary, raised the question whether or not he had been treated fairly.

Considering the overall facts of this particular case in the light of certain utterances of Mr. Lyon in his article, they emphasize what can happen to one particular taxpayer when Bureau administrative officials at different levels purport to act pursuant to a broad undefined discretion supposedly vested in each of them. A combination of these same facts emphasize the general overall lack of fairness, equality and consistency, which, of necessity, must arise when these cases are handled by the Bureau on the above basis. For the last several years, The Bur-413 eau has been handling these cases pursuant to this supposed broad undefined discretion, exercised and applied in various inconsistent ways, unequally against different taxpayers, by various officials at various administrative levels, rather than pursuant to definite legal discernible standards applicable at all levels and exercised and applied equally against all tax evaders by all officials in a like and consistent way at all levels. As a result, there has been a Government of men and not of law, and a flagrant denial of Due Process in all of these cases. They settled two hundred automobile dealer cases in the Chicago area, and they recommended the prosecution of a negligible few (five) including Mr. Achilli although all these cases "were not substantially different."

Deponent states the fact to be that there is no statutory authority for the so-called Racketeer Drive, or any part thereof, conducted by the Bureau during the last several years, and it was and is illegal in all of its phases. It is not, and has never been the right, power or function of the Federal Government as such, or any of its agencies, to police the States, punish State law violators, or dishonest State officials, even if done under the guise of and means of the use of the Federal Revenue Laws. The object and purpose of the Federal Revenue Laws is to collect the revenue for the benefit of all taxpayers, and not to be used as a means of punishing State law violators at the expenses of all taxpayers. If the Bureau, when the heat was on, sought to engage in this unlawful activity, it should have first sought statutory authority from 414 the Congress rather than to have embarked upon this nefarious conduct upon the demand of individual members of the Congress and public clamor.

Had such authority been sought and obtained, it would have bristled with numerous Constitutional questions. Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Com. v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 95 L. ed. 817. This case and the opinions of the various Justices in support of the conclusion reached, condemns the illegal, arbitrary and capricious actions of the Bureau in the carrying out of this so-called racketeer drive in all of its phases in violation of the basic principals of Due Process. In part this case condemns the administrative listing and classification of citizens by the Attorney General in a certain category for administrative action without notice of hearing under a statute of Congress. In th instant case, Mr. Achilli, and other citizens and taxpayers were listed and classified by administrative Bureau officials as racketeers, and their cases treated as racketeer cases under the circumstances heretofore developed, without notice or hearing, upon the rankest of hearsay, want of evidence and unsubstantiated rumor, without the semblance of statutory authority. As fully developed in this same case, any citizen or taxpayer, including Mr. Achilli, adversely affected by the action as aforesaid, has a right to complain.

The above article by Mr. Lyon is adopted by reference and made a part of this affidavit, and deponent states that the basic facts therein stated are substantially true.

Further, this deponent sayeth not.

MOTION.

William J. Giglio, who is under command of this Court in subpoenas duces tecum, one of which was served upon him by the plaintiff and one of which was served upon him by the defendants, to appear at the trial of the above-entitled cause at 9:00 A. M. on September 14, 1953 and produce certain books and papers which are more particularly described in the copies of each subpoena duces tecum hereto attached, by and through his attorneys, Henslee, Monek & Murray, moves this Court to quash the subpoena duces tecum of the Government and moves this Court to modify the subpoena duces tecum of the defendants in such manner that only that portion of the defendants' subpoena calling for copies of the Federal income tax returns of David G. Lubben for the years 1943 to 1947 shall remain in force and effect upon the following grounds:

1. All of said books, records and all other papers required to be produced in both subpoenas, copies of which are hereto attached are his own personal papers and are privileged, except copies of the Federal income tax returns of David G. Lubbens for the years 1943 to 1947 required in the subpoena served upon him by the defendants in the above cause.

418 2. To compel the movant to produce said books, records and all other papers set out in said subpoenas duces tecum served upon him by the plaintiff, The United States of America and the defendants, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, and to testify in connection with the same will be in violation of his rights under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and will deprive him of the personal privilege against self-incrimination which he hereby claims by the Affidavit hereto attached.

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF THE FOREGOING MOTION.

William J. Giglio, being first duly sworn, on oath, says:

1. He is the William Giglio named in the Subpoena Duces Tecum hereto attached.

2. He was named in two informations numbered C133- and C133-195 filed September 14, 1950 in the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York. The former charges him with wilfully failing to pay part of his income tax for the year 1946. The latter charges him, along with others, of wilfully causing a corporation, American Brands Corporation, to fail to pay a tax for the same year.

3. While said informations were still pending, Plaintiff, The United States of America, caused a Subpoena Duces Tecum to be served upon him to appear before a Grand Jury sitting in the Southern District of New York and to produce books, records and other papers, including those mentioned in the Subpoenas Duces Tecum hereto attached, together with the Eatsum Food Company papers.

420 4. On September 2, 1952, Motions were made to quash the Subpoenas Duces Tecum served under the informations upon the individual defendants, including Affiant, which Motions were allowed by United States District Judge Sylvester J. Ryan, who ruled as follows:

"Ordered that the subpoena duces tecum heretofore issued in July of 1952 be and the same hereby is quashed as to the books, records and papers of the three partnerships recited in said subpoena, to-wit: Loraine Food Company, Tavern Fruit Juice Company and Eatsum Food Products Company, except as to those books and records of the foregoing three companies as he may have already produced."

5. In October, 1952, four superseding indictments numbered C 139-304, C 139-306, C 139-307 and C 139-308 were returned in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York charging Affiant and others with violations of the Internal Revenue Laws.

6. Motions were subsequently made by defendants, including Affiant, before United States District Judge Henry W. Goddard of said Court, to dismiss the informations and indictments on grounds that the documents were personal and the privileges of defendants, including Affiant, under the Fifth Amendment, had been violated. These Motions were opposed by the United States attorneys handling the case.

7. On March 27, 1953, Judge Goddard ruled on the Motions. In the course of his opinion, (not yet published), the Court found as to Affiant:

"In response to the subpoenas, Giglio appeared before the grand jury on July 15, 16th, 23rd, and September 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th, 1952. He was sworn and not warned of his constitutional privilege. He was questioned about the location and production of all the records of the corporations and partnerships named in the subpoena. Early in his examination on the first day, he said he would be happy to produce them if he was given a little time to get them together, but later, during that hearing, he repeatedly objected and said he would like to claim whatever constitutional rights he had against self-incrimination and that some of the papers requested were personal records. The interrogation was continued and he was taken before a judge of this court and directed specifically to answer certain questions relating to the corporations. The 421 next day, July 16th, on the return to the grand jury room, the attorney for the Government said to Giglio —'Yesterday morning, when you left here, the Grand Jury asked you to produce the books and records requested in the subpoena which was served upon you, and you were directed to bring all matters, books and records, which were in this area, excluding the books and records which were in Chicago, is that correct?' (emphasis added) Answer—'That's correct.' Question—'Have you now complied with that direction?' In reply Giglio said he had brought 30 large cartons containing records and would bring the rest later. In the interval between July 16th and the early part of September he had produced about 80 cartons of records, partnership as well as corporate records."

The Court further found:

"In the case at bar the defendants under criminal informations for tax violations previously filed, were subpoenaed in a grand jury investigation directly related thereto. They were questioned concerning matters which could incriminate them and partnership records were procured from them, without their being warned of their privilege, and thereafter the grand jury filed these indictments for tax violations, some of which indictments superseded the original informations, thereby substituting a felony charge for what was originally charged in the informations as a misdemeanor. The evidence obtained on the examination of the defendants at least furnished a link in the chain of evidence needed to convict them for the crimes charged. In Giglio's case, it was procured after he had pleaded his privilege. The constitutional rights of the defendants were thus clearly violated."

The Court ruled:

"The Motions to Dismiss the indictments numbered C139-206, 139-304, 139-305, 139-306, 139-307, 139-308 filed against Giglio, Livorsi, Lawn, and Poth are granted and the Government is directed to return, to the respective defendants, the partnership and personal records produced by them in response to the subpoenas."

Wherefore, Affiant prays that this court grant his Motion to Quash the Subpoenas Duces Tecum in recognition of his privilege under the Fifth Amendment to which he is here making timely claim.

Further Affiant sayeth not.

Tuesday, September 15, 1953
Chicago, Illinois
10:00 o'clock A.M.

255 And thereupon Mr. Lockley addressed the jury in opening statement on behalf of the Government.

At this time, ladies and gentlemen, it is customary for the government to make what is commonly known as an opening statement, the purpose of which is to outline in general the nature of the offense, the nature of the evidence which the government expects to produce in order to establish the proof of the commission of that offense.

His Honor has already read to you the indictment in this case. You will recall that it charges Byron Cain, Frank Huebner and Harold Sullivan and The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with evasion of the taxes, both income and excess profits, of the corporation for the years 1945 and 1946.

His Honor read the amount which the corporation reported in those years and the amounts which the government alleges it should have reported.

The omission in the year 1945 is approximately $177,000.00, leaving off the odd dollars and cents, and in the year 1946, approximately $323,000.00. In 1945, the 256 omission of that amount of income resulted in an understatement of the taxes by $163,000.00 and in 1946 the omission of the income resulted in an understatement of tax of approximately $122,000.00.

Now, the government intends to provide first that these tax returns were filed and we will do that by testimony of a government employee who has charge of those records in the office of the Collector, now the Director of Internal Revenue.

We will likewise do that through employees of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company itself who had to do with these returns or with their accountants. We will prove furthermore that at the time the returns were filed, the three defendants named knew that they were not correct, that they deliberately, wilfully, intentionally omitted from those returns this additional amount of income, in the following manner:

257 The Government will establish that during the years 1945 and 1946 The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was engaged in the manufacture and sale of candies, marshmallows and so forth; that in those years, in 1945, they sold to an organization in New York known as the Eatsum Food Products Company, which was owned by one David Lubben, a substantial quantity of candy. In 1945 the Eatsum Food Products Company became a partnership. Mr. Lubben continued as one of the principal partners. In 1946, Mr. Lubben left the Eatsum Food Products Company and he began a corporation known as the General Confections. That company, in turn, continued to buy candy from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and in 1946, Mr. Lubben also established a corporation known as the Reserve Trading Company, the stock of which was owned entirely by the General Confections. It was a wholly owned subsidiary.

The Reserve Trading Company, we will also establish, had the sole purpose of dealing in corn syrup; that it purchased corn syrup from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company through the individuals named herein.

258 Now, in these dealings, for the most part, the the Government will show that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company gave an invoice to these various organizations which I have mentioned which were either owned by David Lubben or in which he had some interest or stock. The company gave an invoice to these various customers on which it showed the ceiling price which was charged for the various products, jelly beans and gum drops and candy of various sorts, and in addition to that invoice, they required the payment in currency of large amounts of so-called black market premium, over the ceiling, under the table—whatever you want to call it—cash. That cash was paid to Mr. Huebner, for the most part in currency—not by check—in currency, and it was paid to him in hotel rooms in New York City, sometimes in the Shotwell manufacturing plant in Chicago.

We will prove that other payments were made by agents of Mr. Lubben to the defendants, or one of them, and we will prove that various employees of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company received some of the money as agents for the corporation.

259 Now, in addition to the so-called over ceiling prices which were paid in currency over the amount recorded on the invoice, the defendants also sold carloads of candy—I mean railroad carloads of candy, without any invoice whatsoever. That was paid for entirely in currency. None of that currency was recorded on the books of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company either, from the over-invoice or the unbilled, so-called unbilled files. None of it, accordingly, was recorded in the books. None of it was reported in the income tax return.

Likewise, with corn syrup. We will show that there were certain invoices sent to the Reserve Trading Company, or to Mr. Lubben, and that the invoices were for the ceiling price of the corn syrup, and in addition to that a cash premium was required to be paid which was not reported in the income tax return of the corporation.

We will establish, in addition to the dealings in cash or currency, we will establish the willful intent of the defendants by certain conversations which they had,

260 or which Mr. Cain had at one time—at one time the defendant, Byron Cain attempted to induce the witness Lubben to leave the United States and go to South America so that he wouldn't be available to testify for the Government.

On another occasion, and these will be corroborated by other witnesses who were present, on another occasion Mr. Cain attempted to induce the witness Lubben to tell the revenue agents who were investigating the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, that there had been certein trades and exchanges between the corporation and Mr. Lubben's company so that he would be able to make some settlement or adjustment of his taxes.

There will be a great deal more. There will be many accounting exhibits introduced during the course of the trial.

We will try to make it as simple as possible so that you will understand it. We will also try to expedite it to the best of our ability.

There is one thing that you should keep in mind: That the issue in this case is very simple. It may not seem 261 so at times, but the issue is simply this: Did the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and these defendants receive the amount of money the Government said it received, or did they receive—did they report it on their income tax returns, and if not, did they willfully intend to leave it off for the purpose of evading the taxes?

I think when we get through showing you this evidence, you will be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that they are guilty, and that that is the verdict you will return.

Thank you.

262 By Mr. McConnell: I want to object to that much of the opening statement referring to the individual income tax of the defendants. There is no charge, I understand, that there is anything wrong with their individual income tax returns.

By Mr. Lockley: I do not recall having made such a statement, your Honor. If I did, I would like the jury to be instructed to disregard it.

By the Court: I didn't understand the opening statement to refer to any individual income tax returns.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, we will pass the opening statement until the commencement of our case.

By the Court: All right. Now as I understand it, the witnesses, aside from the accountants, are going to be excluded from the courtroom until they are called. That is the understanding I have, so if there are any witnesses here on either side, and counsel can bear that in mind, they can leave the courtroom until they are called.

263 I take it after they have testified they may remain in the courtroom if they desire. Is that the understanding?

By Mr. Lockley: We have not reached that understanding, but the Government has no objection, provided, of course, they are not subject to recall.

By Mr. O'Brien: We don't make that agreement, your Honor. I don't want to make any agreement about it. It is too hard for us to follow. Witnesses might come in.

By the Court: We will have the understanding that the witnesses outside of those agreed upon by counsel will remain out of the courtroom except during the time they are on the witness stand.

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory, your Honor.

And thereupon the Government to maintain the issues in its behalf, offered and introduced the following evidence:

264 HELEN MINES, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mrs. Mines, what is your name?
A. Helen Mines.
Q. What is your address?
A. 7315 North Honore Street.

By the Court: Will you speak up. Give us your name again.

By the Witness: Mines, M-i-n-e-s.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Chief of accountants.

By the Court: Now, Mrs. Mines, you will have to speak out so that the last juror can hear you. Otherwise, you will be in difficulty and you will just have to keep your voice up.

By the Witness:

A. Chief of accountants in the office of the Director of Internal Revenue.

265 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And how long have you been so employed?
A. Thirty-three years.
Q. What are your duties?
A. My duties are the assessment and the assessments of all taxes disclosed on all types of tax returns and the record of the payments applied thereto.
Q. And from the year 1945 to the present time, have you had, as a part of your duties, the custody and control of income tax returns filed with the Collector's office?
A. I have, until such time as returns were forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.
Q. Where is the Collector's office located?
A. 22 West Madison Street.
Q. Is that in Chicago?
A. Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And what does the territory that the Collector's office service consist of?

A. The twenty-six northern counties.

Q. Does that include the County of Cook?

A. It does.

Q. Now, with what collection district are the 266 corporations having their principal place of business in Cook County required to file their returns?

A. Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And that is where you work?

A. That is correct.

Q. Are you familiar with the procedure followed in the Collector's office, what I believe you now call the Director's office, with respect to the filing and processing of corporate returns, both income and excess profits?

A. Yes, I am.

267 Q. Will you describe that briefly?

A. Well, the return—all mail is received in the Cashier's Division where the contents of the envelopes are removed and the returns of the checks, or remittances, any type of remittances enclosed with the returns, are attached with a pin on the face of the return, after which the receipted date of the return is stamped on the face of the return.

Then the amount of money, the amount of the remittance is blue marked on the upper right hand corner of the return, after which the checks are detached from the returns and remittance registered as listed on an adding machine for the checks and a document registered from the returns.

After the returns are balanced, they are forwarded to the Comptroller's Division, where the tax assessment is made by indicating a red circle around the amount taxed to be assessed. Then on the opposite side of the document register the amount taxed to be assessed is listed, after which the returns are sent—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the explanation. The document speaks for itself.

268 By Mr. Lockley: This is a matter of practice that I was going into, and that is all.

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. After which, the returns are sent to the Bookkeeping room, where the amount of tax and payment are listed, and then to the Billing Section where the name and address and account number are listed on the assessment sheet.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that all?

A. That's all.

Q. Have you brought with you certain income tax returns?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. May I have them?

May I state at this time for the record, your Honor, that the Government has pre-numbered its exhibits for identification in order to save the time of the Court, and there may be times when the numbering may not be consecutive.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit 1 for 269 identification, purporting to be the income tax return of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1945, and ask you to examine it and state if you know as to whether it was filed in the Office of the Internal Revenue Collector in Chicago?

A. Yes, by the "First District of Illinois." There is a stamp in the upper right hand corner.

270 Q. When?

A. Well, the receipt stamp has not been placed on this return. It was due to an error, but there was a letter attached which accompanied the return stating that the corporation return and the excess profits return were being mailed in the same envelope.

Q. All right. Then I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 1-A and ask you to examine it. It purports to be the corporate excess profits tax return of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1945, and I will ask you to state if you know whether it was filed in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in Chicago?

A. Yes, it was, and it bears the receipted stamp of March 15, 1946, Collector of Internal Revenue, First District of Illinois.

Q. Are you able to state the date on which Government's Exhibit 1, the income tax return, was also filed?

A. That would be March 15, also of 1946.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 2 purporting to be the corporate income tax return of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for 271 the year 1946 and I will ask you to examine it and state if you can, whether that was filed in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue of Chicago?

A. Yes, it was. It bears the stamp of the First District of Illinois in the upper righthand corner.

Q. Can you state when it was filed?

A. Yes. It was filed March 15, 1947.

Q. All right. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 3 purporting to be an amended corporate income tax return for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1946 and ask you to state if you can whether that was filed in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in Chicago?

A. Yes, it was. It bears the receipt stamp of April 8th, 1947.

Q. Have you also brought with you certain assessment lists?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 4, purporting to be an assessment list with a certification attached. This is a photostatic copy consisting of eight pages. I ask you if that was prepared under 272 your supervision and direction?

A. This was prepared under my supervision.

Q. And is that—

A. And that is an income tax return for the year 1945, the corporation income tax return.

Q. Is that a part of the records that was kept by the Collector in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is. This reflects the amount of taxes assessed and the amount of payments made by the taxpayer.

Q. Did you search the records of the Collector's office for any other returns filed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I did.

273 Q. Did you find any?

A. I didn't find any other returns. I did find additional assessments that were assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Q. I believe you previously testified that all of those income tax returns were kept under your supervision and direction?

A. Until such time as they were forwarded to the Commissioner.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government Exhibits 1 to 4, inclusive at this time.

By the Court: Perhaps we should take our morning recess now. We will have a recess for ten minutes, members of the jury.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

274 By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, we have no objection to these documents, except in so far as certain of the documents refer to the entire assessment made in this district, which we think is immaterial and irrelevant.

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear the latter part of your statement.

By Mr. McConnell: Except that certain of these documents refer to the assessment certificate showing the assessment of taxes for the entire district, some three hundred eighty-five million dollars. We can't see any relevance in putting in evidence in this case what the government assessed in this entire district. We don't see how it is relevant.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, included in that assessment is the amount of taxes assessed against the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. It is a part of the lump sum figure.

By Mr. McConnell: You show that by the actual assessment that is made against the company. I don't 275 think it is relevant in this proceeding.

By the Court: Do I understand that you have the entire assessment for this district on the exhibit?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: What is the relevance of that?

By Mr. Lockley: The relevance of it is merely that the amount assessed against Shotwell Manufacturing Company is included in that lump sum.

By the Court: Even so, I don't suppose that the total assessment in the entire district has any relevancy.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor, I will withdraw that portion of the exhibit.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: Further than that we have no objection to the documents.

By the Court: You can detach that portion of it, can you, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Very well. With that detached the exhibits may be received in evidence.

276 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked respectively Government's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, and 4.)

By Mr. Lockley: Any cross examination?

By Mr. McConnell: Are you tendering the witness?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, I would like to ask a couple of questions. May I have the documents, please?

277 (Document handed to counsel.)

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Did I understand you to say on your direct examination that you have a general practice of stamping the exhibits, or the returns on the date that they are actually received?

A. Yes, I did make that statement.

Q. But on this document, which is Government Exhibit 1, which purports to be the general income tax of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the calendar year of 1945, there was no such stamp?

A. That's correct. It was erroneously omitted from the return. The clerk stamping it probably—

Q. You have no explanation of it except that it was an error in your department, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. So that in spite of your general, and customary and ordinary course of business, you do make errors in your department, like other people do?

A. Well, a clerk could naturally in stamping returns turn over two returns at the same time.

278 Q. Well, you can make errors, because you made one, isn't that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, when did you actually receive payment on this?

A. The first payment?

Q. The first payment.

A. It was received the date the return was received.

Q. Well, what does this stamp on this document mean that the payment was received on March 23rd?

A. That is the date that the payment—that the check was sent to the bank. That is the deposit date, the date of the deposit. The round stamp is the date of receipt.

By Mr. McConnell: Do you have these marked by pages or just bulk exhibits?

By Mr. Lockley: Just one bulk exhibit.

By Mr. Kirby: That one is 4, Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I call your attention to an item, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, under date of 3-15 in the amount of $26,621.90, being an assessment list. From what document was that entry made?

A. That entry was made from the total amount of 279 tax due from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company on its 1945 income—or 1945 income tax return.

Q. That was just taken off the return?

A. That was taken off the return.

Q. And your receipt—

A. The date of receipt—

Q. The date of receipt—

A. —is 3-15, as is indicated in the column here, and the date of payment is in the credit column. This is your debit, and your credit, and new balance.

Q. So that you show on these documents that the amount of tax as shown on this return was paid—

A. That's correct.

Q. —on March 15.

A. That the quarterly installment was paid on March 15.

Q. That was all that was due at that time, was it not?

A. That's right.

Q. Will you look at these documents and tell the jury, if you will, how much tax Shotwell paid for the year 1945.

280 A. For the year 1945, the assessment of tax on the original return as filed by the tax payer disclosed a tax liability of $26,621.90, which was paid in four equal installments of $6,655.48.

Q. Did that include the Excess Profits Tax that year?

A. No, the Excess Profits Tax return disclosed a tax liability of $344,017.05, in four equal installments of $86,004.26.

Q. Your records show that that was paid?

A. They do.

Q. Now, for the year 1946, how much tax is shown by those returns to be due from Shotwell?

A. For the year 1946, the income tax return discloses a tax liability of $457,012.98.

Q. And how much was paid?

A. Payments of $114,253.24, in four equal installments, which paid the tax in full.

281 Q. The amount paid was four times that, was it not?

A. That's correct.

Q. Does that include the excess profits tax?

A. For the year 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. We do not have an excess profits tax return for the year 1946.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mrs. Mines.

(Witness excused.)

JOHN C. SKILLING, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. What is your name?

By the Court: If you will give the Reporter your name and the Reporter will announce the name we will get along better.

By the Witness:

A. John C. Skilling.

282 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Skilling, what is your address?

A. My home address is 352 West 46th Street, New York City.

Q. Keep your voice up so that the juror in the back row can hear you.

What is your occupation?

A. I am an employee of Manufacturers Trust Company of New York City.

Q. How long have you been employed there?

A. Seven years.

Q. And what is the nature of your duties?

A. I am a clerk, sir.

Q. Precisely what do you do?

A. I am a platform assistant in an officerial capacity and have officerial duties.

283 Q. Are you familiar with the practice of the Manufacturers Trust Company with respect to Recordaking checks which pass through it?

A. I am, sir.

Q. Now, were such Recordaks made by Manufacturers Trust Company as the regular part of its business in 1945 and in 1946?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. Are such Recordaks kept in the regular course of business?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. Do you have custody of those records as a part of your duty?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Now, during the year 1945 and the year 1946, did the Eatsum Food Products Company have an account with the Manufacturers Trust Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And what sort of an account was this?

A. A commercial account, a business checking account.

Q. When a check was drawn on this account, was it a part of the regular record keeping procedure of the bank to recordak said checks?

284 A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Were both the front and reverse sides Recordaked, or just one side?

A. Just the face, sir.

Q. There would be nothing to show what the endorsement was?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, have you brought with you in response to a subpoena the Recordak films containing photographic copies of certain checks?

A. I have, sir.

Q. May I have them, please?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, these are photographs, these are not the films themselves, I take it.

A. They are photograph reproductions.

Q. Well, I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 50; purporting to be a check drawn by the Eatsum Food Products Company, June 11, 1945, to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $4,817.75, and ask you if that is a—what would you call that, a picture, a photograph?

A. It is a photograph.

Q. —of a Recordak film?

285 A. Of a Recordak film, that is correct, sir.

Q. And do you have the original Recordak film in your possession?

A. I do have, sir.

286 By Mr. Lockley: Will counsel stipulate that the pictures of the Recordak film may be introduced for indentification without the necessity of bringing the film itself and projecting it on a screen?

By Mr. McConnell: We will agree to that, if we get to that. We may object to the whole thing. As to the foundation made so far, we certainly would.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, with reference to Government Exhibit for identification No. 50, is that a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears in the microfilm or Recordak?

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is that the one for $4,817.00?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 51, consisting of a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, No. 4113, dated June 11, 1945, payable to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 287 the amount of $12,888.52, and I ask you if this is a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak or microfilm.

A. It is, sir.

Q. What is the proper term for the film, is it Recordak?

A. Recordak.

Q. And you have the original film on which that check appears in your possession here?

A. I have, sir.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 52, which consists of a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, No. 4637, in the amount of $11,395.47, to the order of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company—

By the Court: Dated?

By Mr. Lockley: June 15, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —and ask if this is a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears in the microfilm or Recordak.

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, what was the number and the date of Exhibit 50 for identification?

288 By Mr. Lockley: The check number is 4131, the date is June 11, 1945.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is that 50 or 51?

By Mr. Lockley: No. 50.

For clarification, counsel, Exhibit 51 is 4113, dated June 11, 1945, in the amount of $12,888.52.

By Mr. O'Brien: And 50 is 4131.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

289 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 53, consisting of a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, dated July 2, 1945, to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $3,461.19, and ask you if this is a true and correct photostatic copy of the check as it appears in the Recordak?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Do you have the Recordak film in which that particular check is included in your possession here?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 54, consisting of a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, Check No. 190, dated July 9, 1945, payable to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $11,042.42, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the check as it appears in the Recordak?

A. It is, sir.

Q. And that Recordak is here for inspection?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In your possession?
290 A. It is.
Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 56, consisting—
By the Court: 56 or 55? 55 is next.
By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor. This is 56. I am sorry. We do jump at times.
By the Court: All right.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Exhibit for identification 56, is a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, No. 1449, dated October 15, 1945, in the amount of $8,865.12, and ask you if that is a true and correct photostatic copy of the check as it appears in the Recordak in your possession?
A. It is, sir.
Q. The Recordak is in your possession, is that correct?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Now, I show you Government Exhibit for identification, No. 57, consisting of a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, check No. 1517, dated October 19, 1945, payable to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $10,976.00 and ask you if that is a 291 true and correct photostatic copy as it appears in the Recordak?
A. It is, sir.
Q. You have the original Recordak film with you?
A. I do have.
By Mr. O'Brien: What was the number of that check? I am sorry.
By Mr. Lockley: Check No. 1517.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification, No. 58, which purports to be a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company, Check No. 1625, dated October 26, 1945, drawn to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $13,171.20, and ask you if that is a true and correct photostatic copy of the Recordak film?
A. It is, sir.
292 Q. And you have that Recordak film here in your possession, is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 59, consisting of a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, No. 1883, dated November 16, 1945, to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $21,899.32, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak film?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Do you have that Recordak film in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 60, consisting of check No. 1900, drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, dated November 19, 1945, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $33,142.97, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak?

A. It is, sir.

293 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 61, which purports to be a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, check No. 2048, dated November 28, 1945, in the amount of $52,708.14, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and ask you if that is a true and correct photostatic copy of the check as it appears on the bank Recordak?

A. It is, sir.

Q. You have that Recordak picture in your possession, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that same answer goes for all of the other checks which I have already shown you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 62, consisting of, or purporting to be a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, check No. 2146, dated December 4, 1945, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $28,580.86, and ask you if that is a true and correct photograph of the check as it appears on the Recordak film?

A. It is, sir.

294 Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 64 skipping a number again, purporting to consist of a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, No. 2212, dated December 7, 1945, in the amount of $13,384.73, and ask you if that is a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears on the microfilm or Recordak kept in the bank?

A. It is, sir.

Q. And that original microfilm is now here in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 65, purporting to consist of a check on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, check No. 2360, dated December 21, 1945, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $25,865.87, and ask you if that is a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak film?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Do you have the original Recordak film with you on which that check appears?

A. Yes, sir.

295 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 66, which purports to be a check drawn on the Eatsum Food Products Company account, check No. 2453, dated December 28, 1945, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $13,091.45, and ask you if that is a true and correct photographic copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak film kept by the bank?

A. It is, sir.

296 Q. And do you have the original Recordak film of that check in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 67, consisting of an Eatsum Food Products Company Check No. 2535, dated January 4, 1946, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $13,603.79, and ask you if that is a true and correct photostatic copy of the check as it appears on the Recordak film?

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, if the Court please, I thought we might save some time. As I understand it, these are checks to Shotwell?

Br Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Recorded on their books?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: And it is merely that you do not have the original checks that Mr. Lubben's company issued that you interrogate the witness to prove the photostats?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct.

297 By Mr. O'Brien: Or you could prove it at our end by those payments from our own books, in accordance with invoices which we sent, and which were paid, is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: Oh, yes. These records—or these checks are recorded on the books of the Shotwell Company as received.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right. We don't wish to delay it or to exact this detailed proof. To the extent that all of the things you are talking about are of that kind, we will agree that these are photostats of items carried on the bank's microfilm, and that there are copies—true copies of that microfilm as the witness says.

By Mr. Lockley: Is it counsel's suggestion that I read the balance of these into the record as stipulated as true and correct copies?

By Mr. O'Brien: Right.

By Mr. Lockley: Very well.

Government Exhibit for identification, No. 68, consists of Check No. 2630, dated January 11, 1946, payable 298 to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $18,119.46.

Government Exhibit for identification No. 69, consists of Check No. 2714, dated January 18, 1946, payable to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in the amount of $11,565.72.

By the Court: What is the date of that?

By Mr. Lockley: January 18, 1946.

Government Exhibit for identification No. 70, consists of Check No. 2793, dated January 25, 1946, payable to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $13,967.59.

Government Exhibit for identification, 71, consists of Check No. 2867, dated February 1, 1946, in the amount of $10,370.26.

Government Exhibit for identification, No. 72, consists of Check No. 3197, dated March 8, 1946, in the amount of $5,717.95, payable to the order of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

That is all of them.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Skilling, did you also make a search
299 for the film, the roll film, which would contain the bank entries for November 27, 1945?

A. We did, sir.

300 Q. And where did you look for that?

A. On our Recordak film that is maintained in our possession and from which we can requisition from the Recordak Company.

Q. And were you able to find it?

A. We were not successful, sir.

Q. In other words, it has been lost?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when a check is drawn against an account and that check is presented to the bank what record, if any, other than the Recordak itself, is kept by the bank?

A. The bank maintains a ledger, or balance sheet, on all accounts and such items would appear on that ledger sheet at such time as they are paid and charged to the account.

Q. All right. Then I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 63—

By the Court: 63?

By Mr. Lockley: 63, yes. That is the one we skipped a few minutes ago.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —which purports to be a ledger sheet of the 301 Eatsum Food Products Company account with the Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, for the period November 15, 1945, to November 30, 1945. I ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the Recordak of that ledger sheet which is kept by the bank?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Are such copies kept by the bank in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. What happens to the originals of the ledger sheets after the copies are made on the Recordak?

A. There is a file maintained.

Q. And do you have that file?
A. Not in my possession.
Q. Does the bank have the file?
A. The bank does maintain a file.
Q. Is the file available for the year 1945?
A. Yes, sir; it would be.
Q. Were you subpoenaed to bring the original with you?
A. No, sir. A copy was requested.
Q. A copy. Is that a certified copy?
A. This is a certified true copy, sir.

302 Q. Are such records kept under your supervision and control?
A. Yes, sir; they are.
Q. Now, is there contained in this ledger sheet an entry under the dates of November 27, 1945, in the amount of $36,148.35?
A. Yes, sir; there is.
Q. Now, what is the meaning of that entry?
A. It would be interpreted that a check in that amount was drawn by the Eatsum Food Products Company payable to someone and was subsequently paid by the bank and charged against that account, Eatsum Food Products Company.
Q. Now, have you also an account with the General Confections Company during the year 1946?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what sort of an account was that?
A. A commercial checking account.
Q. Was it the practice of the bank to make Recordaks of checks which passed through that account during the year 1946?
A. Yes, sir; it was.

303 Q. You might say now what happened to the originals of those checks after they have been photostated, or Recordaked, by the bank?
A. In the due course of business they are returned to the account.
Q. That is, to the customer?
A. To the customer maintaining the account.
Q. That would be true, likewise, would it, of the Eatsum Food Products Company checks which we had reference to earlier?
A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 73, purporting to be a check drawn by the General Confections, Inc., on its account with the Manufacturers Trust Company, check No. 149, dated March 29, 1946, in the amount of $35,536.00, and payable to the order of Cash, and I ask you if that is a true and correct photographic copy of the Recordak of that check as it was taken by the bank?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

304 Q. Do you have the Recordak film on which the picture of that check appears?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 150 purporting to be a check drawn by the General Confections, Inc., on its account with the Manufacturers Trust Company, dated June 29, 1946, in the amount of $26,000.00, payable to the order of cash, and ask you if that is a true and correct photographic copy of the Recordak of that check as it was taken by the bank?

A. Yes, sir; it is

Q. Do you have the original film containing that Recordak picture in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Skilling, what is the usual procedure in the bank when a check is received on an account kept by a customer of the bank?

A. Well, the check is presented to our bookkeeping department, entries are made on the ledger sheet we referred to, the amount is charged against the account, that amount extracted from the account, a file is maintained of those checks, and monthly those checks are returned 305 to the depositor, to the account, along with their monthly statement.

Q. And at what point during that procedure is the Recordak film taken of the check?

A. Usually on the same day that it is paid by the account, or charged to the account.

By Mr. Lockley: You may cross examine.

By the Court: Let's get one thing settled first. You are offering now exhibits that you have now tendered to counsel and which have been identified by this witness, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: I can offer them at this time, or I was going to wait until counsel had finished cross examination, if he cared to make any.

By the Court: Perhaps he has no objection. I don't know. Let's find out.

By Mr. Lockley: I will offer them at this time, then, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: You are offering all those you had identified?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I will ask the witness a few 306 questions. Then I have some objections, even without that.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Skilling, does the bank make Recordaks of all the checks which it pays?

A. During the period in question.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Skilling, please.

By the Witness: Yes, sir; it did during that period.

By Mr. O'Brien: Talk to the jury. I can hear you.

By the Witness: During that period in question it did.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Regardless of the amount?

A. Regardless of the amount.

Q. And since that time have you cut it in any way or do you still make them?

A. We presently do. There was a lapse of about a three-month period, but we are presently photographing all items paid.

307 Q. Now all of the checks in the first group, that is from Government's Exhibits 50 for identification through 72 for identification, those were checks on their face payable to Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And all of those were drawn by Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And after they were cleared, they were all returned to Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Marked "Paid"?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. The checks which you have last mentioned, namely Government's Exhibits—what was it, 149 and 50?

By Mr. Lockley: They were Government's Exhibits 73 and 50. The check number was 149 but the exhibits were 73 and 150.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. The last two checks which you have mentioned which were payable to cash, those were not to Shotwell, were they?

A. They were payable to cash.

308 Q. Payable to cash?

A. That is right.

Q. And not to Shotwell?

A. And not to Shotwell.

Q. Those were the ones for $35,536.00 and for $26,000,00?

A. I believe so.

Q. Now during the year 1946 when the checks in such amounts were presented payable to cash, was there any regulation or requirement of the Government that the bank return a form to the Treasury showing the handling of those items?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. If there was such a practice, would it have been handled by someone else in your bank rather than by you in your department?

A. Yes, sir, it would.

Q. Would that be done by one of the officers?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Did you at that time have an officer named Andrew Rose?

A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. You are not presently able to tell the jury whether such forms were sent in to the Treasury in 309 respect to those last two checks?

A. No, sir, I am not.

Q. Now all of the checks which you have identified this morning, that is, the photostats, are pictures merely of the face of the check and not of the reverse side?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So that the Recordak or the microfilm, or whatever it is called, does not show the endorsements, if any, upon those checks?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And neither do your pictures show the endorsements?

A. No, sir.

Q. And to that extent, the items which you have identified are incomplete?

A. The—yes, sir. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have any further questions?

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. I just want to ask one question.

Do you, as a matter of procedure there in your bank, photograph or photostat or Recordak the back of the check?

310 A. No, sir.

Q. You never do that? You never do it?

A. It is done, yes, sir. As a general practice, no.

Q. On what occasions do you do it?

By Mr. Lockley: If you know, Mr. Witness.

By the Witness:

A. I do not know, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Do you do it where you have cash transactions?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not you made a Recordak or a photostat of these two cash checks as to the endorsements, as to who got the money?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. So that you can't testify whether or not you have produced all documents or all records of these transactions on your Recordak which your bank now has of these two cash items?

A. That is correct, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, on the first group of exhibits, those paid to Shotwell, we, of course, have no objection to the receipt in evidence of those items.

311 There is no doubt at all they were paid to us and they were on our books as counsel has said, but the last two items, in respect to the offer of those, we say—

By the Court: Well, obviously, a sufficient foundation has not been laid to admit 63, 73, and 150. I don't think we need to prolong it. I will sustain the objection.

312 By the O'Brien: As to Exhibits 6—

By the Court: 63, 73 and 150.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: As to Exhibits 50 to 72, with the exception of 63, they are admitted in evidence, is that correct, sir?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: And with the exception of Exhibit 55 which has not been identified yet.

By the Court: Exhibit 55 has not been identified but that is not included.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: But the other exhibits to which Mr. O'Brien has referred, they may be received. As to 63, 73 and 150, the objection will be sustained.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Skilling, in examining the Recordaked film for the pictures of the two checks to cash, Exhibits Nos. 73 and 150, did you see any other picture, negative, of those particular checks?

A. Would your clarify that for me, sir?

313 Q. When you would take the picture of the front of the check and also of the reverse, would those pictures be in consecutive order on the roll of film?

A. They would not, sir.

Q. They wouldn't? Did you make a search of that roll of film to determine whether the reverse side of the checks of Exhibits 73 and 150 had been photographed?

A. We did, sir, but it is a very difficult procedure to identify the face and reverse side of an item inasmuch as they are not in consecutive order.

Q. You are not able to identify—

A. You are not able—

Q. —to identify and locate the reverse side of those checks if you ever did have them pictured, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: No further questions.

By the Court: I believe that's all, Mr. Skilling.

By the Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

314 By Mr. Lockley: May this witness be excused, your Honor? He comes from New York City and the Government has no further need for him.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have finished our cross examination. He may be excused, so far as we are concerned.

By Mr. Lockley: May I ask that the reporter mark these exhibits admitted: Exhibits 1, 1-A, 2 and 3. They have now been admitted in evidence.

Likewise, Exhibits 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71 and 72 have been admitted in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 1, 1-A, 2, 3, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71 and 72, inclusive.)

315 By Mr. Lockley: Mrs. Morrill, please.

By the Court: Give your name to the reporter, please.

GLADYS MORRILL, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley:

It is the Government's intention, your Honor, to call this witness for the purpose of identifying some documents at this time, after which time we would like to excuse her, subject to recall at a later time for further testimony in order to submit a more orderly presentation of the case.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mrs. Morrill, what is your address?

A. 5707 North Kilbourn, Chicago.

Q. And what is your occupation?

A. Office manager—I was, of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

316 Q. Are you still employed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other employees of the company at this time?

A. No.

Q. What was your occupation in 1945?
A. In 1945, I was the general ledger bookkeeper.
Q. General ledger bookkeeper of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. Of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. And in 1946?
A. In March, 1946, I was promoted to the office manager of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Now what was the duty of the general ledger bookkeeper?
A. Well, the general ledger bookkeeper posted all the entries of the business in the books, and balanced them, and assisted with the minor details in the office.
Q. What were the duties of the office manager?
A. The office manager employed the personnel, and handled the personnel and to see that the work was done, that we had to have our various duties out.
317 Q. Did you also have any control over the books and records which were kept by the corporation as office manager?
A. Well, I directed certain activities, yes.
Q. What activities?
A. Well, I taught the person who took over the books after I got through, how to make the entries and how to balance the books.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron Cain?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Will you point him out?
A. Well, he is sitting—the man in the second row on the end.
Q. And the defendant, Frank Huebner?
A. He is sitting next to him.
Q. And the defendant, Harold Sullivan?
A. He is sitting at the end of the table there. (Indicating.)
By Mr. Lockley: Let the record show that Mrs. Morrill has identified the defendants.
By Mr. McConnell: The record shows what it shows, doesn't it?
318 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What position did Mr. Cain occupy in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1945, if you know?
A. He was President of the corporation.

Q. And in 1946?
A. He was president then.
Q. And what position did Mr. Harold Sullivan occupy in 1945, if you know?
A. I believe he was Executive Vice President then.
319 Q. And in 1946?
A. The same.
Q. What was the position of Mr. Frank Huebner in 1945?
A. Vice president.
Q. And in 1946?
A. The vice president.
Q. And did Mr. Sullivan spend any great amount of time at the plant?
A. Not very much time.
Q. And how about Mr. Cain?
A. The same thing applying there.
Q. And how about Mr. Huebner?
A. Well, Mr. Huebner spent all of his time there.
Q. He was a full time employee, was he?
A. Yes.
Q. In addition to being the vice president?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 1, or rather, Government's Exhibit No. 2, the corporation income tax return for the year 1946 and I ask you if that is your signature on the bottom?
By the Court: Whose signature?
By Mr. Lockley: Mrs. Morrill.
320 By the Witness:
A. Yes, it is my signature.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. And you are identified as assistant treasurer?
A. Yes.
Q. Was that your position in 1946, in addition to being office manager?
A. Well, I was assistant secretary and treasurer then.
By Mr. Kirby: I can't hear you.
By Mr. Lockley: Assistant secretary and treasurer.
By the Witness:
A. Assistant secretary and treasurer, yes.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 3 and ask you if that is your signature on the bottom of that?
A. Yes, it is.

Q. With reference to the income tax return for the year 1946, Exhibit No. 2, do you know who prepared that return?

A. Our accounting firm, Busby & Oury.

Q. Do you recall who instructed you to sign it?

A. Well, Mr. Graflund would have brought it to 321 me to sign.

Q. Who is Mr. Graflund?

A. He was vice president and secretary of the corporation.

Q. Are you presently in charge of the books and records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Are you familiar with the bookkeeping system that was in effect in 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the bookkeeping system change any during those two years?

A. Well, in minor ways.

Q. Nothing substantial, I take it?

A. No.

Q. Well, are you familiar with the method by which the sales of the corporation were reported on the books?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. What was that method?

A. Well, as the merchandise was shipped, it was recorded by a sales analysis department as to the number of case of the certain item, plus the dollar amount, and at the end of the month, all of those figures 322 were added together and became the sales journal, which was posted to the ledger.

Q. So that where did the original information come from for posting to the sales journal?

A. Well, that came from the accounting—or shipping copy.

By the Court: Came from where?

By the Witness: From a shipping copy of a set of invoices.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you describe what this set of invoices consisted of and how it came into existence?

A. Well, we had certain machines out there that did billing, that would accommodate about twelve copies of invoices. They were all billed together by carbon and separated to our various departments and as the merchandise was shipped, the shipping ticket came in the next morning to the sales department, the sales analysis department, who did this reporting of the various items by cash amount and dollar amount.

Q. And you say that this machine bills about twelve or made about twelve copies at a time?

A. Yes, sir.

323 Q. And essentially what information was contained on that shipping ticket?

A. It told to whom the merchandise was billed and to whom it was shipped and the quantity of any given item and the type of item and the dollar amount.

324 Q. Was the dollar amount broken down into the amount per unit. or was it in a lump sum?

A. It would show some certain candy we billed per pound, and then it was totaled. Some we billed per case and then it was totaled.

Q. You say that you maintained the general ledger in 1945, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a sales account in that general ledger?

A. Yes.

Q. From what source were the monthly entries in the general ledger sales account obtained?

A. Well, the same source I outlined.

By Mr. O'Brien: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. The same source that I outlined, from the sales analysis department, their recapping of the shipments.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, now, where did the original of this 12-copy shipping ticket go to?

A. The original went to the customer who purchased the merchandise.

325 Q. So am I correct then, that it was also an invoice?

A. Yes, it was an invoice.

Q. So the original was an invoice, and then you had about a dozen copies?

A. Yes.

Q. One went to the sales analysis department?

A. Well, we had an accounting copy. We had a salesman's copy. We had a file copy, a shipping copy, and a memo bill of lading, and then two bills of lading.

Q. And were all of these identical?
A. Yes, except I would say there was a special carbon made that showed the shipping—on the shipping or bill of lading where you saw no price. Is that the information you want?
By the Court: I think it is adjournment time. We will be in recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above entitled cause until 2:00 o'clock of the same day, being Tuesday, September 15, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Tuesday, September 15, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:—

327 GLADYS B. MORRILL, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You are the same Mrs. Morrill who was previously sworn and testified in this case this morning?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. Mrs. Morrill, with respect to the general ledger of the Shotwell Corporation during the years 1945 and 1946, what sales accounts were contained therein?
A. Well, we only had one sales account. We had divisions of that sales account.

Q. I see. And what were those divisions?

A. Well, we had what we called A Syndicate.

By the Court: You had what?

By the Witness: We had what we called A Syndicate. That was a certain group of stores, like Woolworths, and Grant, and Kresge, that we sold to. And I don't remember now if we had a B Syndicate or not. If we did, that would have been the small chain stores like Ben Franklin and Gem, dime stores, and so forth.

328 Then we had the jobbing accounts and we had house accounts. And then others—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, what is the house account?

A. That would be a sale of our merchandise for which no man received any commission. It was sold directly from the factory. At one time the Atlantic and Pacific stores were considered house accounts. These—

Q. Go ahead.

A. These categories change from time to time. I would have to refer to the general ledger to see if it was in effect at that year or not.

Q. And what was the account you mentioned before that?

A. Jobbing.

Q. Jobbing, yes. What is a jobbing account?

A. The jobbing would be a jobber. We had salesmen that went out and sold jobbers and they got commission for selling.

Q. Now, was there a corn syrup, raw material, purchase account on the books?

A. Sales account?

Q. Sales account.

329 A. No.

Q. There was no such?

A. No.

Q. Well, when corn syrup was sold, if you know, how was the sales account credited or other entry made?

A. Well, if we had sold any of our raw materials we would credit the purchase account, corn syrup, chocolate, or whatever you might sell.

330 Q. Well, now, when you made up these twelve copies of this record that you referred to this morning, the original of which I understood was sent to the customer as an invoice?

A. Yes.

Q. And the others became part of the internal bookkeeping system, and bills of lading, from what source did you get the information to put on those invoices?

A. Well, we would get that from the customer's order.

Q. The customer would send in an order?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. From what source did you get information as to the destination of the shipment in the event the shipment was to go to some place other than the customer?

A. Well, the customer would send that information to us.

Q. And from what source would you get the information as to the type of merchandise and quantity?

A. Well, that would also be noted on the order.

Q. And how about the unit price?

A. Well, sometimes your customer will put it in, 331 and sometimes he didn't. We have our price list and—

Q. If the customer knew the price he would include it in his order?

A. Sometimes.

Q. If there had been a change in the price in the meantime, I assume that you would correct it on the actual invoice that was sent to him, is that correct?

A. Sometimes. It depended on the customer.

Q. Who made the extensions, taking the number of units and the amount per unit to determine the total amount due?

A. The billing department would do that.

Q. Now, during the year 1946, if you know, were there any sales made by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for which no invoices were issued?

A. Yes, I know there were some sales that were not invoiced.

Q. Well, on whose instructions were such shipments made?

A. I do not know.

Q. How did the Accounting Department get the 332 information so that it could record on the books in the manner you have described, the amount to be received from that customer in payment of that shipment?

A. In payment of a shipment not invoiced?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the Accounting Department didn't get any information.

Q. Then if there was a shipment made without an invoice, the Accounting Department did not include it in the books, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And the tax returns were prepared from those books, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, then, would such a shipment be included in the income tax returns?

A. No.

Q. Now, if you know, were there sales made during 1945 and 1946 for which amounts were received in excess of the price noted on the invoice itself?

A. Yes, I know that occurred.

Q. What would be the procedure with respect to 333 recording the amount actually charged for that shipment or sale?

A. Well, we just handled the amount that was invoiced.

Q. In other words, if the invoice showed, for example, $10,000, and actually $20,000 had been collected, only $10,000 would be recorded on the books, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And would it be, likewise, true, that if that additional amount was not on the books, it would not be on the income tax returns?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you are here in response to a subpoena to bring certain books and records with you, Mrs. Morrill. What books and records did you bring?

A. Well, I have a list. Shall I read it?

Q. Perhaps that would be best.

A. It is a long list.

Q. Go ahead and read it, please.

A. Corporate minute books; stock certificate books; stubs; stock certificates, and stock certificate agreements;
all ledgers and ledger cards for the years 1944, 1945, 334 1946, and 1947; all journals for the years 1944, 1945, 1946 and 1947; all cash receipts records for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all cash receipts summaries for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all cash receipts journal entries for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all cash receipts remittance advices for the years 1945, 1946, and 1947; all bank deposit tickets, and bank statements for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all records of cash receipts, if any, not deposited in corporate bank accounts; all cash disbursement books fo. the years 1945, 1946, and 1947; all cash disbursement summaries for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all cash disbursement journal entries; all shipping records for outgoing shipments during the years 1945 and 1946, and specifically without limiting the generality of above, all shipping records and bills of lading covering merchandise sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship and partnership, General Confections, Incorporated, and Reserve Trading Company; all journal entry books and all entry summaries for the years 1945, 1946, and 1947; all account-

335 ants' work papers and audit papers covering the years 1941—to 1945, I assume, 1946 and 1947, together with all accountants' work papers and audit papers used in and/or relating to the preparation of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company Federal Income and Excess Profit Tax returns for the year 1945 and income tax return for the year 1946; all original Shotwell Manufacturing Com-
336 pany sales invoices to the Eatsum Food Products Company partnership during the period from June 1, 1945, to March 1, 1946, both inclusive; all original and photostats of Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship and partnership, and General Confections, Incorporated, canceled checks; all accounting copies of sales invoices to the Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship and partnership, General Confections, Inc., and Federal Reserve Trading Company for the years 1945,—1944, 1945, 1946 and 1947; all of Busby & Oury's work papers and audit reports of raw material purchases, production and sales for the years 1941, 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946; all records relating to and reflecting cash transactions in the years 1945 and 1946 which were not recorded in corporate records; all cash disbursement vouchers, invoices, received records for the years 1941, 1943 through 1947; all journal vouchers, invoices and other supporting data for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all duplicate sales invoices for the years 1945 and 1946; all debit and credit memorandums with supporting data for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all employees' records, all 337 payroll, commission and bonus records for the years 1945 and 1946; all books, records, documents, correspondence, telegrams, memoranda, data, work papers, applications, affidavits, briefs, certificates, bank statements, deposit slips, canceled checks, analysis schedules in connection with and/or bearing on sugar rationing and allotment under OPA during the years 1941 through 1947; all books, records, documents, correspondence, telegrams, memoranda, data, work papers, applications, affidavits, briefs, analysis schedules in connection with and/or bearing on increases requested and/or granted by the United States Department of Agriculture on cocoa beans and chocolate for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947; all United States government contracts for the years 1943 through 1946, schedules prepared by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company on all United States government contracts for the years 1943 through 1946, showing all ingredients required to be used in such contracts and the poundage of each ingredient in each contract and the actual ingredients used and the poundage thereof on the production under such contracts with differences and losses.

338 Q. Now, Mrs. Morrill, are they the records which were used as the source of sales as reported on the income tax return of the corporation for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, is there included in those records the receipt of any money on sales for which no invoices were rendered?

A. No.

Q. Is there included in those records any receipts from transactions in excess of the amounts listed on the invoice itself?

A. No.

339 Q. You were subpoenaed to bring with you a record of cash transactions, I think you said, of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes. Well—

Q. Did you bring such record?

A. Well, you mean the cash recorded on the books?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I have no record to bring you like that.

Q. Did you bring with you a record of the unbilled shipments?

By the Court: Of the what?

By Mr. Lockley: The unbilled shipments, shipments for which no invoices were rendered.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I don't think you asked me for a record.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is there such a record?

A. Well, there is a record that was made up.

Q. Was that made up during 1945 and 1946?

A. I couldn't give you the date as to when it was made out.

Q. Now you were also asked to bring with you certain accounting copies of sales invoices. Do you have 340 those?

A. Well, I was asked to have some segregated.

Q. Yes, ma'am.

A. I have those right here.

Q. May I have those, please.

A. The others are upstairs.

Q. Are these the accounting copies of the sales invoices —this is one of the twelve copies that you referred to originally?

A. That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, twelve copies or eleven copies, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't know.

By the Witness:

A. I would have to count that out for you. They change different years. We might add to them. I think it was in those years, I think it was in 1945 and 1946 that it was about eleven.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was the accounting copy one of the copies?

A. One of them, yes.

Q. That was prepared simultaneously with the original?

A. Right.

Q. And the original was sent to the customer?

341 A. Right.

Q. And I presume they were retained by him?

A. Yes.

342 Q. And are these accounting copies kept by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the regular course of its business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it a part of their business practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Does this contain the same information as was on the original with respect to the customer?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 50-A, the letter "A"—which consists of the accounting copy of an invoice numbered C87659 for shipment sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company in the amount of $4,916.10.

Is that the original or is that an accounting copy such as you have previously identified?

A. Yes.

Q. And I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 51-A consisting of the accounting copy of an invoice numbered C88586 and beneath that in typewriting is the number 88585-A for 1350 cases Cardinal chocolates sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company, sale in 343 the amount of $12,096.00.

Can you explain the purpose for the two numbers on the invoice?

A. Well, we attempted to always account for every number and if perhaps a routing might get changed and the girl would use another bill of lading and typed in that number—they didn't always do what they were supposed to do.

Or, perhaps we might take two sets of these, destroy the bills of lading and type another one so we could ship it all on one bill of lading and save the customer shipping charges.

Q. Is that one of the accounting copies of the sales invoice kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

344 Q. I have a number of these.

I have a number of these, counsel, do you care to have me go through them one at a time?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not clear on just what they are, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockely: These are accounting copies of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoices to the Eatsum Food Products Company. These are all billed items for which payment was made.

By Mr. O'Brien: When you say "Eatsum", does that mean the proprietorship, or the partnership, or are they both—

By Mr. Lockley: These are all partnership.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I see those?

By Mr. Lockley: You may look at those if you want to. I will get the others for you.

By Mr. McConnell: We would suggest that you identify them for the record, instead of just reading them. Will you please identify them? We have no objection to the documents.

345 By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 51-B, No. C89123. This is an accounting copy of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 454 cases of gum drops for $1,055.55.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 52-A, an accounting copy of Invoice No. C90598 dated June 6, 1945, a sale to the Eatsum Food Products Company of 506 cases of spice buttons for $1,252.35.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 52-B, an accounting copy of an invoice dated June 6, 1945, Invoice No. C90631, a sale to the Eatsum Food Products Company of 1158 cases of Cardinal chocolates for $10,375.68.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

346 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 53-A, an accounting copy of an invoice dated June 25, 1945, invoice No. C-94002, sold to Eatsum Food Products Company, 1,427 cases of spice buttons for $3,531.83.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 54-A consisting of accounting copy of invoice No. C-94986 dated June 28, 1945, sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company, 471 cases of spice buttons for $1,165.73.

Is that a true and correct copy of the invoice?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification

56-A consisting of accounting copy of invoice No. C-114184, dated September 29, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 353 cases of bulk chocolate nut meats for $3,897.12, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you—

347 A. That was the file copy (indicating). The original is in the file.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 56-B, which purports to be a file copy of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice No. C-114549 of a sale to the Eatsum Food Products Company for 2400 cases of Puritan M. M.'s for $4,680.00.

What are Puritan M. M.'s?

A. Marshmallows.

Q. Is this file copy kept in the same course of busines as the accounting copies to which you have previously referred?

A. Well, we did pre-billing at the office. That meant we billed sometimes weeks i advance and the file copy immediately went to the file department in case we wanted to look it up for some reason. And if it was shipped prepaid, which this was, the freight charges were added on when we were ready to ship but we wouldn't go and get the file copy to do that. So, your original copy and your file copy had this freight on. When I was adding this up, this was not on one of the invoices (indicating), so I got this one.

348 Q. Did you search for that accounting copy of the invoice?

A. Yes, and I think Mr. Mammel had it, and I think he had the original.

Q. Was this copy struck at the same time, including the original and accounting copy you struck off?

A. Yes.

Q. With the exception you have noted as to freight charges, it is a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

By the Court: What is the date of that?

By the Witness: I don't have the dates on those.

By Mr. Lockley: We better take it off these exhibits.

By the Witness: You won't get it. They stamp a date when they ship it. We don't stamp any file copies. The original, you have it down on the paper.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to tell us the date of that exhibit, even though it is not recorded on the exhibit itself?

349 A. Yes, I think so. That was October 5, 1945.

Q. All right. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 57-A, which consists of an accounting copy of Invoice No. C117892, dated October 12, 1945, a sale from the Eatsum Food Products Company, shipped to William Barron Candy Company, in care of Bekins Storage, San Pablo, Oakland, 1,250 cases of Cardinal chocolate for $11,200.00.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I note on that there is the letter, or the letters "HSE" up in the center of the right hand side. What does that represent?

A. Well, that was the house sale. No commission is paid on it.

350 By the Court: I didn't understand that. That sale is by whom to whom?

By the Witness: It was by Eatsum Food Products Company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. No. It was by Shotwell.

A. Oh, it was sold by Shotwell to Eatsum Food Products and shipped to William Bond Candy Company in Oakland, California.

Q. Is that what would be referred to as a drop shipment?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. When the purchaser orders you to take a carload or other quantity of material and ship it to some other place?

A. That is right.

Q. But you bill the purchaser?

A. That is right.

Q. And he makes his settlement with the original—

A. Original person to whom he sells it.

Q. The person to whom it was sent?

A. That is right.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 58-A consisting of an accounting copy of an

351 invoice numbered C119874, dated October 20, 1945, sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company shipped to McDonald Candy Company, Eugene, Oregon, for 1500 cases of Cardinal chocolates for $13,440.00.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

By the Court: The amount again, please?

By the Witness: $13,440.00.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 59-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice numbered C122518, dated November 2, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company shipped to F. W. Woolworth Company, Atlanta, for 2494 Cardinal assorted chocolates, $22,346.24.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

352 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 60-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-120655, dated October 27, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 1,189 cases of chocolate nut meats, 776 cases of chocolate covered nut meats, and 1,067 of spice buttons for a total of $22,693.61, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 60-B purporting to be an accounting copy of an invoice No. C-123402 dated November 12, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company shipped to Harry Simon of Chicago of 1,250 cardinal assorted chocolates, $11,200.00.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 61-A purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-124206, dated November 17, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 1,689 cases of cardinal assorted chocolates, 338 cases of chocolate covered nuts, and 1,419 cases of chocolate covered nuts

353 or a total of $32,572.50, and ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 61-B, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-125386, dated November 24, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 656 spice buttons, cases of spice buttons, 838 cases of chocolate covered nuts, and 1,070 cases of chocolate covered nuts for $21,211.32.

I ask you if that is a true and correct copy of the original.

A. Yes, it is.

354 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 62-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of Invoice No. C122399, dated November 10, 1945, a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 2,934 cases of chocolate covered nutmeats, and 332 cases of spiced buttons for $29,164.14.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 64-A, purporting to consist of accounting copy of Invoice No. C126180, dated November 30, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 263 cases of Cardinal chocolates for $2,356.48.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 64-B, consisting of accounting copy of Invoice No. C126181, dated November 30, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 1163 cases of chocolate covered nuts for $11,234.58, and ask if that is a true and correct copy of the original?

355 A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 65-A, consisting of accounting copy of Invoice C126517 dated December 8, 1945, to Eatsum Food Products Company for 2283 cases of chocolate covered nuts, 190 cases of chocolate covered nuts, and 603 cases of spiced buttons, for $25,640.93.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

356 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 65-B, consisting of an accounting copy, invoice No. C127316, dated December 14, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company shipped to Burry Biscuit Company of Chicago, 303 cases of spice buttons for $749.93.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you document with a heading of "Shotwell Manufacturing Company", confectionery specialists, invoice No. C296 sold to Eatsum Food Products with a description "Additional charge on invoice No. C126517—date 12/8/45 should have been billed" 2283 chocolate covered nuts, $2253.78. "As billed"—2283 chocolate covered nuts, $22050.00. "Additional charge, $3.78."

What does that purport to be?

A. Well, the girl who originally extended it, made an error and we sent what we call a debit memorandum for this additional amount to him. This is not made with this set.

Q. This is a correction on a billing, is that correct?

357 A. That is right.

By the Court: What exhibit number is that?

By Mr. Lockley: 65-C.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 66-A purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C127425, under which is written or typed "C127424, dated December 15, 1945, a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 657 cases of Cardinal chocolates for $5,886.72."

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

358 Q. And is the explanation with respect to the two numbers of the invoice the same?

A. It is the same. I think it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 66-B, consisting of an accounting copy of invoice No. C-127844, dated December 20, 1945, a sale to Eatsum Foods Product, shipped to Imperial Candy Company, Youngstown, 740 cases of cardinal chocolates for $6,630.40.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 66-C, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-127905, dated December 21, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 340 cases of spice buttons, $841.50.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 67-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-127742, dated December 19, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 900 cases of 359 chocolate covered nuts for $8,694.00.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Goverment's Exhibit for identification No. 67-B, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice No. C-127788, dated December 20, 1945, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 537 cases of chocolate covered nuts for $5,187.42.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

360 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 68-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of an invoice with the typewritten number C127425. The printed number is X-ed out. It is dated December 15, 1945, and is a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 1914 cases of chocolate covered nuts for $18,489.24.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 69-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of invoice number C130126 dated January 10, 1946, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company for 1069 cases of chocolate covered nuts, $11,801.76.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 70-A, consisting of accounting copy of invoice number C131641, dated January 17, 1946, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 1291 cases of chocolate covered nuts, $14,252.64.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

361 A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 71-A consisting of accounting copy of invoice number C132508, dated January 19, 1946, of a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company shipped to Imperial Candy Company, Youngstown, 1065 cases of Cardinal chocolates for $9,542.40, 420 cases of spice drops, $1,039.50, or a total of $10,581.90.

Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 72-A, purporting to be an accounting copy of an invoice—

By the Court: Wait a minute. What exhibit number?

By Mr. Lockley: 72-A, consisting of accounting copy of invoice number C141335, dated February 28th, 1946, a sale to Eatsum Food Products Company of 604 chocolate covered nuts, cases of chocolate covered nuts, $5,834.64.

362 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Now, did you also bring with you the Shotwell Manufacturing Company general journal for the year 1947?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you get it, please?

Do you also have with you the Shotwell Manufacturing Company accounts receivable record for the Eatsum and General Confections Companies for the period from July 14, 1944, to May 11, 1948?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 200, purporting to be an accounts receivable ledger card of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, an account with Eatsum Food Products and in pencil "David G. Lubben."

Can you tell from an examination of this exhibit whether there is any amount due from the Eatsum Food Products Company on this account?

By Mr. O'Brien: What period is covered by that, Mr. Lockley?

363 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell him, please?

A. It begins with May of 1944 and ends with the last entry, May of 1948, covering the Eatsum and General Confections.

Q. And is there any balance due on account from David Lubben or the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. As of today?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

By the Court: I didn't hear the last.

By the Witness:

A. As of today it shows the account is in balance.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The account is in balance. Was it all paid?

A. No. We wrote off something an uncollectible.

Q. And how much?

A. $665.56.

Q. How was that handled?

A. That was handled by a journal entry.

Q. As an uncollectible bad debt?

A. That is right.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 200-A, which purports to be an ac-
364 counts receivable card of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with Eatsum Food Products and ask you in what respect this differs from Government's Exhibit for identification No. 200?

A. Well, this was called "accounts receivable others" and pertains to sales that were other than what we manufactured, like—

By the Court: You turn your head and then I can't hear you. Will you look straight ahead so that I can hear you? When you turn your head I can't.

By the Witness:

A. This is what we call an accounts receivable others. We try to segregate the sales of our manufactured product from the sales of any raw materials we might make and we called it accounts receivables others and this card would be sales of some raw materials to Eatsum Food Products.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know what sort of raw materials were sold?

A. Yes. There was some chocolate liquor and some corn syrup.

Q. Now, is there a balance due at this time on 365 that account?

A. There is nothing due at this time on this, no.

Q. Was any portion—

By Mr. O'Brien: At what time?

By Mr. Lockley: At the present time.

By the Witness:

A. There was no portion written off.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. In other words, the account was paid in full?

A. That is right.

366 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 200-B, purporting to be an account receivable of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with David Lubben, and ask you in what respect this differs from Exhibit for identification No. 200 and No. 200-A?

A. Well, I don't know why this card was made out to just David Lubben. Mr. Mammel came across it and asked me to look it up, and as I remember it, it was a transfer of some Hi-Mac bars he sold for us, that some account in New York could not sell. Why—I think it was just a clerk that made the card out to David Lubber.

Q. Was there an unpaid balance on that amount?

A. Not as of this date, no.

Q. Was the account paid in full?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. To correct the record, it appears that I gave the wrong invoice amount on Exhibit No. 56-B, which was dated October 5, 1945, invoice No. C-114549. The invoice amount is $5,053.77, is that correct?

A. Yes. That is with the freight added on to it.

Q. I see. Thank you. Now, you have the Shotwell Manufacturing Company journal?

A. Yes.

367 Q. For the period from January to June, 1947?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, what information is contained in that book?

A. Well, these are the entries that are posted to the general ledger, and they include the sales and Social Security charges, commission charges, any transaction that would go on your general ledger. Any transaction that would go on your general ledger is in here with the exception of the cash disbursement recap, which is in the general disbursement book.

Q. Now during the early part of 1947, did you know if David G. Lubben was a broker for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. The early part of 1947?

Q. Yes. Do you know? Can you determine from an examination of that record?

May this journal, for the period from January to June, 1947, be noted as Government's Exhibit 138 for identification?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, he was a broker then.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. He was a broker?

A. Yes.

368 Q. Now, will you refer to the journal entries for the period from January through February, 1947, and determine whether he earned any commissions on sales during that period?

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know the relevancy of that, your Honor. We are going into 1947. The connection escapes me.

By the Court: What is the relevancy?

By Mr. Lockley: I am attempting to establish, your Honor, that the full amount of the invoice purchases made by Mr. Lubben were made, with the exception of this $600.00 which was charged off to a bad debt, but not all of that was paid in cash. Some of it was by journal entry, which, in effect, took money which Mr. Lubben had earned as commissions and credited it against amounts which he owed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, how is that in issue here?

By Mr. Lockley: I am merely establishing that all of it was paid.

By the Court: As you say, you are getting into a matter now I don't know is relevant. In other words, 369 I haven't been informed. I don't appreciate the relevancy.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it because it is outside of the period of the indictment.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, with respect to the bills of lading, which I understood were carbon copies of the invoices and these accounting copies which we have previously identified, were the numbers on the bills of lading the same as the numbers on the accounting copies?

A. They should be.

Q. In other words, when the invoices were printed with this number of copies, every copy had the same printed number on the top?

A. Yes.

Q. Then, for every bill of lading for candy that was shipped, there should have been an invoice bearing that same number as appeared on the bill of lading, is that correct?

A. Yes, there should have been.

Q. Did you bring with you work papers of Mr. Busby, the accountant?

370 A. Well, I don't have his work papers.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, there is now in the office of the United States Attorney, pursuant to agreement with counsel, a substantial bulk of original records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. If necessary, we can have that brought down here and identified. The Government desires them only for the purpose of having an expert testify from his prior examination of those records and it may be possible that counsel will stipulate that those records are here, that they are available to both parties, and it will not be necessary to physically bring them into court.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we have no desire to have them physically brought into court, your Honor. We just had them brought here. If there is at this time available some summary of those findings, or whatever it is you are talking about, so that we could have that checked to save time, to verify that the papers are here, we could do that. I think we can save a good deal of time.

Mrs. Morrill, there are two truckloads of papers 371 here, aren't there?

By the Witness: One truck.

By Mr. O'Brien: There are many cases of them. I suppose, at this stage of the case, Judge, if we could see any such summary, we could make such a check without delaying the jury or delaying your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I only want them for purposes of identification. I don't wish to offer them in evidence. I don't think it is necessary. Of course, it is necessary that they either be identified or be under the custody of the Court and available to counsel so that he may determine the accuracy of the Government summary.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I suggest at this late date that we shouldn't have to determine the accuracy right here.

372 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, my suggestion at this late date is that we shouldn't have to determine the accuracy right here all at once. If there is some such thing, we would undertake to verify it, if we could have a copy of it, whenever you get up to that point. We don't want to start verifying in open court, pulling out all those documents.

By the Court: Well, I assume you will be afforded a reasonable opportunity to familiarize yourselves with any exhibit that may have been offered and check it with the underlying data which is supposed to be the basis for the exhibit. If that arrangement is made between counsel, I haven't any objection. I think that is up to counsel.

By Mr. O'Brien: If that is all right with you.

By Mr. McConnell: It is all right with me.

By Mr. O'Brien: As long as we have the oppor-

373 tunity.

By the Court: I haven't any authority to order the production of any document at this time.

By Mr. Lockley: We would like to excuse Mrs. Morrill, after cross examination, but subject to recall, as I previously said.

You may cross examine.

By Mr. O'Brien: Might we have the recess at this time?

By the Court: All right.

(Recess taken.)

Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mrs. Morrill, did I understand that you are now the only employee of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Your work has recently been solely to assist in the preparation of the records for the trial, much as you have done here for the government today?

A. No, I wouldn't say that. I have cleaned up a lot of bad accounts that we had to collect. And we had 374 a lot of machinery to sell, and I helped to sell that, some of it. And we had to move out of our building. The building was sold. And I had to gather the records and get them out of there into another place.

Q. But in '45 and '46, Mrs. Morrill, when the business was running, how big a business was it, in the number of employees?

A. Well, when we were going at a high speed there we had about five to six hundred employees, according to the seasons, you know.

375 Q. But since this trouble, it is all gone, and the business is closed?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Now, what type of candy did they make, and was it mostly a fairly cheap candy?

A. Yes, it was a candy that you find in the dime stores, a lot.

Q. And chain stores of all kinds?

A. Chain stores, that's right.

Q. Mostly bulk candy?

A. Bulk. And they made bars, a lot of bars in '45, '46.

Q. And some of the candy is priced on these invoices here, is that right?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. I notice from Exhibit 51-A, that the box chocolates sold for 37-1/3 cents a pound?

A. Yes.

Q. And the citrus drops sold for 13 cents a pound?

A. That's right.

Q. And the gum drops were 7-3/4 cents a pound?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were those prices that I have read to you fixed by the OPA?

376 A. Well, we were under OPA.

Q. Well, Mr. Lockley asked you whether in making up—in the usual practice of the business, in making up invoices, you had access to a price list, and I think you said you did, didn't you?

A. We had a standard price list, yes.

Q. And that was an OPA price list?

A. Yes.

Q. And that under the law you were required to observe?

A. That's right.

Q. And if you didn't observe it, you could be fined three times the overage, and sent to prison for the OPA violation, couldn't you?

A. It was a large fine, yes.

Q. And triple damages?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, in 1945, you, of course, actually paid an income tax, didn't you?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. And that is shown on Exhibit 1 of the Government, and Exhibit 1-A of the Government, is that right?
A. Yes, this is right.
377 Q. And am I correct in thinking that the gross profit of the company in the year of '45, was $561,000 roughly?
A. Yes, roughly.
Q. And that on that $561,000 you actually paid a tax of $370,000, roughly?
A. Right.
Q. In other words, roughly three-quarters of the gross profit was paid in tax in that year, is that true?
A. Yes, that's right.
Q. Now, Mrs. Morrill, with respect to these invoices that you have talked about, and the prices we have talked about, those prices, as I understand it, that were on there, were fixed by the OPA?
A. Yes.
Q. If you made a profit then on that price, three-quarters of it then went in income tax?
A. Yes.
378 Q. Now, how many customers did Shotwell have in 1945 and 1946?
A. We had about twelve to fifteen thousand customers.
Q. Mr. Lockley was asking you about some transactions where there were some items of cash over ceiling prices that didn't go on the books. How many customers were involved in that?
A. Only one.
Q. And that one was Lubben?
A. That's right.
Q. Everything else went on the books?
A. Yes, it did.
Q. And the part that Mr. Lockley was asking you about was not the amount on these invoices. These invoices that are here, that went on the books?
A. Yes, it did.
Q. The OPA price went on the books?

A. Yes, it did.
Q. But that cash didn't?
A. No.
Q. But if it had you would have been responsible for triple damage, if you had put it on the books and the Government went after you?
A. Yes, that's right.
379 Q. But was that done with any other customer than this out of the twelve thousand?
A. No.
Q. Mrs. Morrill, were some raw materials under allocation in '45 and '46 by the OPA?
A. Well, sugar was rationed.
Q. And hard to get?
A. Oh, very. And chocolate, the suppliers would sell a certain per cent, according to what they had sold us in 1941. The same applied for—
Q. The fact is, though, Shotwell got a lot more in '45 and '46 than they had been able to buy in '41, didn't they?
By Mr. Lockley: Just a second. I object to the statement of counsel as a question. And I also object to the question itself on the grounds that it exceeds the scope of the direct examination.
By Mr. Kirby: I will rephrase it.
By the Court: I don't think it is proper cross examination, counsel.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. In 1945 you didn't sign the income tax return that is Exhibit 1, or the return which is—
A. No, I didn't.
380 Q. In 1946—I show you Government's Exhibit 2 and Government's Exhibit 3, and you signed those, didn't you?
A. Yes, I did. Yes, I signed both of these.
Q. Mr. Lockley, asked you whether the books reflected any cash over ceiling from this one customer and I think you said no?
A. That's right.
Q. Mr. Lockley asked you whether the income tax reports were made up from such books and I think you said yes.
A. Yes.
Q. Mr. Lockley asked you whether, therefore, that cash overage, whenever it occurred, with Lubben, went on the tax return, and I think you said no.

A. That's right.

Q. And you knew when you signed the return it wasn't on there?

A. Yes, I knew it wasn't on there.

Q. And were you intending to deprive the government of its tax revenue when you knew it was not on there?

A. No.

Q. Why did you leave it off?

381 A. Well, it actually—there wasn't any tax owed the government because this money that we took in, we went out and spent it to get raw materials that were hard to get, and that made more candy. It increased the candy sales and we paid the taxes on the candy sales.

Q. So that your transactions actually produced a higher income tax?

A. Yes.

Q. They had a young man here from New York from the Manufacturers Trust.

A. Yes.

Q. And he read off a number of checks to Shotwell, do you recall that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You were in the court room at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, had you been asked by the government to pick out and have separately ready for your testimony the ledger which showed the dealings with Lubben on the company's books; didn't they ask you to do that?

A. Yes, ledger cards.

382 Q. Yes. Now, as that man from New York read off those checks payable to Shotwell, I noticed you turned and you had your ledger sheet out on your lap there, didn't you?

A. I was checking them, yes.

Q. Was there any check to Shotwell that that man mentioned that wasn't right on the books of the company?

A. All that I had checked were on there, yes.

By Mr. Lockley: That was stipulated, counsel.

By Mr. Kirby: But the fact can sometimes be made plainer by stating that the things are there than all this mystery about Recordaks, and that sort of business. It was there and every one of them was there.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lockley also had you identify a number of invoices here, and so far as you know, Mrs. Morrill, those invoices are posted on the books of the company?

A. They are.

Q. Mr. Lockley showed you Government Exhibit 200, and I take it that is the statement of Lubben's 383 account from '44 until '48?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Well, I notice an expression about bankrupt here.

A. Yes.

Q. And assignment to trusteeship and bankrupt. That means Lubben was doing those different things?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And am I correct, as I look at these schedules, in thinking it was in 1946 that you started to have trouble, calling your attention particularly to the entries of September 5th, and thereafter, in collecting money from Lubben?

A. Yes, that was about the time he began to be very lax in his payments.

Q. Now, those ink writings that are alongside of the payments received, they indicate the date they were received?

A. That was the date we received it for that particular invoice.

384 Q. And the invoices he was getting in late summer he didn't pay for until November, December, or the next year?

A. Yes, there were some of those. And towards the end of the year he began making partial payments on some of these invoices, too.

Q. Mr. Lockley asked you about whether in 1947 Mr. Lubben was acting as broker; do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, that simply means he earned some commissions?

A. That's right.

Q. But you didn't pay him the commissions, you applied them against his delinquent account?

A. Yes, he owed us a lot of money.
Q. And that was one of the ways to get it?
A. Yes.
Q. Mr. Lockley asked you about a journal entry which you explained that Mr. Mammel had called to your attenti n. Now, which of these two exhibits, 200-A or 200-B, is that?
A. Well, it wasn't on a journal. It's a ledger card.
385 Q. Which one is it now?
A. It is this one made out to Dave Lubben.
Q. That's 200-B. And that is the total of $1,028.16 in merchandise, is that right?
A. Yes. Twelve hundred, did you see that?
Q. Yes, those two invoices. The two would total somewhere around $1,200.00.
A. Yes.
Q. That was some Hi-Mac bars.
A. Bars, Hi-Mac and Shur-Mac. I had looked it up for Mr. Mammel quite some time ago. His boys came across the card.
386 Q. The card was right in the records of the com-
?
as right in with the other accounts receivable.
Q. ing strange about it?
A. No.
Q. And there is nothing strange about this 200-A, that is just a transaction for some eight or nine hundred dollars worth of raw materials?
A. That's right.
Q. Now, there were some other sales of raw materials, though, weren't there, to Mr. Lubben, that Lockley asked about?
A. Yes, he bought some corn syrup.
Q. Is that the corn syrup that was in the leaky barrels down at the same warehouse?
A. Yes.
Q. You talked about the way the billing machine would make up the invoices, and you said that the customer would get a copy?
A. Yes.
Q. How many copies would the customer get in 1945 and 1946?

A. Well, he would get one.

387 By Mr. O'Brien: He would get one copy.

By Mr. Kirby: Correct. He would get simply one, is that correct?

By the Witness: One. Unless he would specially ask for another one, and we would always put the invoice in duplicate, and there is nothing on there to indicate that,—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So far as Lubben's transactions were concerned, he got one invoice?

A. Yes.

Q. And on that invoice that the company sent out, the price that was stated was the OPA price?

A. Yes.

Q. You never put on an above the ceiling price?

A. No.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all I have to ask. Some of the other counsel may want to ask questions.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask a few questions.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mrs. Morrill. I think Mr. Kirby covered this, but I want to be sure about it. So far as you knew, when 388 you were keeping the books and records for the Shotwell Company in 1945 the only amount due and owing to Shotwell on the particular invoices of candy which we referred to, as evidenced by those invoices, was the invoice price as shown on the invoice, isn't that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is the amount you put down on the books?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you hear counsel's opening statement here this morning when he said there was $177,146.23 of overage payments that came into Shotwell in 1945?

A. I heard him say it.

Q. Did you ever see any money of that kind coming in to Shotwell?

A. No.

Q. At any time?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see any amount of money of $323,573.29, or anything like it, coming in, in 19—

389 By Mr. Lockley: This is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Sustained.

By Mr. Lockley: I have been very patient with counsel, I think.

By the Court: Sustained.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I understood you to say this morning that there were some cash payments that you knew about in some general sort of way?

A. I know about it since that time. I didn't know about it at that time.

Q. Well, this is something you have learned from government counsel in the course of the preparation of this case?

A. Well, I was in the courtroom in November when you had a motion.

Q. This is something you have learned about out of hearings, and out of the preparation of the case. You are not speaking now of your own knowledge at the time?

A. At the time I didn't know it.

Q. You didn't know anything about any overage in the amounts of this indictment?

390 A. No, I did not know it at the time.

Q. Now, are you familiar with the accounts of Shotwell at the different banks?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your cash accounts at the bank balance with your books?

A. Yes.

Q. At all times while you were there?

A. At all times, yes.

Q Did your books balance with any cash that you had knowledge of during that time while you were there?

A. I don't think I understand you.

Q. Well, did you know of any cash that was not in a bank account, or not somewhere else where you could see it, or touch it?

A. Did I know of any?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, in late '45 I did.

Q. Now, what cash is that?

By Mr. Lockley: Here again your Honor, we are beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: He brought out a general statement here. I think I have a right to pin that down.

391 By the Court: I think she did say—I am not too clear, but I think she did say she was aware of certain payments received by Shotwell over the amount of the invoice. Is that what you have reference to?

By Mr. McConnell: I have a right to particularize that, I think, if the Court please. I submit that I do.

By the Court: Well, to the extent that she had knowledge at the time, she may answer.

By Mr. McConnell: All right.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, what cash are you speaking about in 1945?

A. Well, there was some cash.

Q. Late in 1945?

A. There was cash that came into the office in late 1945 that I helped to count.

Q. Now, what connection did you have with it?

A. Merely by assisting in counting, and sometimes giving it to somebody in the office who might ask me for it.

392 Q. All right. Now, was that cash put in some particular place?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have custody of that place?

A. Yes.

Q. And where was that place, and where was it put?

A. It was put in a box in the company vault.

Q. And you had to do with the putting of it in and the taking of it out, is that right?

A. I assisted with doing it, yes.

Q. All right. Now, how much, approximately, cash was involved in that, all told?

A. In '45?

Q. Yes, in '45, or any time that you had any connection with the box?

By the Court: You are talking about '45 now?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Let's confine ourselves to '45.

A. I don't think I could tell you that answer.

Q. When did you first have the counting of it?

A. In the fall of '45, about in October or so.

Q. All right. How much cash did you have at that 393 time?

A. I didn't have charge of it, and I don't know.

Q. Well, you said you counted it at that time.
A. Well, I counted some money, but I can't tell you how much it was.
394 Q. Well, approximately how much?
A. Well, I know that I counted, say, between fifty and sixty thousand dollars, but it wasn't in '45, all of it.
Q. When was that?
A. Some in the fall of '45 and some in the beginning of '46, or during '46.
Q. Now, what was done with that money?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. That is beyond the scope of the direct examination. I made no reference whatsoever during my examination to the expenditure of any cash, or any expenditure whatsoever by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
By Mr. McConnell: He made reference to our getting taxable income and I think I have a right to show by this witness on cross examination what she knows about it and whether or not any of that money ever stuck with Shotwell.
By the Court: You asked whether or not certain overage payments came to Shotwell, did you not?
By Mr. Lockley: I asked her whether she re-
395 ceived money. I didn't ask her whether she had done anything with it. And that is what they are now asking. They want to know if she knows what was done with the money that was in the box.
By the Court: You say you did not ask her what was done with the money in the box?
By Mr. Lockley: No, sir; I never asked her about the money in the box. They have opened this up on cross examination.
By the Court: Does that pertain to the overages you asked her about?
By Mr. Lockley: That is something that might be developed. At this point there is certainly no connection.
By the Court: Well, she may answer.
By Mr. O'Brien: Read the question.
(Question read.)
By the Witness:
A. Well, the money that I assisted in counting was put in the box and put in the company vault.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. All right. Who had the key to it?

A. Mr. Roeser and I had the key.

396 Q. So that no one could go to the box without your knowledge, isn't that true?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. Now what happened after you got the box and had custody of it, what happened to the money so far as you know?

A. As far as I know the money was given out to buy corn syrup.

Q. Who was it given to?

A. Well, I personally gave it to either Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, and that was all—or Mr. Roeser.

Q. Now, do you know of any money in that box beyond the amount of $60,000 that you have mentioned?

A. No, I don't.

Q. At any time?

A. No, I don't.

Q. When you had anything to do with it?

A. No, I do not.

Q. That would be the extent of the money you know anything about?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you have had charge of the liquidation of this company, have you not?

A. Yes.

397 Q. And the company has been sold, has it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have had to do with the winding up of its affairs?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And during all that time, since that time, has it come to your attention that there is any money arising out of any of these transactions in any of the Shotwell Company's accounts, affairs, properties, or any place else, to your knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Now, what was the situation with reference to Mr. Lubben's account at the end of 1947—or, 1946, I mean? Have you got your book and records there?

A. I haven't got the cards.

I made the statement that toward the end of '46, his financial condition was getting pretty precarious, and he was—

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, I can tell by the large balances that were open on the account.

Q. Now, what large balances were open on the account; what was the balance at the end of '46?

A. At the end of '46, he owed us $45,000.

398 Q. That's on invoiced goods, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And I think you were telling Mr. Lockley on his examination that you were picking that up in some subsequent year out of his commission account, is that right?

A. Then after that, we started applying the commissions he earned against that amount due us.

Q. Commissions on his brokerage account?

A. Yes, to reduce the amount owing us.

Q. At the end of 1946, what was this, a corporation, you were dealing with?

A. The General Confections, Incorporated.

Q. Did you have some authority to do that, to apply that individual credit of David Lubben to the General Confections?

A. Well, I was told it was discussed with him, and he agreed to it, and we proceeded.

Q. So that was sort of a settlement, or adjustment, some way, of working out the open account?

A. Some way to get the money that he owed us, yes.

Q. Did you know that his company was in bankruptcy at that time?

A. We didn't know about it until March of '48.

399 We had a notice of it.

Q. Now, so far as you are concerned, so far as you know, if I get this correctly, you put on—everything on the books which you had any knowledge of was owed to that company that you were working for?

A. Yes, I did.

400 Q. And you put on the books what you thought was owed from Eatsum, from Lubben, and you got that from the invoices themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you ever authorize anybody down at Eatsum, or did you ever authorize Mr. Lubben to mark up those invoices in any way?

A. Our invoices to him?

Q. Yes.
A. No.
Q. You were in charge of the bookkeeping, were you not?
A. Yes.
Q. You never told him he could go out and mark your invoice up, did you?
A. No.
By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mrs. Morrill, I am a little confused by your testimony on cross examination. At one point I understood you to tell Mr. O'Brien that you knew at the time you filed the—or signed the 1946 return that it didn't 401 include all of the income the corporation had received, is that right?
By Mr. McConnell: I object to him cross examining his own witness.
By the Court: Overruled.
By Mr. Lockley: I am just attempting to straighten the witness's story out.
By the Court: She may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I said at the end—the '46 corporation return I did not know of all the income.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Yes.
A. Well, I didn't know at that time about the unbilled shipments.
Q. Did you know about the—
A. I knew about those overages.
Q. You did know about the overages?
A. Well, I saw money come in the place and I knew it was coming from him.
Q. Well, did you also tell—I believe it was Mr. Kirby, that you didn't know anything about this additional money until after this investigation had begun?
402 A. Well, I am sorry. I am confused on that.
Q. Well, so am I. That's what I am trying to get straightened out.
A. The unbilled shipments I didn't know about until they told about the disclosure. But I knew about the overages, but not the total amount. You brought out the whole total amount. I didn't know about that.

Q. You knew about 60 or 70 thousand dollars?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. That's 60 or 70 thousand dollars that was in the cash box or the vault?

A. That's right, in the company vault.

Q. Did you know of any money that wasn't in the cash box or in the vault?

A. Well, I knew they had some money in the bank vault downtown, but I had no access to it and I didn't know how much it was.

Q. That was separate from the money that was kept at the factory?

A. Yes.

Q. Was any record kept of that?

A. I don't know.

403 Q. Did you keep a record of it?

A. The money in the vault downtown, no.

Q. No, any of the money?

A. I had a personal record of what they gave me to put in the box, yes.

Q. Where is that record now?

A. I don't have it.

Q. Where is it?

A. I didn't preserve it. I threw it away.

Q. Why?

A. Well, it was my own personal record.

Q. Who told you to?

A. Who told me to keep it?

Q. Did anybody tell you to destroy that record?

A. One day I was cleaning up. I asked Mr. Cain if it was of any value, and he said, "No, throw it away." It was nothing that he had told me to keep, or nothing he ever saw.

Q. You also said that you put on the books all of the receipts that you had any knowledge of. Did you mean that you also put the premium payments that you knew of on the books?

A. No, but I think you were referring to invoices.

Q. Oh, then you did put on the books, of course,
404 all of the invoices, everything that is typed on the invoice went on the books?

A. That's right.

Q. But anything that wasn't on the invoices was not on the books, is that right?

A. Well, that money was not on the books, no.

Q. Now, reference was also made to marking up copies of invoices. As I understood it, the customer gets the original of these invoices?

A. Yes.

Q. Just the original, that is all?

A. Yes.

Q. It is his, isn't it, from that point on?

A. That's right.

Q. Anything he wants to do with it, it's all right?

A. Yes.

Q. So he can mark it up, if he pleases, can't he?

A. Yes, he can.

By Mr. O'Brien: Not with Shotwell's authority.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, reference was also made to some markings on Government Exhibit for identification, No. 200, to the effect that it says, "Bankrupt." Did the Shotwell 405 Manufacturing Company receive everything but $656.56 of that account, despite the fact that Mr. Lubben was a bankrupt?

A. Well, everything on that card, yes.

Q. That's what I mean.

A. Yes.

Q. No more money is due and owing to the Shotwell Company?

A. Not according to the cards.

Q. Who was the biggest customer Shotwell Manufacturing Company had during this period of time, 1945 and 1946, do you know?

A. Well, you would have to ask me what type of customer.

Q. Dollar-wise, I mean.

A. Well, if you ask me, F. W. Woolworth.

Q. Did you ship directly to F. W. Woolworth?

A. Yes.

Q. And how about Mr. Lubben? Was he a pretty big customer?

A. He was the largest of that type of account.

Q. He was the largest?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

406 By the Court: Any further recross?

By Mr. McConnell: No.

By the Court: The witness now may be excused?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: The Government offers into evidence Government Exhibits Nos. 50-A, 51-A, 51-B, 52-A, 52-B, 53-A, 54-A, 56-A, 56-B, 57-A, 58-A, 59-A, 60-A, 60-B, 61-A, 61-B, 62-A, 64-A, 64-B, 65-A, 65-B, 65-C, 66-A, 66-B, 66-C, 67-A, 67-B, 68-A, 69-A, 70-A, 71-A, 72-A, 200, 200-A, and 200-B.

By Mr. McConnell: No objection.

By the Court: The Exhibits may be received.

Am I correctly informed, Mr. Lockley, that these invoices purport to relate to shipments to Eatsum Food Products Company that were reflected on the books of Shotwell?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, at least to the amount of the price shown on the invoice, typewritten.

By the Court: All right.

407 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked respectively Government's Exhibits 50-A, 51-A, 51-B, 52-A, 52-B, 53-A, 54-A, 56-A, 56-B, 57-A, 58-A, 59-A, 60-A, 60-B, 61-A, 61-B, 62-A, 64-A, 64-B, 65-A, 65-B, 65-C, 66-A, 66-B, 66-C, 67-A, 67-B, 68-A, 69-A, 70-A, 71-A, 72-A, 200, 200-A, and 200-B.)

408 DAVID G. LUBBEN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Your name is David G. Lubben and what is your address, Mr. Lubben?

A. 1890 Pacific, Santurci, San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Q. What is your present occupation?

A. I am engaged selling lighting fixtures and church supplies in Puerto Rico.

Q. And what was your occupation previously?

A. I was formerly in the candy business.

Q. Keep your voice up so the jurors in the last row there can hear you. When did you begin in the candy business?

A. In 1943, sir.

Q. And were you employed at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by whom?

A. I was employed by the Berry Biscuit Company.

Q. What was the name of the organization for which you were employed?

409 A. For a while by the Berry Biscuit Company and then later on a company was formed to handle the candy division, Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. And that was owned by the Berry Biscuit Company, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, after you had worked with the Eatsum Food Products Company, as a division of the Berry Biscuit Company, what did you do?

A. Later on I continued Eatsum Food Products Company as a sole ownership.

Q. You bought it from Berry Biscuit Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did you purchase it?

A. I believe it was April or May of 1944, maybe a little earlier.

Q. And how long did you remain as the sole owner of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Until June of 1945.

Q. And then what happened?

A. It became a partnership. I sold a fifty per cent interest in the company.

Q. Did the company name remain the Eatsum Food Products Company?

410 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who were you partners with?

A. William Giglio.

Q. And any other partners?

A. Yes, sir. He was a general partner, and on his side there was a Frank Livorsi and a Frank Loperfido, and I believe their wives.

And on my side was a Ronald Stone, and a Roy Hankermyer.

Q. You and Mr. Giglio were so-called general partners and the balance of these were limited partners?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they actually have any interest in the business, to your knowledge?

A. Well, I don't know about Mr. Giglio's—the partners on his side, whether they did or didn't, but this limited partnership, or this partnership, and these limited partners was something that went in at the very last minute, when we were in the lawyer's office, and I don't think that my—I am very sure that my people didn't have any interest in it. It was mine. I was fifty per cent owner of the business.

Q. Now, how long did you remain as a partner?

411 A. Until March 7th or 8th of 1946.

Q. What happened at that time?

A. I just left and they took certain assets and I took certain assets and I started General Confections, Inc.

Q. Was the partnership dissolved as of March 7th or 8th, 1946?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. It continued in existence, but without your presence, is that it?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know when it was formally dissolved?

A. No, sir; but I knew it was in existence for some months after. When it was dissolved I really don't know, or if it ever was dissolved.

Q. Now, when you withdrew from the partnership, on March 7th or 8th, 1946, then what did you do?

A. When I withdrew from the partnership I formed General Confections.

Q. And is that a corporation?

A. Yes, sir; it was a corporation.

Q. And who owned the stock?

A. Well, I owned most of the stock, sir, I mean the control of it, I would say. Later on we sold the stock 412 to some people who invested in it. Whether I had the control or not, I was the largest individual stockholder.

Q. And were you also an officer?

A. Yes, sir; I was the president.

Q. And who were the other officers?

A. I believe Roy Hankermyer was vice president and I believe a Mr. Perkins was secretary or treasurer. I am not quite sure of that, sir.

Q. And who is Mr. Hankermyer?

A. He is an uncle of mine, sir.

Q. Is he now living?

A. No, sir; he died last year.

Q. Now, did you remain as the president of General Confections throughout 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what eventually happened to that organization?

A. Well, March 8, 1948, General Confections went into receivership under the laws of the state of New Jersey.

Q. It went into receivership, not bankruptcy?

A. No. But to me it meant the same thing.

Q. Didn't have any money, is that it?

A. That's right, sir.

413 Q. Now, were there any other organizations in which you had a financial interest during 1946?

A. Yes, sir; there was a Saddle River Farms over in New Jersey. And on that property was my home, and it was twenty-six acres of land, and it had the factory on it, which later was used as a factory.

Q. And how about the General Confections, did it have any other interest?

414 A. Yes, sir; General Confections did, sir. It owned Reserve Trading Company, which was a wholly owned subsidiary of General Confections.

Q. That is, General Confections owned all of the stock in the Reserve Trading Company, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the nature of the business conducted by the Eatsum Food Products Company when you were the sole proprietor?

A. Well, we bought—we started out repacking merchandise. By that I mean we bought candy in bulk, and packaged it in smaller packages. And we made—later on in the single sole proprietorship we started to manufacture some candy.

Q. What sort of candies were these that you repackaged?

A. Well, almost any kind of candy you could buy in bulk, sir. But anything that would come along in bulk, sir.

Q. And did the business remain the same during the period of the partnership?

A. Yes, sir; very much the same, although we didn't do so much repackaging of candies. We bought that, we didn't manufacture. We sold most of those candies we 415 bought on the outside in bulk. We sold them in the cases that they came in.

Q. You manufactured some, and you sold some, more or less as a broker, is that the idea?

A. No, sir; we bought and sold the candy. We would pay for it, and then turn around and sell it on an invoice.

Q. You were a jobber, then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the nature of the business of General Confections; did that change any?

A. No, very much the same, sir.

Q. When you formed the General Confections Corporation, what did you contribute as the assets for your stock.

A. The machinery that I had when I left the partnership. What I had was the leasehold, and the machinery that was in the plant, and I contributed that, and I think —I don't remember how much money, but it was very little money.

Q. Now, during this period of 1945 and 1946, did you keep regular books of account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you keep them personally?

A. No, sir.

416 Q. Who kept them for you?

A. When you say in '45 and '46, you are talking about the partnership, sir?

Q. 1945. I understood that there was a sole proprietorship until March 8th, you said—till June 1st, pardon me. A sole proprietorship until June 1st, then there was the partnership until March, '46?

A. Yes, sir. Those books were kept under the direction of Miss Beatrice Feldman for part of the time, until—when I left the partnership on March 8, 1946, Miss Feldman didn't come with me. That was the name of the bookkeeper. She didn't come with me for three or four months, but her assistant did come. So her assistant took care of the books, I'd say, from March until, say, about August the first.

Q. What was the assistant's name?

A. Freda Strum.

Q. Freda Strum, is that her present name?

A. Yes, sir. I think her name was Seider.

Q. Now, are you familiar with what Miss Feldman's duties were at that time, in 1945 and 1946 when she worked for you?

A. Yes, sir. She was in charge of the office, manager, during the time I stated that she was in charge of the 417 books.

Q. was there anyone else who did any work on the books besides Miss Feldman and Miss Strum?

A. The accountant, sir.

Q. And who was that?

A. Mr. Bernard Bercu,

Q. Was he a certified public accountant?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of the work he performed?

A. He just went over all the figures to see whether they were true and correct and would issue a statement.

Q. Did he make an audit, and so forth, make out a profit and loss statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he prepare income tax returns and so forth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the defendants Byron Cain, Harold Sullivan and Frank Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point them out?

A. Well, the gentleman sitting in the back with the gray suit on is Mr. Frank Huebner and the gentleman sitting in front of him in the blue suit is Mr. Byron Cain, and the gentleman sitting with the gray hair and 418 glasses at the end of the table is Mr. Harold Sullivan.

Q. Indicating the defendants. When did you first meet them or any one of them?

A. In 1943, sir.

Q. Are you able to place the date any more definitely than that?

A. I think it was the latter part of 1943.

Q. Where was this?

A. It was at the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company here in Chicago.

Q. Who was there at the time?

A. Mr. Frank Huebner.

Q. Were the other defendants there?

A. I don't recall seeing them at that time, sir.

Q. Was there anyone else there besides just yourself and Mr. Huebner?

A. I think Mr. John P. Bond.

Q. Who is he?

A. Mr. Bond was a broker for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in Los Angeles and he was a broker for Eatsum Food Products or the Berry Biscuit Company in Los Angeles.

Q. Well, you had previously known Mr. Bond, had 419 you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened at this meeting with Mr. Bond and Mr. Huebner?

A. Well, I had asked Mr. Bond—he told me he represented the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in California and I asked him if I could—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to this conversation. So far as the Shotwell Company is concerned, the conversation with Mr. Bond—my client is not bound by that.

By the Court: Yes. It was in the presence of the other defendants.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did Mr. Huebner—was Mr. Huebner present during the course of this conversation?

A. That is correct.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Just tell what the conversation was while Mr. Huebner was present.

A. Well, Mr. Huebner—as I say, I had asked Mr. Bond to see if we couldn't get the Shotwell line of merchan-420 dise to sell in New York.

By Mr. McConnell: Now, wait a minute. Is this conversation at this time or are you telling something that happened prior to that time?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Don't give us any background. Just tell us what happened at this particular time.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out the conversation unless it shows who took part in the conversation.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, Mr. Bond introduced me to Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, tell us what was said.

A. I asked Mr. Huebner if I could represent the Shotwell Company in New York City as they, to my knowledge, had no representation.

Q. Yes.

A. And Mr. Huebner told me that they had very much oversold and they couldn't think of opening up any more territory because they were shipping all raw materials 421 and they couldn't produce enough candy as it was.

Then Mr. Huebner told me they were especially short of chocolate so he asked—Mr. Huebner, he asked me if I could get any chocolate, and I said, yes, I could, and if I could get them some chocolate, could I get the Shotwell Manufacturing line, and he said, well, he would see what he could do and I told Mr. Huebner that I can buy this chocolate and I can sell it to somebody else and I can make a profit and it would probably be ten cents a pound and maybe a little more but I will sell it to you for as near my cost as possible, or my cost, if you can arrange that I get the Shotwell line because I want to be a broker in New York City after the war is over and the Shotwell line was a very fine line as around this I felt I could build the nucleus of a good brokerage business, so if I could get the chocolate, would that help you?

He said he would check with Mr. Cain and he would let me know.

422 Q. All right. Did you subsequently sell some chocolate to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Do you remember how much?

A. I believe I sold them a shipment of 50,000 pounds, which would be a carload, and maybe two or three other shipments of lesser amounts, 30,000, 20,000. Maybe it was generally twenty.

Q. Was there a ceiling price on that product at that time?

A. Well, it was sold on an invoice, sir. It was debatable whether it would be ceiling or not. I don't remember the type of chocolate it was.

I mean, I bought the chocolate from somebody else and resold it. To the best of my knowledge it would be a legitimate ceiling, because I was a jobber.

Q. Did you ultimately become a broker for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir, I did. The Shotwell Company paid me for that chocolate and they gave me an allocation of so many marshmallows, and so many of their Hi-mac bars for the New York area.

Q. First, perhaps you better tell us again what a 423 broker is?

A. Well, in the candy business, a broker is a commissioned salesman. He takes an order and takes it from the customer and sends the order to the factory, and the factory ships the order to the customer, and the customer will pay directly to the factory, and then the factory gives you a commission.

In this case, it was five percent.

Q. You said that you had an allocation. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, I was allowed to sell 10,000 bars of Hi-macs and I believe one car of marshmallows every month. I could have sold many times that amount.

Q. Well, did you attempt to get that allocation increased then?

A. Oh, yes, continuously, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversations with any of the defendants about it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when, and with whom?

A. It was Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know when?

A. I believe it would be early in 1944. I asked him if they could increase my quota, or give me some of the 424 bulk candy that they were manufacturing.

Q. What did he say?

A. Well, Mr. Huebner did give me—

By Mr. McConnell: Where was this conversation? Can you fix a time and place?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you fix the place?

A. Yes, sir, I would say it was probably in April or May of 1944.

Q. And where?

A. In the Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant.

Q. In Chicago?

A. Yes, sir. I am sure it was there.

Q. Do you know who else was present besides yourself and Mr. Huebner, if anyone?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. All right. You may proceed with the conversation.

A. So, Mr. Huebner, as a result of this conversation, Mr. Huebner did give me six or seven shipments of so many—

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. Have we got a conversation, or are we telling—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Just tell what was said.

425 A. Well, I asked Mr. Huebner, I told him, I said, "You make a bulk item known as baby spice drops, or citrus drops which is sort of a gum drop", and I asked him if I couldn't get some of these, and he told me they were very, very much oversold, and he would see what he could do, and he did give me, or did sell us, rather, that is, Eatsum Food Products, the sole owner, seven or eight shipments, for which we paid him.

I wanted to increase it, and I would say some time in August or September, I had a conversation with Mr. Huebner. Whether it was in New York or Chicago, I don't remember, but I was almost always looking for more candy, because the demand was so great, and they couldn't do—they couldn't do anything for me on the bars or the marshmallows because the packaging machines just couldn't pack so much, and I believe they had Government contracts, but with bulk candy he could get, I asked would he do something, but he said it wouldn't pay him to make them; there was a very low ceiling price, and they were losing their shirt, and it just didn't pay to make the candy and sell it at that particular price.

426 I said, "Well, Mr. Huebner, why don't you increase the price?"

He says, "Well, you can't do that. You can't get the OPA to go along with it."

I said, "As far as I am concerned, you can increase the price," but no, he couldn't do it.

Then he said, "Would you be willing to pay a cash premium for the merchandise?

And I said I would and it was decided on then—

Q. Did you discuss how much?

A. Yes, sir. I believe it was 10 cents a pound.

Q. On what type of item?

A. On an item called, I believe it was called citrus drops or spice buttons or which, as I say, was what they call gum work. It was a jelly piece.

Q. Do you know what the ceiling price was on that particular item?

A. Yes, sir. I believe it was thirteen cents a pound or twelve and a half cents a pound, something like that.

Q. You say you entered into an agreement. Was there anything ever done as a result of that agreement?

427 A. He asked me if I would be willing to pay it.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to a characterization of this conversation or agreement.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, was there anything done as a result of the conversation?

By the Court: Are you relating anything further that took place in the conversation?

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner told me, well, he would have to check with Mr. Cain.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And was there any more conversation?

A. Well, later, sir, I got the merchandise.

Q. Well, did you discuss it any more with Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, I did, sir. Whether it was that day or the next day—he told me that I could get some merchandise and I would have to pay ten cents a pound in cash and I would be invoiced for the ceiling price on an invoice and then I was also, sir—he asked me how, what I intended to do with the merchandise and I told him I was going to repack it 428 or sell it and how would the—and the payments were to be made in cash, that is, the over the ceiling price.

Q. Now, during the period in 1945 from January 1st until, I believe, the 1st of June, you were the sole proprietor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you buy candy from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of an arrangement or what did you do with respect to paying for that candy?

A. Well, sir, when the invoices would come in for a shipment of candy, which would show the ceiling price, I would instruct my bookkeeper, Miss Feldman—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to what he had done there in New York with his bookkeeper. It is not binding on my people.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Never mind what you instructed your bookkeeper to do. What was done?

A. On the face of the invoice, we would add in pencil the amount of the per pound of the overage and as far 429 as I was concerned that was the cost of the merchandise.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It is not up to my client to account for what he did with his invoice in New York.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to the amount of the invoice price that was typewritten on the face of the invoice, how was that paid?

A. I beg your pardon, sir.

430 Q. How was the invoice price paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. By check, sir.

Q. Drawn to whom?

A. To the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now, with respect to the additional ten cents a pound over ceiling, or whatever, whatever the other amount was, how was that paid?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the general characterization of how it was paid. I think we are entitled to know the time and place, and so forth..

By the Court: Yes, I think the place and the time, and the circumstances should be related of when they made payments other than by checks. That is what you are interrogating about, is it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit for identificati. . No. 18-B, and 18-A. 18-A purports to be an original of an invoice of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, No. 6542623, dated November 27, 1944, sold to the Eatsum Food Products Company, 491 cases of citrus drops.

431 And the next one is Invoice No. C54388.

By the Court: What do you mean, the next one?

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 18-B. I am sorry.

Q. It is for 512 cases of citrus drops. Have you seen those exhibits before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they have some writing in pencil or ink on the bottom. What does that purport to be?

A. Well, this is the amount of the overage. The increase was the amount of the overage on this particular transaction.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I think we will object to items in 1944. It is beyond the scope of anything of the indictment or the bill of particulars.

By the Court: What is your position on that?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, it establishes a continuous course of conduct going to the willfulness of the defendants in the first part, and for the second, it was my intention to show that this began in 1944, certain 432 payments were in 1944, and the shipments were made in 1945, and it thereby ties in with the line here.

By the Court: I will overrule it.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I didn't hear you, sir.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you answer the question? Did you complete your answer, Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir. That was the writing in ink. The writing in ink is my writing, and the writing in pencil, sir, is the writing of the bookkeeper figuring the amount of the overage.

Q. The unit price of this is 13 cents a pound, and the amount of overage then is 50 cents a pound. Now, I show you an Eatsum Food Products Company receiving ticket, No. 12478, Government Exhibit 18-B, dated December 1, 1944 for 491 cartons of cocoa almond candy. Is there any relationship between Government Exhibit for identification 18-A, and 18-B?

A. Well, sir, it is the same number of cartons,
433 and it is the same number of pounds but there is two different types of candy.

Q. Do you know what kind of candy was actually shipped?

A. Yes, sir, cocoa almonds.

Q. Do you know why the invoice shows that it was citrus drops?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Will you explain it, sir?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner called me on the phone—

Q. When was this?

By Mr. McConnell: Was this transaction in 1944?

434 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. When was this?

A. I believe it might be 1944, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it. It is outside of the indictment.

By the Court: Well, I think you should more definitely indicate the time than 1944.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state more definitely the time?

A. Well, sir, I would say it was probably the first—maybe the latter days of November or the first days of December. It was just a few days before the shipment was made.

Q. He called you on the telephone or did you call him?

A. No, sir. Mr. Huebner called me.

Q. Did you recognize his voice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he identify himself?

A. Well, he probably says, "This is Frank." I mean, I knew him. I talked to him.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to what he probably said.

This is a serious business that we are in and we are 435 entitled not to have things guessed at.

By the Court: I suppose he is giving his best recollection. It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know Mr. Huebner's voice on the telephone?

A. It was Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. He told me that he had a substantial amount of cocoa almonds, which was an almond coated with some chocolate and then some cocoa on the side that were on the floor and I could have these almonds, or he would sell these almonds to me, but he would have to invoice them as citrus drops.

I says, "Why?"

And he said, "Well," he says, "they want a lot of money," or "a lot of cash money," and by shipping the citrus drops—with the 13 cent drop item—the price of the cocoa almonds, I believe, at that time was 48 cents—he would get that much additional cash.

So, I was agreeable and he shipped me 491 cases of citrus drops on this invoice and it states it was 491 cases of 436 citrus drops on the invoice at 13 cents a pound but in reality, it was 491 cases of cocoa almonds, which the weight would be the same, the only difference being instead of getting 10 cents a pound premium on the citrus drops, he got 50 cents a pound premium on the shipment, or the amount of $5,401.00.

437 Q. How was that paid?

A. The $5,401.00?

Q. Yes.

A. This was added to a recap sheet which we kept of these overcharges in the office, and it was paid in cash.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the summary and that it was paid in cash. I think we are entitled to have the time and place stated and what was paid where.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike that out.

By Mr. Lockley: I will connect it, if your Honor please.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 22-E which purports to be a yellow sheet of paper with some writing on it dated December 19, 1944. Have you seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is it?

A. It is sort of a recap sheet.

438 By the Court: Mr. Lockley, you have to stand near the witness, I appreciate, when you have an exhibit, but when you stand next to him when you interrogate him, he just talks to you and it is difficult for me to hear. As soon as you can, will you go back to the counsel table after showing him an exhibit?

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry.

By the Witness: I am sorry. I will speak louder. This is in my handwriting and it is a recap sheet showing certain payments of money or certain figures of money.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state the amount of money shown on that recap sheet?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. The document speaks for itself.

By the Court: Yes. You are calling for the contents of an exhibit.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state with respect to the payments which were made during the time around December, 1945 or 1944, rather, how much was paid to the defendants 439 at that time, in currency?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It assumes that the payments were made, and it assumes that the payments were made in currency and the Court has already ruled that we are entitled to have the time and place fixed of the transaction.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, did you ever hear of the ABC Candy Shippers?

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry.

Q. Did you ever hear of the ABC Candy Shippers?

A. I heard of them only by—that is, I have never heard of them. I have seen the name on a bill of lading.

Q. And in what connection did you see that name?

A. On a shipment of candy from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Was that a shipment which was sold to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with any one of the defendants with reference to—

440 By Mr. McConnell: I want to get it clear.

You mean, sold to Mr. Lubben personally?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that your answer, that it was sold to you personally, sir?

A. By selling—it was sold to me, but it wasn't shipped to me.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, sold to you or your company?

By the Witness: It was sold to Eatsum Food Products Company, I believe. If you give me the date, I believe I can tell you, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 146, which purports to be an original bill of lading from the ABC Candy Shippers to the Ace Forwarding Company in New York City. Have you seen that bill of lading before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

441 Q. And in what connection?

A. Well, it was—it seems to me when there was a shipment of merchandise by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company to the Ace Forwarding Company and which I paid for.

Q. Which you paid for?

A. Pardon me, sir. The General Confections, Inc.

By Mr. McConnell: I object. What was the occasion on which it was seen?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. I seen it several times.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the date of that?

By Mr. Lockley: I was just going to get it. This was dated 3/4/46.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to whether that was shipped to the sole proprietorship or the partnership of the corporation?

A. That was a deal of the corporation, sir, General Confections, Inc.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to whether or not the General Confections paid for that shipment?

442 By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. If they paid for that, there must be some better evidence than his general recollection.

By the Court: It may be sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, then, Mr. Lubben, do you have any recollection as to the time and place of the making of any payments to any one of the defendants?

By Mr. McConnell: That assumes that there were some.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, were there any payments?

A. Yes, sir, there were.

Q. Do you recall, do you have any recollection as to any particular time and place, any particular incident?

A. Any particular one instance?

Q. Which one incident?

A. Well, in regard to that shipment, I remember about the shipment you just asked me about to that forwarding company. I recall that instance.

Q. All right. Where was this?

A. Right here in Chicago.

443 Q. And when?

A. It was probably a day or two before that, the day the shipment went.

Q. And where? Where in Chicago? Can you be more specific?

A. I believe, sir, it was in the Sherman Hotel, in my room.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Well, what happened?

A. Well, Mr. Huebner told me that he could give me a lot of candy.

By the Court: He could give you what?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. On this conversation?

A. Yes.

Q. At this particular conversation?

A. Yes, sir. I think that was an unbilled shipment.

Q. All right. Keep your voice up.

A. Mr. Huebner told me that his partners, Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan were always looking for more money, a lot of cash.

He says, "If you can keep the cash coming, I can give you a lot of merchandise."

444 By Mr. Kirby: I object to that, if your Honor please. It is not binding on the defendant Sullivan.

By the Court: All right. That was understood. But it is only binding on defendant Huebner and not binding on defendant Sullivan.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to make the same objection as to the corporation.

By Mr. O'Brien: We all make the same objection.

By the Court: All right. That may be so understood.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you continue with the conversation, if there is any more?

A. He told me he could give me a lot of merchandise—but they had to have a lot of cash, that he wanted a lot of cash and instead of billing or taking the overage for ten cents a pound, that he could give me, I believe it was 80 or 100 thousand pounds of these citrus drops or spice drops or if I paid him 100 per cent cash—and by that I mean if I didn't—if I—there would be no invoice at all. Just 445 all cash. I was willing, so he sold them to me.

Q. And does that complete your recollection as to that particular conversation?

A. Well, sir, he wanted the money paid in advance on that shipment.

Q. I see.

A. And if I recall correctly, I went and borrowed the money on that shipment from somebody else and I paid him part of the profit.

446 By Mr. Kirby: I object. It is a pure guess, on his part, borrowing money from an unnamed person. It is a speculation. I move that it be stricken.

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear that.

By Mr. Kirby: I say, it is a pure speculation on his part. He says he guesses he got it from somebody else. If he did, he can specify when and where he got the money.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the same statement on the same ground. We are entitled to know when and where it was paid.

By the Court: He can testify as to the circumstances.

By Mr. Lockley: He has already testified, I think, to the place and time.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, he hasn't.

By Mr. McConnell: No, he hasn't. He is talking about a conversation.

By the Court: He can testify about the circumstances under which he paid him, paid Mr. Huebner this money.

447 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What were the circumstances under which you paid Mr. Huebner the money?

By the Court: And where?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Where and when?

A. Well, I believe the money was paid, sir, in the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and I believe—I feel very sure that it was paid by me to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know how much it was?

A. I think it was more than $19,000.

Q. And in what form was the money paid?

A. Currency.

Q. Was anyone else present at that time?

A. Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By the Court: All right. It is adjournment time. We will be in recess, Members of the jury, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

May I see counsel for a minute?

448 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Court: I think we will hear that motion at nine thirty. I don't like to disturb the trial with a New York lawyer coming down here. I told the jury it would be ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't know what train he is coming in on. He seemed to feel he would get here as early as he could.

I will call him tonight if he hasn't already left.

By the Court: I suppose he has already left New York. I thought I wouldn't interrupt the trial by hearing motions. At least if we could set it for nine thirty—

By Mr. Lockley: We can have him wait until Thursday and argue the motion at nine o'clock then, Thursday morning.

By the Court: We will talk it over. If you see him earlier, you can tell him.

By Mr. O'Brien: It makes no difference to us whether it is nine or ten o'clock, just so we know when he will be here.

449 By the Court: Suppose you come in at nine thirty tomorrow. He may be in here.

By Mr. McConnell: We will try to get his local counsel, and get him here at nine thirty.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above cause until 9:30 o'clock a.m. the following morning, being Wednesday, September 16, 1953.)

450-473 • • •

Chicago, Illinois
Wednesday, September 18, 1953
9:30 o'clock A.M.

474 By the Court: Well, if I understand Mr. O'Brien—and I suppose he speaks for other counsel—they are willing to stipulate that if Mr. Giglio was called to the stand he would claim his constitutional privilege and refuse to respond to the subpoena served on him by the government, and by the defendants, on the grounds that the production of the documents referred to therein would incriminate him.

Now, then, in light of that stipulation aren't you in a position to claim the same right, if you have it, to introduce secondary evidence as you would as if he were formally called and put on the stand?

By Mr. Lockley: If that is your Honor's ruling, I think—

By the Court: That isn't my ruling. That is my question.

Well, give it some thought, Mr. Lockley, and perhaps during the morning we can dispose of it.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I think, your Honor, if it would constitute notice to the Court that those records are unavailable because Mr. Giglio refuses to produce them on his constitutional grounds and your Honor recognizes 475 that there would be certain secondary evidence which would then be admissible, I think that would be enough.

By the Court: Well, I don't know that I am now asked to pass upon the admissibility of the secondary evidence. I gather the stipulation is merely to the effect that counsel for the defendant will stipulate—for the defendants will stipulate that if Mr. Giglio were called as a witness he would claim his constitutional privilege and that the Court, in light of that, should sustain his objection, and would sustain his objection. I suppose that would be part of the stipulation. Otherwise we wouldn't have any finality to the objection taken by Mr. Giglio.

By Mr. O'Brien: That may be considered as part of what I said.

By the Court: In other words, you recognize that the Court would be required to sustain his objection?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: In light of his claim of constitutional privilege. That is the stipulation that defendants' counsel will, or are now making, right?

476 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory with the government, your Honor.

By the Court: Very well.

I gather then that will dispose of your motion, Mr. Stryker. You may go back to New York.

By Mr. Stryker: I appreciate the opportunity of being here, sir. I was born in this town.

By the Court: All right. Call the jury.

Mr. Lockley, then I take it, so that the record may be clear, that a formal order may be entered quashing the subpoenas?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

477 By the Court: In view of your stipulation, so the records may reflect it.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I had a number of collateral things to talk about, but with the jury in here I will ask only one, whether your Honor has entered the order on the statements.

By the Court: I have signed it, but I didn't submit it to Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. O'Brien: I gave him a copy.

By the Court: I assume it is satisfactory and I signed it yesterday.

I may say that I have the two documents submitted to me by Mr. Lockley and I have looked them over and when it is convenient I will take it up with counsel.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well, sir. Could that be at the noon recess, Judge, so that we know what it is that we are dealing with?

By the Court: Yes, Well, there were some things I wanted to ask Mr. Lockley, because I am not entirely clear on them, we didn't discuss them. But I will take it up at the first opportunity.

478 Members of the jury, I regret that we had to keep you waiting, but we had some other matters to dispose of and that is why you were required to remain out in the ante room.

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, The United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Lubben, you were testifying yesterday that you bought candy from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and when you received an invoice you paid the amount shown thereon by check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

A. That is correct, sir.

479 Q. Now, you stated that you also paid an additional price over and above the amount of the invoice.

A. Yes, sir; I did.

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. I object to leading this witness as to this matter and characterizing whatever he did as payments. We are entitled to know what he did, when he did it, where it was, and the rest of it.

By the Court: I think it is a preliminary question. It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What I want to find out, Mr. Lubben, is what was your method of recording in your own books, what was your business practice. Now, when you received an invoice from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, what did you do with it?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to what the practice was.

By Mr. Lockley: I think he is entitled to show, your Honor, what the business practice was.

By the Court: Well, generally, he may state.

480 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Generally what was your practice?

A. When we got the invoice from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company it was entered in the book as a purchase and on the face of the invoice—this is during the sole proprietorship—we would enter the amount of the overage.

Q. Now, when it was entered in the purchase book in what amount was it entered?

481 A. To the amount—as far as I was concerned that was the cost of the merchandise, what they had billed us and the amount they got paid in cash, and that was the amount they paid—we paid for it.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to this witness giving explanations of what he thought about these transactions, and so forth. If he wants to show a bookkeeping transaction, there is a proper way of doing it, and how the entries are made, and so forth.

By the Court: Well, I overrule the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: That will be shown, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Never mind what you thought, Mr. Lubben. Just tell what you did, what your general practice was.

Now, with respect to the checks—or, first, other than the amounts that you recorded on the invoice in pencil, and so forth, did you keep any record of the overages?

A. Yes, sir, we did.

482 Q. And what sort of a record was that?

A. Well, Miss Feldman would keep a piece of paper on her desk, a sheet of paper, and she would keep the number of the invoice, or the date of the invoice, and the number, the item, and the amount of overage, that is, by so much per pound and the total, and we would list these as the various shipments came in, until it came time to make a cash payment. Then she would draw a line and total it.

Q. Was that total in pounds, or dollars, or how?

A. The total would be listing all the shipments and it would be in dollars.

Q. And was there any breakdown on the sheet, this so-called settlement sheet, or recap sheet, as you called it?

A. Yes, sir; we broke it down by items, the various items we purchased from them, and the various amounts we paid in overage for the different items.

Q. What type of items would appear on it?

A. Well, it would vary from time to time. But we bought citrus drops from Shotwell, baby spice drops—

483 By Mr. McConnell: I object to the transactions. He is talking about transactions.

By the Court: I didn't hear your objection.

By Mr. McConnell: If your Honor please, I am objecting to his saying "we bought this and we bought that", and so forth, from Shotwell. We are talking about, as I understand it—he is trying to lay a foundation of how these books were kept. Now this man is telling us about transactions. We have no time, we have no place, we have nothing on which we can check in cross examination.

By the Court: If you are going into the transactions you have got to indicate the time and the place and the circumsances.

By Mr. Lockley: We will go into everyone of them, your Honor. I am just trying to lay a general foundation now.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. When the time came for a settlement what was 484 your practice with respect to drawing checks?

A. Well, Miss Feldman would give me the total on the amount of the overages, the various overages, she would give me the total. Then I would make a cash disbursement slip, which was a printed form with the name —with the name of Shotwell on it, and the date, and what it was for. Then Miss Feldman would draw a check for this amount of money, and I would sign the check, and the check would be cashed, and I would give the money to Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out all about the transaction with Huebner, and naming Shotwell, and so forth. If that was done, we are entitled to the documents. We are entitled to—

By the Court: I think unless you get the time and place it may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir. I will connect it up right now.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 28-A, which is headed Shotwell Manufacturing Company. It has some entries called 485 spice buttons, gum drops, dates 1944 and 1945, amounts in pounds, and a figure of 10,849 in pencil at the bottom. Have you seen that before?

486 By Mr. McConnell: Now, I object.

By the Witness:

A. Yes; I have.

By Mr. McConnell: He has the document and read the contents.

By the Court: Yes, you shouldn't read the contents to the jury before it is offered in evidence. Have him identify it and lay the foundation, and make the offer.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask that the jury be instructed to disregard that?

By the Court: Yes, what Lockley said as to the contents of the document, the jury is instructed to disregard.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Have you seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. What is it?

A. This is a recap showing the amount of $10,849.00 that was given to Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. McConnell: I object and move to strike it.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you know when it was given to Mr. Huebner?
487 By Mr. Lockley: I am going to tie it up.
By the Court: Wait a minute. You can't read the contents of the document; unless you lay a foundation for it and then offer it in evidence, you can read it.
By Mr. Lockley: All right.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, who prepared that?
A. Miss Feldman, sir.
Q. And when?
By the Court: If it is one of the original records of the office, I suppose you can approach it the way you offer any document.
By the Witness:
A. On or about January 19, 1945.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. And was that a record kept by you in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it a true and correct report?
A. It is, sir.
Q. Was it a part of your business practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
488 Q. All right. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 27, purporting to be a check for cash and ask if you have seen that before.
A. Yes, sir; I have. This check is—
By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute.
By the Court: You answer the question.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Is that your signature appearing thereon?
A. It is, sir.
Q. Now, turn it over. Whose signature is on the back, if any?
A. Freda Seider.
Q. Who is she?
A. Miss Feldman's assistant.
Q. What did she do?
A. She went to the bank and cashed it. We had given her that privilege, that permission.

Q. When she cashed it what did she do with the money?
A. She brought the money back and gave it to me.
Q. What did you do with it?
By Mr. Kirby: I object unless this man remembers that on that certain morning or afternoon she went out and 489 did that. Is that what he is testifying to, or as to a practice, or as to facts?
By the Witness:
A. I remembered this one, sir.
By the Court: I think, Mr. Lockley, we would get along better if you would lay a foundation for the document, if that is what you intend to do, and then upon laying a foundation offer it in evidence. Otherwise you are indirectly putting into evidence contents of the written instrument which isn't as yet in evidence.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Is that your check?
A. It is, sir.
490 Q. Was that check kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir; it was.
Q. And did it clear through the bank?
A. Yes.
Q. And then did it come back to you?
A. It came back to the company, sir, with all of the checks. But I remember this one.
Q. Did you say what you had done with the cash?
A. I gave the cash to Mr. Huebner. And I remember it distinctly, sir, because—
By Mr. Kirby: I object.
By Mr. McConnell: Object and move to strike it out.
By the Court: Unless you connect it up now. Let's get the time and place.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Where?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner in New York. And I remember the transaction because if you look on the back of that check—
By Mr. Kirby: I except to that.
By the Witness: It was broken down.
By Mr. McConnell: We are entitled to have him
491 ask the witness where it took place and who was there, and all the rest of it so that we can properly cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You say it was in New York City?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. January 19, 1945.

Q. And who was there?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. And what happened?

By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, the defendant Harold Sullivan, not having been there, there is no way he can meet this type of proof, and I ask that you instruct the jury that it must be disregarded so far as the defendant, Harold Sullivan, is concerned.

By the Court: I will instruct the jury that it is only binding upon the defendant Huebner in that he was the only defendant alleged to be there, and what took place is only binding—or relevant, rather, I should say to the defendant—competent as to the defendant Huebner.

492 By Mr. Kirby: That's right. I am glad to have the Court's instruction, because I don't want the jury to think there is anything improper in making that type of objection.

493 By the Court: It is perfectly proper for you to make that type of objection.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: We still don't know where this transaction took place.

By Mr. Lockley: In New York.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to fix it any more definitely than that?

A. Yes, sir. I am very sure it was in the Pennsylvania Hotel.

Q. Do you know who was present, if anyone, besides Huebner and yourself?

A. Yes, sir; at that time Mr. Sullivan was there and Mr. Cain was there.

Q. And do you recall whether there was any conversation at that time?

A. Well, I know there was a conversation. There were several conversations there. One conversation with Mr. Huebner.

Q. Was this in the presence of the other defendants?

A. This one was not.

Q. What was the conversation?

494 A. This conversation, sir—

By Mr. Kirby: May that conversation, in view of its having been in the absence of the defendants Cain and Sullivan be—

By the Court: If Mr. Huebner was there alone that conversation is competent only as to him.

By the Witness:

A. —because, sir, there was three five-hundred-dollar bills in the amount I gave Mr. Huebner. If you examine the reverse of the check, the bank wrote how they broke the money down and Mr. Huebner was very insistent that in the future we don't bring any bills larger than a hundred.

By Mr. McConnell: Can't we have conversation from this witness? He says insistent, and this and that.

By the Court: Tell us what was said.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Huebner told me not to bring any more big bills, "Don't bring them any larger than hundreds and preferably in twenties."

By Mr. Lockley: Now, I offer Government's Exhibit 27, consisting of Eatsum Food Company check; 27-A, 495 consisting of a settlement sheet into evidence at this time.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I offer you Government's Exhibit for identification—

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. Can we see the document, please.

By Mr. Lockley: Sorry.

(Document shown to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 162—

By Mr. O'Brien: Wait till we look at it.

By the Court: Wait a little, counsel, until defendants' counsel have had an opportunity to look at the exhibits.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell: I object to this on behalf of the corporation, if the Court please, first, that there is no proper foundation for this. It is not a bookkeeping record.

By the Court: Which exhibit are you talking about?

496 By Mr. McConnell: I am talking now about 27-A, if the Court please. It purports to be a typed memorandum of some kind. It has no indication of being a bookkeeping record at all and refers to transactions in 1944, which are outside the period of this indictment.

As to the check, I object to it as not binding upon the corporation.

By the Court: May I see it, please.

I am not clear as to this check. Did you say that you paid the cash and paid to Mr. Huebner this money?

497 By the Witness:

A. I did, sir.

By the Court: The $10,849.00.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, I did.

By the Court: It may be received in evidence.

I will receive the memo in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 27 and 27-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 162 and ask you if you have seen that before?

498 By the Court: So that we can get this straight, Mr. Lockley, this $19,000.00 that he contends he paid Huebner, is that the same $19,000.00 that you referred to yesterday?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

By the Court: This is another transaction?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, this is my weekly expense account.

By Mr. McConnell: On that statement I move to strike all that evidence yesterday because that transaction showed —taking it at its face value—showed a transaction in 1944, consummated by the payment of cash, not embraced in the indictment, and has nothing to do with this lawsuit at all.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, this is my weekly expense account.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, was it kept in the ordinary course of business?

499 A. Yes, sir; it is in my handwriting.

Q. And was that kept as a part of the regular books and records of your company?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. It is, sir.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it for the same reason as I did the others, and for the further reason that this shows on its face that it has been changed, January 20, 1944 to '45. It shows an alteration right on the face of the document.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer it in evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, perhaps you had better interrogate the witness about the date.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I call your attention to the entry on the upper righthand side, January 20, 1944. The '44 is crossed out and '45 is written over it. Do you have 500 any recollection as to how that happened?

A. Yes, sir; I do. Because December 31st is the end of the year and from force of habit I would keep on writing '44 and maybe for a week or two, until 1945. I mean, that's happened, sir.

Q. Do you know whether—

A. It is my handwriting.

Q. Do you know whether that was prepared in '44 or '45?

A. It was prepared in 1945, sir.

Q. Are there any other entries on there that would indicate that it was made in 1945?

A. Yes, sir; because it is from January 4th to January 20th, written over here on the side.

Q. And does it have the word forty-five alongside it?

A. No, sir; just the date, January 20. But I know it was in 1945.

Q. Are there any other entries on it that would indicate the date?

A. Sir, I think if you check with the florist shop in the Hotel Pennsylvania that I sent flowers to Mrs. Huebner and Mrs. Cain and Mrs. Sullivan on this date.

501 By Mr. McConnell: I object to that, if he sent flowers to somebody.

By the Witness:

A. So I know it was in '45.

By Mr. McConnell: There is no question pending.

By the Court: Yes, that may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley: Now, I offer it in evidence, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: I make the further objection that it is a self-serving document in the sense that Mr. Lubben has written up there a lot of different things which he wants to say he did.

By the Court: Well, I receive the document in evidence. I think sufficient foundation has been laid. If it isn't relevant I will entertain a motion to strike.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 162.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I call your attention to the 502 fact that this Government's Exhibit No. 27 is dated January 19, 1945. Are you able to state from the examination of your weekly expense account what you did on January 19, 1945?

A. Yes, sir. I had dinner that night with the Huebners, the Sullivans—

Mr. O'Brien: I object to that. The witness—

By the Witness:

A. —at Toots Shor's.

503 By Mr. O'Brien: The witness' recollection has not been shown to need refreshing.

By the Court: If he remembers, he may state what he remembers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Perhaps he doesn't have to have his recollection refreshed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you remember, without reference to the travel expense account, what you did on that night; would you remember without that expense account?

A. No, sir, I couldn't remember that—back that far. I remember now after looking at it, I can remember the night.

Q. After seeing that expense account, is your memory refreshed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, are you able to state what you did on that night?

A. Yes, sir; we went to Toots Shor's for dinner.

Q. Who?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Cain, and the Sullivans, and I believe the Berry's, and Mr. Hankermyer and later on, we went to a place called Sammy's in the Bowery, and 504 then the Diamond Horseshoe which was a night club.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to object and ask that it be stricken. It is not a crime to go out with Lubben, although we now regret it.

By Mr. Lockley: I think that ties it up, your Honor. I am merely showing that on January 19th, which is the date of this check to cash.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you a check, Government Exhibit No. 28, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Is that your signature on the bottom?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a check which was issued by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it cleared through the bank?

A. It was.

Q. Did it come back to you thereafter?

A. It did, sir.

By the Court: May I see Government Exhibit 27,
505 please?

(Document harded to the Court.)

By Mr. McConnell: The Corporation makes the same objection to this as it did to the other documents.

By Mr. O'Brien: May we have a standing objection to all the documents of this sort, Judge?

By the Court: No, I don't think I can entertain a standing objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer this check into evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibit 28.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Exhibit 28, a check to cash in the amount of $6,183.00. You say that is your signature on the bottom?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with that check after you had it signed?

506 A. Miss Seider went to the bank and cashed it.

Q. And did you receive the money?

A. Yes, sir; I did. She came back and gave it to me.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. And do you know where?

A. Sir, my memory serves me, but I think it was in Chicago.

If you could refresh my memory—

By the Court: Louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. If you could refresh my memory. I see you have my expense voucher for that week. I mean, I feel I was in Chicago, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You have no independent recollection at this moment?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then I show you the Government Exhibit for identification 163 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir; I have. I wrote it.

Q. Was this the expense voucher which you previ-

507 ously testified was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this true and correct at the time you made it?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it part of your business records at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: The same objection to this document as to the other document.

By the Court: What exhibit number, please?

By Mr. Lockley: 163, your Honor. I offer it in evidence.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 163.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it on the further ground, if the Court please, that it may be proper to refresh his recollection, that perhaps after examining it, he can state the time, but I don't think it it proper to be intro-508 duced, and to receive the document in evidence.

By the Court: Well, he has laid sufficient foundation for it. I don't know the purpose for which counsel is going to make use of it.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, it corroborates the witness' testimony as to where he was from time to time in company with the defendants, or one or more of them, and shows that there was the opportunity to make the payments in cash which he has referred to.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

509 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now I show you Government Exhibit No. 27 which has been admitted in evidence. That is a check in the amount of $10,849?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with that money after you received it from Miss Seider?

A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. Where was that?

By Mr. Kirby: I object. He has already said that.

By the Witness:

A. I gave that to him at the Pennsylvania Hotel.

By Mr. Kirby: I object, your Honor. This has been gone over.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you remember any conversation before that?

By Mr. Kirby: I object.

By the Court: Let us get it straight, Mr. Lockley. Are you now referring to the incident of January, 1945, at the Pennsylvania Hotel?

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor. I picked up the wrong check.

510 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 28, which is a check dated February 6th for $6,183.00. Now, do you have any recollection as to what you did with that money?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that question. Why doesn't he ask him what he did with it?

By the Court: He said he brought the check to Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, do you recall any conversation at that time?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What was it?

By Mr. McConnell: I object unless he states who was present.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Huebner was present.

Q. Do you remember about what time it was?

A. About February 7th. I would cash the check in New York, and I took the train that day.

Q. Was there anybody else present?

511 A. No.

Q. What was the conversation?

A. Mr. Huebner did take the money.

By Mr. Kirby: I object, if your Honor please.

By Mr. Lockley: Not that he took the money, but—

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that the jury be instructed that this conversation is not binding upon the defendant Sullivan.

By the Court: The jury will understand that when the witness says only one of the defendants was present when he had a conversation with that defendant, the testimony is competent only as to that defendant.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the conversation?

A. Mr. Huebner told me if I would keep the cash money rolling, and keep it coming in fast, that he could give me a lot of merchandise; that Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Cain were very hungry for cash, and I heard that many, many times.

512 By Mr. Kirby: I move to strike what he heard many, many times.

By the Court: That may be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, that evidence is surely incompetent as against defendant Sullivan: Surely the jury should be instructed that it should not be considered against the defendant Sullivan.

By the Court: I have so stated to the jury every time you asked me to state it. If I have overlooked it, I so instruct them now.

By Mr. Kirby: When Mr. O'Brien asked a question about a standing objection, I thought your Honor wanted us to make an objection each time the question was raised.

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien wanted a standing objection, as to these exhibits. I didn't think it was practical.

513 Any time you wanted me to instruct the jury with reference to conversations had with only one defendant as not being competent with the others, I have responded every time.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir, but I am making an objection to this particular occasion.

By the Court: I will make a blanket ruling. I will be happy to do so if you wish.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By the Court: The jury will understand that if Mr. Lubben relates conversation as to a single defendant and that defendant alone is present, that such a conversation is competent evidence only as to such defendant and it will be disregarded in so far as the other defendants.

By Mr. Kirby: And it is not necessary for me to repeat that objection?

By the Court: No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor. I appreciate it.

By Mr. Lockley:

514 Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 40 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir. It is my signature.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 40-A and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have. It is—yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that exhibit kept by you in the ordinary course of your business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it a part of your business records?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time you made it?
A. It was, sir.
Q. With respect to Exhibit No. 40, is that also a part of your business records?
A. Which was No. 40?
By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute. We are still looking at the first one.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to these documents
515 on the same grounds as to the others. No proper foundation and they are not binding on the corporation.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to them too, your Honor, on the same grounds and also I would like to ask whether the offer includes the notations on the back of the check. Exhibit what? What is this, sir?
By Mr. Lockley: No. 40.
By Mr. O'Brien: Exhibit 40.
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, those notations are apparently made in the ordinary course of business and I will establish that from the witness.
By the Court: I don't think you have established that notations were made.
By Mr. Lockley: I have not, your Honor. I will do so.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Directing your attention to the reverse of Government's Exhibit No. 40, do you know what the figures thereon purport to be? Have you seen those before?
A. No, sir, I haven't seen them.
516 Q. Were they made by you?
A. No, sir, they weren't.
Q. Do you know who made them?
A. Yes, sir. This is the bank teller that would make this. This shows I got ten packages—517 By Mr. McConnell: Wait. He is talking about something when he wasn't there.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Were you present there at the time?
A. No, sir.
By the Court: That is not competent then.
By Mr. Lockley: As to the figures on the reverse, sir, the Government does not offer them in evidence. The balance of the check is offered.
By the Court: I will receive them in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I will ask to have the jury instructed to disregard the figures on the back of the check.

By the Court: The jury understands that there are some notations on the back of this check and other than the endorsement, the other figures are not in evidence. The other data is not in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: May we have the comment about 518 the bank teller stricken?

By the Court: Very good. It may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 40-A and ask you what that is.

A. This is a request for a cash—for a check to be written in that amount, $18,000.00 for cash and charged to Shotwell.

Q. On what date?

A. On March 6, 1945.

Q. And I show you check dated March 6, 1945, and ask you if that has any relation to the cash authorization slip.

A. Yes, sir. Here it is (indicating). It is the check that was written at my request.

Q. Now, when this check was cashed, did you receive the $18,000.00?

A. I did, sir.

Q. And what did you do with it?

A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. And where?

A. I don't recall, sir, at the moment.

Q. Do you have anything that would refresh your recollection?

519 A. Yes, sir, my voucher.

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 164 and ask you if that is the expense voucher you refer to.

A. Yes, sir, it is, sir. It is March—it is, sir. This is the expense voucher.

By Mr. McConnell: The same objection, if the Court please, that I made to the other documents.

By the Court: I don't know that you have laid any foundation for it. You have just asked if it is an expense voucher. You haven't asked if it was made out in the ordinary course of business.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was this expense account kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it part of your books and records?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time you made it?

A. It was, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 40-A.)

520 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If you examine it, will it refresh your recollection?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the time and place of payment of this cash?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was it?

A. It was in New York that I gave Mr. Huebner this money.

Q. And who was present at the time?

A. I believe on this time—to the best of my recollection it was Byron Cain who was present this time, sir.

Q. Where was it in New York?

A. I think it was the Gotham Hotel.

By Mr. McConnell: Excuse me. It is not plain to me—he said he had no memory of it, and then you asked him to refresh his memory from that document, is that right? Is there anything about the Gotham Hotel in that document?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is there anything about the Gotham Hotel on 521 your expense account?

A. No, sir, but after March—

By Mr. McConnell: There is nothing about Byron Cain on there?

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. I remember.

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that that portion of the testimony be stricken. First he said he doesn't know and then he.

is shown the document, and then he remembers. I ask that that be stricken and the jury be instructed to disregard it.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have an independent recollection of this expense account sheet now that you have seen it?

A. Yes, sir, I have a recollection.

Q. Now speak up, Mr. Lubben. Did you have any conversation at the time?

A. I had a conversation, sir, with Mr. Huebner.

Q. Was there anybody else present?

A. Well, when I would come into a room, why, they would make it—

By Mr. McConnell: Can't he answer the question
522 yes or no?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Answer the question specifically, instead of just generally. On this specific occasion, do you have any present recollection of what happened?

A. Yes, sir. When I gave the money to Mr. Huebner, he counted it out in three piles on the bed, and said, "This one is for Harold, and this one for Byron, and this one for me." And after he had it counted out, he would skim off a little off of each pile, maybe a couple of hundred, and put it in the little pocket, in his watch pocket, and say, "This is for the horses", and "Keep your mouth shut", and "Don't tell them about this."

523 Q. Don't tell him about what?

A. That he was taking off a few hundred off of each pile. He would take one pile and put it in one pocket and he would take another pile and put it in another pocket and another pile in another pocket and the few hundred he took off each pile, he took it and put it in another pocket.

By Mr. McConnell: Was Mr. Cain present?

By the Witness: Mr. Cain was not present when he divided the money.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. When the money was counted, there was just you and Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened after that?

By Mr. Kirby: Was this at the Gotham Hotel?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, in the Gotham Hotel.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that your recollection?

A. To the best of my recollection, sir, it was in the Gotham Hotel. I can't remember any specific conversation, any definite words that we had.

Q. Do you remember what happened?

524 A. Well, we walked out into the room and they would buy me a drink or something and I would be a fair-haired boy.

Q. What sort of a room was this?

A. The suite, sir.

Q. Was it a separate bedroom?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. What was the other room, was it another bedroom?

A. Well, sometimes they would have two bedrooms, sir, and sometimes only one bedroom but they always had a great big parlor in the Gotham Hotel.

Q. A parlor?

A. With a fireplace and tables, very luxurious.

Q. Now, you are referring specifically to the time when this $18,000.00 was paid, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit 40-B and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And whose signature is that on the bottom?

A. Beatrice Feldman.

Q. Do you remember the signature?

A. I do, sir.

525 Q. Did she have authority to write checks?

A. She did, sir.

Q. Was that a check which was written in the ordinary course of your business?

A. Yes, sir. She would write this check after I gave her the authority to write it.

Q. Was the check cleared through the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence this check, with the exception of the penciled notations.

By the Court: You are eliminating the penciled notations on the back?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Governments' Exhibit 40-B.)

526 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I offer you Government's Exhibit for identification 40-C, and ask you if you have seen this before.

A. Yes, sir. This is the cash disbursement order.

Q. Never mind. Did you see it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that your signature on the bottom?

A. It is.

Q. Is this a record which is kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it a part of your business records?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Could I see it just a moment?

By Mr. Kirby: Let us see No. 40-C too. May we see 40-C, please?

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection as to 527 the others. It is not binding upon my client.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 40-C.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you cash authorization slip dated March 28, 1945, and ask you what that represents?

A. This is a request for Miss Feldman to draw a cash check for $15,000 to be cashed and given to Shotwell.

Q. Does the word "Shotwell" appear on them?

A. Yes, sir, right there (indicating).

Q. I now show you a check dated March 28, 1945, Government's Exhibit 40-B in the amount of $15,000 and ask you if that is the check referred to in that cash authorization slip?

A. It is.

Q. Was that check cashed?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. By Frieda Seider.

528 Q. She was your secretary or bookkeeper?

A. She was assistant bookkeeper, assistant to Miss Feldman.

Q. What did she do with the money?

A. She brought the money back and gave it to me.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. When?

A. I probably gave it to him on March 28th or 29th. If it was in New York, I gave it to him the same day. If it was in Chicago, it was the next day.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to where you were at the time?

A. No, sir. If you have any document for my refreshment, I would appreciate it.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 165. You have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. That is an expense voucher.

Q. Now is that kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is, sir.

529 Q. Is it written by you?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time you made it?

A. It is.

Q. Was it part of your books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it on behalf of the corporation on the ground that it is not binding. It is a self-serving document.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer it in evidence.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 165.)

530 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And now I show you Government's Exhibit No. 165 and ask you if you can refresh your recollection from that document as to where you were on or about March 28th.

A. On March 28 I left New York for Chicago.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to where you paid the money?

A. Yes, sir. At the--it was paid in Chicago, sir.

Q. Do you recall any more definitely then that or is that your best recollection?

A. No, sir. It would be in the Sherman Hotel.

Q. At the Sherman Hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that where you were staying at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was present at the time you paid the money?

A. Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. Anybody else?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall any conversation at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

531 A. Well, we got Mr. Huebner—Mr. Huebner would say, "Dave," Mr. Huebner said, "Dave, just keep this money rolling. I can do a lot for you, but I can't give you merchandise if you don't keep these cash payments coming in, and the faster you bring the cash in, the more I can ship. These people"—I think he said, "Byron and Harold"—he said, "Are very hungry for cash and they keep checking with me to see if you are making your cash payments."

And then he would go through the ritual of dividing the money on the bed, three different piles, and skimming some off the top for the race horses.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 40-D; and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the number of it?

By Mr. Lockley: 40-D.

By the Court: That is the check, isn't it. That has been received, 40-B?

By Mr. Lockley: A, B, C, D.

By the Court: What?

By Mr. Lockley: A, B, C, D.

532 By the Court: Oh, I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you remember this document?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Do you recognize the signature on the bottom?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Whose is it?

A. Beatrice Feldman.

533 Q. She was your bookkeeper at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or office manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this check written in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it cleared through the bank?

A. It was, sir.

Q. After which it was returned to you?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the check so far as the corporation is concerned. It is not binding on the corporation. On the showing made here on the check, dividing it up in three piles and part of it going to the horses, I don't know where the corporation figures in on that kind of a thing. It is not connected up with the corporation.

By the Court: All right. I will receive the check in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 40-D.)

534 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, did you ever purchase anything from Mr. Huebner in his individual capacity?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked him if he did—

By the Court: The objection is overruled. He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. You mean did I buy something from Mr. Huebner as an individual?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That is right.

A. No, sir.

Q. From Mr. Cain?
A. No, sir.
Q. From Mr. Sullivan?
A. No, sir.
Q. You had transactions with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Do you know what position those gentlemen had with that company?
A. Sir, Mr. Cain was the president and Mr. Harold Sullivan was vice president and I knew Frenk Huebner was the general manager.
535 Q. Now, when you purchased items and paid for them by check and by cash, were you purchasing items that were manufactured by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. I was, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the conclusion and characterizations, if the Court please. Whatever arrangements he wants to show, he can interrogate him about it, without the conclusions and characterizations.
By the Court: The answer may stand.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. The shipments you received, were they billed on the billhead of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
By Mr. McConnell: Well, the documents speak for themselves.
By the Witness:
A. They were certainly unbilled.
By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear you, Mr. McConnell.
By Mr. McConnell: The documents will speak for themselves if they were billed on billheads.
536 By the Court: All right, I will sustain the objection.
537 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Exhibit 40-D in evidence, which is a check for $22,104.13, and ask you what was done with that check?
A. This check was cashed, sir.
Q. By whom?
A. By Frieda Seider.
Q. She was your assistant office manager at the time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what did she do with the money?
A. She brought it back to the office and I got it.

Q. What did you do with it?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.
Q. Was anybody else present at the time?
A. Well, not in the room where we counted the money, not where we counted the money out on the bed. Occasionally, sir—

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the description of what "occasionally" is.

By Mr. McConnell: We have no time fixed.

By Mr. Kirby: We don't know what city it is in.

538 By the Court: You all speak at one time, and I can't follow you.

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you recall when this occurred?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When?
A. On or about May 3rd.
Q. What year?
A. 1945.
Q. Do you remember where?
A. I don't remember exactly, sir, but I think this amount—I am not sure—was paid in New York.
Q. Is there anything that would help your recollection?
A. Yes, sir. My expense voucher.
Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification 166, and ask you if that is your expense voucher?
A. It is.
Q. Was that prepared by you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it in your handwriting?
A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it kept in the ordinary course of business?

539 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it part of your books and records of your business?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time you made it?
A. It was, sir.

By the Court: Well, I think we will take our morning recess now, members of the jury. We will suspend for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

By the Court: You were offering Government Exhibit 156, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: 166, your Honor.

By the Court: Oh, 166.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 166.)

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, was 40-D admitted in evidence?

By the Court: 40-D was admitted in evidence.

540 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 43, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Is that your signature?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Is that the record kept in the ordinary course of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that clear through the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then it was returned to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time you made it?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government Exhibit 43.

541 By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as not binding upon the corporation.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 43.)

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the number of that?

By Mr. Lockley: 43.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, the check.

By Mr. Lockley: 3665..

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Mr. Lubben, with respect to Government's Exhibit 40-D, a check for $22,124.13, what did you do with that check after you signed it?

A. I didn't sign this check.
Q. Who signed it?
A. Beatrice Feldman did, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: He has already testified about that.
By the Court: Yes, according to by recollection.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. And who cashed it?
A. Freda Seider.
542 Q. Did she give the money to you?
A. It was brought back to the office and I got the money, yes, sir.
Q. Do you know what you did with it?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: He has already testified.
By Mr. Lockley: Not on this check, Mr. O'Brien.
By Mr. O'Brien: On 40-D.
By Mr. McConnell: What part are you going to divide?
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 40-D in the amount of $22,124.13. It is dated March 3, 1945.
A. May 3rd.
Q. Does that bear your signature?
A. It does, sir.
Q. What did you do with it after you signed it?
A. After I signed it, Miss Freda Seider took it to the bank and cashed it and brought the cash back.
Q. What did you do with the cash?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.
Q. Now I call your attention to the fact that those 543 checks both bear date of May 3, 1945. Do you have any recollection as to why two checks were drawn at that time?
A. Yes, sir. My recollection is that we had already prepared the recap which showed the $22,124.13 and that another shipment came along and I went ahead and paid the overcharge on that, as long as I was going to pay the other one and I got even Stephen, I got evened up.
544 Q. You testified then that you paid the $22,000 check in Chicago?
A. No, sir. I think I said New York, sir, but I may be wrong. I am not sure whether I paid it in Chicago or New York.
Q. Do you have any recollection as to where it was?

A. Sir, I see you have my expense voucher, and that would help me recollect.

Q. Would that refresh your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that show where you were on May 3rd?

A. Yes, sir. On May 3rd I left New York for Chicago, and stayed at the Sherman Hotel.

Q. Don't testify from this. I just wanted to know if you knew. Does that refresh your recollection?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to anything concerning these particular payments?

A. Well, nothing more specific than the fact that the money—Mr. Huebner came in to the Sherman Hotel, and the money was divided up on the bed, and he 545 would go to one pile, "This is for Harold", and "This is for Byron", and "This is for me."

Q. Now, I show you Government Exhibit for identification—

By Mr. McConnell: Is this a different transaction than the one he has already testified to?

By Mr. O'Brien: It is the same one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is this the same transaction?

A. What?

Q. Let me ask you this: There were two checks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they paid at separate times in separate amounts?

A. No. It was at the same time, sir.

Q. The lump sum was paid all at the same time?

A. The lump sum, yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. And your testimony as to the one, naturally would be the same as to the other?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. I show you Government Exhibit 45 for identification, and ask you if you have seen that before?

546 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whose signature appears thereon?

A. Beatrice Feldman's signature.

Q. Do you recognize it?

A. Yes.

Q. She had authority to write checks?
A. Yes, she did.
Q. Was that written in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. Was it cleared through the bank?
A. It was, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering the penciled memoranda on the back of the check?
By Mr. Lockley: No, I am not offering it.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to the check, as not binding on the corporation.
By Mr. O'Brien: What is the date of the check?
By Mr. Lockley: May 9, 1945.
I offer it in evidence, your Honor, with the exception of the penciled memorandum on the reverse side.
547 By the Court: The check may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government Exhibit 40-D.)

548 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, this is a check to cash in the amount of $6,459.75. Do you recognize the signature on the reverse?
A. Yes, sir. It is Freda Seider.
Q. She was your assistant office manager?
A. Our bookkeeper, sir.
Q. Did you give her the check?
A. Probably so, sir.
Q. And do you know what she did with it?
A. She cashed the check and brought the money back to the office.
Q. And to whom did she give it?
A. To me, or brought it to the office. She may have brought it back to Miss Feldman but I think she gave it to me. I always got the money when they brought it back from the bank.
Q. What did you do with the $6,459.75?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.
Q. Do you recall where?
A. No, sir, I don't.
Q. Do you recall when?
A. Well, within one day of that check, because, I mean, I draw the check and the thing was in New 549 York. I mean, if it went to Chicago, he would get it the next day.

Q. Around May 9th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 167 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that bear your signature?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Is it in your handwriting?

A. It is.

Q. What is it? Is it kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. And was it true and correct at the time you prepared it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it part of your customary business practice to keep such records?

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence, your Honor, No. 167.

By the Court: It may be received.

550 (Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 167.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 167 and ask you if you can state from an examination of that where you were, or where you were around May 9th?

A. On May 9th, sir, I was in Chicago at the Sherman Hotel.

551 Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to the place where the payment was made?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection as to who was present?

A. Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall any specific conversation at that time?

A. Well, sir—

Q. Speak up.

By the Court: If you would stand there when he talks to you, if you would go to the counsel table and stand there after you give him an exhibit, I think we will get along better.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, the conversation is, when I would have the conversation with Mr. Huebner, he would take out of his pocket a recap sheet that he had made, that he had brought with him, and then he would check it against my recap sheet. This was done on all the occasions.

552 Q. Did it happen on this specific occasion?

A. Yes, sir, it did. And then the money would be divided on the bed in three piles and then a certain amount of money would be taken off the top and that would be for the horses and that I shouldn't tell Byron or anybody about it and, "This is for Byron, this is for Harold, and this is for me."

By Mr. McConnell: Is he talking about this particular transaction or some other transaction?

By Mr. Lockley: It is this particular transaction.

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was that likewise his practice to have a settlement sheet?

A. It was the general practice. Mr. Huebner would even pick up the cents when you had a big amount of money like $22,489.16. He would take the sixteen cents with him.

By Mr. McConnell: May I see the document, if the Court please. I would like to examine it.

553 By Mr. Lockley: I have offered it and it has been admitted.

By Mr. McConnell: You are offering a check now?

By Mr. Lockley: I have offered that and it has been admitted.

554 By Mr. McConnell: I want to point out to the Court that shows that he was in Chicago both May 8th and May 9th.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I call your attention to the fact that you were in Chicago, according to Government Exhibit 167, from May 6th to May 12th, and on that day you returned to New York.

I also call your attention to the fact that this check is dated May 9th, and signed by Beatrice Feldman.

Do you have any recollection as to how that check was actually received by you, or was it ever received?

A. Yes, sir. The money was received by me. I think in this particular transaction, sir, that Mr. Hankermyer brought this money to Chicago to me when he was coming out.

Q. Where is Mr. Hankermyer?

A. He died, sir, this year.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit 48, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have. I did, sir.

Q. Do you recognize the signature on the bottom?

555 A. Yes, sir. It is Beatrice Feldman's.

Q. She had authority, did she, to write checks?

A. She did, sir.

Q. Was that check written in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it cashed through the bank? If was cleared through the bank?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Please, Mr. Lubben, try to keep your voice up.

A. Yes, sir, I am sorry, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: The Government offers Exhibit 48.

By Mr. McConnell: I object on behalf of the corporation. It is not binding upon my client.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 48.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you, Mr. Lubben, check dated May 25, 1945, to the order of cash in the amount of $4,455.00, Exhibit 48.

556 By the Court: 48, or 148?

By Mr. Lockley: 48.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I ask you whether you received the money. Is that the check?

A. I did, sir.

557 Q. What did you do with it?

A. I paid it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know where?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know when?

A. Well, the check is dated May 25th. I either paid it on that day if he was in New York or a day or so following if he was in Chicago.

Q. You have no further recollection as to the time and place?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what specifically occurred at that particular time?

A. No, sir, I don't, other than the usual method of counting out the money.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, let us hear it. Let us hear that answer.

(Whereupon the answer was read.)

By Mr. McConnell: That is his recollection of it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the usual method of counting out the money?

A. The usual method of counting out the money,

558 sir, was that I would go into the room and on the bed would lay the money and then I had a recap sheet showing the total amounts of payments, that this payment was for—I mean the total amount of shipments, and Mr. Huebner would have a similar sheet and would check my sheet against his, and then the money would be divided up and sometimes we would have—Mr. Huebner would have a couple of more shipments on the end of his and I was accounting for it at that particular time and the reason for it was that maybe his shipments were en route and—

By Mr. McConnell: Just the transaction is what we want.

By the Witness: You asked me the regular procedure we went through, sir, and I am telling you.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 55 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Whose signature appears thereon?
A. It is a check of Beatrice Feldman. I mean, it is the signature of Beatrice Feldman.
Q. She was your office manager?
559 A. Sir?
Q. She was your office manager?
A. Yes, sir, she was.
Q. And authorized to sign checks?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that check issued in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was, sir.
Q. Was it cleared through the bank?
A. It was, sir.
Q. And returned to you?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection, if your Honor please, on behalf of the corporation.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 55 in evidence.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 55.)

560 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Exhibit for identification 55-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Was that prepared by you?
A. It was prepared in the usual course of accounting for the overages paid to Shotwell.
Q. Who prepared it?
A. Miss Feldman, sir.
Q. Was that prepared in the ordinary course of business?
Q. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Was it part of your business records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. It was, sir, and is now.
By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask the witness a question about this, if I may.
By the Court: You may.

561 Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Did you see Miss Feldman prepare this yourself in your presence?

A. I don't recall specifically. I have stood at Miss Feldman's desk.

Q. Well, did you or didn't you?

A. That specific check, I can't remember anything unusual, if I stood at her desk and watched her sign it, no, sir.

Q. It is not a check. It is a typewritten memorandum. Did you see Miss Feldman prepare this in your presence? That is what I want to know.

A. Well, I specifically can't say this, no, but I have seen her prepare many of them.

By Mr. McConnell: All right. I move to strike the rest of it.

By the Court: Whether or not he remembers of his own knowledge, it is part of the records of the company, of the Eatsum Food Prducts Company. I think he so stated.

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You did say, Mr. Lubben, that that was a 562 record that was ordinarily kept in the ordinary course of business of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 55-A.)

563 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 55-B and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that a record which was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. By Miss Feldman, her.

Q. Was it your business practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask him, if the Court please, a question.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you see Miss Feldman prepare this document?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. This particular document?

564 A. Yes, sir. I am very sure I saw her prepare that one because it calls for an advance for Mr. Huebner, called for something like $20,000.00.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer it in evidence, your Honor. It is No. 55-B.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 55-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, on Government's Exhibit 55-B are the words "Cardinals, 32,400 pound boxes at 18¾ cents, $6,075.00. What does the "18¾ cents" denote?

A. The amount of premium on black market overages paid to him for that particular amount of chocolates.

Q. Is that so much a pound?

A. Per box, yes, sir. There was one pound to a box.

Q. The words "spice buttons, 12,960 pounds at 10 cents."

By the Court: If you get back to the table, we will get along better.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry.

565 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 12,960 pounds at 10 cents and the amount, $1,296.00. What does the "10 cents" denote?

A. The 10 cents denotes the amount of overage over and above the invoice price for that particular item.

566 Q. So the overage on 12,960 pounds would be $1,296.00, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. The words "gum drops, 12,620 pounds at 10 cents", what does that "10 cents" denote?

A. It denotes the overage that was paid over and above the invoice price.

Q. And the amount "1,362," what is that?

A. That would be the amount of the overage at 10 cents a pound in dollars and cents.

Q. On the sheet then, is the total 8,733 and below it the word "advanced" 20,000. What does that represent?

A. Well, the $20,000 was an advance payment that I had made to Shotwell.

Q. All right. I show you Government Exhibit 55, and ask you if that is the $20,000 advance payment?

A. I would like to correct my last answer. It was the amount—it was the advance I gave to Mr. Huebner.

Q. All right. Is that the check which you have in your hand, a twenty thousand dollar one?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

567 Q. Who endorsed the check?

A. Frieda Seider.

Q. Did she give the money to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. Paid it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know where?

A. I don't remember correctly whether it was in New York or Chicago, sir.

Q. It was one or the other?

A. Yes, sir. If it was in New York, he received the money May 25th. If it was in Chicago, it was a day or two later.

Q. Do you have any specific knowledge of that particular transaction at the moment?

A. I think, if I recall, sir, to the best of my ability, it was one of the first advances that I had given Shotwell. Mr. Huebner called me on the phone—

Q. When?

A. Oh, probably that recap sheet would tell me.

Q. Is that Exhibit 55-B? 55-A?

A. Well, sir, the first shipment of Cardinal chocolates on this for $32,400.00 was on May 25th, and this 568 check was drawn on May 25th, and I remember a number of times, specifically this one—I remember a number of times, but specifically this one, maybe not, but I remember.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to other times.

By the Court: Just this occasion.

By Mr. Lockley: Just this occasion.

569 A. All right. This time, sir, Mr. Huebner called me on the telephone and he told me, "Dave, I can get you some cardinal chocolates."

Now, I don't have my records, sir, but I believe this was one of the first shipments of cardinal chocolates, which was a very good item to get to sell, and he told me if I could get him a substantial payment, a big amount of money as an advance, that I could get a lot of candy and I asked him how much, and he said, "Twenty thousand dollars," and I drew the check and got it and he got the money.

Q. All right. Now I also call your attention to Exhibit 55-A. That likewise carries the notations of "cardinal chocolates" 32,400 pounds, with the date 5-25, and an additional entry of 6-6, for 27,792 pounds, or a total of 60,192 pound boxes at $11,286.00. There are three entries of spice buttons, 5-24, 6-6, 6-22, a total of 70,950 pounds at $7,095.00. Two entries of gum drops on 5-31.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to reading from the documents.

By Mr. Lockley: I am going to ask him about these.

By Mr. McConnell: Show him the documents.

570 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The total amount is $24,111.00 less $20,000.00. Is there any relationship between Government's Exhibit 55-A and Government's Exhibit 55-B?

A. Yes, sir, there is. Government's Exhibit No. 55-B shows that after they got the $20,000.00, that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, or Mr. Huebner,—or I had a credit of black market, a black market credit of $11,267.00. In other words, I had overpaid the amount of premiums that was due at that particular time.

571 Now, on the following sheet, that is Government's Exhibit 55-A, we pick up the 32,400 pounds of Cardinals and spice buttons and gum drops plus additional merchandise so that the total amount of money that I owed Shotwell that particular moment as premiums was $24,111.00, and I had advanced $20,000.00, which left a balance due of $4,111.00.

Now, on June 28th, we received another shipment of 14,130 pounds of spice buttons which would be $1,413.00. So then, the amount that was due at that particular time was $5,524.00.

Q. And was that amount paid?

A. To the best of my knowledge, it was.

Q. About when?

A. Well, within a day or two after the check went.

If the check was drawn—I mean, on that particular day he got the money if it was in New York. If it was the next day, it was in Chicago.

Q. Do you have any check to show it was drawn?

By Mr. McConnell: I object. He doesn't even say he delivered it.

By the Court: I think if you arise when you address the Court that I can hear you better.

572 By Mr. McConnell: He has not testified he made a payment. He is characterizing it as a payment and yet he doesn't say he made it.

By the Court: I think if you are going into additional details, you should indicate the time and place and the circumstances.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was that amount paid?

A. This was in 1945.

Q. All right. Do you recall about when it was paid?

A. Yes, sir. I would say on or about June 28th.

Q. Do you know where?

A. No, sir, I don't.

573 Q. Do you recall anything about the transaction?

A. Sir, there were so many transactions where I paid him twenty-five or thirty—

By the Court: Answer the question. Answer whether or not you recall anything about the transaction.

By the Witness: No, sir. I do not.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. But you are able to state under oath that you know that amount was paid?

A. Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It is a conclusion of the witness. He wasn't there. He can't testify from his own knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley: Well—

Q. Did you make the payment?

By the Court: I assume the witness is testifying from his own knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification 63-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask, on the last question—

574 will you read the last question, Miss Reporter?

(Whereupon the question and answer were read.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that. Paid to whom?
By the Witness: Paid to Mr. Huebner, sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. And where?
A. Well, sir, if this was in New York, it was on—
Q. Well, do you remember where?
A. No, sir, but it was either Chicago or New York, and no other place.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, do you recognize—
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Excuse me. Was it paid by you to Mr. Huebner?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You personally?
A. Me personally.
Q. Not anyone else in your place?
A. There were very few payments made by any-575 body else to Mr. Huebner.
Q. This was not one of them?
A. No, sir. I mean, very few payments were made by anybody else to Mr. Huebner, outside of myself.

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you state that you recognize Government Exhibit for identification 63-A?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
576 Q. And was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know who made it?
A. Miss Feldman, sir.
Q. Is your business practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: Did you have a check on this other thing, Mr. Lockley?
By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: You mean there wasn't any check?

By Mr. Lockley: No. There was no check. The witness is testifying from his direct recollection. I had one $20,000.00 check in advance.

By Mr. Kirby: What about the advance, did you show him that?

By Mr. Lockley: A $20,000.00 check is the advance. That is the only check.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection to 577 this memorandum. It is not binding on Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 63-A.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 63-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now with respect to 63-A, dated November 27, 1945—

By Mr. O'Brien: May I interrupt to ask whether the Government has a check on that last transaction?

By Mr. Lockley: Are you referring to the amount of 5524?

By Mr. O'Brien: 5524.

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. First I will show you Government's Exhibit for identification 63-B and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Where?

A. In the hands of Mr. Huebner, sir.

578 Q. Speak up.

A. In the hands of Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know who prepared that?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. What was the occasion at the time you saw it?

A. It was at the time, sir, that I was making a pay-off where I was paying the overages. Mr. Huebner would always have a piece of paper similar to this in his hand.

Q. And is that a so-called recap sheet?

A. This was his, sir, and this was where he would compare his shipments with mine (indicating).

Q. Did Mr. Huebner give that to you?

A. No, sir, he did not.

Q. How did you get it, or did you get it?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. How?
A. It was just left in my hands and when he was checking, I picked it up and put it in my pocket and I brought it back and gave it to Miss Feldman and I said, "Miss Feldman, these are Huebner's last figures," and I put my initial on it and gave it to her to put in the file.

579 Q. Do you recognize this as the document you saw in Mr. Huebner's hands at the time?
A. I do, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: Is this a different instrument, Mr. Lockley, than the one we were talking about?
By Mr. Lockley: I have Exhibit 63-A which has been admitted as a settlement sheet prepared by Mr. Lubben or his bookkeeper in the ordinary course of business. 63-B is a separate document.
Now, I offer it, your Honor.
By the Court: That exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 63-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I want you to examine Government's Exhibits 63-A and 63-B and tell me if there is any relationship between the two. Will you speak up?
By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, the document speaks for itself, whatever it is, or whatever 580 it shows. It is a matter of argument.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. Yes, sir, there is.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What is it?
A. It shows, and I am talking about the paper I got from Mr. Huebner—shows a list of certain cars of candy, Cardinal chocolates that was shipped to William Barron Candy Company in Atlanta, the F. W. Woolworth Company in Chicago.
While we don't show who it went to, we show the number over here (indicating) and the amount of the pounds on our paper. These items, sir, are on this page here (Indicating).

Q. Are they in complete agreement?

By Mr. McConnell: That is a conclusion of the witness.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir, they are not.

581 By Mr. McConnell: That is a conclusion of the witness, complete agreement.

By the Court: I think it is competent for a witness who assumes to be acquainted with the documents to determine whether there is any similarity in the figures or whether they jibe with one another. How are we going to determine if the witness who is competent to answer that question cannot disclose that fact?

By Mr. Lockley: Those records would be meaningless unless they had some explanation.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. There was additional shipments made on my ticket here. They show some other ones.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. There are additional tickets on your 63-A, which are not on 63-B, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the settlement sheet 63-A, prepared by you which shows a balance due of $36,148.35.

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

582 Q. Was that paid?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Do you know whether a check was drawn for that particular amount?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Do you know where that check is at the moment?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. What period of time was that check drawn? Approximately when?

A. This was drawn during the partnership, sir.

Q. During the partnership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where the partnership books and records are?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. When did you last see them?

A. On or around March 8, 1946.

Q. And who had custody of them at that time?

A. Mr. Giglio. He continued to do business after I left.

Q. Then you haven't seen any of them since then?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. Now, I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 63, and ask you if you have seen that 583 before?

A. Well, in the normal course of business, sir, I wouldn't pay any attention to it. It would come to Miss Feldman.

Q. Do you know what it is?

A. Yes, sir.

It is from the bank. It shows how much you deposited, and how much you have left. It shows deposits and withdrawals. It is a statement.

Q. Did you have an account in that bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you receive monthly statements?

A. Yes, sir, I did. Or the company did.

Q. What did you do with those monthly statements?

A. Miss Feldman would get them, and the auditor would check them out.

Q. Do you know where they are today?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. When did you last see them?

A. March 8th or 9th of 1946, when I left the partnership.

By Mr. McConnell: May I see that other document you have there?

584 By the Court: I believe 63 has been received, hasn't it?

By Mr. Lockley: I understood, your Honor, it
585 had only been admitted for identification subject to further testimony connecting it up.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby: Have you got the other one?

By Mr. McConnell: Let me ask the witness a question if I may, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. On this document 63-B, could you tell us—the one which you got from Mr. Huebner, and the one you are asked to compare with this other document of yours.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there any dollar figures on that?

A. Doubt?

Q. Dollar figures.

A. No, sir. There was not any dollar figures, no sir.

Q. That just takes the amount of pounds and invoices shipments to your company?

A. That is correct, sir. Not to my company. To 586 various customers and the bills were sent to me.

Q. So all it is is what your invoices show, isn't it?

A. There would be no sense in preparing this from what my invoices show. I have my invoices.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it all. All it is is a recap of the invoices.

By the Court: You move to strike what?

By Mr. McConnell: That document 63-B, if the Court please. There is nothing in it. It is nothing but a recap of the invoices which are shown in the book.

By the Court: Be that as it may, nevertheless it may be competent. I will receive it in evidence. I will deny the motion to strike.

By Mr. Lockley: I now offer Manufacturers Trust Company account Exhibit No. 63 in evidence.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 63.)

587 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, you state that according to Exhibit 63-A there was a balance due of $36,148.35, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Do you know on or about the date that that was paid?

A. Yes, sir. The day that the recap sheet would show it, at the top—which was November 27, 1945, or about that date.

Q. I show you Manufacturers Trust Company deposit ledger card, Exhbit No. 63, and ask if you find a withdrawal on November 27th in the amount of $36,148.35?

A. Yes, sir. On November 27th I find a withdrawal of $36,148.35.

Q. And that was the amount of the balance due?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, there is also an item of "Less advance $30,000.00".

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that represent?
A. That was an advance that I had made to Mr. Huebner in cash.
588 Q. Do you know about when that advance would have been made?
A. Well, it was—
By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, we are back again to this general characterization of payments.
By Mr. Lockley: I am trying to lay the foundation.
By the Court: Be more definite.
By the Witness:
A. I would say, sir, if my memory serves me correctly, it was in October, early in October or September or in the latter part of September.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you recall whether you drew any checks to cash in that amount?
A. No, sir, I didn't draw a check to cash. It was $30,000.00.
Q. Do you know where you got the $30,000.00?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. Where?
A. I got it out of the box in our office that was called the corn box. This was during the partnership. I remember this instance specifically, sir, because we were 589 selling corn syrup for an invoice.
By Mr. McConnell: There was no question asked about giving an explanation of the box. You asked him where he got it.
By the Witness:
A. Out of a cash box, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You got it out of a cash box?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recall where you paid it to Mr. Huebner?
A. No, sir, I do not.
Q. Do you recall anything of the circumstances surrounding the payment?
A. No, sir. Either it was in Chicago or New York.
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Exhibit F4-C for identification and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of your business?
A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. It was, sir.
590 Q. Was it part of your business practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. With respect to the writing on the box, do you know who made that writing?
A. I did, sir.
Q. Did you make it contemporaneously with the preparation of this record?
A. What do you mean, contemporaneously?
Q. At about the same time?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: At or about the time of what?
By Mr. Lockley: At about the time the record was prepared.
By the Witness: Your Honor, may I be excused? I have to go to the bath room.
By the Court: We will take a recess. The witness asked if he could take a recess. We will now take the noon recess. We will recess now until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day, Wednesday, September 16, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois
Wednesday, September 16, 1953
2:00 o'clock P.M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:
By a Juror: Your Honor, on behalf of the jury, when you admit or strike evidence, sometimes we can't hear you perfectly. And Mr. O'Brien, counsel for the defense, 592 we have difficulty hearing him at times.

By the Court: I will be glad to speak up so you will hear. I thank you for calling it to my attention.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will, too.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government Exhibit 14-C in evidence, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: I object, if the Court please, on the same basis as I have, to the other record, as self-serving, so far as my client is concerned, and also object to the handwritten notations on the back, as not being made in the course of business.

By the Court: Are you offering the handwritten notations on the back?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: Have you identified that?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. The witness, as I recall, identified that as his handwriting made contemporaneously. He asked what I meant by the word contemporaneously.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

593 (Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 14-C.)

DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 14, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Is that your signature on the bottom?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Is that a check which was written in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir. In fact, all the writing on the check is mine, sir.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the exhibit number?

By Mr. Lockley: 14.

I offer it in evidence.

594 I will connect it up further later, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it, if the Court please. It doesn't show any payee, it doesn't show whether it has ever been cashed. It doesn't show any transaction.

By Mr. Lockley: I will connect it up, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, supposing you connect it up first, then offer it.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben: I show you Government Exhibit for identification 14-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Is that your signature on the bottom?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Is the entire document in your handwriting?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it prepared on or about the date it shows thereon?

A. Yes, sir; February 14, 1946.

595 Q. Don't tell me what the date is, just say yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: '46?

By Mr. Lockley: '46, yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was this prepared in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government exhibit for identification 14-B, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

596 Q. Is that document in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the signature on the bottom in your handwriting?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Did you prepare that in the ordinary course of business?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit No. 14-C and I ask you: What do the numbers and the names on the back thereof have reference to, 3017 Byron Cain, 3018 Harold Sullivan, and 3019 Frank Huebner?

A. The numbers are the numbers of the checks that I just identified and the names were the names that I wrote on the checks.

Q. As the payees?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, with reference to the other numerical computations on the back of that sheet, what do they signify?

A. Well, I took the figures of $41,682.10 and divided it by three, and I got $13,894.03.

Q. And what did you do after you had determined that figure of $13,894.03?

597 A. I wrote three checks, one check No. 3017 to Byron Cain for $13,894.03.

Q. What is that number again?

A. 3017.

Q. Is this the check number 3017 that is referred to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what else?

A. I wrote 3018 for a similar amount to Harold Sullivan.

Q. Is this the check 3018 to which you refer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go on.

A. And I wrote check number 3019 to Frank Huebner.

Q. And is this the check 3019 to which you refer?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

By Mr. Lockley: For the record, check No. 3017 is Exhibit 14, 3018 is 14-A and 3019 is 14-B.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, what is the date on the settlement sheet in your hand?

A. February 6, 1946.

Q. Did you prepare these checks on February 14th,

598 on the date shown thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you do with them after you had them prepared?

A. These checks were prepared in Chicago and I went to the plant of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and I spoke to Mr. Huebner.

Q. And what day was that?

A. February 14, 1946.

Q. And was anyone else present?

A. Either that day or the next day, sir, but right around there.

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. No, sir; there was not.

Q. And what was the conversation at that time?

A. I told Mr. Huebner that we owed him fourteen thousand—by me, I mean the partnership, the Eatsum Food partnership—owed him $41,682.10, and that was overages that we owed him, and I told him I was getting ready to leave the partnership, and I could no longer have any access to the cash box to take money out to pay them. I also told him I was forbidden to draw any checks to cash for Shotwell, or for anybody else, for that 599 matter, and that I had to pay these people, and I said these—

Q. Who do you mean by these people?

A. I had to pay—I said, "We owe you this money and the only way that I can pay it to you is if you will take these checks for the amount that I owe. Otherwise"—I mean, so I said, "That's the only way I can pay you the money."

Q. Was there any further conversation?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner says, "Well, I don't know, Dave. I will have to check up and see." He says, "It is a little unusual." And I explained the circumstances. As I said, I had no way of paying him the cash or drawing a check for cash.

So he says all right, he would see what could be done. And so he—I am not quite sure if it was in my presence that he called either Harold Sullivan or Byron Cain, but I know he called one of them.

Q. And what did you do then?

A. If my memory serves me correctly, sir, I mean, I went to the Lott Hotel, to the Belden Stratford, where I saw Mr. Byron Cain.

600 Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. Cain and myself.

Q. And about when was that?

A. I would say it was around February 14, 1946.

Q. And do you have any recollection of a conversation?

A. Yes, sir—although I am just a little bit hazy on the date—with Byron Cain. But the conversation that I had with Byron Cain was that—

By Mr. McConnell: Who was present?

By Mr. Lockley: He has already said he and Byron Cain.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Cain.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Speak up.

A. Yes, sir. To my knowledge, Byron Cain was there. And I explained that I was getting ready to leave the partnership, and I had to pay this bill, and I had no way of paying the money, and it was the only way I could pay the money, and so forth.

Q. Did he say anything to you?

A. Yes, sir. Byron Cain told me that—he said,
601 "Well, I don't know, Dave. We certainly didn't get in this thing to handle cash just for the sake of handling cash and paying taxes on it. And I don't want to take any check."

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me. Would you read the answer?

(Record read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was there any further conversation?

A. Yes, sir; I was told to see Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Did you see Mr. Sullivan?

A. Yes, sir; I went to Mr. Sullivan's office.

Q. When?

A. Probably that same day.

Q. Do you know where it is located?

A. Yes, sir; it is on, I believe—it is on Dearborn Street, South Dearborn Street.

By Mr. Kirby: Is this February 14, 1946, that the witness is speaking of?

By the Witness:

A. To my knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection as to the exact date?

602 A. No, sir; I don't have an exact recollection as to the exact date.

Q. But you did have a conversation with Mr. Sullivan in his office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it during the year 1946?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Kirby: Can the witness fix it any closer than sometime in the year of 1946?
By the Witness:
A. No, sir; I can't.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You are not certain?
A. No, sir.
Q. Well, what was the conversation?
A. Well, sir, the conversation that I had with Harold Sullivan was that, as I say, as I mentioned in Byron Cain's conversation.
Q. Speak up.
By Mr. Kirby: I object to his references back. I would like to know if the witness has a memory of this alleged conversation.
603 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Speak up and tell what happened at that conversation?
A. Well, sir, I told them I was going to start in a new business, and—
By Mr. O'Brien: Who was present in this conversation?
By the Witness: Well, when I spoke to Mr. Sullivan, sir, it was just Mr. Sullivan there.
By Mr. O'Brien: You said you told "them".
By the Witness: Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: That's why I asked.
By the Witness:
A. And, sir,—well, he didn't want to accept the check.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Was there any conversation?
By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike his statement that he didn't want to accept the check.
By the Court: Yes, the conclusion may be stricken. Tell us what he said.
By the Witness:
604 A. Mr. Sullivan asked me, when I talked to him, how I was keeping any records of my cash payments, and was I marking this on my book—I mean, what was I doing.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What did you tell him?
A. I said, "No, sir; we were selling merchandise for cash." And we were getting the cash payments and giving it to him.

He said, "Are you sure this is not appearing on your books any place?"

I said, "No, Mr. Sullivan, it is not."

Q. Was that a true answer?

A. No, sir; it was not. Because had I told—

By Mr. Kirby: I don't want any explaining why he lied.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, will you proceed?

By Mr. Kirby: It is admitted he lied.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you proceed with the conversation?

A. Sir, so—he (Mr. Sullivan) said, "Well, Dave, you know how it is. You have a place in New Jersey, a farm in New Jersey. This money I have been using in 605 my farm."

And if I recall correctly that day he told me—he said, "I am getting a new driveway," or something, "put in."

And he said, "That is the only way I can do it today, with the tax situations the way they are."

Q. Do you recall any further conversation about that check?

A. No, sir.

Q. With any one of the defendants?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you get the checks back?

A. I got the checks back from Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you remember if he handed them to you, mailed them, or how?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Were the names cut out at that time?

A. I don't recall that either, sir.

Q. Where have they been in the meantime, since you received them back?

A. Well, sir, I brought them back, and when they came back, we put them in the file.

By Mr. Lockley: May Government Exhibits 14,
606 14-A, and 14-B now be admitted in evidence, your Honor?

By Mr. McConnell: Have you offered them?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to them as not binding on the corporation.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to them as having taken place, in their preparation, completely outside the presence of the defendant, Sullivan, and to have taken place in connection with some alleged conversations which also took place outside of the presence of the defendant, Sullivan.

By the Court: Well, the jury will understand that the conversations he allegedly had with these individual defendants will only be competent as to the individual defendant referred to.

I will receive the exhibits in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 14, 14-A, and 14-B.)

607 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 73-A and ask you if you have seen that before, or, rather, the original of that.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And where did you last see it?

A. The last time I saw this original was early in February, 1948.

Q. First, tell me, was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. I believe this was prepared by Miss Strum, sir. Freda Strum or Freda Seider.

Q. And was it your practice to keep such records in your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say the last time you saw the original was in the middle of February, 1948?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. At my home in Hillsdale, New Jersey.

608 Q. Who was there at the time?

A. Mr. Frank Huebner.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Mr. Davidson.

Q. And who is Mr. Davidson?
A. He is my attorney.
Q. What transpired at that time; was there a conversation?
A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner came over for—
By the Court: What date was this. I lost track.
By the Witness:
A. Early in February, 1948, sir.
By the Court: Go ahead.
By the Witness:
A. Mr. Huebner came over to get any records that I had pertaining—
By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute. I would like to object, if the Court please, to a transaction in 1948 as being beyond the indictment period here.
By the Court: He can relate a conversation he had with any one of the defendants at any time, if it is competent.
609 By Mr. Kirby: Well, I wish to make the further specific objection that if a matter has occurred after the transactions within the indictment have come to rest, we then get into other rules, as I conceive them, and those rules would be that such statements would not be admissible at all, having in mind that the transactions supposedly in question ended in 1946.
By the Court: You are thinking of a conspiracy case. This isn't a conspiracy case. If the statement by Huebner is competent by way of an admission, or by way of any relevant statement that throws light on this controversy, it is competent.
610 By Mr. Lockley: I am only trying to lay a foundation at the present time for the absence of the original.
By the Court: Go ahead.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Can you state any conversation that transpired during the middle of February with Mr. Huebner?
A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner called me and told me he was coming over.
Q. On the telephone?
A. Yes, sir. From the Gotham Hotel. It was on a Sunday, sir. And he told me he was coming over for the records that we had previously discussed about, that had relationship to the overpayments to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you have a previous discussion with Mr. Huebner about such records?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. When was this?

A. I had a previous discussion with Mr. Huebner, I believe, a few days one way or the other.

Q. Was anybody else present at that discussion?

A. Yes, sir; it was Mr.—it might have been in January, sir, when we had this discussion.

611 By the Court: A little louder.

By the Witness:

A. It might have been the latter part of January that we had the discussion, but I remember at the discussion that I had, that Byron Cain was present.

Q. Well, tell us what happened at the first discussion now, when Byron Cain was present?

By Mr. O'Brien: When was that?

By Mr. Lockley: He said the latter part of January.

By Mr. O'Brien: He said that's when Huebner talked to him.

By Mr. Lockley: This was the middle part of February?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Let's fix it again—fix it again. When was the conversation with Mr. Huebner and Mr. Cain?

A. The conversation, sir, with Mr. Huebner and Mr. Cain would be either a few days—around the early part of February, or in January, in there, and they asked me—

By the Court: Of '48?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

612 By the Witness:

A. And Mr. Cain asked me if I had any record pertaining to my overpayments with Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And what did you tell him?

A. I said I did.

Q. What did he say?

A. And he said, "What kind of records do you have?" And I told him the kind of records we had kept, that is, we kept recap sheets, and we drew the checks for cash.

Q. I see.

A. Mr. Cain was surprised that I kept such records.

Q. All right.

A. So on Sunday—

Q. Was there any further conversation at that time?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to his statement about Mr. Cain's surprise, if the Court please.

By the Court: Well, the conclusion of the witness that Mr. Cain was surprised, which doesn't presume to re-613 late to conversation, may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, did Mr. Cain or Mr. Huebner or yourself say anything further at this first conference, conversation?

A. Yes, there was other discussion, sir. And they asked me—

By the Court: Keep your voice up.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Please talk up.

A. They asked me if I had any objections to giving them the records so they could check their records with them.

And I said, "No."

And so on this Sunday, which was early in February—no, early in February, 1948, Mr. Huebner called and told me he was coming out for the records.

Now, I don't recall that day whether I drove into New York and picked them up, or if he came out in a Cadillac limousine, but I do remember taking him back to New York.

Q. While he was in your house, what happened?

A. Sir, when I came back from that first conversation, I went into the barn where we had stored our 614 surplus records, I mean records from previous months, and I checked the files to see if I could find any of these records, and I did find the records, and I brought them in the house.

615 When Mr. Huebner came out to the house on that Sunday he himself wanted to go and look in the barn, too. And we went out and he looked in a few files, and he didn't find anything there. Then he went back in the house. And we had this pile of records lying on the table in the sun porch.

Q. And is that one of the records?

A. And this is one of the records, sir.

Q. What was done after that?

A. Well, he went through the records, and some records he didn't want, and some records he did want. And the records he did want we put in a large envelope and I was going to give them to him.

Q. And did you give them to him at that time?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. What did you do with them?

A. I put—well, I was going to give him the records, but then Mr. Davidson asked me—he was sitting there at the time, and I stepped outside, and he said, "Can I talk to you a minute?" And he went in the kitchen.

Q. Is this a conversation outside the presence of 616 the defendant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We won't go into that then. What was ultimately done with those records?

A. The ultimate was that the records were photostated. I went back and told Mr. Huebner that I wasn't going to give these records, because I had no way of knowing whether they were going to correct their records, or weren't going to correct their records, and these were my property to show the transactions I had with the company, and I didn't know if I was going to get them back or not.

Q. Is that one of the photostats you made at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened to the originals, do you remember?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. You don't have them at the moment?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Have you searched for them?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. You have been unable to find them?

A. Yes, sir.

617 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 73 and ask you if you have seen that before?

By the Court: Let's get one thing straightened out at a time.

By Mr. Lockley: I am trying to expedite things, your Honor.

I offer this in evidence. The exhibit stamp is on the back, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it on the same ground that I objected to the other exhibit, as to the corporation, not binding on the corporation, no proper showing of this being a true copy of any original—

By the Court: I couldn't hear a word you said.

618 By Mr. McConnell: I am sorry, your Honor. I think part of the trouble is with this room. I don't think the acoustics are very good.

I said I object on the same ground that I had objected to the other exhibits, that they were not binding on my client, the corporation, Shotwell Manufacturing Company; and for the further reason that no sufficient accounting has been made of the originals from which this purports to be a photostat, and no showing that that is a photostatic copy of any original document.

By the Court: I think a further foundation should be laid as to what search, if any, or what may have happened to the original, and why you are relying on a photostat.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, is this a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Now, have you searched for the original?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Where?

A. Well, sir, I searched for the original a long

619 while ago when the Government wanted my records.

Q. When was that?

A. Several years ago.

Q. And what records—what is the date of that sheet?

A. March 27, 1946.

Q. Where would you normally keep the original of that document?

A. It would be kept in the files, sir, of the company.

Q. As far as you know, in whose hands was the original of that document the last time you saw it?

A. The last time I saw the document it was in Mr. Huebner's hands. And then Mr. Huebner wanted to take the package with him. And I said, "No, I want to have these photostated because I have no assurance that you are going to bring them back to me." And I gave it to Mr. Davidson.

By the Court: Who is Mr. Davidson again.

By Mr. Lockley: He is the attorney. He was Mr. Lubben's attorney.

By the Witness: Mr. Davidson is an attorney, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, did Mr. Davidson return the originals to you?
620 A. No, sir; he did not, but he returned the photostats to me.
Q. You have not seen the originals since that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you asked Mr. Davidson if he has them?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. What did he say?
A. He said he believed he gave them to Shotwell, to Mr. Huebner or to Mr. Poses.
By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike that conversation as being outside the presence of any defendant at all.
By the Court: It purports to relate to the search he made. It isn't offered by way of conversation, except as it purports to relate to a fact, and it is an exception to the hearsay rule.
By Mr. O'Brien: My objection, your Honor, is that there is no proof of the making of an original, or of the existence of an original, which was part of the record, and I think, having in mind the time we are talking about, March of 1948, that any originals that were really originals and part of the records on file would have been 621 in the custody of the receiver of that company, and I don't think there is any showing here that there was an original—that the original, if any, of this was a part of the company record.
622 By the Court: Yes, I think that objection is well taken.
By Mr. Lockley: We will lay a further foundation by another witness at a later date, your Honor, and submit it at that time.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 73, and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Is the whole document in your handwriting?
A. No, sir; just the signature.
Q. Do you know who wrote the balance of it?
A. No, sir; I don't. I believe it—

Q. When was it prepared?
A. On March 29, 1946.
Q. And was that a document that was kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir; it was.
Q. And that is a check, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
623 Q. Did it clear the bank?
A. Yes, sir; it did.
Q. And do you know where the original of that check is today?
A. No, sir; I do not.
By Mr. O'Brien: Is this one of the documents produced by the bank?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I object to it, your Honor, on the ground that it does not purport to be complete. The reverse side of the check is missing, anl also there has been no sufficient showing made of any effort to procure the original check.
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I laid a foundation for the issuance of this face part of the check and for the absence of the reverse through the testimony of the bank officer on the stand the other day.
By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I think he did not make a showing by the bank officer the other day, if I may say so. It seems to me what that bank officer 624 testified to was that they did photostat or Recordak the reverse side of the checks, and he had not made any search to determine whether or not they had the reverse photostated for these particular checks. And on that basis, if your Honor please, you refused admission of one document which I objected to.
By the Court: Well, insofar as it purports to be the face of the check, and I think the complete foundation has been laid for that—sufficient foundation—the face of the check may be received. We are not receiving the endorsement, so that is that.
By Mr. O'Brien: But there has been no showing to account for the absence of the original.
By the Court: Well, I think that is true, that you haven't laid any foundation as to where the original check may be, if it is in existence.
625 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, when did you last see the original of this check?

A. I last saw the original of that check, sir, when it was cashed by the bank, when I signed it.

Q. Did you see it when it was returned by the bank?

A. No, sir; I did not. It wasn't my habit to check checks coming back.

Q. What was done with the canceled checks in your office when they were returned by the bank?

A. They were given to the accountant, and the bookkeeper, and they checked it out to arrive—to see that the balance was correct.

Q. Then what happened to those checks?

A. They were stored, sir, and filed.

Q. Where?

A. In a file drawer, sir.

Q. Do you know where the file drawer is today?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Have you made any attempt to search for this particular check?

A. Yes, sir; I have. I looked all through the files
626 we had in the barn and I made them available to the Government to look through, so I don't know, sir.

Q. Were you accompanied by any Treasury agents during the course of your searches or search?

A. Yes, I believe it was Mr. Toohig, and another gentleman once when we looked upstairs.

Q. Were you able to find the check?

A. No, sir. We weren't looking for that specific check. If I remember, we were looking for checks in general, and things like that.

Q. What checks were you looking for?

A. Anything pertaining to what the Government wanted. They wanted all—I just put the records there and they took what they wanted.

Q. Was the Government looking for checks drawn to cash?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find some checks drawn to cash?

A. I don't recall, sir, whether we did or didn't.

Q. But you didn't find the original of this particular check?

A. No, sir; we did not.

Q. And you don't know where the original is 627 today?

A. No, sir; I do not.

By Mr. Lockley: I submit it again, if your Honor please.

By the Court: Well, are you going to establish what was done with the proceeds of the check?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, if your Honor please.

By the Court: For that purpose I will receive the exhibit in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 73.)

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask him a question, Judge?

By the Court: Yes.

Cross Examination By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. When were you and the agents looking for these checks?

A. As I say, I don't know whether we were looking for the checks. I know they were looking for papers and things.

Q. Whatever it was that you were looking for, when was it?

628 A. I think it was May, 1948.

Q. And you were looking in the barn?

A. Yes, looking through those same records that you are going to get.

Q. When did the General Confections go into receivership?

A. On March 8, 1948.

Q. And were all the books and records and files turned over to the receiver, except those in the barn?

A. No, sir. Well, the receiver came and he took books and records and canceled checks.

Q. He took the whole office, didn't he?

A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Well, did you continue to run the business after he came?

A. No, sir; the business was closed.

Q. All right. Did he take custody of everything?

A. He went out with a box full of papers and books and records and so forth.

Q. And you don't know whether he has the checks or doesn't have the checks, do you?

A. I don't know where the check is at, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

629 I renew my objection.

By the Court: I will receive the check in evidence.

Direct Examination (Continued) By Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 14-C, which is a settlement sheet showing an amount due of $41,682.10, and I also show you Government's Exhibits 14, 14-A and 14-B, which are three checks of $13,894.03; were those checks issued as a part of the $41,000.00—or in full payment of the $41,000.0 shown on the settlement sheet?

By Mr. McConnell: He just leads the witness through these transactions, your Honor. He never asks him what they represent, he tells him what they represent, and asks him to confirm it.

By the Court: Well, read the question.

(Question read.)

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir; they are.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, those checks were not cleared through

630 the bank, were they?

A. No, sir.

Q. And do you know whether the $41,682.10 was paid?

A. Yes, sir; it was paid at a later date.

By Mr. McConnell: Are you going to tell us when and where?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any independent recollection of when and where?

A. Yes, sir. On March 9, 1946—or March 8 I withdrew from the partnership of the Eatsum Food Products, Inc., and I formed the company called General Confections, Inc., which continued business at 40 West 170th Street, and we continued in the same line, manufacturing, and buying and jobbing candy.

Now, when the checks were returned to me, and they were returned by Mr. Huebner—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object to this recital.

By Mr. Lockley: It is in response to counsel's question.

By Mr. Kirby: I wish he would answer the question which was posed to him, that is, when this money was paid, how it was paid.

631 By the Court: I think his answer is entirely responsive. He may continue.

By the Witness:

A. The money was paid out of General Confections, some time in March. While it was no obligation of General Confections—

By the Court: Just answer the question now. Just tell what was done.

By the Witness:

A. Yes. It was paid in March out of General Confections and a recap sheet was made.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 73-A and ask you if that is the recap sheet?

A. Yes, sir; it is. It is the recap sheet, sir, but there is an addition to it of one item.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, you have already ruled that that exhibt may not be admtted and I submit it is improper for him to read from an exhibit you have ruled out.

By the Court: Well, if you are referring now to the exhibit as to which you are going to lay a further foundation, I think the objection is well taken.

632 By Mr. Lockley: I did not intend for the witness to read from it, your Honor. I was merely identifying it further.

By Mr. McConnell: I would still like to know who he paid that money to on March 8, 1946.

By Mr. Lockley: We will get to it, counsel.

By the Court: He has a right to lay a further foundation as to the exhibit, if that is what he is attempting to do.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, with respect to Government Exhibit No. 73, in the amount of thirty-five thousand and some odd dollars, did you cash that check?

A. Well, sir, it was probably cashed by Miss Seider, or somebody in—one of the girls in the office, and the money was given to me.

Q. And what did you do with the money?
A. I paid the money to Mr. Huebner.
Q. Do you recall when?
A. Yes, sir. I feel very sure that it was in New York at the Gotham Hotel.
Q. And who else was present at the time?
633 A. Present at the time was Byron Cain.
Q. Was there any conversation?
A. Yes, sir. Because this was an obligation of the partnership—
Q. Just tell me what the conversation was.
A. Well, the conversation was, "Dave,—"
By Mr. Kirby: When was this, please?
By the Witness:
A. On or about March 29, 1946. And the conversation was that, "Dave, you are a very honest fellow," because, as I stated—"Well, you are an honest fellow, and I appreciate what you have done."
By Mr. Kirby: I object, specifically that I don't wish that to be binding on the defendant, Sullivan.
By the Court: I think that the ruling the Court heretofore made will, of course, prevail.
Go ahead. Tell us what the conversation was.
By the Witness:
A. I was an honest fellow, and I appreciated—he appreciated it because this was an obligation of the 634 partnership which General Confections had assumed. I was unable to pay the money out of the partnership, and I paid it out of General Confections.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Was that the conversation?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any further conversation?
A. Well, I felt very good about it, too, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out how he felt about it.
By the Court: All right, that may be stricken.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 13, and ask you if you have seen that document before?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. In whose handwriting is it?
A. It is in my handwriting, sir.

Q. And when was it made?
A. I have no way of knowing, sir. I think it was made around April.
Q. April of when?
635 A. Of 1946.
Q. Was that true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it a document, or a record which you kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was it your practice to keep such documents?
A. Yes, sir.
636 Q. Do you know where the original of this is today?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you searched for it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was the last time you saw it?
A. Early in March, 1948, on the front porch of my home.
Q. It was in March?
A. Yes, sir. No, not March. February.
Q. Early in February, 1948?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You had it at that time?
A. I had it and Mr. Huebner had it and it was given to Mr. Davidson to photostat.
Q. Have you seen the original since then?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you made a search for it?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you found it?
A. No, sir.
Q. You stated that that was in your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Completely?
637 A. Yes, sir.
Q. And is the photostat a true and correct copy of the original?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it on the same grounds as assigned to the admission of exhibit 73, if the Court please, and on the further ground that it purports to be a direction to some undisclosed person and not a part of the record of the company.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it on behalf of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company as being self-serving and not being binding on my client.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I think this is an exhibit which is different from the other record which counsel objected to on the ground that there was no foundation laid to show its accuracy. This is in the witness's own handwriting. He has testified it is a true and correct copy of the original and to the best of his 638 knowledge, he has explained the absence of the original.

By the Court: Well, you haven't developed any circumstances as to why it was made up or what occasioned it and when it was made up, whether it was a part of his records at the time he left Eatsum Company. You haven't given us any particulars about it.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, he testified that it was made out in April, 1946, I believe he said.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir, to the best of my knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Why was it made out?

A. It was an instruction saying—

Q. To whom?

A. Mr. Heitmann.

639 Q. Who was Mr. Heitmann?

A. Mr. Heitmann was an employe of General Confections.

Q. What did you do with it after you made it out?

A. I gave it to Mr. Heitmann.

Q. Did you subsequently see it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. When he had completed the directions on that sheet, he had returned it to me.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the statement that he completed the directions on the sheet.

By the Court: Well, that portion may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. He returned it to you and what did you do with it?

A. We put it in the file, sir.

Q. It became a part of the records of the General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it made in the regular course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have occasion to make other such records?

A. Yes, sir. I have made records to keep track
640 of those things, yes, sir. There was nothing unusual about it.

By Mr. Lockley: I submit Government's Exhibit 13 again, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it.

By the Court: I don't know the purpose of the offer. Is it to refresh his recollection?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor. It is to establish that certain payments were made by another witness whom we will call pursuant to the directions contained on this sheet and to corroborate the witness's own statements that such payments were made and to such extent as it is necessary, to refresh his recollection as to amounts and dates and circumstances. I think it is corroborative testimony. The witness has been saying that he wasn't—

By the Court: Perhaps you should defer your offer until the other witness is called and then the relevancy will appear more clearly than it does now.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By the Court: Did I understand that you are going 641 to offer other evidence as to the search of the records of General Confections and Eatsum, the proprietorship, so that additional foundation may be laid for secondary evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: I can do so, sir. It had not been my intention to do it.

By the Court: I mean, do you intend to do it? In other words, are the Government men who examined these records going to be called?

By Mr. Lockley: We will call a Government agent who will lay further foundation for the absence of the original.

By the Court: Very well. I think you better defer your offer until you have completed your foundation.

By Mr. Lockley: I understand your Honor's ruling to refer specifically to the Exhibits 73-A and 13 which are photostats?

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 92 and ask you if you have seen that document before.

642 By Mr. O'Brien: Is that 73 or 73-A, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: 73-A.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir, I did.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that your signature?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was the balance of the document written by you?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Do you know who did write it?

A. No, sir, I do not. I think it was a Miss Frieda Strum. I am not sure, sir.

Q. Was that done in the ordinary course of your business?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was written?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Was it cleared through the bank?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Then it became a part of the records of General Confections?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

643 By Mr. Lockley: I offer it in evidence, your Honor, both the front and reverse.

By Mr. McConnell: That is objected to. It is not binding on the Shotwell Company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know the endorsements that appear on the reverse side of that check?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Were they written in your presence?

A. No, sir, they were not.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 92.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 93 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Is that your signature?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Was that prepared in the ordinary course of your business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was 644 prepared?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it cleared through the bank?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did it then become a part of the records of the General Confections?
A. Of the General Confections, yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Exhibit No. 93, your Honor.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to Exhibit 93 for the same reason I objected to Exhibit 92.
By the Court: It may be received.
(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 93.)
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you know what was done with these checks after they were written, Exhibits 92 and 93?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. What was done with them?
A. They were given to Mr. Heitmann.
Q. Are you familiar with his signature?
A. Yes, sir, I am.
Q. Is that it that appears thereon?
645 A. Yes, sir it is.
Q. Mr. Heitmann was your employe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 94 for identification and ask you if you have seen that before.
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. And was that kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Do you know who kept it?
A. Part of it was kept by me—part of the writing is mine and part of it was Mr. Hankermyer's.
Q. Mr. Hankermyer?
A. Yes.

Q. Who is Mr. Hankermyer?
A. He was an uncle of mine.
Q. Is he the one who is now dead?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were the entries thereon true and correct at the time they were made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were they made in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it your custom to make such records?
646 A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was the last time you saw the original?
A. Early in February, 1948.
Q. Under what circumstances?
A. When Mr. Huebner was at my house for the records, for the originals.
647 Q. Was this one of the originals that was placed in the envelopes you testified to?
A. The original of that was one of the originals that was placed in the envelope, yes, sir.
Q. Have you seen it since that time?
A. No, sir, I have not.
Q. Is this a true and correct copy of the original?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
By Mr. Lockley: I will offer that at a later time, your Honor.
By the Court: Are you offering this?
By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 95 and ask you if you have seen that before, or the original?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Is that in your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Entirely?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?
648 A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did it become a permanent part of your
A. Yes, sir.
business records?

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Do you know where the original is?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. When was the last time you saw it?

A. Early in February, 1948.

Q. And what were the circumstances? Speak up.

A. When Mr. Huebner was on the sun porch and I was going to give him any records pertaining to the overages of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Have you seen it since that time?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. Did you say this was a true and correct photostat of the original?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I will not offer it at this time, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identifi-
649 cation No. 96 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. In whose handwriting is it?

A. It is in the handwriting of Mr. Hankermyer.

Q. Does any of your handwriting appear on it?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Hankermyer's writing?

A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. Did you see him make any of the entries thereon?

A. I don't recall seeing him specifically write this document.

Q. Were those entries or records made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to make such records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were made, if you know?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the last time you saw the original?

A. Early in February, 1948, on the sun porch
650 of my home.

Q. Under the same circumstances that you have previously testified to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen the original since that time?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 97 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. In whose handwriting is it?

A. In the handwriting of Mr. Hankermyer.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Hankermyer's handwriting?

A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. Was that a record that was made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made, if you know?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. When did you last see the original?

A. Early in February, 1948, on the sun porch of my home.

651 Q. Under what circumstances?

A. Similar circumstances, the same circumstances as the other.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I would like to object to a repetition of the circumstances on the first occasion. The witness said he put some documents in an envelope and then after he talked with his lawyer, Davidson, he decided not to turn them over and he doesn't say and he didn't say he turned them over to anybody.

Now, there is an implication in every one of these questions. The last time he saw the originals, they were in Huebner's possession and, therefore, that he is entitled to come up with something secondary on it.

By the Court: I didn't understand him to say that the last time he saw them they were in Huebner's possession.

By Mr. O'Brien: And they were on the sun porch.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: At his home and Huebner was 652 present, although he has not said he gave any papers to Huebner at the time.

By the Court: He said he gave them to Davidson to photostat and then he said he inquired for them and he couldn't find them. What Davidson said with reference to Huebner having the papers was stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: He did not offer Government's Exhibit 96?

By Mr. Lockley: No.

By the Court: No.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is this a true and correct copy of the original that you last saw—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —in your home?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 98 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?

A. Yes, sir. It appears in the handwriting of 653 Mr. Hankermyer.

Q. You are going to have to speak up again, Mr. Lubben.

A. Mr. Hankermyer, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Hankermyer's writing?

A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the last time you saw the original of this?

A. Early in February, 1948, on the sun porch of my home.

Q. Have you seen it since that time?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 100 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

654 Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?
A. It was prepared by Mrs. Strum or Frieda Seider. It is Strum now. The lady has married since.
Q. Was it prepared at your direction?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Was it part of your regular books and records?
A. Yes, sir, it was, sir.
Q. Is that a true and correct copy of the original?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Where did you last see the original, if you know?
A. I don't recall, sir.
Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 101, and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is prepared?
A. That is my handwriting, sir.
655 Q. When was it prepared?
A. Sir?
Q. Do you know when it was prepared?
A. No, sir. I believe early in May.
Q. Of what year?
A. May of 1946. When I say it was in my handwriting, I mean all of it was in my handwriting with the exception of some computations over here (indicating) in the right hand corner which is not mine.
Q. Do you know whose handwriting it is?
A. Yes, sir. I believe it was Miss Seider's.
Q. Was that a record that was made in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Exhibit 101, your Honor.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as not binding on Shotwell. It is self-serving.
By the Court: It may be received.
656 (Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 101.)
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now with reference to Exhibit 101, will you explain the computations on the left hand side?
A. You mean the computations on the right hand side. There are some there.

Q. I am sorry. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. It shows so many cases of gum drops, spice drops, and so forth, at 10 cents a pound, and then further down on the page it shows so many thousand dozens of Cardinals, Cardinal chocolates, which is a one-pound box chocolate, at $2.25 a dozen, and the total of the gum candies at the top. The premium was $19,518.00, and the total of the chocolates was $14,049.00.

Q. Now I show you Exhibit for identification 102, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I did, sir.

Q. Do you know who prepared Government Exhibit for identification 102?

A. I believe Miss Seider.

Q. And was that record made in the ordinary course of business?

657 A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. And was it your practice to make such records in your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a true and correct record at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it, if the Court please. It is a self-serving document, which is not binding on Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Exhibit, Government's Exhibit 102.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 102.)

By Mr. O'Brien: We make the same objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben—

By the Court: You haven't explained, and we don't understand it, unless you are going into more detail just what you are attempting to prove by it.

658 By Mr. Lockley: I am going to get it in right at this moment.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, will you look at Government's Exhibit 101 and Exhibit 102 and tell me if they have any relationship with each other?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. What is the connection?

A. Well, the longhand is now typed for the gum work, which is the baby spice drops and spice strings and so forth, and the Cardinal chocolates is now typed and the total addition is the same and the—

Q. In other words, the typewritten copy is a copy of that portion of the handwritten exhibit, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, and the two of them are added together, which showed $33,567.00 premium.

Q. Do you know if that premium was paid?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Do you know where?

A. It was paid in several manners, sir.

Q. All right. Take the first payment, if you know.

By the Court: How much was that amount again?

659 By the Witness: $33,567.00, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The first payment, tell us when and where it was made, if you know?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to his reading the memrandum. If he knows that the payments were made, then he can tell how and when they were made and if he saw them and so forth.

By the Court: I don't understand. He cannot read the memorandum as to how the payments were made, if they were made, unless to refresh his recollection as to dates.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you have any recollection as to how that amount of money was paid?

A. Well, I see here on the paper—

Q. Well, independently .f the paper.

A. Well, I know it was paid, sir.

Q. Well, independently of the paper, do you have any present recollection of the manner in which the payment was made?

A. Yes, sir, I do. I remember.

660 By Mr. O'Brien: Did he make the payment or did somebody else?

By the Witness: I made most of it, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, do you remember the circumstances?

A. Well, sir, I remember driving Mr. Huebner to the farm.

Q. When was this?

By Mr. McConnell: Let us have him put away his memorandum and tell us as to what he knows.

661 By the Court: Well, if the memorandum is not a private memorandum, but purports to be part of the books and records, and if that discloses circumstances that refresh his recollection, I see no objection to the use of his books and records. It is not a private memorandum.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, he said he had a recollection of his own. Now, I think we have a right to have his own recollection.

By the Court: If the record refreshes his recollection, I don't see any reason why he can't refer to it. Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, will this memorandum, Exhibit 102, help to refresh your recollection?

A. Yes, sir; it will.

Q. And was it a true and correct memorandum at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. And you said it was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a part of your books and records?

662 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state from that record, just how the payment was made?

A. Well—

Q. And where and when?

A. The total amount was $33,567.00 due, and then it says over here, "Less payments paid to Frank on way to farm, $1,488.00".

Q. Who was Frank?

A. Frank Huebner.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to his reading the document.

By the Court: It is in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I thought he was going to testify as to his payments. That is what the question was.

By the Court: His answer may stand.

By the Witness: The $1,488.00, sir, is tied up with the first shipment of March 25th, calling for 14,880 pounds of gum drops, on which the premium was paid of ten cents a pound, which is $1,488.00, paid to Frank Huebner—paid to Frank on way to farm.

663 Q. Do you know when that was?

A. Within one or two days of March 25, 1946.

Q. By whom was it made?

A. By me, sir.

664 Q. Was anybody else present?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Did you say you were on the way to the farm?

A. Yes.

Q. What farm?

A. This was—at the time, I had a farm in Hillsdale, New Jersey, sir, which later on became the candy factory.

Q. All right. Proceed with the next one.

A. The next item "Paid to Frank in check, $14,000.00."

Q. Do you know who made that payment?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Do you know when?

A. I believe it was some time in April of 1946.

Q. And do you know where in Chicago?

A. Well, either at the Hotel Sherman, sir, or at the laboratory of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And in what form was the payment made?

A. Currency, sir.

Q. Who is the "Frank" referred to?

A. Frank Huebner.

Q. Now will you take the next entry.

A. "Paid to Mr. Krasne for Mr. Cain, $1,450.00."

Q. Who is Mr. Krasne?

665 A. Mr. Krasne, sir, was a customer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in New York City.

Q. Do you know that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with any of the defendants relative to that payment?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. With whom?

A. With Mr. Crane.

Q. When was this?

A. Not Crane—Mr. Cain, sir.

Q. Mr. Cain?

A. Yes.

Q. When was this?
A. Well, in May of 1946, sir.
Q. Who was present?
A. It was a telephone conversation.
Q. Did he call you or did you call him?
A. Mr. Cain called me.
Q. Did he identify himself?
A. Yes, sir, he did.
Q. Did you recognize his voice on the phone?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. What did he say?
666 A. He said, "Dave,"—Mr. and Mrs. Cain had just been to New York just a short time previous—
Q. Is that what he told you?
A. Well, I knew that, sir, and he said that Sal, Sally bought a piece of jewelry—
Q. Who is Sally?
A. His wife.
Q. Mr. Cain's wife?
A. Yes, sir. He said she (his wife) has bought a piece of jewelry from some friend who is a jeweler who is a friend of the Krasne's and "Will you take over $1,450.00 and give it to Mrs. Krasne who will pick up the jewelry and bring it to Chicago on her way through to Palm Springs," and I said, "Yes, sir." I did.
Q. Did he tell you how the payments should be made?
A. Yes, sir. They were to be made out of the cash account.
Q. What do you mean by "out of the cash account"?
A. Well, we were paying him cash, sir. We kept records of the cash that was due him.
Q. All right. Did you go to Mrs. Krasne's?
A. I did, sir.
667 Q. Did you deliver the $1,440.00?
A. The $1,450.00, yes, sir, I did.
Q. Or rather, the $1,450.00. In what form did you deliver it?
A. Currency.
Q. What is the next entry?
A. The next entry is, "Paid to Frank by Hankermyer, $8,450.00." And then there is a total of those figures, sir, of $25,388.00.
Q. Is there a balance left?
A. Yes, sir, of $8,179.00 and on it says, "Paid to Frank by Heitmann. This cleans up allowance on shipments to May 15th."

Q. Was the balance paid?
A. Yes.
Q. By whom?
A. Mr. Heitmann.
Q. Where?
A. Here in Chicago, sir.
Q. Were you present?
A. No, sir, I was not.

By Mr. Kirby: I object and ask that that portion be stricken.

668 By the Court: Well, the portion of that answer where he says Mr. Heitmann paid the money in Chicago will be stricken.

We will now take a recess, members of the jury, for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 112 and ask you if you have seen that before, or the original?
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Now, keep your voice up.
A. Yes, sir, I will. I have.
Q. Was that made in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. As part of the books and records of your business?

By the Court: Which business? The business of the Eatsum or the Confections?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Which business, do you know?
A. Yes, sir. It was of the General Confections, Inc.
Q. That was a part of the books and records of 669 the General Confections?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge, at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know who prepared it?
A. Yes, sir, Miss Strum.
Q. When did you last see the original?

A. On the sun porch of my home, early in February, 1948.

Q. Have you searched for the original since that time?

A. I have, sir.

Q. Have you been able to find it?

A. No, sir, I have not.

By Mr. Lockley: I will offer it later on, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 120 and ask you if you have seen the original of that?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And was that a record that was made in the ordinary course of business?

670 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom?

A. By Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. And was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it made at your instruction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under whose direction? Was it under your direction?

A. Yes, sir. I told her to make it up, so it was my direction, yes, sir.

671 Q. When did you last see the original?

A. Early in February, 1948.

Q. Have you searched—

By the Court: Does that purport to be the General Confections record?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is this a record of the General Confections or Eatsum partnerships?

A. General Confections, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I will offer that later, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification—

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me just a minute, Mr. Lockley. Whose handwriting is this, Mr. Lubben (indicating)?

By the Witness: Miss Feldman's, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 122 for identification and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?
A. Yes, sir.
672 Q. Did you write the balance of the document?
A. I did, sir.
Q. Do you remember where?
A. In the city of Chicago, sir.
Q. When?
A. On or about October 12, 1946.
Q. And is that a record of one of your businesses?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Which one?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Was that a true and correct record at the time it was made?
A. It was, sir.
Q. It is a check, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did that check clear the bank?
A. It did, sir.
Q. Was that then returned to you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you keep it as a part of your ordinary books and records?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 122, your Honor.
673 By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as not binding on Shotwell Manufacturing Company. It is a self-serving document.
By the Court: It may be received.
(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 122.)
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 122-D and ask if you have seen that before.
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Does your signature appear thereon?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recognize the other handwriting?
A. Yes, sir. It is Miss Feldman's, sir.
Q. And when was that prepared?
A. October 7th of 1946.

Q. Was it a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Which business?

A. The business of General Confections, Inc.

Q. Was it a true and correct record at the time it was prepared?

674 A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Was it maintained as a part of your books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

675 By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection as I made to the previous exhibit.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Exhibit 122-D.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 122-D.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, with respect to Exhibit 122-D, what does that purport to be?

By the Court: Is that B or A?

By Mr. Lockley: That is D, as in dog.

By the Witness:

A. This is a cash disbursement sheet, sir, authorizing Miss Feldman to draw a check in the amount of $12,235.00 in cash, and the check to be drawn in cash for payment of overages to Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. How do you know it was for payment of overages to Shotwell?

A. Because it says so right here (indicating.)

Q. What was done after that cash authorization

676 sheet was prepared?

A. I drew a check, sir, in the City of Chicago in payment.

Q. When is that cash authorization sheet dated?

A. October 7, 1946.

Q. Now I show you a check dated October 12, in the amount of $12,235.00. Is that the check that was referred to in the cash authorization slip?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. Now, what did you do with that check?

A. I cashed it here in Chicago, in the City of Chicago.

Q. Did you personally cash it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What endorsement does it bear on the back?
A. It says, "David Lubben O.K. to cash. Edward T. Urban."
Q. Who was Mr. Edward T. Urban?
A. Mr. Urban was associated with Close and Company. It also says—that Mr. Urban is doing above for accommodation only and did not get the money, and it is written on the check in my handwriting, sir.
Q. Mr. Urban endorsed the check as an accommo-
677 dation and you got the cash?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you do with the cash?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner, sir.
Q. Where?
A. The laboratory of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. When?
A. On or about the day that this check was—well, the same day that I cashed the check.
Q. Was there any conversation at that time that you can recall?
A. No, there wasn't. It was paid. The money was handled in the usual course it was handled in when we made payments of that type.
Q. Do you recall what this particular check was in payment for?
A. Well, sir, it was in payment of candy overages, sir.
678 Was there anyone else present in the laboratory at the time you were there with Mr. Huebner?
A. No, sir, but on occasion we went to the laboratory.
By Mr. Kirby: I object to his describing it "on occasion".
By the Court: Yes.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What about on this particular occasion?
A. I can't say any specific occasion, sir.
Q. What sort of laboratory was this?
A. The laboratory where they measure out the flavors or a regular laboratory, sir.
Q. Did you know whether or not people usually worked in there?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object, your Honor. How is that material?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I want to find out whether anyone was in there at the time he was in there with Mr. Huebner.

By the Court: Well, it may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, what happened when you went in with Mr. Huebner, if there were other people working?

679 A. Mr. Huebner would ask them to leave.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I think he has already said he didn't know what happened on this occasion. Is he talking about what happened on this occasion?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Lubben—

By Mr. Kirby: On the 12th.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Lubben, this specific occasion?

A. No.

By Mr. Kirby: I ask to have the answer stricken.

By the Court: Very well. The answer with reference to Huebner asking the other people to leave may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 122-A, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business?

680 A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. Do you know who kept it?

A. Yes, sir. A Miss Feldman.

Q. Were you present at the time?

A. Yes, sir. I was the president of the company.

Q. I meant at the time she actually prepared that record.

A. No, sir, I wasn't sir. It was on her desk and she prepared it.

Q. It was normal practice to prepare such records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct, if you know?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now when did you last see the original of that?
A. Early in March—early in February, 1948, on the sun porch of my home.
Q. Have you made a search for it since that time?
A. I have, sir.
Q. Have you found it?
A. No, sir, I have not.
Q. I show you Exhibit 122-C for identification and ask you if you have seen that record before.
A. Yes, sir, I have.
681 Q. In whose handwriting does it appear?
A. Miss Feldman's, sir.
Q. Was that record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Was it your business practice to keep such records?
A. It was, sir.
Q. Was it a true and correct record at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it kept under your supervision and direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you last see the original?
A. Early in March—early in February, 1948.
Q. Where?
A. On the sun porch of my home.
Q. Have you made a search for the originals since that time?
A. I have, sir.
Q. Have you been able to find it?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I will offer Government's Exhibits 122-A and 122-C at a later time, after I have laid further foundation.
682 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 124 and ask you if you have seen that before.
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Is that your signature thereon?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you prepare the balance of the written part of the document?

A. No, sir. That was prepared by Miss Feldman.

Q. Was that prepared in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Which business?

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. Was that a true and correct document at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the check?

A. Yes, sir, it is a check.

Q. Did it clear through the bank?

A. It did, sir.

Q. Was it then returned to you?

683 A. Yes, sir, it was returned to us.

Q. Is that your endorsemert on the back?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Do you recognize the other endorsement?

A. Yes, sir. It is—

Q. Well, just say yes.

A. Yes, sir, I do recognize the other endorsement, sir.

Q. Was that written on in your presence?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 124 in evidence, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection as I have made to the other check.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 124.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 124-A and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Does your signature appear thereon?

684 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you write the balance of the document?

A. No, sir. It was written by Miss Feldman.

Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.
Q. Under your supervision and direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Was that a part of your business records?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 124-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it. It is a self-serving document.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 124-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Mr. Lubben, with reference to Exhibit No. 124-A, what does that purport to be?

A. This is a request to draw a cash check for 685 overages to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. In what amount?
A. In the amount of $319.50.
Q. What is the date?
A. November 7, 1946.
Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit 124, as check—
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what is the check date?
A. November 8, 1946.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $319.50.
Q. To whom is it drawn?
A. It is drawn to cash, sir.
686 Q. Who endorsed it?
A. I endorsed it. It was endorsed by me, sir.
Q. Did you get the money?
A. No, sir. It has another endorsement too.
Q. What is the other endorsement?
A. Edward—"O. K. to cash, Edward T. Urban."
Q. Was that placed thereon in your presence?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Well, did you get the money?
A. I did, sir.
Q. What did you do with it?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Where?
A. At the offices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in Chicago, in the laboratory.
Q. When?
A. On or about the date I cashed the check.
Q. Was anyone else present?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you recall any of the conversation?
A. No, sir. Nothing other than in the conversations we have had before with the payments of the money and the usual method of dividing the money, and so forth.
687 Q. But nothing specific?
A. No, sir.
Q. What was the purpose for which that payment was made?
A. To pay for an overage on candy.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 126 and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. Did you write the balance of it?
A. No, sir. It was written by Miss Feldman.
Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. In which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?
A. It was, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct?
A. Correct, sir. Or, it is, sir, now.
Q. Was that check canceled through the bank and returned to you?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
688 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 126-D and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Is that your signature that appears on that bottom?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know in whose handwriting the balance of it is prepared?
A. Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. And when was it prepared?
A. On November the 7th, sir, 1946.
Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Was it a true and correct record?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it kept under your supervision and direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.

689 By Mr. McConnell: I object to it for the same reason I objected to the others. It is self-serving.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 126-D.

By the Court: Did you offer the check?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, 126.

By the Court: Did I rule on that?

By Mr. Lockley: I was under the impression that you had, your Honor.

By the Court: 126 and 126-D may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 126 and 126-D.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, what does Government's Exhibit No. 126-D purport to be?

A. It is a cash disbursement slip, sir, showing the amount of overages for certain invoices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. What was the amount of overage?
A. $2,004.00, sir.

690 Q. Is there any indication of the exact nature of the invoices?

A. Yes, sir. It gives the invoice numbers and the amount of overages for those particular invoices, and then it is added together, the number of pounds.

Q. Now, was that amount paid?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. By whom?
A. By me, sir.

Q. Where?

A. In the laboratory of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company here in Chicago.

Q. And to whom?

A. Mr. Frank Huebner.

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember any conversation at that time?

A. No more than—no more outstanding than the other ones when I paid them money and there was no different way we paid it.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that statement and ask that it be stricken. He either does or doesn't re-691 member what was said.

By the Court: I think it is fairly responsive.

By Mr. Kirby: I understand it was divided in piles. Is that what he means? I honestly am confused myself, your Honor, by that answer.

By the Court: Well—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you answer?

A. Yes, sir, I can answer.

By Mr. Kirby: On that specific occasion, now?

By the Witness: Yes, sir, because the pattern didn't change, sir, in the method of payment.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You mean every instance was the same?

A. Yes, sir, every instance was the same except several shipments—several payments were made by other people and several of them pertained to some other money, sir, but all of these we have been talking about here were all the same, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I must apologize to the Court,
692 but I am confused. He is talking about payments made by others. He excepts those as a different pattern. Of course I wonder what was done with this money, if he can say—

By the Court: I don't think it is very clear, Mr. Lubben, what you mean when you say it was made the same as the others that were made by you. Do you mean that on each one of these occasions when you made payment to Mr. Huebner he divided it into three piles?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. Each time I paid Mr.

Huebner, Mr. Huebner would bring a recap sheet out of his pocket and he would compare it with my figures.

When he was satisfied the figures were correct for the amount of invoices involved, the money would be counted on the bed. It lay on the table or on the bed and the money would be divided into three piles and then Mr. Huebner would take one pile and he would put it in his one pocket and say, "This is for me," and take 693 another pile and put it in this pocket and say—

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. You have got the horses before the others, haven't you?

By the Court: Wait until he completes his answer.
694 By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me—

By the Witness: (Continuing) —"and this pile is for Harold Sullivan."

By Mr. O'Brien: I am interested in knowing where he got the other pile. He has got two pockets full now. Where did he put the third?

By the Court: He will be turned over to you for cross examination and you can inquire of him at that time.

695 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 126-A and ask you if you have seen that document before?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Is that a record kept in your ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which business?

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. Was it kept under your supervision and at your direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a true and correct record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you last see the original?

A. Early in February, 1948, on the sun porch of my home.

Q. Have you made a search for the original since that time?

A. I have, sir.

Q. Did you find it?

A. No, sir.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit for iden-
696 tification 126-B and ask you if you have seen that document before?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?

A. It is in the handwriting of Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. She was your office manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. At your direction or under your supervision?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it your practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a true and correct record, to the best of your knowledge?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Do you know where the original is?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. When was the last time you saw the original?

A. Early in March—or early in February of 1948, on the sun porch of my home.

Q. Have you attempted to locate it since that time?

697 A. I have.

Q. Have you been successful?

A. I have not, sir.

698 By Mr. Lockley: I will withhold offering 126-A and 126-B until a later time, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 133, and ask you if you have seen that document before?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Does it bear your signature?

A. It does, sir.

Q. Was the balance of the document written in your handwriting?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Will you turn it over on its other side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know whose signatures appear thereon?

A. Yes, sir; my signature, and then it says, "Okay to cash only."

Q. Don't testify from it.
A. Pardon me, sir.
Q. Were those signatures written in your presence?
A. They were, sir.
699 Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of your business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Is it a true and correct copy?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. This is a check. Did it clear the bank and then come back to you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was kept in the ordinary course of business thereafter?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government Exhibit 133, your Honor.
By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection that I have to the other checks, if the Court please.
By the Court: It may be received.
(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 133.)
700 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 133-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?
By the Court: 133?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir; 133-A.
By the Witness:
A. Yes, sir; I have.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Does your signature appear thereon?
A. Yes, sir; it does.
Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. Did you prepare the document in full?
A. No; it was prepared by Miss Feldman.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to keep such records in your business?

A. It was, sir.

701 By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 133-A.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it, self serving.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 133-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, what is Exhibit 133-A?

A. It is a request, sir—it is a cash disbursement ticket, and it is a request for Miss Feldman to draw a check for cash in the amount of $17,190.25 for Shotwell.

Q. And how do you know it is for Shotwell?

A. Because, sir, it lists here so many—75,660 pounds of drops at 10 cents, and 52,704 pounds of Cardinal chocolates at 18¾ cents, making a total of $17,408.00.

Q. What is the amount again?

A. $17,408.00.

702 Q. Now, I show you a check, which is exhibit No. 133, and ask you if there is any relation between those two exhibits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Turn the check over and tell me the signatures that appear on the back.

A. My signature, sir, and below my signature it says, "O.K. to cash only, Edward T. Urban." And in pencil, "Close & Company."

Q. And what did you do with that check?

A. I gave this check, sir, to my brother-in-law, James Moran.

Q. To your brother-in-law?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. On or about December 4, sir.

Q. Did you give him any instructions at that time?

A. I did, sir.

Q. What were they?

A. To hold—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to what he told his brother-in-law outside of the presence of my client.

703 By the Court: Yes. Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Very well, your Honor. We will bring in the brother-in-law later.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Lubben, who got the $17,190.25 represented by this check?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. McConnell: I object, unless he—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If you know.

By the Court: Wait a minute. The objection is made and I didn't hear you.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it unless he handled the transaction himself. He can't testify from hearsay.

By the Court: Frame your question again.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked him, sir, "If you know."

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you tell who got this check; do you know?

By the Court: He said his brother-in-law did.

704 By Mr. Lockley: But who got the money after the check was cashed?

By the Court: I suppose very obviously that calls for conversation that he had with his brother-in-law, as to what the brother-in-law did, and the objection is made and I will have to sustain it on the ground that it is hearsay, unless there is other direct evidence that you have, if he talked to one of these men, or one of the defendants. If you have that type of evidence, good and well. But then if you do have, you better reach it directly.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you have any conversation on or around December—the early part of December, 1946, with any one of the defendants?

A. I did, sir.

Q. And with which one?

A. Mr. Frank Huebner, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. In the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. Huebner.

705 Q. Anyone else?

A. No, sir.

Q. And what was that conversation?

A. The conversation was, sir; that I come in to make a payment for overages that I owed him, and I didn't—

By Mr. McConnell: Let's have the conversation.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Go on.

A. I didn't have the money with me, sir. And I said I expected to pick up the money here some place in Chicago, and that I would see that he got it within the next few days.

Q. All right. And then?

A. I told him, sir, that I had to go back to New York and that my brother-in-law, Jimmy Moran, would pay him, would bring the money over.

Q. And what did he say, if anything?

A. He didn't like it, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object and move it be stricken.

Q. What did he say?

706 A. He said, "Why haven't you got the money? And I said, "Well, the customers haven't paid me and I just don't have the money."

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the conversation. It has nothing to do with direct evidence of payment of the money.

By the Court: It is conversation with one of the defendants.

By Mr. O'Brien: I still move to strike his statement about he didn't like it.

By the Court: I deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: He didn't like it, that particular part.

707 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did he say anything other than what you have already testified to?

A. Yes, sir. He was furious.

Q. Did he say anything?

A. Yes, sir. "Why haven't you got the money?"

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike that.

By the Witness: I said, "I will have it before the next few days. In Chicago I am going to collect some money, or I will get the money."

By the Court: The statement that Huebner was furious, may be stricken out.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, what is the date of the check?

A. It is dated December 4, 1946.

Q. Will you turn it over and tell us what day it cleared the bank?

A. December 20th. It was cashed at Mid City Bank on December 20th.

Q. And do you know where the Mid City Bank is?

A. Yes, sir; Madison and Halsted Street, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Ex-
708 hibit for identification No. 157, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Did you receive that from the Defendants, or from the corporation?

A. Yes, sir; from Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

A. And in what connection?

A. For the sale of some corn syrup, sir.

Q. Was that a record that was sent to you in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it subsequently preserved by you as a part of the records of your office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a true and correct record at the time it was received?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the record in connection with what business?

A. The record, sir, was in connection with the business of Reserve Trading Company, Inc.

709 Q. I think you stated that that was a wholly owned subsidiary of General Confections?

A. It was, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 157 in evidence, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Exhibit 157-A—

By the Court: What do you call it? What is the name of this document?

By the Witness: That's an invoice, sir.

By the Court: An invoice?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. It means I owed them money.

By the Court: An invoice from Shotwell to Reserve Trading?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. They made it to General Confections, but it was Reserve Trading, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was that prepared by you?

A. No, sir.

Q. By whom was it prepared, if you know?

A. By the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: It may be received.

710 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government Exhibit—

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to note an objection to it, your Honor. It is outside the scope of the indictment, and the bill of particulars.

By the Court: Let me see the document again.

(Document handed to the Court.)

By the Court: Well, is there any date on this Mr. Lubben?

711 By the Witness: No, sir; there isn't any date on it.

By the Court: Have you established the time when this transaction is supposed to have taken place?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir; I had not.

By the Court: Well, I think you should.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you state the time of the transaction referred to in this invoice?

A. Yes, sir. I believe it was around October, 1946.

By the Court: The Exhibit may be received, and I will deny counsel's motion to strike.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 157.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 157-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

712 Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was it made?

A. It was made, sir, on October 17.

Q. In connection with what business?

A. Reserve Trading Company—Reserve Trading Corporation, sir.

Q. Was that a true and correct record at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir. I signed it.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 157-A, in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection, your Honor, as I did to 157.

By the Court: Well, I don't believe I fully comprehend or understand the scope of your objection, or what it refers to.

By Mr. O'Brien: I say it is not within the scope of the bill of particulars.

By the Court: In what way isn't it within the bill of particulars?

By Mr. O'Brien: Because the bill of particulars doesn't charge us with any such receipt.

713 By Mr. Lockley: I think it does, your Honor, and I think I can convince counsel.

By the Court: I don't know as yet that it appears just what this leads to. I am assuming that counsel is going to connect it up. Later on, if you have a valid motion to strike, I will entertain it.

It may be received in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 157-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 157-B, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Is that your name that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you write the balance of it?

A. Yes, sir. No. No, sir, I didn't write the balance. It was written by Miss Feldman.

Q. Is that record kept in the ordinary course of business?

714 A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. What business?

A. Reserve Trading Corporation, sir.

Q. And when was it prepared?

A. October 17, 1946.

Q. Is that a true and correct record?

A. It is, sir.

Q. And is it maintained by you as a part of the records of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 157-B in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: Why don't you offer them all altogether, Mr. Lockley? My objection will stand to the three.

By the Court: The Exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 157-B.)

By Mr. Lockley: Do you object to the offer?

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection to all three of those checks.

715 By Mr. Lockley: Do you stipulate that the witness would answer the same questions with respect to 157-C?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Well, you better—

By Mr. Lockley: Lay the foundation? All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Exhibit for identification 157-C, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a record made and kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business?

A. Reserve Trading Corporation.

Q. And when was it prepared?

A. October 17, 1946.

Q. And do you know by whom?

A. By Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was pre-

716 pared?

A. It was, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 157-C in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: The same objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 157-C.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, with reference to Exhibits 157 and 157-A, B, and C, will you examine those and tell me if they are in any way related to each other?

A. Yes, sir.

717 Q. In what way?

A. Well, sir—

Q. Speak up.

A. The total of these three checks, sir, is $30,796.98. One check is for $10,000.00, another one for $10,000.00 and one for $10,796.98, and they are in payment of this invoice.

Q. And what is the amount of the invoice?

A. The amount of the invoice is $30,796.98.

Q. That was the business of the Reserve Trading Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that billed?

A. This was billed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company to General Confections, and then it was changed to Reserve—the word Reserve was written on top.

Q. Was the billing then in error on the part of Shotwell?

A. It was, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the question?

By Mr. Lockley: Was the billing in error?

By Mr. Lockley:

718 Q. Was it supposed to have been sent to Reserve or to General Confections, do you know, at this time?

A. It was supposed to have been sent to Reserve Trading Corporation, sir.

Q. Were they both at the same location?

A. They were, sir.

Q. And what was the product involved in that shipment?

A. Corn syrup, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any of that corn syrup?

A. No, sir; I didn't, but I—no, sir; I didn't.

Q. What was done with it, do you know?

A. Yes, sir, it was sold—reshipped to customers of the Reserve Trading Company.

Q. So those three checks are in payment of the invoice price?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 158 and ask you if you have seen that before?

By the Court: Did he say it was the invoice, 157, that covers corn syrup?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

719 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Have you seen that before, Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir; I have, sir.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Did you prepare the balance of the document?

A. I did, sir.

Q. About when?

A. On October 12th, sir.

Q. Is that a record that is kept in the ordinary course of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which business?

A. Reserve Trading Corporation.

Q. Is that a true and correct record?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it for the same reason that I objected to the other checks, not binding on the corporation.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 158 in evidence.

720 By the Court: Well, I assume you are going to connect it up.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: Make it relevant.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, immediately.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 158.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 158-A and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Is that a record that was made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Which business?

A. Reserve Trading Corporation, sir.

Q. When was it made?

A. On or about—on October 17th, 1946.

Q. Is it a true and correct record?

721 A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Was it your custom to keep such records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 158-A in evidence.

Just a moment, sir. I would like to lay a further foundation.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that your name that appears on the back, your signature, I mean?

A. Yes, sir; that is my signature.

Q. Did you cash that yourself?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. I call your attention to the penciled notations. Were you present when those were placed upon the check?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer the exhibit into evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, may I ask a question?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You say you were present when they were put on. When were they put on?

722 A. When the bank teller—the man that cashed the check was making some kind of figures on what kind of bills to give me.

By the Court: You refer to these pencil notations here?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: They were made by the bank teller?

By the Witness: Yes, sir; as far as I can remember, sir.

By the Court: The check may be received in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 158-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification 158-B and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

723 Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which business?

A. Reserve Trading Corporation.

Q. When was that record made?

A. October 17, 1946.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your custom to keep such records?

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as self-serving.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer 158-B into evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it, your Honor, on the ground that our invoice was to General Confections, and there was no authority from us to change it.

By the Court: What do you call this paper?

724 By the Witness: That's a request for Miss Feldman —it is a cash disbursement ticket, sir.

By the Court: All right, it may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 158-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, you stated that you had purchased some corn syrup from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company through the medium of Reserve Trading Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The three checks which you have identified, 157, 157-A—rather, 157-A, B, and C, paid for the price shown on the invoice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any additional premium that you paid in connection with that purchase?

A. There was, sir.

Q. And what was the amount of that premium per pound, or gallon, or however it was computed?

A. By the pound, sir. Seven cents a pound.

725 Q. Seven cents a pound. How many pounds—can you determine from this how many pounds were purchased from this invoice?

A. It appears to be the total of these figures here, sir, where it shows for the weight. It appears to be 513,282 pounds.

By the Court: Two hundred what?

By the Witness: 513,282 pounds at six cents a 726 pound.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Six cents a pound.

A. Was the invoice price.

Q. The invoice price.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said the additional price was how much?

A. Seven cents a pound.

Q. Now, I show you Exhibit No. 145-B and ask you what that purports to be.

A. This is a request to—cash—for Miss Feldman to draw a cash check for Shotwell for $35,928.81.

Q. And is that in your handwriting?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Will you read it.

A. It says, "Reserve Trading Corporation, 40 West 170th Street, October 17, 1946."

By Mr. O'Brien: That isn't in evidence.

By the Court: What?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is not in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, it is.

By the Court: 158-B is in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. Sorry.

By the Witness:

727 A. It says, "Cash". Then in parenthesis, "Shotwell, amount $35,929.81 for overage on syrup purchase at rate seven cents a pound on their invoice No. 191554."

And that is 191554, sir.

And I say, "I have already given them $10,000.00 so all we are now giving is $25,929.81."

728 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And here is a check for cash in the amount of $10,000 dated October 12. Does that have any connection with that transaction?

A. Yes, sir; it does.

Q. What is that connection?

A. Well, this is the ten thousand dollars that I gave them.

Q. And when did you give that?

A. I gave it to them, sir.
Q. To whom?
A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.
Q. Where?
A. At the offices of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. And when?
A. Around October 12, sir. On or about October 12.
Q. Was anyone else present?
A. No, sir; it was in the laboratories of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Do you remember any specific instance at that time?
A. Yes, sir. I think that was the day I paid that invoice over there, sir. If I could refresh myself with those 729 three checks.
Q. You mean these checks.
A. Yes, sir. I think that was the time I paid that. No, sir. I paid these three when I paid the balance of the money. I remember the transaction about these three checks, sir.
Q. All right. Now the ten thousand dollars was paid about when?
A. October 12, sir, 1946.
Q. And what is the date of the cash authorization slip?
A. The date of the cash authorization slip is October 17, 1946.
Q. And in what amount is the second balance?
A. $25,929.81.
Q. I show you Government Exhibit 158-A, which is a check in that amount, and ask you if there is any relation between those two documents?
A. Yes, sir. Those two documents go together to make up $35,929.81.
Q. Now, with respect to the twenty-five thousand odd dollars, what did you do with it?
A. I cashed it, sir.
730 Q. You cashed the check?
A. Yes, sir.
731 Q. And what did you do with the cash?
A. I gave the money to Mr. Huebner, sir.
Q. Where?
A. In the offices of Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. In Chicago?
A. Yes, sir. In the laboratory.
Q. When?
A. Oh, no. Wait a minute, sir. No, sir. This money, sir, here, at this time, sir, I believe this money was given to Mr. Graflund, this money here, this $25,929.00 was given to Mr. Graflund.
Q. Who is Mr. Graflund?
A. Mr. Graflund, sir, was the comptroller of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. In what way did you—I mean, at whose instructions or direction, if any, did you give it to Mr. Graflund?
A. On Mr. Huebner's, sir.
Q. When was this conversation with Mr. Huebner?
A. This conversation, sir, was in the laboratory of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company when I brought the money to pay him.
Q. And do you recall any of the details of the con-
732 versation?
A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner told me to—on the corn syrup transaction to take the money down and give it to Stanley Graflund as Stanley was getting wise that there was a lot of cash—there was some cash overages over there and to tell him it was just for the corn syrup and give it to him and don't tell him anything else.
Q. That was Mr. Huebner's language to you?
A. That was Mr. Huebner's language, sir.
By the Court: It is four-thirty, counsel. We will be in recess now, members of the jury, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

753 DAVID G. LUBBEN, called as a witness heretofore on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued)

By the Court: You may proceed.
By the Witness: Your Honor, I would like to correct a little testimony that I gave yesterday, and I feel that I am in error in the—

By the Court: Well, you have that right.

By the Witness: Shall I go ahead?

By the Court: You may state it.

By the Witness: Yesterday, sir, when the—

By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness: Yesterday, when Mr.—when the prosecutor here gave me three checks on which the names 754 were cut out, I remember the transaction of giving the checks to Mr. Huebner, and I thought that that was the time I had gone to see Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan, but that wasn't the time, sir. I went to see him on another time but it wasn't in regard to those three checks, around February 19th, it wasn't at that time, sir.

I did go, however, to see Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan on another date. The exact date, I don't remember, but I went there, to their offices.

By Mr. McConnell: Did I understand you to say that these conversations with Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan did not take place as you testified to?

By the Witness: Sir, the conversation—the conversation I had with Sullivan did take place, but it did not take place on that day. The conversation with Byron Cain was a conversation where I went and I believe it was with reference to sole payments, where I was to bring the cash money home, and it was not with reference to the checks.

755 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did I understand then that you actually had the conversations?

A. Oh, yes, sir, I had the conversation and I had the conversation with Mr. Sullivan and I had a conversation with Mr. Cain.

Q. But you were in error as to the time?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the use of the word "error" by counsel.

By the Court: The witness stated he was in error so I don't suppose counsel is assuming something he doesn't know.

By Mr. Kirby: We can't take his word that it was an error. We have to abide by the witness's testimony that it was an error.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By the Witness: Sir, I spoke to him but it wasn't at the time of the three checks, at the time we had these checks come back, or the money wouldn't be taken in checks. The checks were returned to me later by Mr. Huebner.

756 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Has anything transpired since you were on the stand yesterday that more nearly refreshes your recollection as to what the time of those meetings was?

A. Yes, sir. To the best of my recollection, it was some time around September or October of 1946, and I believe, sir—I remember, sir, that it was—there was a time when we were having a little difficulty getting up the payments, the cash payments in time, and that is the time, to the best of my recollection that I talked to Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Is your testimony changed in any respect other than the conversation instead of taking place I believe you earlier said, around February, that it took place later in the year?

A. Later in the year, sir, but it wasn't in regard to the checks. The checks, I remember Mr. Huebner came and gave me the checks back and said that they decided they didn't want to take them.

Q. Well, have you arrived at this more refreshed recollection just through your own mental processes 757 or have you had something that you have seen that helps to refresh your recollection?

A. Sir, I have seen nothing but each day and each night I ask for divine guidance to remember as correctly as I can possibly can.

This happened back in 1946 and I am trying very hard and I don't want to say anything that is not true. I am doing the very best I possibly can.

758 Q. Now, is there anything else that you have testified to that you wish to change in any respect?

A. No, sir. Just—that is all.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 159 for identification and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Do you know where it came from?

A. Yes, sir. The invoice came from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Was that a document received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it a document that you ordinarily kept in your business records?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Was it a true and correct document to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. By the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. And you received it through the mail, or 759 do you know how?

A. I don't know, sir, how we received it.

Q. Do you know about the time you received it?

A. Around October the 18th of 1946.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 159.

By Mr. O'Brien: We object to the penciled notations, if the Court please, as not being a part of the invoice, as far as we are concerned.

By the Court: Are you offering it?

By Mr. Lockley: In full, your Honor.

By the Court: Then you better lay a further foundation as to the penciled notations.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I direct your attention to the pencil and pen notations on the bottom, and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, sir, I have seen them before.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting they are?

A. Miss—it appears to be Miss Feldman's, sir.

Q. And were those notations or records made in the ordinary course of business?

760 A. Yes, they were.

Q. Which business?

A. The—well, the invoice is directed to General Confections, Incorporated, but the records were kept—the records of this transaction were of Reserve Trading Company, Inc. The purchase was entered in that book.

Q. Were those true and correct pen and pencil notations to the best of your knowledge?

By Mr. O'Brien: I also object, your Honor, on the ground it is beyond the scope of the bill of particulars.

By the Court: Well, the exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 159.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government Exhibit for identification 159-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Is the balance of the document in your handwriting?

761 A. No, sir, it is not.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?

A. It appears to be the handwriting of Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

762 Q. Was it a true and correct record at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a check, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that cleared through the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then returned to your office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you keep it then in your ordinary course of your business as a part of your books and records?

A. Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection to it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have the same objection, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 159-A in evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 159-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

763 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 159-B and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.
Q. Is that your handwriting that appears on the bottom?
A. Yes, sir, it is my signature.
Q. Did you write the balance of the document?
A. No, sir, I did not.
Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was, sir.
Q. Which business?
A. The Reserve Trading Corporation.
Q. Was that a true and correct record at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. This is a check. Was it cleared through the bank?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. And the cancelled check was then kept as a part of your records?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: The same objection.
764 By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 159-B.
By Mr. O'Brien: The same objection as to the last check.
By the Court: It may be received.
(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 159-B.)
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I call your attention to Exhibit 159. Will you describe what that is?
A. Yes, sir. It is an invoice for corn syrup.
Q. And to whom is it directed?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. And for what product?
A. Corn syrup, sir.
Q. How much?
A. Two—I believe it is 274 barrels.
Q. Will you remember to keep your voice up, Mr. Lubben?
A. Well, it is for 187,810 pounds.
Q. What is the price?
A. Six cents per pound.
Q. What is the total price?
765 A. $11,268.60.
Q. All right. Now, I show you checks dated November 13th, Exhibits 159-A and 159-B.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I interrupt, Mr. Lockley. Are you asking the total price? Are you extending the poundage times the six cents?

766 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that the total price which is shown on the invoices itself?

A. It is the total price, sir. That is typed on the invoice.

Q. That is the total weight of the corn syrup at 6 cents a pound, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. The only thing, sir, is the invoice here was typed by the Shotwell office as to the amount of dollars, and over here (indicating) there is four cars of corn syrup, forty seven thousand some odd pounds, and 48, 43, and then there is a line drawn under it, and in pencil the total of the corn syrup, 187,110 pounds.

Q. Do you know who made the total of the poundage?

A. It appears to be the handwriting of Miss Feldman.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think he has answered the question, Mr. Lockley, as to whether the dollars are poundage times the six cent price.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you answer that question?

767 A. Yes, sir. This is the poundage of that. The total poundage times six cents, and there is the total, $11,268.60.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 159-A, and ask you if that check was sent in part payment of that invoice?

A. It was, sir.

Q. And how much is the amount of the check?

A. It is $6,000.

Q. To whom is it written?

A. To the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And by whom is it signed?

A. By me, sir.

Q. By anybody else?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there a stamp above your signature?

A. Yes, sir, Reserve Trading Corporation, sir.

Q. So the Reserve Trading Company had a checking account, did it?

A. It did, sir.

Q. Where?

A. At the Manufacturers Trust Company, 1819 Broadway.

Q. Is that drawn on the Manufacturers Trust
768 Company?

By Mr. O'Brien: The check speaks for itself, your Honor.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you turn over the check and look on the back?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom was it endorsed?

A. By the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit 159-B, a check for $5,268.00. To whom is that check written?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. And by whom is it signed?

A. It is signed—it is a Reserve Trading Corporation check, signed by me.

769 Q. What is the total of the two checks I have handed you?

A. The total is $11,268.60.

Q. Is that also the total of the amount shown due on the invoice?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Will you turn over the second check and tell me by whom it is endorsed?

A. It is endorsed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Now, if you know, Mr. Lubben, did you pay any further money for that particular shipment of corn syrup?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Do you know how much?

A. Seven cents per pound.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 160 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. It is, sir. It is a Reserve Trading Corporation check.

Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordi-
770 nary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did this clear through the bank?
A. It did, sir.
Q. It was then returned to you?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection to these checks. Oh, this is a cash check?
By Mr. Lockley: It is cash.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to the cash. It is not connected up with my client.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 160 in evidence, your Honor.
By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 160.)

771 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 160-C and ask if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Does your handwriting appear on it?
A. Yes, sir. My signature is on it, sir.
Q. Do you know who wrote the balance of the document?
A. Yes, sir. Miss Feldman.
Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. Was it kept under your supervision or direction?
A. It was, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. May I have it just a second.
By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection as I made to these other documents, as being self-serving.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's 772 Exhibit 160-C.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it too, Your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 160-C.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 160-A and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Does your handwriting appear thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The balance of the document, is that typewritten?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it prepared under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a part of the bookkeeping records of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

773 Q. Of which business?

A. The Reserve Trading Company, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

774 By Mr. McConnell: Same objection as to the others. It is self-serving.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection as to the checks.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 160-A.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 160-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, you testified that you were required to pay seven cents a pound overage for that particular shipment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 160-A and ask you to describe that document.

A. Well, this is a slip of paper, sir, that is—that calls for 187,810 pounds of syrup at seven cents a pound, or a total of $13,146.70 and it is marked paid and my initial is on it, sir.

Q. Now I call your attention to Government's Exhibit 159 and ask you how many pounds of syrup were invoiced.

775 A. 187,810 pounds, sir.

Q. And that is the same amount that appears on Exhibit 160-A?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now the seven cents a pound, what would be the amount?

A. $13,146.70.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 160, a check for $13,146.70, and ask you if those documents have any relationship.

A. Yes, sir, they do. This is the cash check that was drawn for this money.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 160-C and ask if you can explain what that document is.

A. This is the request for cash disbursements that was made out, or I requested the check to be drawn for $13,146.70.

Q. What does the cash disbursement slip say on the face of it?

A. $13,146.70.

Q. Is there any description as to whom it should be paid?

A. Yes, sir. It says, "Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company."

776 Q. For what?

A. It says, "Difference between cost price on 187,810 pounds at thirteen cents and billed price of 187,810 pounds at six cents", and the difference, sir—there are some additions, and the total price of this merchandise was at thirteen cents a pound.

Q. Now did you have a conversation with any one of the defendants prior to entering into this transaction of corn syrup?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know when that was?

A. I believe it was around September or October, sir, of 1946.

Q. And was that in person, by telephone, or how?

A. No, sir. It was on one of my trips to Chicago, I believe.

Q. What was said at that time?

A. He said he had a lot of corn syrup on hand.

By Mr. McConnell: Where was this?

777 Q. In Chicago? Are you able to fix it more definitely?

A. In Chicago, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Where?

By the Witness: Sir?

By Mr. O'Brien: Go ahead.

By the Witness: In Chicago.

By Mr. O'Brien: We object to that, your Honor. We would like to have him state the place.

By the Court: Well, where was it in Chicago? What place was it?

By the Witness: Well, sir, the only place I ever met Mr. Huebner was at a hotel or in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. This specific conversation, I can't tell where it took place, but it was in Chicago. That I know. And he told me that they had a lot of corn syrup on hand, and it was coming in from manufacturers, and corn had loosened up, and it wasn't so hard to get, and they thought that they would refuse the shipment from the corn people that supplied it.

778 In other words, they would say, "Don't ship us a carload". They would feel that they wouldn't want it and if things tightened up, they wouldn't be able to get corn syrup, so they said, "We would like to sell this", so I said, "All right, sir, we will buy it."

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you make any arrangements for payment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?

Br Mr. McConnell: Let us have the conversation, and not the conclusion he is drawing.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the conversation?

A. I asked Mr. Huebner how much he wanted for the corn syrup. I think he wanted more than I actually gave him. Mr. Huebner finally told me—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to what he thinks.

By the Witness: I am not thinking, sir—

By the Court: Just relate the conversation.

779 By the Witness:

A. Mr. Huebner told me he wanted seven cents a pound in cash, and six cents a pound on an invoice.

By Mr. ckley:

Q. Was there any further conversation at that time?

A. There was further, sir, but I just can't pick the words out.

Q. Now, with respect to this check to cash in the amount of $13,146.70, will you look at the reverse side and tell me who endorsed it?

A. The check was endorsed by David Lubben, and below it, it says, "O.K. to cash only, Edward T. Urban."

Q. Who was Edward T. Urban?

A. He is a partner of Close and Company in Chicago.

Q. You knew him, did you?

A. I did, sir. This check was cashed in Chicago, sir.

780 Q. Were you present at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of Mr. Urban's endorsement?

A. He knew somebody in the bank and I cashed it here, otherwise I wouldn't be able to cash the check here unless someone knew me.

Q. After you had received the money from the bank, what did you do?

A. I gave it to—no. I went back to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with it, sir, and I went upstairs in the laboratory and the money was counted.

Q. Now, when was this?

A. I would say one day either way that this check was cashed.

Q. Can you look at the reverse side of the check and tell when you got the cash?

A. On November 8th. The check was written on November 7th. That meant I came to Chicago at that time, and I was here on November 8th.

Q. All right. This was November 8th at the Shotwell laboratory?

781 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No, sir.

Q. What happened?

A. Oh, when I gave the money for the corn syrup, sir, I was told after he counted the money, I was told to take it down and give it to Stanley Graflund and tell him specifically, "This is the overage on the corn syrup."

Q. Did you do that?

A. Yes, sir, and I was told not to ever mention anything about candy overages, just on the corn syrup, and I went down and gave it to Mr. Graflund, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Who told you that? Was that part of the conversation?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. That was part of the conversation with Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, did you also receive an invoice from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in your transactions with them?

782 A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Can you remember any occasions when you made purchases for which you received no invoice?

A. Yes, sir, I can.

Q. Can you recall the first one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it?

A. Sometime in March, early in March. It was probably the 3rd or 4th.

Q. Of what year?

A. 1946, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with any of the defendants at that time?

A. Yes, sir. Prior to that, I had a conversation with Mr. Frank Huebner.

Q. And can you state about when the conversation was?

A. Well, not just right around that time, sir. It might have been anywhere from September to February 19th until the 25th—anywhere from the 19th of February to the last or so of the month, right in there, of 1946.

Q. Did you see Mr. Huebner at that time or was it a telephone conversation, or how?

A. I saw Mr. Huebner, sir.

783 Q. And where was this?

A. In the city of Chicago.

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. No, sir, there were not.

Q. Was there a conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I still would like to know where, if he can say.

By the Witness: Sir, I believe it was in the offices of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Any special office? Can you fix it any further than that?

A. No, sir. I believe—I think this conversation was down town, sir. I just—I just feel it was down town. There is something that tells me inside of me it was down town.

Q. But you don't know for sure?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did have a conversation, you are sure of that?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Well, what happened at the time?

A. Mr. Huebner told me that he—you see, I told 784 Mr. Huebner I was leaving the partnership and I was starting a new company and that we were going to continue the method of business, continue on as we had before, as we bought before, and we would like to continue on and so forth.

I also believe, sir, that this conversation took place at the time I was making an accounting of the money that I owed on the partnership for the overages.

He said, "Well, I can get you a lot of merchandise." So, Mr. Huebner told me, "I can get you a lot of merchandise, Dave, and you got a chance to make real dough. I will do all I can to help you get started and give you some real volume, but we have to have all cash."

I said, "What do you mean, all cash?"

He says, well, the cost of merchandise that I had been invoiced previous, plus the overage added together—let's see. If I gave him ten cents and the cost of an item was thirteen cents a pound, he wanted twenty-three cents a pound cash, all cash.

He says, "If you can do that, I can get you a lot of merchandise." I said, "I can." He told me he would 785 not give me any bill; it wouldn't make any difference on my bookkeeping. I said, "No, it wouldn't make any difference."

He told me—I believe, sir, he told me he could give me ninety thousand pounds of spice buttons or something almost at once and so many thousand dozen or hundred dozens of box chocolates and so we did, sir. I mean, I got the shipment and it was sent to my customers.

786 Q. Did you ever get an invoice for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether there were any later shipments?

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may interrupt, I move to strike the statement volunteered by the witness "we did, sir" and "I sent it to my customers."

By the Court: It may stand. I will deny the motion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall any further shipments for which you received no bills, invoices?

A. Yes, sir. I believe there was one in June, 1946, and there might have been one in April, but there was about seven or eight shipments throughout 1946, and I believe the last one was around in October.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object again, your Honor. The best evidence of the shipments and of the time of the shipments, which is important, is a record of it. He must have billed his customers. He is just generalizing and guessing on it.

787 By the Court: I suppose you can bring it out on cross examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 146 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was it prepared by you?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. Well, this was received from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. There are some pencilled notations. Do you know who made those?

A. No, sir. It was someone in the office.

Q. In whose office?

A. In the office of General Confections, sir.

Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Of the General Confections business?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?
788 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it a part of your business practice to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 146 in evidence, your Honor.
By the Court: Well, did I understand this is a bill of lading made out by Shotwell to one of your customers, is that it?
By the Witness: Yes, sir, it was.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 146.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 146 and ask you to tell us what that document is.
A. It is a bill of lading calling for the shipment of one thousand cases of candy to the Ace—consigned to the Ace Forwarding Company, 63 Beach Street, New York City.
Q. According to the bill of lading, who was the 789 shipper?
A. The ABC Candy Shipper, Chicago, Illinois.
Q. Did you ever do any business with an ABC Candy Shipper?
A. No, sir. I never heard of them.
Q. You never heard of ABC Candy Shipper?
A. No. I never done any business with them.
Q. Does that bill of lading indicate the kind of shipment that was made?
A. Written in pencil, sir. It contains spice buttons, special spice buttons.
Q. Do you know who made spice buttons?
A. Yes, sir. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Did anybody else, to your knowledge, make spice buttons?
A. No, sir, not that I know of.
Q. Did you ever purchase spice buttons from anybody else?
A. No, sir.

Q. Was that bill of lading made up at your instructions or not?

A. No, sir. I told Mr. Huebner where to ship the merchandise to because the man I sold it to, he gave me instructions where to ship it, and I told Mr.
790 Huebner where the merchandise was to go, so many cases to this customer and so many cases to that customer.

Q. That portion of the bill of lading which has "Ace Forwarding Company"—is that the name?

A. Yes.

Q. That was made under your direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you instruct them to put "ABC Candy Company" as the shipper?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Are you able to tell from examination of this document the amount of money that was paid for that shipment, if it was paid?

791 By Mr. McConnell: I object to a question like that, "How much was paid, if it was paid?"

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you pay for that shipment?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Do you know how much?

A. Yes, sir. I would say 10 cents a pound overage and I believe the cost of the merchandise was 12 or 13 cents, so, this would be 30,000 pounds of candy because there was 30 pounds in a case and a thousand times 30 is 30,000 pounds of candy.

If the cost of the merchandise was 12 cents or 13 cents and the overage was 10 cents a pound, it was 30,000 times 2 and that is how much I paid.

Q. Do you know to whom you paid it?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Who was that?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you know where?

A. Yes, sir. In the offices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir, in the lobby, I mean—I mean in that laboratory.

Q. When?

792 A. A few days before it was shipped.

Q. You paid for it before it was shipped?

A. Yes, sir. I had to borrow the money here in Chicago to pay for that shipment, sir.

Q. You didn't write a check to cash on this particular shipment?

A. No, I did not.

Q. From whom did you borrow the money?

A. From Mr. Urban, sir.

Q. It is the same Mr. Urban whose name appears on some of the checks you endorsed?

A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 147 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that document prepared by you or under your supervision and direction?

A. No, sir. This—the shipping instructions are my instructions, yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir. It came from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Was that record kept in the ordinary course 793 of business?

A. My business, sir?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which business was that?

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, is it true and correct?

A. It is, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 147 in evidence, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 147.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 147 and ask you if you can describe that document?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. This is an original uniform straight bill of lading and it is dated at Chicago, Illinois, March 5, 1946, consigned to William Barron in care of Bekins.

794 Q. Was William Barron one of your customers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q: Who was the shipper?

A. The ABC Candy Shippers, Chicago, Illinois.

795 Q. Did you know any ABC Candy Shipper at that time?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. What was the merchandise shipped on that bill of lading?

A. Cardinal chocolates, sir, box chocolates.

Q. Did you make the purchase of cardinal chocolates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you purchase cardinal chocolates?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. From whom?

A. From The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. What are cardinal chocolates?

A. It is a one-pound box of chocolates, sir.

Q. Is that a type of chocolate or a trade name or brand, or what?

A. Well, cardinal, sir, was the name they gave to us, sir. How the name "cardinal" came out sir, is that originally—

By Mr. O'Brien: We object to that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All I want to know is, is cardinal chocolate a trade name, the brand name, or is it a type of chocolate?

796 A. No. Cardinal is a brand name.

Q. How was that type of chocolate retailed, in bulk, or in boxes, or do you know?

A. It was a one-pound fancy box, sir, with a ribbon on it.

Q. Was there any printing on the box?

A. Yes, sir. It says "Cardinal". It says "Packed for"—I believe it says "General Confections, Inc."

Q. Were there any other names on the box?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any candy manufacturer who made Cardinal chocolates?

A. Yes, sir, I do. You mean, made the brand Cardinal?

Q. Yes.

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company. They made them for us.

Q. Did you pay for that chocolate?

A. I did, sir.

Q. How much did you pay?

A. I believe it was 37—it figures out 37 and a third price, or 37 and a half cents or 37 and a quarter cents per pound. That was a one pound box, and then 797 the overage was eighteen and three-quarters cents, or the overage figure, $2.25 a dozen.

Q. Will you explain or are you able to determine from an examination of the bill of lading what the cost of that shipment was to you?

A. No, sir, I am not.,

Q. Do you know how much you paid for that shipment?

A. Well, I can see it was 1,250 cases of candy which I know was Cardinal, which we shipped to Barron in California, and I know what we billed him for it and I know the cost of the merchandise and I know where the merchandise came from.

Q. Well, I am trying to find out how much was paid for it.

A. Well, 37⅓ and 18¾, sir, is about 54 cents. I am not good in addition. But, if you added it together, that is how much it was.

Q. 54 cents a box?

A. About 55 cents a pound.

Q. How many pounds were in that shipment?

A. Well, it was 1,250. The gross weight over here (indicating) where it say 38,750 pounds, but that 798 includes the carton, so, you take 1,250 and you multiply it by 24, and that is the number of pounds of candy because they were packed 24 in a carton.

Q. Did you pay anyone for those chocolates?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Who did you pay?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Where?

A. I believe it was in the office of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

799 Q. And when?

A. Almost about the same time as I paid for the other merchandise. I would say it was early in March. I mean, somewhere right in that neighborhood.

Q. How did you pay it?

A. In cash, sir.

Q. Was there any conversation at the time, that you recall?

A. Yes, sir. There was a conversation that he would give me some more cars later on and he was going to get me some more boxes and could I handle any more and I says, "I can take everything you can make."

Q. You stated that the boxes were imprinted with the wording "Cardinal" and "General Confections", is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q Now, you were the president of General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you order those boxes to be so printed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who did?

800 A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Who was it?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you have any conversation with anyone of the defendants with reference to that?

A. Yes, sir, we did. I had previously purchased—

Q. No. See if you can place the time.

A. Well, during the time of the partnership, I believe I got several cars of box chocolates from Shotwell and I sold them to some of the customers. One of the customers I remember was F. W. Woolworth. I believe it was in Atlanta, Georgia.

Now, Shotwell also sold the Woolworth Company and when they saw Shotwell's merchandise coming through us, there were some embarrassing questions. I mean, in fact they were upset. In fact, the broker who sold it to me wanted to know—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the conversation outside of the presence of our defendants.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection. You are now asking him how it happened that the product of Shotwell bore the name "General Confections"?

801 By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: Bring him up to some conversation in that respect.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you have any conversation with one of the defendants?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Huebner told me—

Q. When was this?

A. I can't remember specifically.

Q. Well, can you give the year?

A. I would say it was—no, I can't give it.

By Mr. O'Brien: We would like the time.

By the Witness: The only way we bought was boxes with the name on it. I remember that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was it in 1945 or 1946, either one of those years, if you remember?

A. I can't remember the exact years, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 148 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

802 A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it bear any writing, any handwriting on it?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting that is?

A. No. Well, over in the corner, sir, it tells—"Del Monte O. K." and then it says "600 citrus drops".

Q. Never mind reading from it. I just asked you if you recognized whose handwriting it was.

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Is this a record that was kept by you as a part of your business records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 148 in evidence.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 148.)

By Mr. Lockley:

803 Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 148 and ask you if you will describe that document. What is it?

A. It is an original uniform straight bill of lading.
Q. Where did you receive it?
A. I believe it came in the mail, sir.
Q. From whom?
A. From the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
804 Q. Who is indicated on the bill of lading as the shipper?
A. The shipper is the ABC Candy Shipper, Chicago, Illinois.
Q. And to whom was it sent?
A. The bill of lading? The merchandise?
Q. The merchandise.
A. The merchandise was consigned to Tom Fagel, 60 Ames Street, Lawrence, Massachusetts. It was hauled by the Spector Motor Freight Company.
Q. Was Mr. Fagel a customer of yours?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does the bill of lading state the nature of the product shipped?
A. Yes, sir. It was one thousand cases of candy and has 31,500 pounds as the gross weight, and then written—yes, sir.
Q. Did you buy that candy?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. From whom?
A. From Mr. Huebner.
Q. Do you know how much it cost?
A. Yes, sir. I am not familiar with the billing price, so if I say 12 cents, and it happened to be 13 cents
805 for the item, it is because I don't know. It is one or the other, but the overage was ten cents a pound. Assuming it was 13 cents a pound, 13 plus 10 is 23 cents. There is a thousand cases of merchandise and it weighed 30 pounds to a case. A thousand times 30 is 30,000 pounds, and the other 1500 pounds on the bill of lading makes it 31,500, sir, the gross weight of the box, including the box, sir.
806 Q. That was 30,000 pounds of candy, is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And approximately 20 cents a pound?
A. No, sir; 23 cents a pound, 22 or 23 cents a pound.
Q. If my mathematics is right, that would be around $6,900?

A. I would have to figure it.
Q. Now, did you pay for that candy?
A. I did, sir.
Q. First, did you get an invoice for it?
A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. How did you know how much you owed?
A. Because I knew—I talked to Mr. Huebner, and Mr. Huebner told me about that, he was going to give me so many pounds of candy without an invoice, and this is part of it.
Q. When did you talk to Mr. Huebner?
A. The latter part of February, or early March, 1946.
Q. Did you have just one conversation with him about these various shipments you have referred to, or was there a separate conversation on every shipment?
807 A. No, sir, just about—he told me he could ship me so much money if I could give him so much cash.
Q. Is that one conversation?
A. Yes, sir. That was the total number of pounds and I stated before, I think, the number was ninety or a hundred thousand pounds of gum work.
Q. Gum work?
A. Yes, sir. This is gum work, jelly beans—I mean jelly beans, but those little candies that are like gum drops, little tiny things.
Q. With respect to this shipment, you didn't get any invoice for it; did you pay for it?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. Do you know when?
A. Yes, before the merchandise was shipped, sir. I mean, I paid it before that other shipment was shipped.
Q. To whom did you pay the money?
A. To Mr. Huebner, sir.
Q. And how did you pay it?
A. In cash.
Q. And where?
A. In the offices of the Shotwell—well, in the 808 offices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir. I generally always paid the money up in there, in 1946.
Q. And what was the nature of your business organization at that time?
A. Well, sir, I was just leaving the partnership and starting General Confections.

Q. Was that a part of the business of General Confections then?

A. This shipment here was picked up as part of the business of General Confections.

By Mr. McConnell: We haven't got the date yet, have we?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you testify as to when it had been paid?

A. Yes, sir; I believe a few days prior to that other shipment.

809 By Mr. Lockley: I thought he said that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Prior to the other shipment?

By Mr. McConnell: We have had a lot of shipments.

By the Witness:

A. I just talked about a thousand cases of candy, sir, and this one, I don't know, but I think you are going to come up with another one here which will make that 90 or 100 thousands pounds of gum work. And I paid them all at one time for it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, with respect to all of the merchandise that you have testified to so far, do you know who manufactured it?

A. Yes, the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Do you know who shipped it?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you buy any of it from any of the defendants in his individual capacity?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 149 and ask you if you have seen that before?

810 A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Is that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where it was prepared or by whom?

A. It came from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A permanent part of your business records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what business, at that time?

A. General Confections, Inc.

By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering the penciled memoranda?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. There are certain pencil memoranda on it, Mr. Lubben. Do you know who made those memoranda?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Do you know if they were made in the office of the General Confections?

A. Well, sir, if I could look at the handwriting I could probably tell.

811 No, sir, I can't identify the handwriting, sir.

Q. When that record, including the handwriting was kept in your office, was the complete record, handwriting and typewriting and printing, a part of your business records?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that. If I understand it correctly, he doesn't know anything about the handwriting.

By the Court: He can't identify the handwriting. Why dont' you offer the exhibit—

By Mr. Lockley: I will offer it without the handwriting, your Honor. That's 149.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Governments' Exhibit 149.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Government's Exhibit 149 and ask you to explain what that is.

812 A. This is a uniform straight bill of lading. It is the original copy. The merchandise was shipped from Chicago on March 11—it is dated March 11, sir, but it was picked up by Spector Motor Freight on March 9, 1946. And it is consigned to the Bermer Candy Company, 2739 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, New York.

Q. Is that a customer of yours?

A. The man that I sold this whole shipment, this whole ninety thousand pounds, gave us instructions where to ship the merchandise, and the shipper is the ABC Candy Shipper, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And from whom did that shipment actually originate?

A. From the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.
Q. Did you receive an invoice for that shipment?
A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. Did you pay for it?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. How?
A. With cash.
Q. To whom?
A. Mr. Huebner.
Q. When?
813 A. Early in the latter part of February or early in March, 1946.
Q. Where?
A. Here in Chicago.
Q. Are you able to remember how much?
A. I think, sir, that it was around $19,000.00 on this gum work.
Q. That particular shipment?
A. No, on these three shipments. The last three shipments we talked about, I think, will be about $19,000.00.
814 Q. Well, will you look at Government Exhibits 146, 147, 148 and 149, and see if that will help to refresh your recollection, and if there is any connection between them?
A. Well, sir, in regard to the $19,000, there is a connection between Exhibits 148, 146, and 149, but there is no connection with that $19,000 to Government Exhibit 147.
Q. Well, was the money then, the $19,000 you referred to, paid in connection with Exhibits 146, 148 and 149?
A. It was paid for 148, 146, and 149, yes.
Q. I show you Government Exhibit for identification No. 151 and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir; it was.
Q. Is that a part of your regular business records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?
815 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. It was prepared by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Was it then forwarded to you in some manner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any handwriting on it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whose it is?

A. No, sir. Yes, sir; I can see right here whose it is.

Q. Can you tell?

A. Yes, sir. It is the handwriting of the man—the railroad agent.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 151, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 151.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, can you tell from an examination of Exhibit 151 what sort of merchandise was shipped on that bill of lading?

816 A. Yes, sir; I can.

Q. And what was it?

A. Well, there is nothing written on here, but I know what was shipped. I can tell here what went to the customer.

Q. All right. What was it?

A. It was 1,989 fiber cases of candy with a gross weight of 61,658 pounds.

Q. Are you able to identify the type of candy?

A. Yes, sir; that was box chocolates.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because it's McDonald Candy Company. We had an order from McDonald Candy Company and we never shipped them any bulk merchandise.

Q. From whom did you purchase that shipment?

A. From the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

817 Q. Well, who is the shipper shown on the invoice?

A. General Confections.

Q. I mean the bill of lading.

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. General Confections, Inc., was your company, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give Shotwell instructions to so designate you as shipper?

A. I told them to ship it, sir, out to the customer, and there was no reason, probably, why they couldn't use my name. It was—the boxes had our name on it and it says it came from Chicago, Illinois. We had no plant here.

Q. Did you have any inventory here, any merchandise?

A. No, sir.

Q. In a warehouse?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you receive an invoice for that shipment?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you pay for it?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Do you know how?

818 A. In cash, sir.

Q. Do you know when?

A. No, sir; I can't specifically say when, but it was—I paid for it.

Q. Who did you pay?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Where?

A. I don't know whether I was in Chicago or not then, but I paid for it.

Q. What price per pound did you pay?

A. 37 1/3 cents, the regular price.

By the Court: How much?

By the Witness:

A. 37⅓ or 37½ cents per pound, whichever it is, sir, plus 18⅓ or 18¾ overage. And you add them together and that is how much I paid per pound.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you tell how many pounds there were, or did you already testify to that?

A. Well, sir, if you take 1,989 cases and you multiply it by 24, that's how many were pounds.

Q. There were 24 pounds or pound boxes in a case?

A. Yes, sir. And the rest of that would be—

819 Q. Speak up now.

A. The rest of that would be weights for, you know, ice, or something. I don't know. I believe there were 24 pounds in a case, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I ask the indulgence of the Court a moment, your Honor. We apparently overlooked one of these in pre-numbering them.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 152 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

820 Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom is that?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you receive it from them in the course of business?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And it then became a permanent part of your records?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 152 in evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 152.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 153, Mr. Lubben, and ask if you can tell me what that is.

A. This is a uniform straight bill of lading. It is 821 dated at Chicago, Illinois, and on June 8, 1946.

Q. And who is the shipper?

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. To whom is the shipment consigned?

A. William Barron, Oakland, California.

822 Q. Was he one of your customers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of product was shipped?

A. Box chocolates, sir.

Q. How much?

A. Seventy cases.

Q. What would be the weight of that?

A. The gross weight, sir, would be 2,170 pounds, on the bill of lading.

Q. Can you tell the net weight from any examination of that document?

A. Yes, sir; it would be 70 times 24.

Q. Did you receive an invoice for that shipment?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you pay for it?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. How?

A. In cash, sir.

Q. To whom?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Where?

A. I don't recall whether it was Chicago or New York, sir.

Q. Do you know when?

823 A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Can you tell from an examination of the date of the shipment what was before—whether it was before or after, or about the time of that?

A. No, sir. It says June 8—

Q. Speak up.

A. It says June 8, here, sir, and I don't know whether I gave it to him on June 8 or before or after. I can't remember this specific shipment, sir.

824 Q. Can you tell how much you paid per pound for that merchandise?

A. Yes, sir. 37½ times 18⅓, and that—

Q. You mean 37½ plus or times, which is it?

A. 37½ plus 18⅓, and that was the cost of the merchandise.

Q. For the number of pounds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 154 and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir; it was prepared by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Does that record have any handwriting on it?

A. Only the handwriting of the agent, sir, the agent for the railroad. This was shipped by the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad.

Q. Is that a true and correct record, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

825 Q. Was it kept as a part of your business records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what business?

A. General Confections.

Q. Would that same answer be true with respect to all of these bills of lading I have shown you?

A. What is that, sir?

Q. General Confections, was that the business entity then in existence?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Do I understand that he is making records of these transactions in his office; is that what you are showing?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, did you have any records other than the bills of lading, did you receive any invoices for these?

A. No, sir, I did not.

By Mr. Lockley: You can't keep records when there aren't any.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I think our objection is to the characterization of bills of lading as being records 826 that were made or prepared by his office or made in the regaular course of business within the shop book rule.

By the Court: They were retained by him in the ordinary course of business.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well. But not otherwise.

By Mr. Lockley: He has not stated that he made them. He stated they were made by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. McConnell: I haven't heard any evidence here of where he got them, or how he got them from Shotwell. I don't know how he knows how Shotwell keeps the records.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

827 (Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 154.)

By the Court: We will have our morning recess now.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I offer you Government's Exhibit 154 and ask you to describe that document.

A. Yes, sir. This is a uniform straight bill of lading. It is dated on August 9, 1946, at Chicago, Illinois. It is consigned to McDonald Candy Company, Medford, Oregon.

Q. Was McDonald Candy Company a customer of yours?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Do you know what sort of merchandise was shipped on that bill of lading?

A. Yes, sir; box chocolates.

Q. Box chocolates?

A. Yes, sir. I can tell that very easily because it says, "To be iced with 6,000 pounds of chunk ice." And you only ice chocolates, sir.

828 Q. Where did that shipment originate?

A. It originated at the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. What city?

A. In Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And who is listed on the bill of lading as the shipper?

A. The General Confections, Inc.

Q. Did you buy that merchandise from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. That is, the General Confections bought it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get an invoice for it?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Did you pay for it?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Do you know how much you paid?

A. 37⅓ times 18¾, and that's the total, sir. I haven't a chance to add it up.

Q. You said times?

A. Well, 37⅓ plus 18¼, and that was the total.

Sir, I know this came from the Shotwell Manufac-

829 turing Company because it says the routes, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, and the Shotwell Factory in Chicago is on the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul tracks.

Q. And did you pay for that shipment?

A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. How?
A. In cash, sir.
Q. You mean currency, is that it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And to whom?
A. Well, this shipment, sir, if I recall correctly, was paid not in one lump. I mean, we didn't have the money, and if I—
Q. Speak up, Mr. Lubben.
A. If I remember correctly, sir, I paid part of the money. I think Mr. Heitmann paid for part of it.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to what Heitmann did.
By the Court: If he knows.
By the Witness: Well, sir—
By Mr. Lockley: Just a minute.
By Mr. McConnell: Unless he was present when 830 Mr. Heitmann paid it, I object to it.
By the Court: Yes. You must connect it up.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you pay for it yourself, for all of it?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Then I move that the statement be stricken that it was paid, as hearsay.
By the Court: Well, the statement that Heitmann paid part of it is hearsay and may be stricken.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Where was it paid, the portion that you know of, from your own knowledge?
A. Well, sir, we had some records here yesterday, and I remember an instruction sheet to Mr. Heitmann, and it was some of the money that I believe Mr. Heitmann had on the instruction sheet was for this.
Q. That instruction sheet is not in evidence, Mr. Lubben, so we can't testify from that.
You can only testify from your own personal knowledge.
831 Did you pay for any of that yourself?
A. I believe I did, sir. The amount I can't tell you.
Q. Do you know where?
A. No, sir; I don't.
Q. Do you know when?
A. Very close to around the shipment of this car of chocolates, sir.

Q. When was that?
A. On August 29th.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that.
832 By the Witness:
A. August 9, 1946.
By Mr. O'Brien: He said he doesn't know where or when, so how would he know?
By the Court: It may stand. He has a right to look at the bill of lading to refresh his memory, if that aids him in determining when he paid it.
By Mr. O'Brien: My point for the record is that he doesn't know when he paid it, or where he paid it.
By the Court: He said he paid part of it around August 9, 1946.
By Mr. McConnell: He hasn't told us how much. He didn't know how much of it.
By the Court: He says he doesn't remember.
By the Witness: I know how much was paid for the total amount of the car, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you know that it was paid in full?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it. It has already been shown that the only knowledge he had was some-833 thing—
By the Court: Yes. On this you lay a further foundation. The testimony is not competent and his answer may be stricken.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Mr. Lubben, do you have any personal knowledge that all of the amount of that shipment was paid?
By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, this—
By the Court: He may answer that yes or no.
By the Witness: Yes, sir; I have a knowledge that it was all paid.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. And do you know how, I mean?
By the Court: Well, counsel, there is no use going into that unless he was there when Heitmann paid the money, or you have other facts that would establish his statement that he knows how it was paid.
By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike, and suggest that it is highly improper after the Court has ruled on an 834 objection, and overruled counsel on it, to have him ask the same thing in a different way, and get it before the jury that way.

By the Court: Well, I think the evidence now discloses that he paid part of it, and he doesn't know the amount that he paid. And whether the balance was paid or not hasn't been established by competent evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 155, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From whom did you receive it, if you know?

A. I received it from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir; by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Do you know how it was received from them?

A. In the regular course of business. I wouldn't 835 know whether it came by mail or messenger, sir. They mostly came by mail.

Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it kept as a part of your regular books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 155 in evidence.

By the Court: Is there a date on here?

By Mr. Lockley: Only the year 1946, sir. But I will establish the date by other memoranda.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 155.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit 155-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

836 A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. By the receiving clerk of the Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting thereon?

A. May I correct that, sir? This is received by the receiving clerk of General Confections, Inc.

Q. Do you know the handwriting?

A. I have seen the handwriting. I can't remember his name, but we had him for some time.

Q. Please speak up, Mr. Lubben. Down at this end it is difficult to hear you.

A. I can't name the man's name, but he worked for us.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business of the General Confections?

A. Yes, sir; every shipment that came in had one of these things.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a part of your books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it your practice to keep such records?

837 A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer 155-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the receiving ticket. It purports to be an Eatsum Food Products receiving ticket, and this, as I understand it, is General Confections.

By the Witness: I can explain that, sir.

838 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you explain your testimony that that was a transaction of the General Confections Corporation, whereas the printing on the receiving ticket is Eatsum Food Products?

A. Yes, sir; I can.

Q. What is it?

A. Well, sir, we had some old stationery left over from the Eatsum Food Products downstairs and I didn't see fit to throw it out for a receiving ticket, and they may have picked up a pad that day. It says Eatsum Food Products, but the date says in 1946 and that was during the time of General Confections, Inc., and the bill of lading says 1946, and that was during the time of General Confections, Inc. And it was consigned to General Confections, Inc., sir. And there was no Eatsum Food Products at 40 West 170th Street at that time.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 155-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

839 Q. Now, what does Government's Exhibit 155-A purport to be?

By the Court: 155-A?

By Mr. Lockley: A; yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. That is a receiving ticket for 335 cases of 30 pound Coronet Mix received from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Illinois, on August 26, 1946, shipped via Spector Motor Freight.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that have any connection with Government's Exhibit 155, the bill of lading?

A. Yes, sir. This is the 335 fiber cases of candy that came in.

Q. And what do you mean, came in, where?

A. Came from Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. On the bill of lading who is listed as the shipper?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. And on the bill of lading who is listed as the consignee?

A. General Confections, Inc.

Q. And that was consigned to the General Confections warehouse where?

840 A. 40 West 170th Street, Bronx, New York, and shipped via Spector Motor Freight.

Q. What sort of product was shipped?

A. If I remember correctly, Coronet Mix, sir, was a little something extra, had different types of gum drops, or jellies, and so forth, mixed in a box.

Q. Do you know who made that shipment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who made that type of merchandise?

A. Yes, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Did you receive an invoice for that shipment?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you pay for that shipment?

A. I did, sir.

Q. How much did you pay per pound?

A. Well, I remember the overage was ten cents a pound, but I think the cost for the price of this merchandise was more. It wasn't like those spice buttons, or something like that, I think this cost may be twenty cents a pound, or twenty-two cents a pound, but it was—I believe it was a little more than I had paid before, but the overage was the same, per pound ten cents.

841 Q. How was that paid?

A. In cash, sir.

Q. Both the 20 or 22 cents and the ten cents overage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where?

A. No, sir, I don't know where.

Q. Do you know when?

A. I think it was—this one here I think was paid before the merchandise was shipped.

Q. It was prepaid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know to whom?

A. Mr. Huebner, sir.

Q. It was paid about the date of the shipment to Mr. Huebner, but you don't know where?

A. No.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the leading question.

By Mr. Lockley: He has already testified to that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't so understand it. He testified it was paid for before the merchandise was shipped.

842 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. How long before was it paid?

A. Not very long, sir.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By the Witness:

A. Within a few days one way or the other, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the weight of the merchandise in that shipment?

A. It's 335 30-pound cases, and the net weight would be 10,050 pounds, and the gross weight would be 10,720 pounds, and the difference is made up in the weight of the cases.

Q. You only paid for the product, you didn't pay for the cases?

A. No, just the net weight, sir.

By the Court: May I see 155, please?

(Document handed to the Court.)

By the Court: I don't know whether the record is clear, but both 155-A and 155 may be received in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I call your attention to the fact that 155, the bill of lading, bears only the date 1946. Are you able 843 to fix the exact or approximate date of that shipment?

A. Yes, sir; I would say it left Chicago about August 23, 1946.

Q. And how do you determine that?

A. Because it was received at our plant on August 26, 1946, and it only took it several days on the trucks.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 153-A and ask you if you have seen that before, or the original?

A. Yes, sir; I have, sir.

Q. Is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it prepared?

A. It was prepared on June 17th, 1946.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Which business?

A. General Confections.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it your practice to keep such records in 844 your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Turn it over on the other side. Were those writings also made by you or by someone else?

A. No, sir; this appears to be the writing of Miss Feldman.

Q. Would such writings be made under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were made?

A. It appears to be just the addition, where she is making the addition, sir, to arrive at the figures. So it is correct, sir.

Q. When did you last see the original of that document, if you know?

A. The last time I saw the original of this document, sir, was early in February, 1948.

Q. And where was that?
A. On the sun porch of my home.
Q. Have you seen it since that time?
845 A. No, sir; I have not.
Q. Have you searched for it?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. Do you know where it is?
A. I do not, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I will offer that at a later time, your Honor.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 153 and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that your writing that appears thereon?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you sign it?
A. I did, sir.
Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. It is, sir.
Q. Which business?
A. General Confections, Inc.
Q. And about when was it prepared?
A. The date on the check, sir, is June 18, 1946.
Q. Did that clear through the bank?
846 A. Yes, sir; it did.
Q. And was it thereafter returned to you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was that kept in the files of the General Confections, Inc.?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering this one now? You didn't offer the other one, so there is no point in objecting to that. Are you offering this?
By Mr. Lockley: I am offering the check, yes.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to the check. It purports to be a check signed by David Lubben, to David Lubben, endorsed by David Lubben. It is not binding upon my client.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 153.)

By Mr. Lockley: Did I understand, your Honor, that it would be admitted?

By the Court: Yes.

847 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell us what that check is, Mr. Lubben?

A. It is a check for $27,000.00.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibits 152 and 151 and ask you if that check has any relation to those two exhibits, if you know?

A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge this check here is the payment of these two invoices here, sir.

Q. That check is signed by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is drawn to your order?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was endorsed by you?

A. Sir, it doesn't look too much like my signature. Maybe it is and maybe it isn't. I don't know.

Q. Did you get the money for it?

A. Yes, sir; I got the money. I am sure of that.

Q. What did you do with the money?

A. Any money I got, sir, for cash payments I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to when?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object and ask that the answer 848 be stricken. I don't think it is responsive.

By the Court: Yes, the objection is well taken. The answer may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what you did with that particular $27,000.00?

A. No, sir; I don't. But I paid for the merchandise. I didn't get it for free.

By Mr. O'Brien: I ask that be stricken.

849 By the Court: Well, the answer is not responsive. It may be stricken.

By the Witness: Sorry, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, directing your attention to the period of 1948, did you have a conversation with Mr. Byron Cain?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. How did that conversation come about?

A. Do you mean the conversation, sir, in the Riviera Night Club?

Q. Let's lead up to it. Where was it?

A. Well, sir, in August of 1948, around August of 1948, I received a telephone call one night in my home in Hillsdale, New Jersey.

Q. From whom?

A. From Mr. Byron Cain.

Q. Did you recognize his voice?

A. I did, sir. In fact, he identified himself.

Q. What did he say?

A. And he said, "Dave, what are you doing?" It was around ten or ten thirty at night. I said, "I am sitting here watching television."

So he said, "I would like to have you come over 850 to the Gotham Hotel."

And I said, "It is pretty late, sir."

At this time—and he was sitting there at the moment—Mr. Davidson lived in Hillsdale and he came to my home very frequently. And I turned to him and said, "Byron Cain is on the phone and wants us to come to New York." It was very late.

I said, "It is very late, sir. Couldn't I make it another day?"

He said, "No, this can't wait." Or words to that effect. And he turned to somebody—I could hear him talking—and he says, "Dave, do you know where the Riviera Night Club is at?" I said, "Yes, it is on the bank of the Hudson River, just across George Washington Bridge."

"How long will it take you to get there?"

"Twenty-five, thirty minutes."

He said, "How about meeting me there?"

I said, "All right, sir."

And I got in my car. I asked Mr. Davidson to go with me.

Q. And did you go to the Riviera Night Club?

851 A. We did, sir.

Q. And where did you go after you got to the Riviera?

A. We met Mr. Cain, and I believe he was standing inside the door, if I remember correctly, and he escorted us to a—"Hello, Dave," and "Hello, Sam." And he escorted us to a table, sir, inside of the night club, up sort of on a little balcony. You had to walk up two or three steps.

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. Yes, sir; there was a man there, sitting there, sir.

Q. Were you introduced to him at that time?

A. I don't think we were introduced right away, sir.

Q. That was Mr. Cain, yourself, Mr. Davidson, who was your lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this other person?

A. Yes, sir.

852 Q. What was the conversation?

A. Well, sir, the conversation started off, "What are you doing, Dave?"

The factory of General Confections had closed down on March 8, 1948.

"What are you doing?" I said, "I am trying to get the thing rezoned," because we had got mixed in some zoning trouble, and I said, "I am trying to get it rezoned so we can get the factory reopened."

And he said, "Dave, I don't think you should stay in the manufacturing business. You ought to just stick to selling. It is less headaches," and everything else like that, and so forth. Very pleasant conversation.

And finally I said, "Well, Byron, you didn't call me over to tell me that. What am I here for?"

He said, "All hell has broken loose." He said, "You are up to your ears in a peck of trouble."

And I said, "What do you mean?"

He says, "Well, a couple of agents came into our office and asked for all of the records of anything 853 we had, doing with you, or any of your companies.

And Stanley Graflund, like a damn fool, gave them to him."

And he says, "It's a terrible mess."

He says, "I wasn't there at the time it happened, and they called me after they had given the records." And he said, "I have got hold of Bob Hannegan."

Q. Did he identify Mr. Hannegan?

A. Yes, sir. That was the man that used to be the Postmaster General of the United States.

Q. Proceed.

A. And he says, "I got hold of Bob Hannegan, and I had him come out to my house, and he spent a couple of days. And he told me to get in touch with Pat Grace here."

And I believe that was when I met Pat Grace.

Q. Now, Pat Grace, he was the fourth member at this conversation?

A. Yes, sir. And Pat Grace—"He told me to get in touch with Pat Grace. He was his contact man in Brooklyn who knew how to handle these tax things."

854 By Mr. McConnell: Is this conversation now, or is this a conclusion?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was that part of the conversation, or was that your conclusion?

A. No conclusion, sir. It is part of the conversation.

Q. All right. Try to put it into the words of each individual as you go along.

A. So then Pat Grace said he would be down to the office of Mr. Dan Bollig.

Q. Did he identify Mr. Bollig?

A. Well, no, sir—yes, sir; he says he was the big shot with the government in the Income Tax, and so he would be down to see him. And he says, "This thing is going to be a real stinker when it comes out," that "they have some records on Mr. Giglio, and you, and us," and he says, "We don't want to become involved in it."

And then it was suggested, sir—he said—

855 Q. Who suggested it?

A. Byron Cain, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. Well, sir, he told me that—he said, "You have been down to South America. You have been down to the West Indies a couple of times. What did you do down there?"

I just said, "I just like it, and I think it has a lot of possibilities."

I don't recall directly whether he suggested it at the moment, sir, or Mr. Pat Grace, but one of them suggested that I take a trip to South America, and, sir. I think it was Byron Cain, that I take a trip to South America for two years.

He says, "You go down there, Dave," and he said, "Stay down there a couple of years and this thing will all blow over."

I says, "I don't want to go. I have my sister and my family here. I don't want to leave."

Q. Did they explain what your going down to South America would help blow over?

A. Yes, sir. They told me, sir, that it would be all handled by Mr. Grace kind of quietly; that if the Government's case came up and they had no witness—
856 Byron told me, "You don't want to be in a position to put your finger on your friends?" And I says, "No, I don't." He says, "Well, if you are not here the Government hasn't got any case."

He says, "There is no witness and the case will all be collapsed." So, I says, "Well, I got the house in Hillsdale." He says, "A syndicate can be formed or will be formed or may be formed with Mr. Eddie Urban and Close & Company and Morley Kramer, and you can figure it is worth seventy-five thousand dollars. Now, we will form a syndicate and the syndicate will buy the property and give you the money and you don't have to hang around here and then we will sell the property and get the money back.

They weren't going to give me any money, sir. They were just going to get the money back and help themselves to the property. I says, "I have some obligations." I owed the First Federal Savings & Loan Association. I owed my 1946 taxes.

They said, "We will give you so much money and you can pay your taxes."

They said, "They will get you back here on the 857 taxes, or something." They said if I had paid my taxes, I was only a witness and you can't bring a witness back, so, I believe, sir, I was requested by Mr. Cain—I mean, as the impression is in my memory, the last few days, sir—what I mean is, ever since I knew this case was coming on—I believe Mr. Cain asked me to contact Mr. Kramer in Boston.

Q. Who is Mr. Kramer?

A. President of Gum Products.

Q. Why?

A. I had an overpayment with Gum Products.

Q. You had so-called black market dealings with—

A. And Eddie Urban. They are both in the candy business.

So Mr. Davidson at this time said, "Wait a minute," or something like that. "You don't have to leave here. What does Lubben have to run away for?" And he says, "Well," he says, "this tax business"—

He says, "I know Lubben's case. He doesn't have to run around. He owes Uncle Sam for 1946 taxes, but," he says, "I fail to see where he has to go."

858 He says, "You don't want him to be in a position to have to put a finger on the people and tell who gave them the money."

I said, "I assure you, sir, I am not happy here."

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike that out. It is not part of the conversation.

By the Court: Very well. It may be stricken as not responsive.

By the Witness: So, sir—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that exhaust your recollection of the conversation?

A. No. There are some other things. I know they are coming but I just lost my train of thought for a minute. I will pick it up.

Q. All right. Think about it for a second.

A. And he said that Pat Grace would take care of all these things and I would be able to come back in a couple of years and at the end of two years, Byron told me, he says, "I will give you the Shotwell account for the syndicate stores."

He said, "You know what that account is."

859 "Yes," I says, "I know what it is."

He says, "Dave, I will give you a contract." I says, "I don't want any contract." And he says, "I will give you my word, I will give you the Shotwell account and when you come back—you know that account"—I was going to get it as a broker—"It makes me $25,000.00."

I says, "Byron, I had your account once and when I needed it you took it away from me." That was just shortly prior to my factory closing up and I was earning eight hundred or nine hundred in commissions and I could have used it during the time the factory closed, so I said, "I don't want your account."

So he says, "Well, Dave, you think it over."

Davidson said, "No, no."

And I was advised to get my passport, sir, and be all set and to contact Mr. Grace at a later date and to think it over and Mr. Grace would tell me some more things he had learned about the case.

Q. Did you get a passport?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Did you use it?
860 A. I have never used it, sir.
Q. Where are you living now?
A. In Puerto Rico, sir, a possession—
Q. Is that of your own free will?
A. Yes, sir. It is a possession of the United States and a passport is required and I am there at my own free will.
861 Q. Did you have any further conversation at that time?
A. Yes, sir. I asked him—I think Byron Cain says, "We don't deny getting this money, Dave. We don't deny getting it, but," he says, "you cause a lot of embarrassment to a lot of people."
And I says, I believe in this conversation, sir, I says,—well, I think I asked him where the money went and it went here and there and everywhere else and I says, "I bet a lot of it went to Harold Sullivan's farm in Marengo, Illinois." The reason I remember Marengo is that I used to live there.
By Mr. O'Brien: Is this conversation now?
By the Witness: This is conversation. I am reciting a conversation.
By the Witness:
A. He says, "That is one of the reasons, sir, you will have to leave the country."
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Is that all of that conversation that you can recall?
A. There was more, sir, but I can't remember it.
862 I mean, there was a conversation for a couple of hours, I believe, sir.
Q. Now, did you later have another conversation with Mr. Cain?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Do you recall when that was?
A. Yes, sir, in the year 1951.
Q. Do you know about when?
A. Around August.
Q. And where?
A. I had a conversation, sir, in New York City.

Q. Well, start with the beginning and tell us, how did that conversation come about?

A. Well, one night, sir, a friend of mine called me on the telephone and he said, "Byron Cain called me today and wanted to know what your home phone number was." And I had an unlisted telephone number at the time and he said, "I did not know whether to give it to him or not, but," he says, "if you want to call him, here is his number."

So, I waited that night until Mr. Davidson could come over and I recited it, I was to get in touch with him, and I said, "Should I call him or shouldn't I?"

863 He said, "Go ahead and call him." So, I asked Mr. Davidson to get on the extension as I called him and so I called Mr. Cain at his home in Wilmette and Mr. Cain answered the phone and said, "Dave, when are you going to come to Chicago? I would like to see you."

I says, "I don't have any business in Chicago at the time, Mr. Cain, and I have no reason to come."

And he says, "Well, I would like to see you. Are you going to be around the latter part—the rest of the week, the next week?"

I said, "Yes, sir, I am."

And he says, "Well, all right. I will call you, Dave, and I will let you know when I am coming."

I said, "O. K., sir."

864 So, that was on a Thursday and I remember it very well, sir, and the next day was Friday and a telephone call came from Mr. Cain.

Now, Mr. Cain asked me if I could meet him at the La Guardia Airport the next day.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The next day being what?

A. The next day being Saturday.

Q. All right.

A. And so I said, "Yes, I am—I can." He says, "Well, I am taking an American Airlines plane," so and so, "around eight o'clock, which will get me to La Guardia Field around 11:00 or 11:15."

And so I says, "All right. I will meet you there, sir."

So, the next morning I took Sam Davidson with me and I drove to the airport and we met Mr. Cain and we got there before the plane and he got off the plane.

Q. You met him at the airport gate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know about what time of the day it was?

A. About 11:15, 11:00 or 11:15, somewhere around that time.

865 Q. Was there a conversation at that time?

A. "Hello, Dave." And he says, "Oh, hello, Sam." So he says, "Where can we go to talk?" I says, "I don't know. Do you want to go to the farm?" He said, "No. It is pretty far. I have to take a plane this afternoon."

And so I says, "Well, how about the Gotham Hotel? We had a lot of business in the Gotham Hotel."

So we went to the Gotham Hotel for lunch.

Q. Now who was there?

A. Mr. Cain, Mr. Davidson, and myself.

Q. All right. Was there a conversation in the Gotham Hotel?

A. Yes, sir, there was a conversation at the hotel, sir, and if I remember correctly, it started off a little bit—well, I think we discussed the time of the day or something, a little pleasantries in respect to the hotel.

When he got to the hotel, he says, "Dave, you are going to be visited by a couple of Revenue agents from Chicago."

Q. Did he name them?

A. Yes, sir. A Mr. Sam Crane and a Mr. Mammel.

866 He says, "This fellow Mammel is a real son of a—he is a real so and so." That is what he said, sir.

867 Q. All right. Proceed.

A. And he said, "He has come into my office and has grabbed the records and has been ordering people around." He says, "He has been doing it until everybody knows we are going through a tax investigation."

He said, "I ordered him out and told him to get the 'h' out, and just threw him out."

And then he said, another time a Mr. Mammel had a heart attack or something in his office and they took him out. He says, "Do you think it will soften him up?" He said, "Not a bit."

He was particularly bitter against Mammel. He said, "He is the one that put Annenberg in jail, and he wants me as a career, and he wants to put me in jail."

He says, "These fellows are going to come up and ask you questions, and you are going to be here next week." He said, "You are going to be asked questions about loans and exchanges."

I said, "What do you mean by loans and exchanges, Mr. Krane—I mean Mr. Cain?"

868 He says, "By that, I mean where you gave us merchandise and we exchanged merchandise for you, or where you paid money to people to ship merchandise to us which was used in our factory and which we gave you merchandise."

I said, "Mr. Cain, we didn't have any of those loans and exchanges."

And he says, "Well, what difference does it make, Dave? I am trying to settle this case. I am pushing it. I am trying to get it over with."

He said, "I want to get it settled." He says, "It is—it doesn't mean anything to you." He said, "You are not liable." He says, "It just reduces my tax liability."

So, I said, "Mr. Cain, we didn't have any. I mean, if we did, I would tell you." I said, "I can't remember of any loans or exchanges. I remember selling you three or four carloads of chocolate in the beginning, and peanuts, but the peanuts you used to apply on what I owed you, and I got an invoice for the chocolate."

He says, "Well, Dave, this thing is making me a sick man." He said, "I am a millionnaire five times 869 over." I think he said that before. He says, "I am a director of fourteen corporations." And I believe he says, "I am something on some university", and he says, "It is causing me untold embarrassment."

He says, "In fact, it has caused a split between Harold and myself."

He says, "Harold is now taking his properties, and I have taken certain properties that we used to hold jointly together, and be interested in."

He says, "The only thing we have together is the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and we are getting ready to sell that when this tax thing is brought out."

He said, "When I get rid of that, that will be the last we hold jointly." He says to me, he says, "Dave, I don't deny getting the money. It is only that I want to get that tax straightened up." And he says, I believe he told me he had offered the Government three hundred and fifty or four hundred and fifty thousand dollars. He says, "I just wanted to get it cleared up."

Mr. Sullivan—Mr. Huebner came and told me
870 this thing wouldn't have got that far if Bob Hannegan was alive.

That Harold Sullivan didn't want to do anything. He felt he would be taken care of, but now Hannegan is dead. That we have another fellow, George Bodon, a big attorney in Chicago, certainly a big tax man, and he up and dies. He said, "I am just pushing this thing for solution." That is what he said, sir.

871 Then he asked me what I was going to do and I told him after I had got the plant sold in Hillsdale, they took it back to court because it was spot zoning. I had decided to throw up the sponge and quit. I was liquidating the place.

He said then, "Where are you going?" I said, "I am going down to Puerto Rico and become a manufacturer's agent." He said, "Are you having any difficulty selling the House?"

I said, "No, sir. I had a zoning problem and nobody wanted to buy it."

He says, "Well, that is my business, Dave. I will come back here and maybe I can arrange for somebody to help you sell the property." And I told him what I was doing in Puerto Rico. I said, "Oh, I can sell things. There is a deal down in the Virgin Islands. I bought a pier. I just got the deal." And he said, "I have got a man who has a lot of money who will be looking for something like that. I tell you what I will do: I will come back next week, or, if you go down there any sooner, let me know and I will go down there with you."

I believe Mr. Cain told me he had just sold some 872 oil wells or bought some oil wells and, well, there may have been some other conversation, sir, and then he told me he had to get back to Chicago in a hurry because he had left his dress suit at the Drake Hotel and he had to rush from the airplane there because Mayor Kelly's wife—former Mayor Kelly's wife—he was dead then—was having some tax trouble, or not tax trouble—somebody had stolen some money from the estate and he had to advise her and he was going to meet her that night.

Q. Does that conclude the conversation at the Gotham Hotel?

A. Well, there may have been other things but I can't pick them up at the moment. We had a conversation, sir, from about twelve o'clock until about three o'clock or three-thirty, and then he took the four o'clock plane or three-fifteen. I just drove him to the airport and he said goodbye.

Q. Did you accompany him to the airport?

A. Yes, sir, I did, and Mr. Cain—

Q. Was Mr. Davidson with you at that time?

A. Yes. Mr. Cain was very pleasant to me this time.

873 By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, would the Court be kind enough to now advise the jury, as I know you have under other occasions, but I would like to have it stressed, that conversations at which the other defendants were not present cannot be and are not to be considered against them under the law.

By the Court: I instruct the jury that the conversation allegedly had with Mr. Cain is competent evidence only as to the defendant Cain and the jury will disregard it as to the others.

By the Witness: Sir, I remember—

By Mr. Kirby: That applies to both the Riviera conversation and the Gotham conversation.

By the Court: That is right.

By the Witness: Sir, I remember one other little point.

By the Court: Perhaps you better wait. Mr. Lockley, the witness says he remembers another point. I told him to wait until you are agreeable.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

874 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Proceed.

A. Byron came and told me he wanted to pay the tax. He said he always wanted to pay the tax. He said it would have been paid before if it hadn't been for Harold Sullivan.

I said, "Where are you going to get the money?"

He said, "It is just like me, Dave. I am the guy that will have to dig up the money because the rest of them haven't got any money, or they say they haven't got any."

By Mr. Kirby: I am not clear on that "rest of them". Does he mean Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan had no money?
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Is that what you mean, sir?
A. What is that, sir?
Q. You referred to Mr. Cain's statement that the rest of them didn't have the money.
A. Well, he meant—he referred to Harold Sullivan and Frank Huebner and he said that it looked like he would have to pay the tax and he wanted to pay the tax and that is what he was up here—I thought, sir, 875 that that was what he was going to, to pay the tax, sir.
Q. Is that all you can remember of that conversation?
A. Yes, sir, at the moment that's all I can remember.
Q. Now, what types of products did you buy from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company? Can you name them?
A. Yes, sir, I can. We bought—at one time, we bought some chocolate liquor—yes, chocolate liquor, sir. It is baking chocolate in a big cake and which they resold us. I think we bought some cocoa at one time and those were raw materials.
And then, we bought these spice buttons or jelly drops or jelly strings, which is a piece of candy, sir, that is just like a little tiny gum drop and it is in various shapes, and so forth. And then we bought box chocolates which are the same kind of chocolates you see in boxes in stores, big pieces and little pieces, with a ribbon around it.
Q. Did you pay overages on everything you bought?
A. No, sir, I did not.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question, if the 876 Court please.
By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute.
By Mr. O'Brien: It is a conclusion, all of counsel's assertion.
By the Court: I think that answer may stand.
By Mr. Lockley: His answer was no.
By Mr. O'Brien: Regardless.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What didn't you pay on?
A. Sir, I believe in 1944 we made seven or eight shipments of merchandise of this jelly candy on which we didn't pay any overages, which was paid with regular checks and no overages whatsoever.

Q. 1944, was it, did you say?

A. Yes, sir, in 1944.

Q. Well, did you ever buy any marshmallows from them?

A. Yes, sir. I sold mostly marshmallows. I sold the marshmallows and I got 5 per cent for selling the marshmallows.

Q. Did you pay any overage on that?

A. No.

877 Q. How about Hostess Candies?

A. I think once there was a shipment of something they called Hostess Candy, which was little cellophane bags of candy. I don't recall whether I paid any overage on that or not.

Q. How about Pampinoes?

A. I don't think so.

Q. And this special chocolate liquor?

A. That is bricks of chocolate. I paid overage on that once, sir.

Q. Once.

A. I am very sure. I could be wrong, but if I had my records—I am very sure I paid overage on what is called special chocolate liquor.

Q. How about the so-called gum items, that is, jelly beans, and so forth?

A. All except those shipments in the beginning, I paid overage on. I paid the invoice price plus the overage.

Q. What was it?

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, counsel has been going in detail over each of the transactions which are set forth in the bill of particulars on which he 878 bases his case. Now he is going back to the same line of proof by general questions which do not deal specifically with the transactions. I object to that procedure. It has been covered once.

By the Court: Are you going outside of your bill of particulars now?

By Mr. Lockley: That has not been my intention, no, sir. I am just about finished with this witness. I will ask him one more question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you know the total amount of overages paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company during 1945 and 1946?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I want to object to that question which, Mr. Lockley, with his many years in the Department of Justice knows is improper because this witness has already said, with respect to a large number of payments, that he could not remember, and it is improper to ask a question in the form of a general conclusion, when we have already had testimony showing 879 that he cannot remember.

By the Witness: I remember this one, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: That is not the right way to ask a question, though.

I object to it.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, he has testified as to certain individual transactions. The purpose of this now is to permit him to make such mental arithmatic—which the jury itself could do—but to submit him to mentally tabulate, if he knows, the total amounts that he paid.

By the Court: You mean that he personally paid?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, if he knows.

By Mr. McConnell: I object.

By the Court: If he is able to state the amount of overages that he himself personally paid, I think he may so state.

880 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If you know, Mr. Lubben.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Just a minute.

By the Witness: The amount of overages that I paid is around half a million dollars.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out the answer on the ground it is an over-all conclusion that we cannot cross examine him on. He doesn't give us the time.

By the Witness: Sir, that includes the unbilled shipments.

By the Court: There is no question pending.

By the Witness: Oh, pardon me.

By Mr. McConnell: Just letting the witness sum up the whole case in a conclusion. I object and move that it be stricken.

By the Court: Well, do you mean by that, Mr. Lubben, that the incidents you refer to total that amount, or is that just a general statement on your part?

By the Witness: No, sir. I have lived with this thing, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I object and ask that that be 881 stricken. He has lived off of it but not with it.

By the Witness: No, sir. I think you have lived off of it.

By the Court: I don't think that your characterization is proper here, in keeping with the testimony today. I don't believe that his statement of a general nature is competent evidence.

I will grant that motion to strike.

By Mr. Lockley: Very well. I will withdraw the question. If your Honor please, may we have our recess at this time? I think Mr. Lubben will be turned over for cross examination but I would like to consider it during the noon recess.

By the Court: We will adjourn to two o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock P. M. of the same day, being Thursday, September 17, 1953.)

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein.

By Mr. Lockley: You may cross examine the witness.

883 DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. How old are you, Mr. Lubben?
A. Forty-three, sir.
Q. You are now living in Puerto Rico?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you live prior to the time that you moved to Puerto Rico?
A. Hillsdale, New Jersey, sir.
Q. You had a home there?
A. I did, sir.
Q. And how long did you live there?
A. About six years, sir.
Q. Prior to that time where did you live?
A. 40 West 170th—no, 35th and Madison Street, sir.
Q. In New York City?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that an apartment?
A. Yes, sir.
884 Q. How long did you live there?
A. I believe about a year, sir.
Q. Did you live any other place in New York City?
A. Yes, sir; I believe I lived on 23rd Street in an apartment building.
Q. Are you a married man?
A. No, sir.
Q. When were you with the Kroger Grocery Company?
A. 1942, sir.
Q. You started with them in 1942?
A. No, I believe I started in 1941, sir. Maybe in '40. I don't quite remember the number of years.
Q. And how long were you with the Kroger Grocery Company?
A. To the best of my recollection, sir, about two years.
Q. And from there you came to New York?
A. Yes, sir.
A. And with whom?

A. I came with the Burry Biscuit Corporation.

Q. Was that headed by a man by the name of George Burry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to leave your earlier transactions for 885 a moment and go to something immediate, which is more familiar to our minds. In your direct examination you spoke of three checks which you had tendered, I believe you said, to the defendants, but which you later changed to say you tendered to Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you gave as an explanation for tendering those checks that you had lost control of the corn box; do you recall that?

A. I didn't say I lost control of the corn box.

Q. Did you say you hadn't any access to the corn box?

A. Yes, sir. Or words to that effect.

Q. All right. What was the corn box?

A. It was a box in which cash money was kept.

Q. Well, now, I think on your direct examination, if I recall, you told Mr. Lockley that the business that you were engaged in, in the sole proprietorship, in the partnership, and in the corporation was the making of candies or the brokeraging of candies, or the packaging and selling of candies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what connection, if any, was there be-886 tween corn and the packaging and selling or the purchase and sale or the manufacture of candy?

A. Well, sir, when we first went into the corn deal, it was to get corn syrup for the factory.

Q. And you are speaking now of your factory?

A. I am speaking of Eatsum Food Products partnership.

Q. The partnership?

A. Yes, sir.

887 Q. And you had a factory over in the Bronx, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In which you manufactured candy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as part of that you had a corn box. Now, what was the connection between corn and the corn syrup that you used in the candy?

A. Well, sir, you want me to explain it?

Q. Yes, if you will, please.

A. Sir, you couldn't buy any corn from the corn refiner —

By the Court: You mean corn syrup?

By the Witness:

A. I couldn't buy any corn syrup from the corn syrup refiner unless you had a quota, unless you had been in business prior to a certain year. Eatsum Food Products was not. And the corn products people—I mean the corn people, the people, the refiners would say, "Well, we can't get the corn. If you can get the corn we will sell you back a certain number of pounds of corn syrup that that corn would make, if you can expedite the sale of corn to the corn refiner."

888 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, do I understand you to mean then that this corn box contained cash money which was used for the purchase of corn?

A. No, sir. Well—

Q. What was that money used for?

A. Well, sir, in the beginning, when we started the corn box we drew a check for cash, because the elevator wanted premiums before they would sell the corn to the corn refiner. And later on, sir, why, we were going to sell the corn syrup, and my partner insisted that we sell corn syrup for cash and an invoice.

Q. Well, now—

A. And the cash went into the cash box.

Q. Let's pass for a moment the corn syrup you were going to sell. My inquiry for the moment is directed to the corn syrup that you were going to use in the manufacture of your candy. And you said you had no quota. Now, how did you get the corn syrup? Just tell us the mechanics of it, how you did it?

A. Sir, you had to go to the elevator, or a farmer in the country, and you would have to pay that elevator 889 or that farmer a premium.

Q. Now, do you mean by a premium an over-the-ceiling price?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I am at a loss to know just what this has to do with Shotwell Manufacturing Company. This is, as I understand it, a practice of the Eatsum Food Products Company, unless counsel can connect it up in some way.

890 By Mr. McConnell: I think I will connect it up. The corn box is very material in this whole controversy.

By Mr. Lockley: It is certainly beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: We can't both talk at once.

By the Court: Counsel says he is going to connect it up.

By Mr. McConnell: Will you read the question to the witness, please?

(Record read by the reporter.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And you say you paid that to the farmer?

A. It was paid, sir, to a farmer or to a grain elevator.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Then they, in turn, would ship a certain number of bushels to the corn refinery. The corn refinery would pay for the corn at the regular ceiling price. And then through a pre-arrangement they would agree—the corn refinery agreed to sell the person—in our case it was Eatsum Food Products—the people who procured the 891 corn, or expedited it, a certain number of pounds of corn syrup, at the ceiling price.

Q. So that by shipping the corn, or obtaining the shipment of the corn to the refinery, you were able to get corn syrup at the ceiling price?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. But you had to pay premiums to get the corn, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. How much corn syrup did you get for a bushel of corn?

A. I believe, sir, that the corn syrup made 34 pounds—a bushel of corn weighed 64 pounds, and I believe you got 32 or 34 pounds of corn syrup to the bushel, and which the refinery would sell you anywhere from 8, 10 or 12 pounds back at the regular ceiling price, and they would keep the rest for the regular customers, people who had done business with them before.

892 Q. Now, that practice—or what you have related to us, was that pretty general in the candy business at that time?

A. Well, sir—.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to what the general practice was.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, it was general for anybody who didn't have a quota with the corn refiner.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. In other words, if you didn't have the quota, or if you were living up to your quota, the only way you could get any more quota was by this method you are talking about?

A. That's the only way I know of, sir.

Q. Now, you testified as a witness, did you not, before the Kefauver Committee?

A. I did, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor. I don't see that it has any materiality on the question of the Shotwell income taxes. It certainly wasn't gone into on the direct examination.

893 By the Court: It may or may not. I don't know what the testimony was. It may have some relevance. I trust counsel will connect it up.

By Mr. McConnell: I think it will become obvious before we get very far along.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You did testify, did you not?

A. I did, sir.

Q. And did you testify before that committee that there was over $400,000.00 in this corn box during the time you were in that partnership?

A. I don't recall my exact figures, sir, but if you have the copy there—

Q. Then I would like to refresh your recollection a little.

A. I would like it, sir.

Q. Do you recall that Mr. Halley asked you this question and that you gave this answer, with reference to the corn box:

"Q. Do you recall the precise figure; it was $410,000.00, wasn't it?"

"Mr. Lubben: I don't recall the figure, but it 894 was $400,000.00. It is a big figure. $400,000.00."

Did you say that?

A. Sir, I believe if you will read a little above that you will find I didn't say there was $400,000.00 in the box at one time. I don't think that I said that, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: What page, Counsel?

By Mr. McConnell: Well, I am reading from page—starting at 1109.

By Mr. Lockley: You have a different book from mine, I am afraid.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, that has to do with another transaction, but I will start—yes, 1109, about the middle of 1109.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did he ask you this question and did you make this answer:

"Have you a recollection of the total amount of cash received as a result of these transactions during the last—would it be about five months of 1945?

"Mr. Lubben: It was a tremendous figure, sir.

895 "Mr. Halley: Was it over $400,000.00 in cash received?

"Mr. Lubben: I would say so.

"Mr. Halley: It was at least that much?

"Mr. Lubben: Yes, sir. Maybe more.

"Mr. Halley: Do you recall the precise figure; it was $410,000.00, wasn't it?

"Mr. Lubben: I don't recall the figure, but it was $400,000.00. It is a big figure. $400,000.00, some place in there."

Now, did you so testify?

A. Yes, sir; but that says the total amount of money that was—

Q. I just asked you, did you so testify?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Now, you didn't say anything about that in your direct examination, did you, about that business done by the copartnership?

896 A. No, sir; I only answered what I was asked.

Q. You weren't asked anything about that part of the co-partnership business?

A. No, sir.

Q. But it was part of it, wasn't it, during the period you were speaking of in your direct examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that $400,000.00 that was received in that cash box, that represented over the ceiling cash which you received, didn't it?

A. Well, sir, it didn't have to be over the ceiling cash.

Q. Well, was it on cash transactions?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Not invoiced or billed transactions or paid by check, but transactions in which your company received cash?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And that cash wasn't in any bank account, it was in a tin box, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that tin box was kept in your office?

A. Well, not in my office, sir. I mean, it was kept 897 in the office of the company.

Q. It was kept in an office?

A. It was kept in the offices—

Q. It wasn't a company, was it; it was a co-partnership, was it not, at that time?

A. I guess that's a company, sir.

Q. Now, that is what you called the corn box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you were talking about this morning when you said you couldn't make any more payments because you didn't have any access to the corn box, wasn't it?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, did ou have more than one box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other box did you have?

A. Well, there was supposed to be a box for candy.

Q. Was there a box for candy?

A. There was, sir.

Q. And you put cash receipts from candy sales in that candy box, didn't you?

A. I don't recall any candy sales, sir, that were sold for cash.

Q. You can't recall of any candy sales, but can 898 you recall of any cash that went in the candy box?

A. No, sir; I can't.

Q. So you just had an empty box, is that it?

A. I wouldn't know whether it was empty or not. I don't recall of any cash that went in it.

Q. You don't recall whether there was any cash in it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever keep any record of it yourself?

A. I don't think the candy box was hardly ever used, if any, sir.

Q. Did you ever keep a record of it yourself? That's the question.

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I will ask that this be marked Defendants' Exhibit 1, and each page A, B, C, and so forth.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 1-A, 1-B, and 1-D for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you documents which have been marked for identification 1-A to 1-D, consecutively, which are 899 photostats which were turned over to us by the Government counsel, and I ask you to examine these and state whether or not they are in your handwriting, or any of the entries are in your handwriting.

A. Yes, sir; these are in my handwriting.

Q. Now, does that purport to be a record of the cash box, the ins and outs of the cash box?

By the Court: Which cash box are you now speaking about?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, of the candy cash box.

A. This last page here, sir, doesn't seem to—

By the Court: A little louder.

By the Witness:

A. This last page here doesn't seem to tie up with the other pages. And what period are you talking about, sir?

By Mr. McConnell: I am not talking about a period. Just read the question to the witness, please.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir; but these appear to be—

900 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, that is all I want, just yes.

And these entries are in your handwriting, are they not?

A. They are, sir. At least some of them are, sir.
901 Q. Well, suppose you point out the ones that are not in your handwriting.
A. There is a few items over here on the second page.
Q. No, read them, so we can get a record of them.
By the Court: It isn't in evidence yet. You can't have him read them.
By Mr. McConnell: All right.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Name them by number, the number of the page, first, second or third, down the page.
A. The fourth line on page two.
Q. Give us the exhibit number, will you; 1 what? Each page is numbered with a letter.
A. I don't see any exhibit numbers on these, sir.
Q. You are referring to the second page or third page?
A. Second, sir.
Q. You are referring to Defendant's Exhibit 1-C for identification. Now, which item?
A. Oh, I didn't know what that meant. This item right here, sir.
Q. That's Item Number—under date of 21, item
902 number 4 on the page.
A. And this one here, sir, doesn't appear in my handwriting.
Q. That's the 26th. That's the sixth item, is that it?
A. Yes, sir. And this one over here doesn't appear in my handwriting.
Q. That's the first item in the second column.
A. And this one isn't in my handwriting.
Q. That's the third item.
A. And the fourth item, and the fifth item, and the sixth item, are not in my handwriting. And on the third page, this item third from the bottom is not in my handwriting, nor the second from the bottom is not in my handwriting.
Q. Let's see what that exhibit number is. That's Defendant's Exhibit 1-B for identification.
A. The rest of them, sir, are in my handwritng.
Q. On your direct examination, in answer to counsel's question as to what corporations you were interested in, what companies you were interested in, you gave us the name of the Eatsum Food Products, and General Confections, and some farm company. What was the farm company?

903 The Saddle River Farms, sir.

Q. Saddle River Farms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you gave us a company, Reserve Trading?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were pretty modest in that enumeration, were you not, as to the number of your companies at that time?

A. Well, that's all I could think of at the moment.

Q. That's all you could think of?

A. I can think of one more now, sir.

Q. Let's see if I can help you a little. Did you have any interest in the Dave Lubben Company?

A. Well, the Dave Lubben Company, sir, was a company that was formed solely for—primarily for the handling of the merchandise we sold on a brokerage account.

Q. Did you have any interest in the Dave Lubben Company, was my question?

A. Well, yes, that was just me.

Q. It was not a corporation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there a company by the name of D. Lubben

904 Associates?

A. There might have been. Yes, sir; I think there was in the beginning.

Q. Did you have any interest in that company?

A. Yes, sir. But I don't think that was ever used, sir.

Q. Did you have any interest is all that I asked you.

A. Well, sir, it was a company—I believe we contemplated having a number of associated people to sell merchandise on a brokerage basis.

Q. I didn't ask you what the company was.

I move that be stricken.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you have any interest in a company called D. Lubben Specialties?

A. I don't ever recall that company, sir.

Q. Did you have any interest in the Roy Hankermyer Company?

A. No, sir; I did not, ir.

Did you have any interest in the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. No, sir; my sister did.

905 Q. You never had any interest in it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any interest in the Rittenhouse Candy Company?

A. For a short time, sir. The Eatsum Products Company did.

Q. Well, you had it during the time you were being interrogated about on your direct examination, did you not?

A. When, sir?

Q. During the time of the Eatsum Food Company, you had an interest in the Rittenhouse Candy Company, didn't you?

A. What Eatsum Company, sir?

Q. Either of them, or both of them?

A. Well, during the period of the sole proprietorship, sir, I had an interest in the—that is, we had an interest in the Rittenhouse Candy Company, sir.

Q. Well, the sole proprietorship was named Eatsum wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

906 Q. Did you have any interest in the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?

A. I, personally?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I personally didn't have any, sir.

Q. Well, did your company have?

A. Well, during the period of the partnership, we purchased stock in the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company for $17,500, so that Mr. Cary could buy his partner out.

Q. All right. Did you acquire some interest in the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company when you organized the corporation?

A. It wasn't really—I didn't acquire it. It was wished on me.

Q. Well, did you acquire it? You know what I mean.

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Did you get the stock; you got 50 percent of the stock, didn't you?

A. I had to pay for it, sir.

Q. Did you get it?

A. Yes, and paid for it, too, sir.

Q. Did you get it?

907 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get any interest in the stock of the Cole Trading Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never had any interest in that?

A. We sold them some merchandise, I believe, sir.

Q. Did you have any interest in the Burlan Corporation?

A. The Burlan Corporation, sir, was owned by the partnership. It was a wholly owned subsidiary.

Q. Of which you were a partner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have an interest in the Pur Ams Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never had any interest in that at any time?

A. No. Later on, sir, General Confections purchased Pur Ams for the purpose of getting the sugar quota.

Q. Did you have any interest in Ell Gee Company?

A. I never heard of it, sir.

Q. Did you ever have an interest in Commodity Trading Company?

908 A. No, sir.

Q. You testified that your company had an interest in Reserve Trading Company?

A. Reserve Trading Company, sir, was a wholly owned subsidiary of General Confections.

Q. Did you ever have an interest in the company called Nebbul, which is Lubben spelled backwards?

A. Yes, sir; I believe I did. That was in 1949.

Q. What was that company?

A. That company, sir, was a company that was used—that owned the property, sir, that we got back from the receiver, if I remember correctly.

Q. Now, to go back for a minute to the beginning of this matter—

First, before I leave those checks—where are those checks that had the names cut out of them?

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you documents which are, I believe, received in evidence in this case under document number 14, and 14-A, and 14-B. Are these checks 909 written in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

910 Q. Now, that is something that you did yourself, is it not; nobody in your office did it?

A. No, sir; me, sir.

Q. That was your own idea?

A. It wasn't my idea, sir, it was a necessity.

Q. Well, did you think of it yourself or did someone suggest it to you?

A. I probably thought of it myself, sir.

Q. And the necessity was, as I recall now, and as what you have confirmed on your cross, that you no longer had access to the cash box?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And so you wanted to pay this money which you claim you owed to these three individuals. Now, who were they again?

A. Byron Cain, Harold Sullivan and Frank Huebner.

Q. And that is the way you thought the money should be paid, is it?

A. Yes, sir; it was the only way I knew how to get it to pay it to them.

Q. Mr. Lockley asked you this morning if you knew at all times, and if you were dealing at all times with the product of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, and you answered that you were, didn't 911 you?

A. I don't recall that specific question being asked of me this morning.

Q. You don't recall that you said that you were dealing not with individuals, but with the corporation in these transactions?

A. Oh, you mean that I wasn't buying this merchandise from—this candy—

Q. From these individuals, yes.

A. Yes, sir; I didn't buy it as an individual, sir.

Q. The product you were dealing with was the Shotwell Manufacturing Company product?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And yet you are not making out a check to Shotwell but making it out to three individuals, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew that these individuals were fiduciaries and officers of this corporation, did you not?

A. I knew they were officers.

Q. You knew they were officers. Do you know what a fiduciary is?

912 A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been an officer of a corporation?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have been an officer of a number of them, haven't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. President of a number of them?

A. But the word "fiduciary"—

Q. It doesn't mean anything to you?

A. I didn't say it doesn't, I just don't know what it means.

Q. Well, do you know enough about it to know that a president of a company can't deal for his own account with his company's goods; do you know that much about it?

A. Yes, sir; but I thought—

Q. Do you know that much about it? That is all I am asking you.

A. The president of what company, sir?

Q. Any company.

A. That is not so, sir.

Q. Well, anyway, knowing that you were buying goods of the Shotwell Company, you, on your own behalf, with nobody telling you what to do, you sit down 913 and you write out three checks in equal amounts to Byron Cain, Harold Sullivan and Frank Huebner, isn't that the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that was corporation money, didn't you?

A. No, sir; this was black market money, sir.

Q. It was black market money and didn't belong to the corporation; is that your position?

A. Sir, I don't know what they do with the premiums after they got the money but, sir, I know this was black market money that these checks were in payment of.

Q. And your understanding was it was to go to these three individuals, is that it?

A. Well, sir—

Q. Was that your understanding?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While we are on that subject we might as well go to these piles of money. As I understood your testimony this morning, and it was reinforced by a question that the Court asked you as to whether on all occasions you had three piles of money counted out by Mr. Huebner—now, is that your testimony?

914 A. Yes, sir; but—except the time, sir, when—there may have been one or two instances when it wasn't counted out in three piles, but to the best of my recollection, sir, that was only the time when he counted out the corn syrup money and told me to take it down to Stanley Graflund.

Q. So except for the corn syrup money—oh, yes, that was Mr. Graflund, that was the comptroller of the company, was it?

A. I don't know what he was, sir.

Q. Didn't you testify this morning that he told you he was the comptroller of the company?

A. I don't remember testifying to that, sir.

Q. You don't remember that they told you he was the comptroller of the company and not to say anything about this to him?

A. I didn't say—I don't remember saying he was the comptroller of the company. I remember, sir, that Mr. Huebner told me to go downstairs and keep my mouth shut about the candy money.

Q. So you went down and kept your mouth shut about the candy money and you paid over the corn syrup money?

A. Yes, sir.

915 Q. Is that it?

A. But later on, sir, I didn't keep my mouth shut.

Q. I think we understand it. I am just asking whether you kept your mouth shut at that time to Mr. Graflund?

A. Yes, sir.

916 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. We are going to come back to the piles of money. You mentioned something that we might as well develop right now, and that is the corn syrup.

Now, when were these transactions with the corn syrup?

A. What corn syrup?

Q. Well, corn syrup money you were taking down to Mr. Graflund, with the exception general rule of the three piles?

A. Well, sir, that was around September or October of 1946.

Q. Now, as I understand it you were paying to the company, or to Mr. Graflund, an overage, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. An overage on what?

A. An overage on the corn syrup that I bought from Shotwell.

Q. You were paying Shotwell an overage on the corn syrup you bought from Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you were paying Shotwell more 917 than you paid for it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you making them a gift of that much money?

A. It wasn't any gift, sir. It was the condition of the sale.

Q. Of the corn syrup?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you said you paid them an overage. Now, I want to know what the overage is over?

A. It was 7 cents a pound, sir.

Q. And what was that, a ceiling price?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. A premium.

Q. Seven cents, a premium over seven cents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. According to you it was all paid in cash, wasn't it?

A. Only the premium, sir.

Q. Only the premiums. The rest of it was paid by check?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, there wasn't an overage over an over ceiling price, was there?

918 A. Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Q. Then you think it was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure of it?

A. Well, I don't know whether the ceiling price went up at that particular time or not. I don't recall, but there was some time in there—

Q. That would be the logic of it, wouldn't it, to pay the ceiling, and then pay an overage above the ceiling?

A. I don't know what you mean by "logic", sir.

Q. Well, you are paying overages. You are referring to overages all the way through your testimony on direct. You were referring to over ceiling prices, were you not? Isn't that what you were talking about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you are talking about overages here on the corn syrup. Are you still talking about over ceiling prices?

A. I am just talking about premium payments.

Q. So you aren't talking about overages?

A. I am talking about overages or premiums that I paid to Shotwell. Whether at this time it was an 919 over ceiling price on corn syrup or not, I don't know, but I paid them seven cents a pound on corn syrup.

Q. As a matter of fact, there wasn't a ceiling on corn syrup at that time, was there?

A. I dont' know, sir.

Q. Now, to get back to the piles of money: Except for that one time down in Mr. Graflund's office, every time you met with these men, Mr. Huebner would get the money on the bed, and then he would put it in one pile, and another pile and another pile, is that it?

A. Well, sir, I think there was—I think there was twice that I went to Mr. Graflund with the money. Not once, sir, but I think it was twice.

Q. All right. Except for the times you went to Mr. Graflund, is that the fact?

A. Sir, almost every time I can remember paying money to Mr. Huebner. Outside of those times, Mr. Huebner went through that ritual.

920 Q. Did he do that always on a bed or was it on a table, or what were the circumstances, do you remember?

A. Well, sir, if it was in the laboratory, it was on the laboratory table, but generally, it was on the bed because it was a lot of money and he would spread it all over and he would count it and everything else.

Q. What were the denominations of the bills you paid?

A. Sir, one time there was some five hundred dollar bills that Mr. Huebner objected to strenuously that he didn't want any more denominations of that type. Then he didn't want any hundred dollar bills, but we gave him some, I believe, but he preferred ten's and twenty's.

Q. So he spread it all over the bed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then he piled it up?

A. Sir, I would bring it in, and the first time he would do it—first we would go in and he would check my figures against his figures and then I would open up the bag or my brief case, whatever I had the money in, and he 921 would take all the piles, and he would put the five's, the dollar bills, and he would count them out. He would count them out here, and he would count them out there and make sure he had all the different moneys, and then he would figure out how much was a third and he would divide it in three piles.

Q. He did that in New York as well as in Chicago?

A. I cannot remember, sir, whether it was any different than that.

Q He did it in New York, even though he was going to take the train and get on a Pullman; he had to have it in three piles, one for Harold and—

A. Sir, he would say, "This is for Harold and this is for Byron and this is for me," and sometimes he would say other things too, sir.

Q. And he did that in your presence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he took the money off each pile in your presence?

A. In my presence, sir.

Q. And told you not to tell the other people, is that it?

A. He told me to keep my mouth shut. He told me that they had so damned much money that they didn't 922 know what to do with it.

Q. He told you who had so damned much money they didn't know what to do with it?

A. Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Cain.

Q. But he did not, is that it?

A. Sir?

Q. But he didn't and he was going to equalize it, is that it?

A. I don't know what he was going to equalize. I just told you what the man said.

Q. Do you know how much stock he had in that company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he had any stock?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know who the stockholders of the Shotwell Company are?

A. Yes, sir, I do. I heard of it.

Q. Who?

A. Well, he told me that Harold Sullivan had some stock and that Byron Cain had some stock and Mr. Shotwell, and I think he told me Federal Judge Sullivan had some stock.

923 Q. Did he tell you Loyola University had stock in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I never heard of that, sir.

Q. Did he tell you some 20 or 30 other people had stock in it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Anyway, you knew you weren't dealing with the sole stockholders of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, didn't you?

A. Repeat that question.

By Mr. McConnell: Will you please read the question?

(Question read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. As far as I was concerned, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Cain were the company.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. They were the people you were dealing with anyway, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. After this money was all divided up in these piles, you say he put one pile in one pocket and another pile in another pocket, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

924 Q. Where did he put the third pile?

A. Well, sir, he used to use a pocket here (indicating) and I think other times he would use a pocket here (indicating), and in his coat pocket. He put it in three different spots, sir.

Q. Then he had some more pockets. He had a pocket for the horses. Where did he put the money for the horses?

A. If I remember correctly, sir, that was in his watch pocket.

Q. He put that in his watch pocket. And the loose change, what did he do with that?

A. I didn't pay much attention, sir, other than the fact that he counted it.

Q. This happened whether he was in New York or Chicago, is that it?

A. To the best of my knowledge, it happened just about every time I paid him except there was times with the corn syrup and then he just counted the money.

Q. Now, all of this money that we have been talking about, all of this cash was money which you drew out of this company or out of the partnership on a cash check, wasn't it?

925 A. I wouldn't say all of the money, no, sir.

Q. Well, would you say a substantial amount of it?

A. Yes, sir, a substantial amount, sir.

Q. We have had the checks here, haven't we? You have identified them here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your direct examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that when we get to the bank, at least that money, that cash comes to rest in your pocket, doesn't it?

By the Court: Counsel, I would like to see both of you. I can't see counsel at the table when you stand there.

By the Witness: Will you please repeat that question?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. All right. At that moment, unless you can substantiate that you paid it to somebody else, you 926 are chargeable with that cash, aren't you, on the books and records of all of those companies?

A. Why, yes, sir, if I have company funds in my pocket and I don't show where it went to, I am responsible.

Q. Now, let us return for a moment to the beginning of this. What was your salary with the Kroger Grocery Company?

A. I believe it was $125.00 or $150.00 a week, sir.
Q. That was in 1944?
A. No, I didn't say 1944, sir.
Q. What year was it?
A. I believe it was 1941 or 1942, sir, 1941 or 1942.
Q. Do you know somebody by the name of Fred Brewster, F. E. Brewster?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. Who is he?
A. He is an officer of the Burry Biscuit Corporation.

927 By Mr. McConnell: May I ask that these documents be marked Defendants' Exhibits No. 2 and 3 for identification, and will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 4 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 1, 2, 3, and 4 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:
Q. I show you a document which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit 2 for identification, which purports to be a photostatic copy under date of March 13, 1944, of a letter, and ask you to examine that and state whether or not you received the original of it?
A. Yes, sir. I remember receiving that.
Q. Did he prepare your income tax for that year?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. As I understand it, this is a 1944 matter which is beyond the scope of the indictment, in the first place. It certainly was not gone into on direct examination and it appears to be immaterial to the issues. The witness isn't under 928 prosecution for income tax evasion.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I would like to develop by cross examination, the motive of this witness in laying off sums of money which came into his possession in the operation of these companies through black marketing operations. To do that, I have to show he starts with nothing and ends up with hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars to account for it. I think it goes to the motive of the witness, the almost compelling motive of the witness as to his motive in laying off upon these defendants the monies.

By the Court: Have you asked him whether or not he paid an income tax?

By Mr. McConnell: No, I am not asking him that. I am simply asking him to identify a letter which came from a person who did prepare his income tax, and I want to show by his income tax what his income was when he started in these transactions.

By the Witness: Your Honor, may I say one word?

929 By the Court: Wait a moment. Wait until a question is put to you.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to it, your Honor. I don't think it is proper cross examination. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination. It is immaterial to the issue whether the Shotwell's taxes were evaded. If he is going to attack Mr. Lubben's—

By Mr. McConnell: Mr. Lubben is testifying falsely in this case.

By the Court: You asked him what his salary was when he started with the Kroger Company, and he told you. I suppose you can ask him generally what his background has been, whom he worked for, where he was working. I see no objection to that. I see no purpose of going into his income tax statements.

By the Witness: Your Honor, may I ask a question?

By the Court: No. You wait until the questions are asked.

By Mr. McConnell:

930 Q. Did you have any investment at that time?

By the Court: When?

By Mr. O'Connell:

Q. In 1943.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor. I don't see what—

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you have any other income aside from your salary from the Kroger Company?

By Mr. Lockley: When?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. In 1943?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I don't recall, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You don't recall that you did?

A. I don't recall that I did, or didn't.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, your Honor, now I think I have a right to refresh his recollection from his income tax as to whether he did or didn't.

931 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, this is an indirect way of getting his income tax into evidence.

932 By the Court: Well, ask him whether or not he had other income from such and such a concern.

By Mr. O'Connell:

Q. When did you enter into your arrangement with Mr. Burry?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor. He hasn't said he was in any arrangement with Mr. Burry yet.

By the Court: Well, he worked with Mr. Burry in the Burry Biscuit Company, if that is what you have reference to.

By Mr. McConnell: That is what he testified to on his direct examination, as I recall it.

By Mr. Lockley: That is not an arrangement.

By the Court: Are you referring to his employment with Mr. Burry?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What was your salary or your arrangement for compensation with Mr. Burry?

A. I believe, sir, I had an arrangement with 933 Mr. Burry where I got $125.00 or $150.00 a week and my expenses and then later on Eatsum Food Products was formed and I received a percentage of the profits.

Q. Now when did you start with Burry Biscuit Company?

A. I believe it was in 1942, sir.

Q. What was your arrangement as to compensation at that time?

A. I told you, sir, $125.00 or $150.00 a week and my expenses.

Q. How long did that arrangement last?

A. To the best of my recollection, sir, about five or six months, maybe less, maybe a little more.

Q. Well, after that time what was your arrangement as to compensation?

A. I believe it was the same salary and expenses plus a percentage of the profits of the Eatsum Food Products.

Q. Which was Mr. Burry's company?

A. No, it wasn't his, sir. It belonged to the Burry Biscuit Corporation. It was a subsidiary.

934 Q. It was a subsidiary of the Burry Biscuit Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which you were running?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Burry Biscuit Company?

A. Well, sir, I wasn't running it. I was just handling the sales.

Q. Do you remember what the profits of that organization were?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to that, your Honor. I doubt that it is material.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, do you remember what you received from it?

By the Court: When?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. In 1943.

A. I believe, sir, it was fourteen or fifteen thousand dollars, or thirteen. It is only a guess, sir. It is somewhere in that neighborhood, I believe.

Q. So you received a salary and twelve or thirteen 935 thousand dollars from it, is that it?

A. Well, that is a guess, sir. It was ten per cent of the profits, but I don't remember now what they were.

Q. What were you doing in that company? Was that a black marketing operation?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. The question should be more specific, and I object.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, were you engaged in black marketing transactions when you were working for that company?

By Mr. Lockley: Will you fix the time, if there was any such transaction?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. 1943.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. Whether or not the Burry Biscuit Company engaged in black market transactions is immaterial.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

936 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you buy out the interest of the Burry Biscuit Company and that company, Eatsum Food Products?

A. Will you repeat the question, sir?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. You mean, did I buy out the interest of Burry and the Eatsum Food Products?

Q. Yes.

A. The answer is, yes, sir.

Q. Now when did you do that?

A. I believe, sir, in the latter part of 1943 or the first part of 1944.

Q. And what did you pay for it?

A. Well—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. I don't see that it is material.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask that this document be marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 5?

937 By the Court: You had 4 already.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 5 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you a document which purports to be a photostatic copy of an agreement between the Burry Biscuit Corporation and Mrs. L. M. Petersen and Co., Inc.—

By Mr. Lockley: Counsel, I object to your reading from it.

By Mr. McConnell: I have a right to identify it.
